Our Southern brethren who escaped the bullets of Union soldiers have a most ardent affection for Union soldiers. Their hearts go out in overflowing to them, and are filled with joy at any patronage bestowed upon the crippled and maimed veterans. The Charleston News and Courier remarks: "General Raum is partisan; he is sectional; he will be liberal to the boys, and possessing the trinity of republican graces, he will please his party, and will be doubtless able to render to 'Our Paupers in Blue' satisfactory service." "Our Paupers in Blue!" This is a splendid tribute to their memory, but is on all-fours with the sentiments of the elements who control the southern vote. This sneering reference to our new Pension Commissioner is characteristic of the alleged chivalry of South Carolina.

When the world don't treat you right, just kick it. The world respects a fellow who is independent enough to resent ill-treatment. It is a noticeable fact, almost to the dignity of a proverb, that it is a sure way to gain favor by fighting the object you desire to control. We have observed in worldly affairs, particularly with regard to large and powerful corporations, that the way to their favor is to boldly attack their shortcomings, and if there is ability and brains behind the attacking party, there will soon be a capitulation. In politics, also, you must make your antagonist fear you before his favor can be obtained. The Deity always hates a coward. The rich and powerful detest a fawning creature, but fear and respect a bold and independent man. Brains and bravery will answer when wealth will fail.

Many are called impious, not for having a worse, but a different religion from their neighbors; and many atheistical, not for the denying of God, but for thinking somewhat peculiarly concerning him. Religion is intolerant of religion. "Think as I do," says one dogma, "else perdition is your ultimatum." Broad, liberal, generous thought is not among the tenets of what is called religion. When we think and reason, the dogmas of the past give place to broad thought, to liberal reason. Our great, good men do not adhere to narrow views, but deal with logic and common sense. We often find some who preach virtuously, but act viciously. Credulity is always a ridiculous, often a dangerous failing; it has made of many a clever man a fool, and of many a good man a knave.

In the private office of the Secretary of State, the frescoer has, among other original designs, painted an exact fac simile of the Seal of the State of California on the ceiling of the office. The full coat of arms is splendidly executed, but we notice that the work is done in green. Now the "Green Seal" may be the favorite of our affable Secretary, Mr. Hendricks—although we know that he is not averse to any good brand—which may account for the green seal design. Then, again, this emerald here upon our coat of arms may be emblematic of the artist, Thomas O'Neil, who is a descendant of stock from the Emerald Isle. Again, it is possible to conceive the idea that California is one perpetual spring, always clothed in green verdure. It is not certainly indicative of any "green" characteristic of our people. Anyway, the Great Seal of California, as portrayed in the Secretary's office, is "Wearing of the Green."

School Entertainment.

The entertainment given for the benefit of the Sacramento Hebrew Sunday School on Thursday evening was a successful affair in a literary and musical, as well as financial sense. Mr. and Mrs. L. Elkus were the moving spirits of the occasion. The orchestral overture was in good taste. "Fair Night," by the quartette, Desmond, Milliken, Hansbrow and Shannon was a choice piece of music artistically rendered and were loudly encored. "Dear Heart," by Mrs. A. Bonheim, was well received. The recitation, "Mother and Poet," by Mrs. Tracy Gattman, was the gem of the evening. Mrs. Gattman has no superior, even among the professionals, on this coast as a reader. For an encore, Mrs. Gattmann read a humorous sketch. Mrs. A. E. Brune was in fine voice, which means that she was exquisite in her rendition of a selection from the "Gypsy Baron"; she also had to acknowledge a recall. Mrs. Albert Elkus gave a piano solo, "Rigoletto," in an artistic manner. This lady is an accomplished pianist. The song, "Star of my Heart," by Gertie Carley, was not up to her usual excellent standard. Then came a genuine pleasurable surprise in the little girl, Sophie Woolfe, whose execution on the violin was phenomenal. After playing "Air Varie," she was twice called out to repeat. Mrs. Bonheim's second number was "Dream of Love," Robert A. Fisher then entertained the audience by reading selections from "Hamlet." The literary and musical programme ended with a song, "Queen of the Earth," by J. H. Desmond. A supper and dance followed the literary and musical exercises.

A Recital.

The public have already heard of the "Træbel Kindergarten Society," which was recently formed by the young ladies of Sacramento, as co-workers with the "Sacramento Free Kindergarten." With the enthusiasm that the good work inspires, they have determined to place the society on a firm basis, and to that end, have engaged the services of Miss Ida Benfey of New York, to give a recital of Tennyson's "Eliane" at the Clinic, next Monday evening. Miss Benfey comes so highly recommended by the eastern press, that the young ladies feel that they are giving the public an evening's entertainment that will be well worth the price of admission, and hope for their earnest support.

Capitol Decorations.

There is some elegant decorative work being done at the Capitol building by Thos. O'Neil. The Governor's and Secretary of State's offices are perfect models of artistic design and work. The whole internal arrangement of this great edifice is undergoing improvement—painting and frescoing—the last Legislature having made a liberal appropriation for that purpose. The work already completed is a pleasure to look upon.

Training the Mind.

We had an interesting interview with one of the learned professors of education a few days ago, and in answer to our query as to the methods of training the young idea, he gave expression to the following:

The manner of conducting recitations will always depend on the teacher's idea of education. "Education," says Sir William Hamilton, "is only education inasmuch as it at once determines and enables the student to educate himself." Let us have self-teaching scholars as well as self-adjusting machinery, or self-sharpening plows. But for this we must have thinking scholars. They must be trained to think. Race-horses are trained to run, oxen to draw burdens, and prize-fighters to engage in their brutal sports; the best trained are most successful. Judicious questioning is one of the most effectual ways to teach pupils to reason. Children usually know more than they have credit for. As there is heat latent in the coldest iron, so there is knowledge latent in the most stupid intellect, which it is the office of the teacher to elicit. By pursuing the mode about to be indicated, the perceptive faculties will be stimulated by the practical application of facts already gained, to the acquisition of other knowledge, by the means of the right use of the reasoning powers. Curiosity will be heightened by its own gratification, consequently the attention will be aroused, and, as a further consequence, the memory will be strengthened, and thus better enabled to present the materials for major or minor premises, whenever a conclusion is desired.

"To teach one who has no curiosity to learn," says Archbishop Whately, "is to sow a field without plowing it; for curiosity is as much the parent of attention as attention is of memory." The proper education of latent knowledge will excite the perceptive faculties, and at the same time exercise those of reason, thus rendering the scholar self-educating. The method we advocate is the Socratic. Plato relates that Socrates called a boy from the streets of Athens, and asked him if he could make a square twice as large as a given square. The boy thought he could; but, on attempting it, he made one four times as large. He discovered his error, and acknowledged his inability to solve the problem. But Socrates, proposing a few simple questions, the boy made the required square on the diagonal of the one given, and proved it correct. In all this teaching, whereby the boy was enabled to accomplish what he could not do before, his model teacher told him nothing. He only elicited the latent knowledge by a few judicious questions.

Three Parrot Stories.

There is much difference of opinion as to whether a parrot merely imitates or whether it be possessed of reason. Sure the parrot that keeps jabbering "Pretty Polly" does not seem endowed with much brain, but what must be said when we hear such parrot stories as the following, of which we are willing to vouch for the truth pure and unvarnished:

A lady owned a handsome parrot, and leaving New Orleans one summer, she gave her pet to a friend's care. Polly soon became at home in its new quarters; would bow its head to its new mistress and say, in softest tones: "That's it, rub Polly's head so, so, darling, rub Polly's head." That was imitative. What is this? One day its mistress was eating plums. Polly was near; looking up, the lady laughed and said: "Aha, Polly, I have plums and I am not going to give you any." "I don't care," said Polly, "I don't want any, anyhow."

A parrot belonging to a dear friend of the writer was very much annoyed by the pigeons, who would enter his cage every morning as soon as he left it and devour the remnants of his breakfast. A bright thought—so it seems—came to Polly. One day as he left his cage for his morning walk he turned and shut the door of his cage, and then gave a defiant look at the marauder pigeons. This he always did afterward, and so saved his breakfast.

Still another parrot story, also true: Once upon a time a parrot lived in a family which was very religious. The bird was accustomed to hearing daily prayers and verses of Scripture. One day, after a severe illness, in spite of care and attention, the parrot died. Its last words were: "The Lord be with you!"—New Orleans Picayune.

Meaning of Precious Stones.

January, garnet, constancy and fidelity in every engagement; February, amethyst, preventive against violent passions; March, bloodstone, courage, wisdom and firmness in affection; April, sapphire, free from enchantment, denotes repentance; May, emerald, discovers false friends and insures true love; June, agate, insures long life, health and prosperity; July, ruby, discovers poison, corrects evils resulting from mistaken friendship; August, sardonyx, insures conjugal felicity; September, chrysolite, free from evil passions and sadness of the mind; October, opal, denotes hope and sharpens the sight and faith of the possessor; November, topaz, fidelity and friendship, prevents bad dreams; December, turquoise, prosperity in love.

The most manifest sign of wisdom is continued cheerfulness.

Fall Millinery!

The above cut represents a POPULAR SHAPE for young ladies. Untrimmed in felt, 70 cts. Stylishly trimmed with ribbon and fancy feathers, for $2.75 and $4.00.

New Goods for this Department are placed in stock daily. Note the following prices: Rough and Ready Straw Turbans, 45 cts. Milan Braid Turbans, $1.00. Soft Felt Cigarette Hats, trimmed with cord, 69 cts. Aigrettes, 25 and 35 cts. a bunch. Blackbirds, 40 and 50 cts. Children's Trimmed Straw School Hats, 25c. Felts, neatly trimmed with ribbon, 95 cts.

Millinery Department
RED HOUSE

J Street, between Seventh and Eighth.

Fine Table
Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Produce of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

CHAMPAGNE

W. B. CHAPMAN,
123 California St. San Francisco.
SOLE AGENT FOR THE PACIFIC COAST

To be sold by all first-class Wine Merchants and Grocers.

STABLE TO LET!

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

Earthquake and Fire Proof
BUILDINGS

Constructed on my patent system. Perfect protection guaranteed. For estimates and particulars see E. HAWES, Twelfth and B streets, Sacramento.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

FLASHES.

It is a poor wind that blows about itself.
"Wine is a mocker." Coffee is Mocha also.

As a rule, we need no assistance in becoming a fool.

How can we change the masses? Strike off the "m."

The rain said to the dust, "I have the drop on you; your name is mud."

A liar is often too pleasant to be angry with, and yet too absurd to answer.

The Turkish bath attendant is like the modern novelist—he handles his subjects very freely.

The old-fashioned, self-made man for politics was not perfect, but he was much better than the machine-made article of the present day.

Charges of plagiarism still continue. It is now hinted that successful and hitherto unsuspected farmers crib the stores of their corn magazines from nature's cereals.

The room was dark, the maiden rose
To fetch a match, she said—
But he persuaded her to stay
And make a match instead.

Sutter's Fort.

There has been of late a commendable disposition shown to secure a public ownership to the site of Sutter's Fort, and of what little remains of the old interior building. So far as we are able to learn, however, the owner of the property, who resides in Chicago, declines to put a price upon it, and is apparently expecting that by allowing it to lie dormant and an eyesore to the city, the improvement of property about it, and the natural growth of Sacramento, will enhance its value. While the fort site is of historic interest, its public possession does not justify an unreasonable outlay of money, particularly when the additional cost of its restoration is to be considered. The project of its public acquirement, in view of the discouraging results that have been met, may as well be abandoned it would seem. Some weeks ago the Board of Trustees declared that they proposed to open the streets and alleys through the property. In that connection we find the following in the Bee:

With all due respect to the Board of Trustees, we do not believe they can do anything of the kind. The deed of John A. Sutter, Jr., recorded in Book A of Deeds, page 128, and acknowledged before Frank Bates, first Alcalde, conveys certain town lots town property, and all his right, title and interest in various streets and alleys to the City of Sacramento, but makes a reservation of "so much of Land Twenty-seventh streets, and of all alleys runs into or throw any part of Sutter's Fort." The spelling and grammar of Sutter, Jr., are execrable, but his meaning is clear enough. The City of Sacramento has no right to open those streets through that fort.

The Bee seems to forget that the property referred to is within the corporate limits of the city of Sacramento, and that reservations of the character spoken of stand for nothing when the progress of a city requires changes. The law of eminent domain steps in to advance. John A. Sutter, Jr., in the deed referred to simply dedicated to the inhabitants of this city—then in embryo—certain streets, alleys and public squares. If he had reserved the cutting through of streets and alleys, say between Fourth and Seventh and I and K streets, it would be an absurdity to contend that such a reservation would now be respected. At the time the deed referred to was made, Sutter doubtless expected the fort would remain intact, that its walls would not be razed, and the internal building turned into a chicken-raising establishment. The land has now nothing of the conditions that then justified that reservation. The city has grown up about it, and from the standpoint of the present, if held as private property, it is entitled to no more privileges than other possessions within the corporate limits of the city. If nothing else can be done let the Trustees proceed to take the legal steps to open these streets and alleys. To hold that an original grantee of property within the corporate limits of a great city can tie up streets and alleys forever, and that his reservation will hold against conditions that may arise years after his death, is not tenable. This question is not new. It was encountered in the cities of New York and Philadelphia, and many others that grew beyond the anticipations of their founders.

Interesting Relic.

Foster N. Mott has presented the Sacramento Society of California Pioneers a portion of an iron chain cable, and several copper screws and spikes, recovered from the wreck of the ship "Duma." The vessel met her fate in Monterey bay in 1850, and the relics referred to were found at Seabright this year. The portion of the chain cable is about a foot in length, and apparently several of the links became knotted. They are encrusted with sand and small stones, which, with the metal, form a solid mass. The diminution from the rusting of the exposed links so exposes the grain of the iron that it has the appearance of petrified wood. The copper spikes and screws have suffered no change from their long submersion.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Thursday, November 28th, is fixed by proclamation for Thanksgiving.

A crowd of Chinamen were arrested last night for violating the health ordinances.

The National Grangers are on their way to Sacramento, where the National Grange meets next week.

Some of our well-known young men have effected a social organization called the Pelican Club. They have elegantly fitted-up rooms, and will be heard from this winter.

A "scarlet woman" became jealous of her lover and committed suicide yesterday morning. Her name was Eunna Strasheimer. Thus one more unfortunate has gone to her rest.

There will be a game of baseball to-morrow afternoon between two teams of local players who have achieved distinction in amateur and professional fields. The grounds may be reached by the Central street railway, but trains will not be run. Admission 25 cents. Ladies free.

D. J. Oullahan, ex-State Treasurer, died at San Francisco on the 5th, after a protracted illness. The deceased was an old Californian, and was for many years in business at Stockton. He was appointed State Treasurer by Governor Stoneman December 24, 1884, to succeed W. A. January, resigned, and served out the balance of the term and until January 3, 1887.

Judge Armstrong rendered an important decision yesterday concerning the jurisdiction and powers of the court in cases of insolvency, holding that all property of the insolvent was subject to the order of the court, and that the court could control it, through a receiver, to prevent waste or fraudulent disposition. The opinion was in the case of Denny vs. Sheriff McMullen, the court's receiver.

Hon. Joseph McKenna.

Hon. Joseph McKenna, member of Congress from this district, visited this city yesterday, to look after the interests of his constituency concerning the new Post Office structure and other public matters. He would have been with us sooner and oftener had he not met with a severe accident, whereby he was for several months rendered a cripple and confined to his bed. His visit here was necessarily limited, for the reason that he has much labor to perform prior to his departure for Washington, which will be one week from next Monday. While in this city yesterday he was kept very busy by interviewers who had some axes to grind, but by his keen diplomacy he managed to satisfy all the statesmen who desire to serve the public in various federal positions that are accredited to the patronage of a Congressman, by showing them that he is not so powerful as they supposed. One thing is certain, Mr. McKenna is vigilant in the interest of our people, and during his career as a member of Congress has disclosed a remarkable adaptation for legislative business and parliamentary tactics. He is the right man in the right place. As a matter of course, in the scramble for place, he cannot please all, nor give every one that importunes him a federal position. The disappointed ones will not feel as kindly toward him, but then he must expect to make some enemies in the matter of distribution of patronage that falls to his lot. We trust that his good judgment may be his guide, and prompt him to select only the best men, independent of any faction, lash or influence. Hon. Joseph McKenna can at all times feel assured of our confidence. In our brief interview with Mr. McKenna yesterday, he expressed the belief that Minister Mizner had been falsely represented in the newspaper attacks, and discredited the tenor of the remarks attributed to Mr. Mizner by the Press.

Nelson Appeals.

Major W. A. Anderson and J. C. Tubbs, the attorneys for Nelson, have appealed his case to the Supreme Court, principally on the ground that the verdict of the jury is against the evidence. George Nelson is the party who was convicted of highway robbery near the American-river bridge, and who was sentenced to a term of ten years' imprisonment in the State prison at Folsom. The counsel for the defendant are firmly convinced of the innocence of the unfortunate man, and the injustice of the verdict of the jury, which was rendered on circumstantial evidence in the face of a positive alibi proven on the trial, which latter fact the jury disregarded arbitrarily. It is probable that the case will be on the January calendar for argument.

Funerals.

The funeral of Dr. A. B. Nixon on Wednesday was very largely attended. More members of the Pioneer Association turned out than at any previous funeral for years.

Miss Kate M. Merkle, eldest daughter of R. J. Merkle, died on the 6th. Her funeral took place Friday afternoon. The flag over Pioneer hall was floated at half-mast in respect to her memory, she having been a member of Califa Parlor, N. D. G. W.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

Nine persons were drowned at Yaquina bay.

Austria is suspicious of Bismarck's diplomacy.

A runaway train at Altoona, Pa., injured forty men.

Heavy snow storms are reported in Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico.

The President has proclaimed Montana one of the great United States.

Several people were killed during a fight in a court-room at Brownsburg, Va.

The Iowa Legislature is republican; likewise all the State ticket, excepting Governor.

Charley Reed, the "plain comedian," has been retired from the City Directory company. It is claimed against Reed that he was too lavish of the company funds, and kept about $800 ahead all the time. A young actor by the name of Alf. Hampton, who is said to be a clever artist, will take his place.

The Weather.

The highest and lowest Signal Service temperature for the past week was 72 and 40, with northerly winds, a cloudless sky and a generally warm and pleasant temperature. The highest and lowest for the same time last year was 75 and 35. The telegraphic news this morning informs us of storms of heavy snow, high winds and low temperature in Texas, New Mexico and Kansas, and a rain storm in the democratic State of Iowa, as though to wash away the stain of the late political battle fought throughout that State of strong prohibition proclivities. The snow storm spoken of above left death, destruction and starvation in its path, while we, of California, the Eden of the world, are surrounded by flowers in great abundance, and fanned by the gentle spring-like breezes, that make the country green and the city beautiful.

Twenty Pages for Five Cents.

The Sunday Examiner, with its wealth of original matter—selections, fine illustrations, etc., is all the most exacting could desire. It is certainly the best paper. At newsdealers or at 724 J street.

Microbes in Milk and Water.

It has been calculated that in a cubic centimetre of milk (about twenty drops), there may be between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 microbes, and possibly hundreds or thousands of different kinds; and the next twenty drops of milk may contain as many more varieties. The microbes in a drop of water taken from the well may consist in a number of straight rods; at the end of an hour the rods break in two, and in another hour another division takes place, the number doubling about every hour. Every minute that the water is exposed to the air adds to it hundreds of microbes, and yet water is pronounced good or bad, according to what the analyst sees through his microscope, or thinks he sees when the water finally reaches him in his laboratory.—N. Y. Pharmaceutical Journal.

Pliny says that Theodorus, a Greek of Samos, invented the square and level, but the square figure is seen in the represented designs of the tower of Babel, one of the earliest important known structures. The city of Babylon was a perfect square, and the bricks used in its buildings and walls were square; so, probably, were those in Babel. Now to form small squares correctly and to introduce them in endless combination into buildings, it needed a guiding instrument of some kind. So the square as a constructive tool came into use. Among the ruins of Babylon, Nineveh and Petra it is said to have been represented. There are pictures and sculptures from the ruins of Thebes in Egypt showing the square in the hands of the artisan.

If all rich men were only philanthropists and used their money liberally and wisely trying to better the condition of their poorer and less fortunate neighbors, how much brighter and happier the world would be for their having lived in it.

Our acts make or mar us; we are the children of our own deeds.

BASEBALL TO-MORROW (SUNDAY). No Trains. Game called at 2 o'clock. Admission, 25 cents; ladies free. ALL-AMERICANS: Johnson c, Managan p, Sayres 1st b, Robertson 2d b, Dunpley 3d b, Smith c s, Warren 1 f, Bidwell c f, Lambert r f. BRIGHTONS: Doherty c, Barry p, Warren 1st b, Rooney 2d b, Rantlett 3d b, Campbell s s, Boyne 1 f, Shanahan c f, McLaughlin r f.

TAXES.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 3748 OF THE Political Code, as amended March 16, 1889, State and County Taxes will be received at the office of the County Tax Collector, northwest corner of Seventh and I streets, in the City of Sacramento, on and after FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1889. Taxpayers will please take notice that on the last Monday in December (the 30th day), 1889, at 6 o'clock P. M. of that day, taxes will be delinquent, and unless paid prior thereto five per cent penalty will be added, as provided by law.

CEO. C. McMULLEN,
Tax Collector of Sacramento County.
Sacramento, Cal., November 5, 1889. n9-4t

Indian Population.

The novelists, reporters and others who write Indian speeches, beginning with the words "I am the last of my race, the red man is vanishing before the white man as the leaves, etc.," had better look up the facts. It now seems that any statement to the effect that the number of our Indian population is slowly decreasing, is not in accord with the truth. The Indian is not dying off and vanishing from the earth, any more than the Caucasian is. They have, for the most part, adopted semi-civilized habits and live quiet lives. They are increasing rather than decreasing. In the quiet, orderly communities of the Indian Territory, in the reservations of Dakato, and in the pueblos of New Mexico and Arizona, the Indian is encamped peacefully, and his children are being educated. He is fairly prosperous, provided the Indian agent and the contractor do not try to starve him, and he is raising his family and increasing in the land.—Boston Advertiser.

A woman's vanity is like the immensity of space—you can scarcely comprehend it.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & AND & MECHANICAL & DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

FRIEND & TERRY
LUMBER CO.

Wholesale and Retail Lumber Dealers, Also Shakes, Bolts, Ties, Doors, Windows, Blinds and Screens. Main Yard and Office, No. 1310 Second Street. Branch Yard, corner Twelfth and J Sts. P. O. Box 233. E. J. Holt, Manager. Sacramento

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.

L. RADLOFF,

LADIES' TAILOR.

218 POST STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

A. AITKEN,

PREMIUM PIONEER MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS

423 J Street, bet. 4th and 5th, Sacramento.

Costic Tile, etc. Cemetery lots enclosed with Granite. All kinds of work done in Italian and Vermont Marble. Direct importer of Scotch and Eastern Granite Monuments. Also, Marble, Slate, Wooden and Iron Mantels, direct from manufacturers, at Reduced Prices. Call and examine.

THEIR NEW NEIGHBOR.

"Girls!" cried Margery Kearney. "I've seen him!—Clive Sterling—our new neighbor!"

In quite a whirl of excitement Margery had dashed into the cozy room where her three sisters were sitting. She was shining with rain from the hood of her silver-grey gossamer to the very tips of her rubbers. The fluffly brown curls across her forehead were sprinkled with bright drops, and her cheeks were glowing from her rapid walk.

"You did?" interrogatively chorused three eager voices.

"I really did!"

"Is he handsome?" asked Janet, who appreciated all beauty as intensely as only a plain-looking person can.

"Intellectual-looking?" inquired Clotilde, who dipped daily into Emerson and professed to adore Ruskin.

"Jolly?" queried little Bertie, who was at the age when jolly people seemed created for her especial amusement.

"No—no—no!" laughed Margery. "Not handsome—nor learned-looking—nor even jolly. He is simply the most awkward-looking mortal I ever beheld." And she broke into a peal of heartiest laughter at recollection of her encounter with their new neighbor. "You see it was this way, girls," jerking off her gossamer and disclosing a form attired in a dress of chocolate cashmere—a form that was trim, slim, and willowy as that of sweet seventeen is apt to be. "I was running home in a great hurry—for it's chillier out than you folks imagine—and just as I came opposite the gate of 'The Oaks' I stopped very suddenly, for right there was the most tremendous black dog I ever saw. I said, 'Go way!' and he didn't budge. I shook my umbrella at him. He wasn't a bit afraid. I said, 'If you don't get out of the way I'll hit you!' and he actually grinned. There was nothing to do but step out in the street—it was so muddy, too—and walk around him. But just then—I suppose my dilemma was apparent from the house—down the path he came running. Oh, he looked so ridiculous! He is about as tall as Jack's bean-stalk, lean as a lathe, and brown as an Indian."

"Well!" exclaimed Janet. "He must be charming!"

"Oh!" cried Margery, going off into a fresh paroxysm of laughter. "What with his glasses, and his coat-tails flying straight out as he rushed to my rescue, he looked like some great, curious, comical bird!"

"Birds don't wear glasses," corrected Bertie. "Was his coat a swallow-tail?"

The appeal for information was ignored. "Well, he called off the dog, and apologized for the monster, and—that's all."

"I wish he'd offer me the use of his library," sighed Clotilde.

"They say 'The Oaks' is a perfect palace, as far as the furnishing goes," murmurs Janet.

"I think I'll ask him to loan me the lovely little white pony," decided Bertie. But this rash resolution was ruthlessly crushed.

"The Oaks" had been shut up so long—ever since the Kearneys had come to live in the gray-green cottage near by. Its owner had gone abroad on the death of his mother, three years ago, leaving his handsome house in the care of a couple of servants. But now that news of his return had spread, curiosity was rife in the fashionable snobs of River-view. And not the least interested were Clive Sterling's near neighbors.

A pleasant room, this in which the sisters sat; a home-like room, even if the carpet was threadbare, the chairs venerable, the damask curtains darned—perhaps all the more home-like for these suggestions of social service and experience. Janet went on with her task of remodeling an old dress. Clotilde went over to the window, and looked wistfully through the drizzling rain to the red brick chimneys which rose above the house which held the coveted books. Margery, obeying a sudden impulse, had snatched up her ever-ready sketch-book from the table, and was scratching vigorously away. An ecstatic giggle from Bertie, who was peeping over her shoulder, called the attention of the others to her work.

"What is it?" asked Janet.

Margery looked up with a nod and a smile. "Wait a moment." On her brisk pencil flew, the dimples in her pretty cheeks deepening as her mischievous smile grew. "There!" She held up the open book. The others flocked around to her.

"Oh, Margery!"

"He can't look like that!"

"What a caricature!"

Indeed, comical and grotesque was the drawing of the long, lank figure, with the spidery extremities, the flying coat-tails, the tremendous goggles.

"Oh, just a trifle accentuated—not quite a caricature," she said, laughingly, as she scrawled under the picture the words, "Our New Neighbor."

"The rain is clearing off!" cried Bertie. "I'm going to run and ask mamma if I mayn't go out." And off she rushed. Soon, with her kitten in her arms and her little spaniel at her heels, she was out on the wet road. The rain had quite ceased. The afternoon sun, weary of sulking, was coming out in splendid state. In its radiance every drop on every clover leaf was a glittering jewel, and the pools in the street reflected bits of the brilliant sky.

On and on wandered Bertie, her scarlet skirt blowing backward, her yellow hair tangling flossily as the breeze caught and played with it. As she passed 'The Oaks' she paused to put her small inquisitive face against the iron railing and peer through. What a grand, big house it was! And how smooth and green was the large lawn, all lovely with beds of bloom! And how sweet the flowers smelled after the rain—the geraniums, and carnations, and sweet-brier, and verbenas!

"I should so love to see the funny man sister Margery saw," she said to herself. And then, just as if she had had a magical ring, her wish was gratified. For out on the main walk, not twelve feet away, from a small side path, came Mr. Sterling.

He saw the little maiden outside the railing—the bright-eyed, curious face. He liked children. He sauntered toward the gate. "Hello, little lassie! what is your name?"

"Kearney, sir."

"Oh! you're one of the Kearney sisters, are you? Which one?"

Bertie hugged her kitten more tightly and looked very important. "I'm not the clever one," she said.

He smiled. "No?"

"No. Clotilde is the clever one."

"Well."

"And I'm not the good one. Janet is the good one."

"Indeed!"

"Yes," with a nod. "And I'm not the pretty one, either. Margery is the pretty one."

"And you?"

"Oh, I'm the bad one. At least that is the way Uncle Dick says we ought to be distinguished!" She was breathless from her struggle with the big word.

"Then," he said, laughter lighting up his quiet brown eyes, "then it was Margery I saw to-day?"

"Yes, and I think," indignantly, "she was all wrong. I don't think you're one bit awkward."

"Eh?"

"I think you're downright nice. And some day—not now, because the girls said I mustn't—but some day, when we're better acquainted, I'm going to ask you to let me ride on your little white pony."

He bowed gravely. "Certainly."

"It's so sweet!" growing friendly and confidential. "Do you know that last summer—keep still, Kitty Kearney," to the pussy, which was writhingly attempting an escape—"last summer Margery, who is the grandest artist that ever lived, I think, made a sketch of it when it was out at pasture. Just wait here, and I'll run and get it. Come on, Twig."

Away she scampered, her little dog after her. Smiling amusedly, the tall brown gentleman by the gate waited her return. After fifteen minutes she was back with a flat book under her arm. "It is in there, and he is eating grass!"

He took the book rather diffidently, but very curiously, too. It could not matter. Sketches were made to be looked at. And this was a sketch of his own pet pony. "By George!" He almost dropped the book.

"Oh, please, please," cried Bertie, in an agony of remorse. "I quite forgot your picture was in there. What won't Margery say? Oh, never mind the pony's picture now!"

She snatched the book, turned, ran home as fast as her fat legs would carry her, leaving Clive Sterling crimsoning and laughing as he never had crimsoned and laughed before.

"Well, I've seen myself for once as others see me, thanks to the pretty one!"

He dropped his eye-glasses and sauntered back to the house. For several days he neither saw nor heard anything of his neighbors. Then he chanced to encounter Bertie.

"Oh, please, I can't talk to you," the child said. "The girls say I'm so un-reliable. You know Margery caught me when I was sneaking her sketch-book back, and made me tell her where I had taken it to."

"And then?"

"Then," confessed Bertie, with a contrite gulp, "then she sat down and cried!"

"I say. No."

"She did! There she is now. Oh, Margery, Margery!"

The girl had come unexpectedly around the corner. To avoid a meeting was impossible. She was quite near her sister and the master of "The Oaks."

"This is Mr. Sterling, Margery. You know you weren't reg-regularly introduced before. I've been telling him how you cried about—"

A delicious blush of mortification, regret, pleading, swept across Margery's wild-rose face. Frankly she held out her hand, lifted her clear eyes.

"I am so sorry for having been so rude! Will you forgive me, if you can? And come over and play tennis this afternoon?"

"Thank you. Yes!" he said.

"Why, Margery," the others said to her, when he, after a rattling good game, had returned home, "he's just splendid!"

"Good-looking, too!"

"And a gentleman!"

"All three!" decided Margery, promptly, as she sought the sketch of their new neighbor and deliberately tore it up.

She is Mrs. Clive Sterling now.

CHAS. J. FREDERICKS & CO.

Fashionable and Practical

HATTERS,

802 J STREET,

Importers and Manufacturers of Fine Hats and Caps.

Latest Novelties on hand and constantly arriving. REPAIRING A SPECIALTY.

J. O. MILLS,

High Art Crayon Portraits

Executed from Life or Tin types or Photographs. Inquire or leave orders at

406 J STREET, or 413 K STREET.

San Francisco Studio, 12 Dehone street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth, Church and Sanchez streets. References: Timothy Lee, Chief of Police, Col. Guthrie, Capt. Fouratt.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEEPING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6.
Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4.
Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

SAN FRANCISCO

Steam & Dyeing Works

Removed to 524 K Street.

Branch, 805 K St. Dye Works, 2511 J St.

All orders promptly attended to. Don't make a mistake—Main office at Capital Transfer Company.

JOHN STEEX, Proprietor Dye Works.

Trunks Removed, 25 Cents.

JAS. LONGSHORE,

SACRAMENTO TRUNK FACTORY,

530 K STREET.

Trunks, Valises & Bags Wholesale and Retail.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware, SACRAMENTO.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

BELL & CO.,

GENERAL AUCTIONEERS.

Salesroom, 927 K Street, Sacramento, Cal.

Regular Salesdays—Wednesdays and Saturdays at 10 o'clock A. M.

Assistants—W. T. Crowell, Real Estate; J. Pulvermacher, Bookkeeper; J. Lambert, Furniture and Stock.

Particular attention paid to sales of real estate, house sales, and sales of farms, stock, etc.

Highest price paid for all kinds of household goods.

R. H. PETTIT,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

IMPORTED & DOMESTIC CIGARS

Smoke the "Lone Fisherman,"

The BEST FIVE-CENT CIGAR in the Market

NO. 225 K STREET.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Win, Knihlaw, Peter Miller, Elizabeth Davis, Henry Greisel, Robt. Robinson, and B. F. White, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 12th day of October, 1889, in which action M. G. Dandried is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: That you, the defendants, and each of you, be required to set forth your several claims, or right, title or interest of, in and to Lots One to Eight, inclusive, in the Block bounded by J and K and Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, in the city of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California; and that said claims, or either of them, may be determined by a decree of this Court, and that they, or either of said claims, may be adjudged and declared invalid, and that the defendants, nor either of them, have no right, title or interest of, in, or to said land, and that plaintiff do have judgment against said defendants, decreeing plaintiff to have a good and valid title, and that the defendants be forever debarred from ever asserting any claim adverse to plaintiff, and for costs and for general relief, all of which will more fully appear from the complaint on file herein, to which reference is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said county of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified, that, unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief prayed for in his said complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk
Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [019-91]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Charles Farley and J. W. Richmond, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 21st day of October, 1889, in which action Michael Haley is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To require you, defendants, to set forth the nature, character and extent of your claims to that certain real property in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California, known upon the official map of said Sacramento City as Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, in the Block between T and U, Ninth and Tenth streets; and to obtain a decree of Court adjudging that defendants, or either of them, have no estate, right, or title in said premises, or any part thereof; and that defendants be forever debarred and estopped from asserting or claiming any right, title, or interest to said premises, or any part thereof; and for such other and further relief as the Court may deem fit and proper in the premises; and for costs of suit. All of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk
FRANK D. RYAN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [02-91]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Coe W. Bird-sall, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 1st day of November, 1889, in which action Emma Bird-sall is plaintiff, and you are defendant. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the grounds of wilful neglect and wilful desertion, all of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 1st day of November, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk
ISAAC JOSEPH, Attorney for Plaintiff. [02-91]

Ye College Graduate.

He can give the laws of Solon,
He can draw the flag of Colon,
He can write a Babylonian I O U;
He can make a writ in German,
He can draft a Turkish firman;
But the English common law he never knew.

He can write his thoughts in Spanish,
He can make a speech in Danish,
And recite such Sanscrit as would turn your brain;

The Muallakat Arabic
He can scan in feet syllabic;
But he couldn't tell old Shakespeare from Mark Twain.

He can fathom all the mystery
Of old Ethiopic history;
He can name one thousand Norse kings—more or less;
He can mark the Roman bound'ries,
And describe the Aztec foundries;
But has never seen the "Statutes of U. S."

He can trace the radius vector,
With a geometric sector,
And can give the moon's diameter in feet;
He can analyze the arum,
Classify the Coptic carum;
But he cannot tell a cabbage from a beet.

Not Tall Enough.

History has recorded that a foreign princess to whom Henry VIII of England offered his hand in marriage sent back the pointed answer that "if she had had two heads she would gladly have placed one of them at his Majesty's disposal." This allusion to the fate of Anne Boleyn and Katherine Howard was a good specimen of the epigrammatic smartness of that period; but an equally creditable performance has been furnished by our own age.

Just at the time when vague reports were beginning to creep abroad that Germany was meditating a fresh extension of her frontier at the expense of Holland, a Dutch official of high rank happened to be visiting the court of Berlin, where he was handsomely entertained. Among other spectacles got up to amuse him, a review was organized at Potsdam.

"What does your Excellency think of our soldiers?" asked Prince Bismarck, as one of the regiments came marching past in admirable order.

"They look as if they knew how to fight," replied the visitor, gravely; "but they are not quite tall enough."

The Prince looked rather surprised at this disparaging criticism. He made no answer, however, and several other regiments filed past in succession; but the Dutchman's verdict upon each and all was still the same:
"Not tall enough."

At length the Grenadiers of the Guard made their appearance—a magnificent body of veterans, big and stalwart enough to have satisfied even the giant-loving father of Frederick the Great; but the inexorable critic merely said: "Fine soldiers, but not tall enough."

Then Prince Bismarck fairly lost patience, and rejoined, somewhat sharply, "These grenadiers are the finest men in our whole army; may I ask what your Excellency is pleased to mean by saying that they are not tall enough?"

The Dutchman looked him full in the face, and replied, with significant emphasis, "I mean that we can flood our country twelve feet deep."—Harper's Magazine.

The time one spends in planning what he would do if he only had the money, could be much better employed in studying what to do and how to do it with the means at hand.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harnesses, Robes, Collars,
Whips, Spurs, Brushes
Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.
Harness Made to Order.

SECOND HAND*"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exeresences, etc.,
Positively Cured or no Pay.
No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names
of a few of the many cured. By addressing them
they will give any information required—and it pays
to investigate before being treated.

Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.

I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.

Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON, The * Leading * Merchant * Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501--507 K, cor. Fifth

Furniture

Bedding

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

Klune & Floberg,

WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS

Agents for Rockford Watch Co.

NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Wm. J. Hassett.

A. J. Johnston.

A. J. Johnston & Co.

PRINTERS,

410 J Street,

Sacramento

C. E. REESE & CO., CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Staple and Fancy Groceries, Fruits, Vegetables

GRAIN, FEED AND HARDWARE.

1122 J Street, between 11th and 12th.

The place where you can get the best value for your money in the city. If you don't believe it call and be convinced. Remember the number,

1122 J STREET.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J,

SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

NOTICE TO FRUITMEN!

Keep your trees free from scale and your apples from being wormy by the use of Warner's Scale & Insect Exterminator

FOR SALE BY

G. T. NOE, - - DRUGGIST,
AUBURN, CAL.

Put up in one-half gallon and quart cans.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR
only. Linen polished in the neatest manner.
We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city.

Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J
street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE
Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also,
Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night.
EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY & BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K.

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

CAPITAL ALE VAULTS.

Established in 1870, and still maintains the same reputation for keeping the best WINES, LIQUORS and Cigars in the city. The finest Hot Lunch in the city from 11 to 2. Clam Chowder a specialty every night.

NAGELE & SVENSSON, Prop'rs.

Telephone 38.

302 J and 1005 Third st.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and

Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

[SACRAMENTO.

BELL & FOUNTAIN
HAVE OPENED THE Plaza Cash Grocery
STORE,

Corner Tenth and J Streets,

And have stocked the same with all New and Fresh Goods, which they will sell for CASH at the smallest living margin.

All Goods Warranted as Represented.

Goods delivered to any part of the city.

Our Motto: "The nimble sixpence against the slow shilling!"

A. J. MUIR,
PLUMBER,
Gas and Steam Fitter.

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET, Telephone 226.
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.
ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

WESTERN HOTEL

209 to 219 K Street.

The Leading Hotel of Sacramento, Cal.

FREE BUS TO AND FROM HOTEL.

Meals, 25 Cents. Rooms, according to Location.
WM. LAND, Proprietor.

Bainbridge Business College
J. C. BAINBRIDGE, PRINCIPAL.

No. 1017 J Street, Sacramento.

A full Business Course, together with Short-hand, Telegraphy, Bookkeeping, Penmanship and all the branches usually taught in schools of this kind.
A full corps of Teachers of the first rank only employed.
MRS. BAINBRIDGE has charge of the Music Department.

A. C. SWEETSER & CO.,

Real Estate & Insurance Brokers

Lands For Sale in all parts of the State.

Some Good Investments in School Lands.
Send for Catalogue.

Office, No. 1012 Fourth Street,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Barrett & Berkey

PACIFIC RESTAURANT,
OYSTER HOUSE AND WINE PARLORS

701 J Street, cor. 7th.

King Bros.

State Capitol Cash Grocery, 131 J Street, corner Second.

Goods sold on small margin, strictly for cash. Best Brands of Wines, Liquors and Cigars.

H. WACHHORST Leading Jeweler of Sacramento
SIGN OF THE TOWN CLOCK,
No. 315 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihan's

418 J STREET.

FOR THE LADIES:

Just received, direct from Manufacturers, an elegant line of Silver and Oxydized Bonbonniere Boxes, Ladies' Cachou Flasks, and other Novelties.
Call and inspect them. THE ONLY FIRST-CLASS HOUSE IN THE CITY.

J. R. Wheat DITTMAR & WHEAT, A. Dittmar.

Sacramento Lounge & Mattress Factory

BEDDING.

FURNITURE

No. 916 J STREET.

JOE POHEIM, The Tailor,

MAKES THE BEST-FITTING CLOTHES IN THE STATE.

Fine Tailoring at Prices Thirty-five per cent Cheaper than any other Establishment on the Pacific Coast.

LATEST DESIGNS OF FALL AND WINTER GOODS

Now on Exhibition at

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

JAS. G. DAVIS Furniture, Carpets and Wall Paper
411 AND 413 K STREET,
Branch, 315 K St. Send for Catalogue. Prices Lowest.

BOOTS AND SHOES made to order. Boots, $6 to $11. Shoes, $4 to $9. Ladies' Shoes, best quality French Kid, $5 to $7.

REPAIRING DONE at lowest prices.

NONE BUT BEST mechanics employed.

WE GUARANTEE to make perfect fitting to the worst of crooked and crippled feet.

COMPETE WITH any shoes on the market.

216 J Street

—AND—

208 K Street,
SACRAMENTO.

A. CASELLI & COMPANY.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

Hotfilter & Grafmiller,

MANUFACTURING JEWELERS,

Jewelry made to order. Watches, Clocks and Jewelry Repaired and Warranted.

No. 1026 Sixth Street, Sacramento.

GO TO
Nolan & Son's
FOR
FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers

and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.
Southern Pacific Company
PACIFIC SYSTEM.
Sept. 9, 1889.
Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
7.00 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
4.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.20 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3.40 A
5.05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	7.05 P
7.30 P	Knight's Landing	7.55 A
4.30 A	Marysville (Mixed)	1.25 P
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6.30 A
10.30 P	Central Atlantic Express	3.40 P
3.00 P	Oroville	9.50 A
11.00 P	Oroville	3.40 A
3.00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	9.50 A
10.40 A	Redding via Willows	4.05 P
7.00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	3.30 P
4.05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	10.10 P
4.00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10.40 A
*10.00 A	San Francisco via Steamer	26.00 A
11.20 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2.25 P
3.05 P	San Francisco via Livermore	11.40 A
11.20 A	San Jose	2.25 P
9.00 A	Santa Barbara	9.55 A
5.05 P	Santa Barbara	7.05 P
7.00 A	Santa Rosa	11.40 A
4.05 P	Santa Rosa	7.20 P
9.00 A	Stockton and Galt	7.05 P
5.05 P	Stockton and Galt	9.55 A
8.00 P	Truckee and Reno	6.30 A
10.30 P	Truckee and Reno	3.40 P
8.30 A	Coffax	6.00 P
7.00 A	Vallejo	11.40 A
4.05 P	Vallejo	28.30 P
*12.15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10.25 A
*7.15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2.40 P
*5.20 P	Folsom	*6.50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning. P for afternoon.
A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED K. COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

Capital Iron Works.

Vertical and Horizontal Engines

BOILERS,

STEAM AND POWER

PUMPS,

Deep Well Pumps,

Hand Pumps,

Stock Pumps,

PUMPMAKERS' SUPPLIES,

HORSE-POWERS, WIND MILLS,

Tanks and Tank Houses.

904 K Street, Sacramento.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars.
ROBERT ALLEN,
Formerly of Agricultural Park.

ALBERT GRUBBS,

No. 1417 Fourth Street,

Will do all kinds of House Cleaning, Lay Carpets, Whitewashing, and everything in that line.

He also has the only wagon for the REMOVAL OF DEAD ANIMALS, and any orders left at his place of business will receive prompt attention.

Remember the address!

No. 1417 Fourth Street, Sacramento, Cal.

JESSE SLAUGHTER,

Office, No. 1217 Fifth Street.

Plastering, Whitewashing, Cleaning of Cesspools, Etc.

Also, CITY SCAVENGER.

Burying of dead animals attended to at short notice.

Don't forget the number—1217 Fifth Street, the old stand, where I have been for 25 years.

THE EXAMINER

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1889.

No. 39.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

The address of Master F. H. Brigham, of the National Grange, is lengthy. It contains much that is commonplace, yet at the ending touches upon the responsibilities of American citizenship, a subject which is entitled to very serious consideration by all who believe in our system of government. The Grand Master reasons correctly, that with us every voter is responsible to society for the casting of his ballot, and there is no question but that the exercise of this high prerogative has been and is greatly abused by some citizens. We cannot agree with him that our government is controlled by corrupt men and by money, yet there is considerable foundation for the remarks he made. Beside the State of Nevada, there could, perhaps, be no other State wherein it could be said with truth that the power of money, irrespective of ability, control selections to important offices, that should be characterized with dignity and ability. Is it not a common remark in this State that a Governor or a United States Senator can be elected "by expenditures of money?" Will it be contended that Mr. Hearst was elected to the United States Senate because of his ability, or that he was the peer of Webster, Clay, Sumner, and many others whose records are a portion of the history of the Union? Hearst is but another Sharon, and, as him, will be remembered only that he had wealth. The Grand Master quotes the following as the expression of President Lincoln. If it be that the martyred President so spoke or wrote, he certainly looked far into the future, beyond his natural life, yet prophesied what has come and will come in the age and the country in which we now live. The quotation from Mr. Lincoln is as follows:

We may congratulate ourselves that this cruel war is nearly to a close. It has cost a vast amount of precious blood. The best blood of the flower of the American youth has been freely offered upon our country's altar that the nation might live. It has been, indeed, a trying hour for the republic, but I see in the near future a crisis approaching that unnerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of our country. As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned, and an era of corruption in high places will follow, and the money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudices of the people until all wealth is aggregated in a few hands and the republic is destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of the war. God grant that my fears may prove groundless.

Further on the Grand Master said that it is estimated that 25,000 persons own one-half of the wealth of this Nation, and that the time is near at hand when they will control the other half, unless there are radical changes in the legislation of this country. He added in effect that there could be no change for the better unless it came about from an altering in the composition of our legislative bodies. Truth there is in what Mr. Brigham said. That wealth is controlling selections to offices of dignity in this State and in the country is true; that in the matter of the choosing of United States Senators and Governors in California, coin is in some cases, potential, will not be seriously denied. This State is now represented in the higher body of Congress by millionaires; that fact may be to our credit—yet it may be inquired, of what account is ability and mental worth? The history of the world, and particularly of this Republic, has exemplified that wealth stops at no obstacle. In this State, it is an open secret that our United States Senators own and control several newspapers. In the city of San Francisco as against the Examiner legitimate journalistic enterprise and ability cannot count—its monied power is too great. Senator Stanford is not so openly in the journalistic field. He pursues the matter on a smaller scale and the minor details are operated by those not of his family, yet the effect is practically the same. Hearst gave his boy the Examiner as a play toy; the papers of Senator Stanford are run in connection with the business and politics of the interests with which he is connected.

It cannot be said that in the case of Senator Stanford his selection was in any way improper. The people of the State recognize his peculiar abilities and personal worth; he was chosen on that account, and not from the fact that he had acquired wealth. We had the honor of casting for him the vote of the 18th Assembly District, and were in a position to be familiar with the circumstances surrounding his election. He came into the office without tarnishment; the people have endorsed the action of their representatives, and were the question of his re-election to the position submitted to popular vote, his majority would be deservedly complimentary. Of Senator Hearst it can not be said that his selection was under those conditions. He raised himself to the office with a lever of gold. In his case there is a very striking exemplification of the evils which in many instances flow from the use of money in politics. As we have before stated in these columns, Mr. Stanford's greatest enemies are his indiscreet friends, who are disposed to advertise themselves by doing him unnecessary homage. Recently he was "swung around the circle," presumptively under the management of Ned Curtis, and some of the newspapers, with kindly intentions, but in execrable taste, published columns of what could well be characterized in newspaper parlance as slush. For instance, the Nasby of the expedition telegraphed that in one of the northern towns when the Senatorial party entered the room in which the inhabitants had gathered, the people arose to their feet and profoundly bowed! There can be but one explanation of this: That the people of that town had accustomed themselves to bow at the grandeur of Mount Shasta, and that they had in some way confounded Mr. Curtis with the mountain. It is very apparent that such reported demonstrations were the creations of the imagination of a California Nasby, and must have been embarrassing to a gentleman such as the Senator is.

The session of the National Grange, now being held in this city, can be regarded as among the most important gatherings in the history of the Union. It is representative of the most prominent industry—agriculture. The fact that the session is being held in a State and a locality that, within the memory of men now living, was almost a wilderness, strikingly exemplifies the phenomenal progress that has been made by the American people in the past half century. The delegates to this congress who have not before visited the far west, will have little appreciation of the changes that have been wrought within a space comparatively short in the life of a nation. Previous to 1848, the territory of California was almost unknown. At the few missions agriculture and the cultivation of grapes and fruits was carried on to a very limited extent. Cattle were reared for their hides and tallow, and the produce was principally disposed of to Boston trading vessels. In this valley the agricultural operations of Captain Sutter were but indifferently successful. The gold discovery in 1848 attracted a population of adventurous young men—picked pioneers. To them is largely due not only the remarkable development of this State, but of the vast territory lying to the east of us. They brought about a realization of the dream of President Jefferson of the future greatness of the territory acquired under the Louisiana purchase. The vast plains of the far west that had been untrodden, save by savage races, wild beasts and the occasional trapper, have been transformed. They are now dotted with cities and towns, where pulpits and printing presses are shedding light. The great wheels sound the song of industry, and the soil is made to yield its bounty to man. Where once stood frontier blockhouses, capitol of new States have been planted. As we indicate, largely are these results, without the building up of California, due to the efforts of our pioneers of the Golden Age. They strung a line of telegraph across the continent in the early days; what were supposed to be insurmountable barriers—the Sierras and the Rockies—were scorned; railroads have been carried over them. The men who lent so much to the accomplishment of these important results are rapidly passing away; the flags over the halls of the Pioneers are floated at half-mast with mournful frequency. Their work, however, will endure for all time. Their monument will not be a pyramid of stones, but a grand commonwealth. These men of the west have brought about a progress never before exemplified in the history of the world. True it was that gold was the magnet, yet the argonauts of 1849 were not content alone to force the earth to yield up its hidden treasures; they foresaw as well agricultural wealth; they were not slow in its development.

We of Sacramento will never be in the rear for want of orators to toot the horn of self-adulation. At banquets and receptions, judging from these laudations, there is no other place on the face of the earth equal to Sacramento. Well, we like to be placed in the van, but should make a little allowance for others. It is possible that the "Genius of Oratory" has established his permanent court in this city. It was said that this pleasing Genius had his temple in the Athens of the new world, but the altars have become deserted, and the Genius looked about him for some more propitious clime, and after listening to the appeals of many other places, he found some bold, others avaricious, selfish, etc. Finally he came to Sacramento, where he found brilliancy, wit, learning; and, notwithstanding the inordinate amount of vanity displayed, the sacred Genius established his future court at the City of the Plains. This fact, therefore, is an excuse for the fervid self-love that prompts our orators, because they are the followers of this great Genius of Oratory. The one great trouble is, that there are so many orators at this established headquarters of the presiding Genius of Oratory that only a few can have an opportunity to soar in the lofty realms on any one occasion, therefore there is a probability of a revolt on the part of those who are not called upon. This may result in the destruction of the temple and the removal of the court to some other place. We therefore counsel harmony, and ask the embryo orators to abide their time with patience and let the favorites wind themselves, which will follow in due time, when the neglected orators can come to the fore. You can tell a Sacramentan any place, for the most common-place conversation always has the air of a speech.

We are somewhat curious to know in what estimate the people of California, and particularly the people of Sacramento, are held by the delegates to the National Grange. From what we learn of the various speeches delivered at the reception, the bellows was not inactive from a lack of wind. We are not sure whether the quiet sarcasm of the Governor of Michigan, in reminding the enthusiastic Californians that there were other States, was properly appreciated. From the tenor of most of the speeches delivered by the several distinguished tillers of the soil of California, it might be presumed that among the most noted productions of Golden State were politicians. Our enthusiastic receivers seemed to have lost sight of the fact that other States have Senators and Congressmen, and that in that line the productions of some other sections of the Union have not been particularly discreditable—in fact, if our judgment, from a reading of history, is correct, were the matter submitted to the determination of the world, it would need one of the largest of our big trees to furnish the shade for some of our representatives. In the course of the speeches, one of our modest Congressmen is reported as having said: "The people of Sacramento had been good to him in his boyhood, his youth and his manhood, and he would never forget their good offices." That there has been no forgetting of the good offices by the gentleman, we will not seriously question. We have no adverse criticism of the reception. The fact that among the host of speakers there were two farmers tended in some degree to relieve the political monotony of the affair, and to give color to the presumption that there are a few in California who maintain an existence by wrestling with the soil, and not with the primaries.

Is Divorce wrong? This pertinent query has been propounded by the North American Review to three distinguished men—James Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Henry C. Potter, and the great Agnostic, Robert G. Ingersoll. The first two, eminent divines of the Catholic and Episcopal churches, respectively view the question of "divorce" as against the tenets of the church. The former claims that if the control of the marriage relation had not been interfered with by statutory enactments, there would be very little demand for divorces. The Catholic church does not recognize divorce. The Episcopal church will not permit one of its ministers to solemnize the marriage of any man or woman who has a divorced wife or husband living. But if the person seeking to be married is the innocent party in the divorce for adultery, that person, whether man or woman, may be married by a minister of the church. Dispensations may, however, in some cases, be obtained from the bishop authorizing the solemnizing of marriage. Colonel Ingersoll, while recognizing marriage as the most sacred contract that human beings can make, and holds that in a true marriage of soul to soul, there would be no occasion for divorce, still it would be cruel and unreasonable to say that this relation should not in proper cases be dissolved. Sometimes it happens that persons give their bodies but not their souls in marriage. Such parties are not married, whatever the ceremony may be—this is immoral. In those countries where divorce is prohibited, and where wives and husbands have ceased to love each other, and cannot be divorced, there are mistresses and lovers. Here are the closing remarks of the brilliant orator and writer: "Is it possible to conceive of anything more immoral than for a husband to insist on living with a wife who has no love for him? Is it not a perpetual crime? Is the wife to lose her personality? Has she not right of choice? Is her modesty the property of another? Is the man she hates the lord of her desire? Has she no right to guard the jewel of her soul? Is there a depth below this? And is this the foundation of morality; this the arch that supports the dome of civilization? Is this pathetic sacrifice on the one hand, this sacrilege on the other, pleasing in the sight of Heaven? To me, the tenderest word in our language, the most pathetic fact within our knowledge, is maternity. Around this sacred word cluster the joys and sorrows, the agonies and extacies of the human race. The mother walks in the shadow of death that she may give another life. Upon the altar of love she puts her own life in pawn. When the world is civilized, no wife will become a mother against her will. Man will then know that to enslave another is to imprison himself."

To hold that the sacrament of marriage must always remain, and that neither party can ever be released from such shackles is immoral and unjust. To say that a woman, full of kindness, affection and health shall be tied and chained to a living corpse, is infamous. The same may be said of the husband who has had the misfortune to be bound to some infamous woman. Divorces are necessary when there has been no marriage of soul to soul.

Several weeks ago we had an editorial on the possibilities of science and discovery. We are brought to realize the great advancement in the medical science, yet at the same time feel that much more power is attributed to medical men than they are capable of performing. As a matter of fact, they can only apply the known remedies for known ailments, and await results. If these remedies are beneficial, the doctor is glad that he has guessed right. A most remarkable case was developed recently in a Chinese murder trial. A Chinaman, with a seven-inch blade, stabbed a fellow-countryman in the left side, fracturing the ninth rib, the blade ranging upward through the lungs, through the membrane enclosing the heart, penetrating the heart itself. The injured man lived twelve days after this wound was inflicted; walked from the County Hospital to the city, a distance of over three miles, and returned to the hospital. On the twelfth day, while attempting to get into a wagon, he fell back and expired. During all this time the exact nature of the wound was not known to the physician. The autopsy developed the facts above mentioned. Now, an eminent physician testified on the trial of the party who inflicted this wound, that this wound was necessarily fatal; that it was astonishing that death did not ensue immediately upon its infliction. This strikes all as a most reasonable conclusion. Yet comes another learned, experienced, as well as eminent medico, who announced on the witness stand that under a given condition of the patient, if he had been placed in a position of absolute rest, there would have been a possibility of his recovery. And, in connection with this testimony, gave some very advanced ideas relating to the healing art. Just imagine the possibilities of science, when it is claimed that a human being, stabbed through the organ of life itself—the heart—can be restored to life and health.

A couple of days ago the Greek Bishop while preaching in Hungary flourished a dagger in the pulpit and called on the people to exterminate the Jews. It is strange that in these days of enlightenment and progress there can be found in any portion of the civilized globe such fanaticism and bigotry as that portrayed by this Greek Bishop, who undoubtedly claims to be a Christian. This fanatic is one of that class who desires to appropriate heaven for the exclusive use of the followers of his dogmas. All other creeds and beliefs must be denied recognition by the Almighty. The slaughter and butchery of his fellow beings, because they are Jews, is not in his eyes any crime, but a service to God and religion. Well, we are glad there are but few such bigots in the world at this time. There may be many who cloak under the name of religion who are fanatical enough to think all other religions save their own peculiar creed should be exterminated, but there are only a few who express such sentiments. In Oriental countries the Mahomedans butcher the Christians, and now we find a professed Christian demanding the slaughter of Jews. This intolerance is now exceptional, and we find advanced ideas are fast overcoming all forms of fanaticism and bigotry.

The Babies.

In Ireland a belt made of a woman's hair is placed about a child to keep harm away.

Garlic, salt, bread and steak are put into the cradle of a new-born babe in Holland.

Roumanian mothers tie red ribbons around the ankles of their children to preserve them from harm, while Esthonian mothers attach bits of assafoetida to the necks of their offsprings.

Welsh mothers put a pair of tongs or a knife in the cradle to insure the safety of their children; the knife is also used for the same purpose in some parts of England.

At the birth of a child in lower Brittany the neighboring women take it in charge, wash it, crack its joints, and rub its head with oil to solder the cranium bones. It is then wrapped in a tight bundle, and its lips are anointed with brandy to make it a full Breton.

Among Vosges peasants children born at a new moon are supposed to have their tongues better hung than others, while those born at the last quarter are supposed to have less tongue but better reasoning powers. A daughter born during the waxing moon is always precocious.

The Grecian mother, before putting her child in its cradle, turns three times around before the fire while singing her favorite song to ward off evil spirits.

In Scotland it is said that to rock the empty cradle will insure the coming of other occupants for it.

The London mother places a book under the head of the new-born infant that it may be quick at reading, and puts money into the first bath to guarantee its wealth in the future.

The Turkish mother loads her child with amulets as soon as it is born, and a small bit of mud well steeped in hot water prepared by previous charms, is stuck on its forehead.

In Spain, the infant's face is swept with a pine-tree bough to bring good luck.

In America the child is handed over to a nurse with instructions to "raise it on the bottle."

AGRICULTURE IN CALIFORNIA.

When Some Important Steps Were Taken in Early Days.

To properly touch on any of the important agricultural or horticultural products of California, in the light of the development of this day, would consume the space of a book. However, it is a matter of interest to consider from what insignificant beginnings the present advancement had origin.

About the year 1771, the grape vine was first planted in California, at the Mission of San Gabriel. The early history of this vineyard, as well as the origin of its vines, is lost in the past. It is believed by some that the vines were brought by roots or cuttings from Spain, either directly or by way of Mexico; others hold that they were taken from some one of the many wild varieties; while others claim that the fathers first tried to make wine from the wild grapes, but, being unsuccessful, planted the seeds from raisins that came from Spain.

In 1829, Jean Louis Vignes arrived at Monterey from the Sandwich Islands, but removed to Los Angeles in 1831, where he died in 1863. The missionaries had made wine and spirits for several years prior to the arrival of M. Vignes, but he was the first to make these articles a business in California. In 1846, he had the largest vineyard in the territory of Upper California.

The largest grape vine in the State, and probably the largest on the continent, grew in the hacienda of Señor del Cannello, near Montecita, about three miles east of Santa Barbara. The vine was of the old Mission variety and was planted about fifty-three years ago by Maria Marcellina Felix, a Mexican woman, who died there in 1865, at the age of 107. It is related that she cut a switch from a vine while driving and planted the cutting on her return home; from it grew an immense vine, which formed a bower covering an area of ten thousand square feet.

We have no exact information as to when the orange was first introduced into California, nor from what stock the original trees came. It is not unlikely that the first missionaries brought orange seeds with them from Lower California, that stock having come from the indigenous trees along the western coast of Mexico. The seeds were planted at various missions, and some of the old trees are still standing. Relative to orange trees in this section of the State, it is claimed that an orange tree began growing near Marysville in 1852, and that it yet bears fruit. The first orange tree in Butte county was set out at Bidwell's Bar, on one of the forks of the Feather, in 1859. Soon afterward another was planted at Oroville, then called Ophir. The seeds from which these trees grew were obtained from two oranges eaten in Sacramento. One was from Acapulco and the other from Italy. The trees had been growing five years in Sacramento when transplanted. The one taken to Bidwell's Bar was conveyed in a tub of earth. From that tree was obtained nearly all the seeds from which the orange trees now in and about Oroville grew. Many of the oranges grown in Placer county sprang from a seed contained in an orange which Rev. N. R. Peck carried to his home at Ophir from Sacramento in 1862.

A few apple trees were planted at the missions, but they were a poor class of seedlings. The first good apples were imported from Oregon in 1849, but the varieties were few and the trees did not thrive. In 1852 a few trees were imported by way of the Isthmus of Panama—the beginning really of successful cultivation of those fruit trees.

In 1847 Henderson Lewelling, a native of North Carolina, crossed the Rocky Mountains to Oregon with a wagon-load of well selected fruit trees, packed in soil and carefully attended, so they should not die on the long journey. That is said to be the first stock of fine varieties of temperate fruits on the Pacific slope, and it led to the planting of a number of orchards.

The very first peaches known to the market of Sacramento came from a small orchard or garden on Coloma hill, El Dorado county, that was planted by Mrs. P. L. Wimmer. She had brought some peach pits from the States on crossing the plains, and, planting them in the rich soil of an old Indian rancheria near a spring which gave an abundant supply of water for irrigation, they grew up, and in 1853 produced a great deal of fruit. In 1854-5 the surplus from these trees—not exceeding forty or fifty in number—sold readily at Sacramento at twenty-five to fifty cents apiece. The Briggs orchard near Marysville, long since submerged to the tops of the trees by mining debris, was one of the first large horticultural undertakings. The celebrated traveler and writer, Bayard Taylor, once said that the peaches of the Briggs orchard and of Coloma were the best he had ever seen in his world wide roamings, with the single exception of those of Astrachan, near the mouth of the Volga river in Southern Russia.

Cotton was successfully grown in Kern county in 1865.

The first silk worms were hatched near San José, in 1861. They were obtained from Adrianople, Turkey, by Messrs. Prevost and Heutsch. Several unsuccessful attempts had been made to introduce the worms from Europe. Later they were introduced from China and other parts of the world.

The date palm of the Barbary coast has been grown at San Buenaventura and San Diego missions since 1790. The tree was introduced at the old Jesuit missions in Lower California before 1700.

The olive was introduced into Los Angeles and San Diego before 1780. The olive oil used in the Catholic church service and for family use from 1800 to 1840 in the southern part of the State was all manufactured from the gardens of the old missions and those of private individuals.

The almond has been grown in the mission gardens since about 1800, but was never cultivated for profit until about 1854.

As far back as 1835 wheat grown in California was considered equal in quality to that produced at the Cape of Good Hope, and attracted attention in Europe. In 1831 the whole amount of grain raised in Upper California, according to the mission records, was 46,202 fanegas—a fanega being equal to two and a half English bushels. In 1835 there were but three mills for grinding grain in the country.

In 1836 the value of a fat ox or bull in Upper California was five dollars, of a cow five dollars, of a saddle horse ten dollars, of a mare five dollars, of a sheep two dollars and of a mule ten dollars.

Tobacco was first raised at Sutter's fort in 1841-2, from seeds sent to Sutter by W. G. Ray, of the Hudson Bay Company, as a present.

Hop culture dates back to about 1858. Prior to that time most of the hops consumed came around Cape Horn, sealed up in tin cases. The first roots were imported by Wilson Flint from Vermont via the Isthmus.

The distillation of brandy began in a crude way on this coast on a small scale in the last century. It became a matter of importance in 1857.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

Ada Rehan's drawl is imitated by all the actresses in Daly's Theater, and also by many of the alleged society people.

She (at the piano)—Listen! how do you enjoy this refrain? He—Very much. The more you refrain the better I like it.

M. Massenet, the composer, recently received two laurel wreaths from some admirers in Germany, and the discriminating customs officers taxed them as "medicinal herbs."

Lydia Thompson is undecided whether to appear in burlesque or legitimate comedy this season. Age should step in and force Lydia into a doubt, and retire altogether. She has passed her time to attract in any line.

The Turkish Ambassador in Paris has objected to De Boriuer's play of Mahomet being put on the stage at the Theater Francaise. He withdrew his objection, however, when he was assured that no disrespect to the prophet is intended.

Bronson Howard is now in receipt of $1,400 a week from his play, Shenandoah. In a short time the piece will be running in four cities, and he will enjoy royalties amounting to $4,000 or $5,000 a week. Shenandoah is a valley of delight to its author.

Patti has grown tired of posing as a brunette and dyed her hair a brilliant straw color. Her choice of colors was a poor one, though, as it is likely to recall unpleasant memories of the good gold dollars that it took to get a glimpse of that golden head.

Miss Ada Glasca is a permanent resident of Cincinnati, Ohio. On her recent professional tour with the Corried comic opera company on this coast we were the first paper in this State to recognize the artistic ability of the little lady. It only remains for her to develop into one of the leading artistes on the comic opera stage.

One Mr. Clement Scott, an English dramatic critic, gives expression to this sentiment: "All Americans are vulgar, their newspapers are vulgar, their plays vulgar, and their dramatic artists essentially vulgar." This is an exalted standard fixed by our English cousin. It is too bad that we have so many vulgar plays, dramas, newspapers, and artists to offend the esoteric and delicate sensibilities of our British neighbors.

A curtain is lifted and the scene begins; those who watch and listen, and those who play are alike actors. The players are but actors of the actions of their audience, and the audience observing its acts upon an open stage applaud or weep, laugh or hiss, as they are drawn, described or burlesqued. The banker with his snowy head, the broker with his grooved face, the merchant with his bald pate and the varnished visage of the common swell are all alike portrayed and placed in a public attitude by the players. These actors are not players, but serious people. By their trade they laugh—because they are paid to laugh. They cry for a salary. They rant and imitate courageous kings for money. The hero whose eyes flash with indignation at the very intimation of wrong—gambles the night away—swears without ceasing, and lives like a madman off the stage. He is paid to imitate honor, and the audience fall in love with his mockery of manhood, notwithstanding. Men copy his stride and women kiss his photographs—"So runs the world away."—Tempest.

Mr. Barnes of New York was produced in this city on Wednesday and Thursday nights at the Metropolitan. It is a great play, blending humor, wit, sensation and tragedy. There is not a poor artist in the combination; not an indifferent situation. Emily Rigi, as "Marina Pavoli," is a superb piece of art. Miss Emma Field, as "Enid," makes fine support. Robert Hilliard, as "Mr. Barnes of New York," gives that character the American dash. He is an accomplished and pleasing actor. The precocious and meddlesome little wretch, "Maud," who is always popping in at the wrong time, is in the hands of Miss Anna Blanche. "Lady Chartist" becomes a character in the play through the cleverness of Miss Effie Germon. "Count Muso Danella," by Sheridan Block, did such splendid work in the third act that he was called before the curtain. The applause was intended for him alone, and he deserved it. Every part was a piece of art, from the railroad guard to the title role. Our old fellow-townsmen, Thomas Baker, is the manager of this excellent company. There is no better manager or more congenial gentleman in that or any other profession than Tom Baker. The Mr. Barnes of New York company is the finest combination on the road, and we predict a future for the manager.

Book Chat.

M. Gouney insists that the French statesmen act like schoolboys condemned for life to write essays.

The new novel, "Chata and Chinita," would not long keep the reader in doubt. It is a story of Mexico and the southern country, with a lively plot.

England has a curious way of honoring the memories of her best authors. Gad's Hill, the home that Dickens coveted so many years and finally obtained, the acme of his ambition, the home of his manhood and the one spot in all England most closely associated with his memory, is now for sale, and goes begging at $33,000.

The first man to produce readable translations of the Greek classics into a modern language was Jacques Amyot, who was born Oct. 30, 1513, and died in 1593. Racine esteemed the translations of Amyot highly, especially his version of "Plutarch," which has passed through many editions and been imitated in England.

Paul Du Chaillu, the writer and traveller, is fifty-two years of age. He is under the average height, round-shouldered and not at all handsome. His face is strange and his forehead commanding. He has French blood in his veins, which is shown by his vivacity of manner. He has an inexhaustible fund of anecdotes, and his conversational powers are great. He has done a vast amount of work, but is in fine health. His long journeys in African jungles do not seem to have injured his constitution at all.

There seems to be a mania at present among literary women for assuming editorial duties. Kate Field comes out with a new organ in Washington, which doubtless will possess individuality if it has nothing else to recommend it. Mrs. Logan has been editing a magazine in Washington for some time, called the Home Magazine. It does not appear to be much known away from home. The Album, of Boston, is a new women's magazine. Philadelphia has a new publication called The Housekeeper's Weekly, edited by a prominent woman writer on the daily press. A new departure, however, takes place on the Ladies' Home Journal, where Mrs. Louise M. Knapp retires from active duty and her place is taken by Edward Bok, the well-known newspaper writer, at a salary of $10,000.

Mr. Howells is never so keen as when sketching the character and habits of women; and the passages of this complexion are particularly apt. Thus: "Sewell smiled to think how much easier it was to make one's peace with one's God than one's wife." "A bonnet, she said, was much more than half the battle after forty." "Women know how to accept a reparation on account, and without giving a receipt in full." "Don't you think the most circuitous kind of fellow would be pretty direct compared with the straightforwardest kind of girl?" "Women seldom reason, it is said; when they do so, it must be owned that it is with passionate largeness." "My one horror in life is an evident bride." "A husband is almost as good as another woman." "When a woman says she never will forgive a man, she always has the condition of forgiveness in her heart." "A woman respects the word a man uses, not because she would have chosen it, but because she thinks that he has an exact intention in it, which could not be conveyed in a more feminine phrase. This is the way slang arises." "Through a superstition, handed down from mother to daughter, that it is uncivil and even unkind not to keep saying something, they went on talking vapidity, where the same number of men, equally vacuous, would have remained silent."

Rose Hartwick Thorpe, the author of "Curfew Must Not Ring To-Night," is now living in the South for the benefit of her husband's health, but as her own health suffers there, they think of making southern California their future home. She is now a woman of thirty-nine, and she wrote the well-known verses when she was under seventeen. All she got for them was a letter of thanks from the editor of a Detroit newspaper, to whom she sent the lines. She is a native of Indiana, and passed her childhood in great poverty. She says: "Of all dull, prosaic lives, mine was the dullest and most prosaic." When she wrote "Curfew" she had no education and no knowledge of books, though she afterwards applied herself to them and became a school teacher. But even during her early married life it was more important to her reputation among her neighbors that she should "keep house" in approved fashion than that she should write well, and she remarks: "Until the year 1880 I was laundrymaid, cook, seamstress, and nurse for my children." This experience recalls the story of Mrs. George Ripley, to whom suspended Harvard students used to go to be coached. Some one is said to have once found her listening at the same time to one boy who was reciting Greek and another who was demonstrating a proposition in analytics, while she shelled peas and rocked the baby's cradle with her foot.

Among the many discoveries of unique copies of books that have occurred during the last twenty years only, I can call to mind several that have come within my own limited experience, as, for example, an edition of the "Sarum Missal," dated 1487, and printed not by but for Caxton; the existence of such a book would have been treated as visionary had it been suggested before its discovery in an old Shropshire library. Then, again, who would have believed in the existence of a map of the world engraved on copper, and dated 1514, with the name of America marked upon it, till M. Tross brought it to light?—the earliest map of the kind having previously been supposed to be that printed at Vienna in 1521. It is but a few years since the British Museum acquired an edition of the prayer book of 1549, printed in small quarto size for the use of the clerk or leader of the congregation. This must have been printed in thousands, yet but one copy is known now to exist, and until its recent discovery a suggestion of the existence of such an edition would have been treated with ridicule. Then, again, the Edinburgh edition of Shakespeare's Venus and Adonis, printed about 1621, and the Bay psalm book, printed at Boston, New England, in 1651—who would have suspected the existence of such books till they actually appeared? I would urge persons of bibliographical tastes and knowledge who have access to libraries in old country houses and mansions, or, indeed, any collection of old books that have lain unnoticed and unexamined, to keep their eyes open, for I feel sure that the tracts of Columbus and Vesputius must have been printed by English typographers, and may yet be discovered. Nor is it only in old undisturbed libraries that bibliographical rarities may occur, for it is but a few years since that a folio edition of Julian Notary's "Lives of the Saints" was purchased at a marine store dealer's in Camden Town for 3s 6d, and afterwards sold for £200. Especial notice should be given to volumes of tracts, for it was a habit of our ancestors to bind together thin pieces by the dozen, and it is only a keen and skilled eye that will detect the presence of the grain of wheat among the chaff.

Professional Chat.

One of the simplest and yet most eloquent tributes ever paid the after-dinner oratory of Chauncey Depew was by one of the American workingmen's delegates to Paris, after the dinner at which Mr. Depew offered a few post-festal remarks. He and the wine together warmed the cockles of every heart around the board to that extent that after the company rose one of the workingmen said to him: "If you could have spoken at the Lord's Supper Judas would never have betrayed Christ."

The Court of Appeals of Kentucky has just decided a strange suit in regard to the enforcement of a promise for the cessation of the tobacco habit. In April, 1880, Mrs. Sallie D. Stemmons of Bourbon county made an agreement in writing with her step-grandson, Albert R. Talbott, that she would give him $500 if he would never take another chew of tobacco or smoke another cigar from that time until her death. At the same time the grandson stipulated to refund double that amount to his mother if he, at any time within the prescribed period, violated the agreement. The grandmother died in February, 1887, and as he fulfilled the conditions of his agreement and never received a cent, Talbott instituted suit for the recovery of the money from Thomas H. Clay, the executor of the estate. It was claimed that the condition was not sufficient in law to make the contract valid, and the lower Court gave judgment against Talbott. He appealed. The case was decided in the Supreme Court, and reversed, and again appealed to the Court of Appeal, which Court decided that Talbott fulfilled a plain contract and is entitled to the money.

Sherman tells about a very clever woman spy, who had passed through the Confederate lines and had traveled nearly one thousand miles to reach his headquarters and report. "She was one of the most extraordinary women I ever saw, and supplied me with very valuable information. She not only gave plans and drawings, but she was able to tell of intended movements that ought not to have been known to any person outside of the commander of the opposing forces and his most trusted advisers. I asked her if she needed money, and she said that, to continue her work, she must have $500 in greenbacks and $3,000 in Confederate money. I got the $500, but I was doubtful about getting so large a sum as $3,000, even in Confederate scrip. I called in General Kilpatrick and asked him if he could get some contraband money. 'How much do you need?' he asked. 'A pretty good sum,' I replied; '$3,000.' 'Oh,' said Kilpatrick, 'that is a small matter. I always carry that sum in my clothes.' He pulled $5,000 out of his pocket and counted it out. Strange to say," continued General Sherman, musingly, "I have never seen that woman since the war closed."

Of the many anecdotes of the great Kentucky lawyer, Tom Marshall, this is the latest: An old man, aged 86 years, had been arrested on a charge of counterfeiting. He had been caught in an attempt to pass counterfeit money and other counterfeits were found on him, so it looked like a clear case against the old chap. The Judge asked if he had counsel and he replied in the negative—he was unable to hire a lawyer. As it happened, Tom Marshall was sitting in Court at the time, and the Judge detailed him to defend the old rascal. He accepted as gracefully as he could, and held a brief consultation with the aged prisoner, after which he said he was ready for trial. The State presented its indisputable evidence and Marshall said he had no witnesses. "But," he added, "I should like to make a few remarks to the jury." Permission was granted, but everyone wondered what he could say in his client's defence. In the brief consultation Marshall had learned that the old man had fought heroically at the battle of Lundy's Lane, and he made a stirring speech about this glorious country and its defenders, saying nothing about the case of counterfeiting. So great was the power of his oratory that the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty, but as the foreman of the jury left the court-room he whispered to a friend: "It's — lucky for that old chap that he fought at the battle of Lundy's Lane."

NOTES.

In 1853-4 George Hearst was in business at No. 92 K street, with Hearst & Co., and then and for many years after, Leland Stanford was a member of the large merchandising firm of Stanford & Brothers, at Nos. 56 and 58 K street. Both the gentlemen were present in their old home at the reception of the National Grange this week.

The telegraph announced that the oldest Democrat in Iowa died happy after the recent election. Democrats do not die very often, and when election time comes around the fact of their demise is not noticeable, if the election returns are any guide. The Democratic party has died so often, and been resurrected from its grave, that we are somewhat skeptical of any rumored death, even of the oldest Democrat.

Yesterday at an auction sale of second-hand books and other articles, an old Bible brought the sum of $35. Who is there now to say that there are not godly people in this city? The good book brought this large price, while Moore, Milton, Byron and other poetical works were sold for less than a dollar each. Perhaps the elegant print and binding of the holy book had much to do with the price given.

Clergymen who have been in the habit of preaching Sunday after Sunday are the worst listeners in the world. They have become so accustomed to speaking and expressing their own ideas that to sit and hear somebody else do it is almost intolerable. More than this, the habit of putting forward their own notions in weekly installments is apt to make them self-opinionated. Any clergyman will admit the truth of the above sentiment.

It is a matter of history that of the thirty Speakers of the House of Representatives, who have occupied that chair since 1789, only one of that number ever reached the Presidency; that was James K. Polk. Many of the most brilliant men of the nation have held the position, and tried hard to reach the highest place in the world, but failed. It seems almost a fatality that the bright lights of our nation can never become our Chief Magistrate.

The declining health of Pope Leo XIII has caused some speculation as to who shall be his successor. The two prominent names now suggested as likely to receive the attention of the College of Cardinals, are Cardinal Maria Parocche, the Vicar-General, and Cardinal Satolli, the Papal Delegate to the Catholic Centennial at Baltimore. At the death of the Pope, the Cardinals meet and ballot for the successor of the deceased Pope. Two-thirds of the College of Cardinals are necessary to a choice. No Cardinal can vote for himself.

The two greatest problems of man are whence and whither? We know but little of any definite origin of our being, and the secrets of the past have always baffled all human research and ingenuity. Whence is one of the mythic legends. While we have an innate craving for some insight into the future, we are actually in the dark as to the past. True, we have the biblical theory of our creation but this does not satisfy the mind. There is too much of the element of mythology in this account of our origin. Where we will go when Nature's course has run, "gives us pause." We can think and think, but that is all.

It is said that the first great physician, Aesculapius, was educated in the art of healing by the centaur Chiron. Now, a centaur was half man and half horse. The progeny of such a mixture is usually an ass. It does not follow, however, that those instructed in the art of healing are asses because the original teacher was a centaur. Jupiter put a stop to the future prospects of Aesculapius by hitting him with a thunderbolt because he restored Hippolytus to life after he had been torn to pieces by his own horses. The cock, the raven and the goat were sacred to the god of medicine. At this day it would be difficult to find anything sacred to this deity.

Hon. Grove L. Johnson will be a candidate before the Republican Convention for Congressman from this district. So far as we have heard the other candidates will be the present incumbent, Hon. Joseph McKeuna, and ex-Congressman H. F. Page. It can be expected that the contest for that place on the ticket will be animated. Each of the gentlemen named has had extensive legislative experience and each has a very considerable amount of push. Mr. Johnson has served in the Assembly and Senate from this county, and is a lawyer of very much more than ordinary ability and success. Mr. McKeena has served in the Assembly from Solano county and is now in his third term in Congress. Mr. Page represented the district in Congress for five terms—from March 4, 1873, to March 4, 1883.

These itinerant peddlers and vendors of cheap goods are annoying to the business men who have to bear the burden of taxation and license to carry on business. They are alike a nuisance to the citizen, being perfect bores. Still they manage to drive many thrifty bargains with the unsuspecting housewife, who learns after the departure of the peddler that she has been swindled. With all this, however, she will undergo the same imposition from the next itinerant hawk that puts in an appearance. Citizens should not encourage this class of pests by patronizing them for any article. Our stores are filled with any and all articles that it is possible to need or want, and those merchants who bear the burden of government, pay street assessments, taxes, licenses, and subscribe to all our charities, deserve to be protected by our patronage. Do not patronize peddlers for any thing.

Is it worth our while to bear malice toward any of our fellows? Life is too short to be devoted to paying old scores, whether real or imaginary. We know it is not in accord with old Satan in our composition to let bygones be bygones, and to forgive and forget a wrong. But, after all, does it pay to harbor animosity? Suppose some trusted friend has deceived and cheated you; suppose some woman, in your young and ardent days, has played you false—why, just let it pass and forget there was such a being. It is better to smile and make light of the wrongs inflicted upon you. Revenge is not half so sweet as we imagine it to be. Remorse often follows revenge, and gives us more pain than the original wrong. Taking life easy is the best way. There will only be a few more smiles, a little more pleasure, much pains, a rush and push as we approach the end, and our play of life will be over, our fitful dream ended.

That was a good joke on Douglass Lindley on Tuesday night at the reception of the National Grange at the Capitol. Douglass Lindley was one of the Reception Committee, and desired to render some effectual duty by entertaining the visitors. Presently he ran across a Granger-looking fellow, who seemed to be lonely, and at once engaged him in conversation, during which he invited the supposed stranger to view the "exhibit" adjoining the banquet hall. The stranger accepted, and they entered the exhibition room. About the first display was a fine collection of fruit, which "Doug." enlarged upon in the true Californian style, saying that this collection was the product of Elk Grove, in this county. "Doug." looked at the stranger with an expectant avowal of wonderment, when he was greeted with the reply: "Yes, I know this is fine fruit. I grew it, and placed it here." "Doug." made no further attempt to entertain strangers.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

Cases of spotted fever are reported in Kentucky.

The Queen of Spain gave birth to a son yesterday.

English capital is tightening. There is not so much public notoriety about English capital absorbing all avenues of business.

There are a number of aspirants for the position of Justice of the Federal Supreme Court, made vacant by the death of Justice Matthews.

It is thought that the Mormons who have taken the oath of the endowment house are ineligible to naturalization, and that all further Mormon registration for voting purposes will be stopped.

At our neighboring town of Dixon, a colored individual named William Stepp cut and slashed a couple of parties by the names of Charles Myrwood and Steve Christianson with a razor. The injuries inflicted are very severe.

The telegrams from Brazil indicate that there is a serious revolution going on in that country at this time. Several leading merchant firms have received dispatches, giving brief accounts of the revolution. The day is not far distant when Brazil, like many other monarchal governments, will give place to a republican form of government.

A romance in real life and one of unusual interest, developed at Kansas City yesterday, when Maurice Scholl announced his intention of returning to Germany to marry Fraulein Marguerita Miller, daughter of the burgomaster of a town near Stuttein. It was thirteen years ago when the couple were betrothed. One evening when they were returning from the opera, Edmund Von Wandel, an army officer, insulted the prospective bride. Scholl challenged him to duel and the combat occurred next morning. Pistols were used, and Von Wandel was shot through the heart and instantly killed. Scholl was badly wounded but managed to escape. Since that time he has been an exile from his native land. He made a fortune in Kansas City, and now, when the statute of limitation prevents his being prosecuted for his crime, he has arranged to return to his home and complete the romance by marriage.

Origin of the Name "Idaho."

From time to time something appears in the public prints connecting the name of Joaquin Miller with the origin of the word "Idaho," in which it is always claimed that the word in question resulted from an interview which Miller had with Colonel Craig while both were traveling through the Nez Perce country in the summer of 1861. Miller is said to give Colonel Craig credit for composing the word from elements found in the Nez Perce language, and which Craig is said to have first pronounced Edalio, applying the word to the appearance of a neighboring mountain, upon whose summit something was seen to glisten like a diamond or gem. This was no doubt the origin of the Miller-Craig gem of the mountains, but not of the genuine article nor the word "Idaho." In the spring of 1860, several months before the discovery of gold had attracted the "Poet of the Sierras" into the Nez Perce country, a steamboat was built at the upper cascades on the Columbia river, under the auspices of the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, and when the steamer was launched the word Idaho appeared in its appropriate place as the name of the vessel. The definition of the word then given to the world was "gem of the mountains," and the word was then said to have been taken from the language of one of the Indian tribes inhabiting that portion of the Columbia-river valley. Some efforts have been made to find out who it was that first suggested that name for the steamer, but thus far without success. The steamer Idaho plied upon the waters of the Columbia during the spring, summer and autumn of 1860, and its name was quite familiar to all who traveled through the country that year. When it became necessary to find a name for the new Territory, which was organized in March, 1863, somebody, probably Salucius Garfield, suggested the name of the old steamboat that had been long since used up and relegated to the "bone-yard."—Idaho Statesman.

Uncle Bat's Philosophy.

Talkin' logic ter a niggah am like cuttin' down er hill wid er piece uv san' paper.

Ef er niggah breaks his hoe-handle it genly stops his wuk. It am 'stonishin', howsomever, what er immense emount uv service he am able ter git out uv er broken shotgun.

It am verry eummendderble in er young man fur him ter spen' all de munny he makes an' all he kin borror. It shows dat his libberalerty an' gennerossity am fully equal ter de common seuse an' diskreshun which he ain't got.

Ef yer waunts ter make er niggah's eyes shine like er pair uv new cotton bolls, jes' give him er big drink uv cheap whiskey an' explaiu ter him dat yer saw er 'possum climb in' er 'simmon tree 'bout er mile t'other side uv de gin-house.

Oldest House in America.

Where is the oldest house in the country to be found? In this age, when a passion for the antique is so widely developed, the question is of obvious interest. The Rochester Democrat lately alluded to a house in Guilford, Conn., as entitled to the palm for length of days. This house was built in 1640 for the Rev. Henry Whitfield. But one of the Democrat's correspondents calls attention to a house in Medford, Mass., known as the Cradock Plantation house, which was erected six years earlier, in 1634. People of the other hemisphere smile a superior smile when Americans fall to talking of their antiquities. Still, considering what a young country ours is, 1634 is a date of which any structure in the United States may well be proud to claim as its birth-date.—V. J. Tribune.

The term "Brother Jonathan" is said to have originated as follows: When General Washington, after being appointed commander of the army of the Revolutionary War, went to Massachusetts to organize it, he found a great want of ammunition and other means of defense, and on one occasion it seemed that no means could be devised for the necessary safety. Jonathan Trumbull, the elder, was then Governor of the State of Connecticut, and the General, placing the greatest reliance on his Excellency's judgment, remarked, "We must consult Brother Jonathan upon the subject." The General did so and the Governor was successful in supplying many of the wants of the army; and thence forward, when difficulties arose and the army was spread over the country, it became a by-pharse, "We must consult Brother Jonathan."

Blest be that Spot, where cheerful Guests retire

To pause from Toil, and trim their evening fire;
Blest that Abode, where want and pain repair,
And every Stranger finds a ready chair;
Blest be those Feasts with simple plenty crown'd,
Where all the ruddy family around
Laugh at the jests or pranks, that never fail,
Or sigh with pity at some mournful tale,
Or press the bashful stranger to his food,
And learn the luxury of doing Good.
—Oliver Goldsmith.

Marie Amalie, the new Queen of Portugal, is only 23 years of age. She is the daughter of the Duc d'Orleans.

Fall Millinery!

The above cut represents a POPULAR SHAPE for young ladies. Untrimmed in felt, 70 cts. Stylishly trimmed with ribbon and fancy feathers, for $2.75 and $4.00.

New Goods for this Department are placed in stock daily. Note the following prices: Rough and Ready Straw Turbans, 45 cts. Milan Braid Turbans, $1.00. Soft Felt Cigarette Hats, trimmed with cord, 60 cts. Aigrettes, 25 and 35 cts. a bunch. Blackbirds, 40 and 50 cts. Children's Trimmed Straw School Hats, 25c. Felts, neatly trimmed with ribbon, 95 cts.

Millinery Department
RED HOUSE

J Street, between Seventh and Eighth.

Fine Table
Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Produce of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

CHAMPAGNE

W. B. CHAPMAN,
123 California St. San Francisco.
SOLE AGENT FOR THE PACIFIC COAST.
To be sold by all first-class Wine Merchants and Grocers.

A. AITKEN,

PREMIUM PIONEER MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS

423 J Street, bet. 4th and 5th, Sacramento.

Costic Tile, etc. Cemetery lots enclosed with Granite. All kinds of work done in Italian and Vermont Marble. Direct importer of Scotch and Eastern Granite Monuments. Also, Marble, slate, Wooden and Iron Mantels, direct from manufacturers, at Reduced Prices. Call and examine.

Earthquake and Fire Proof
BUILDINGS

Constructed on my patent system. Perfect protection guaranteed. For estimates and particulars see
E. HAWES,
Twelfth and B streets, Sacramento.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The Gurney cab has been introduced in this city.

The Chinese murderer, Ah Keong, has been sentenced to life imprisonment, and has taken up his forced abode at Folsom State Prison.

Washington, Yolo county, is to have a postoffice. We always knew that our little neighbor was a hot place, but did not think a Furnace was necessary, even for the post-office.

A wayward girl by the name of Browu has been given into the custody of the police authorities by her mother, to be prosecuted upon the charge of vagrancy. She seems incorrigible.

There is on exhibition at A. J. Muir's and Crouch & Lyman's plumbing establishments a new invention, called the Paragon Hose Reel. It is said to be valuable in cases of sudden fires.

No one claims the deer skins at the depot. There are contraband pelts in the bundles. Had merchants been as particular in the past there would have been no inducement to commit these vandalism.

We are in receipt of eight volumes of the Appendix to the Senate and Assembly journals for the Twenty-eighth session of the California Legislature. This compliment is at the hands of Hon. W. C. Hendricks, Secretary of State.

The police investigation, as far as taking evidence is concerned, was concluded last night. Arguments will follow on Monday. Unless there is a vast amount of perjury, there is cause for the belief that almost unlimited crookedness exists in police circles.

The Ladies' Howard Relief Society elected the following officers yesterday: President, Mrs. J. W. Mandeville; Vice-President, Mrs. W. A. Henry; Secretary, Mrs. A. J. Gardner; Treasurer, Mr. H. H. Hartley. The objects of this worthy society is to aid the sick and distressed.

Senator Hearst and Congressman Clunie, accompanied by H. Weinstock, W. F. Knox, Jr., John Mackay and Captain Thos. Dwyer, made an inspection of the condition of the Sacramento river, using for that purpose W. R. Hearst's steam launch. The object was to inform Congress of the actual condition of this great waterway, in order to secure governmental aid in preserving the watercourse.

Railroad Commissioner A. Abbott came near receiving his quietus on Friday. The fact that he had been training for a great baseball match may have solidified his muscles to such an extent that the blow of death was averted. The chunk of sandstone was harder than a baseball, and, having escaped serious injury from this, it is not likely that he will be in much danger to-day from "hot balls." Joking aside, the escape of Mr. Abbott from immediate death was almost miraculous.

"Les Cloches de Corneville."

At the Metropolitan Theater, November 18th, 19th and 20th, will be given the Chimes of Normandy, by the McNeill Club. This is interposed as the third of the subscription series instead of a concert. The following is the cast: "Serpolette," Mrs. May Stevens Hubbard; "Germaine," Miss Irma Fitch; "Gertrude," Miss M. Alys Pullman; "Jeanne," Miss Alice Nixon; "Manette," Miss Lizzie Platte; "Suzanne," Miss May Hembree; "Marquis," J. A. Moyulhan; "Grenicheux," Richard Colm; "Gaspard," M. Foster; "The Baillie," W. E. Lovdal; "Notary," M. Bodefield. There will be fifty voices in the chorus. The management is in W. H. Kinross. From the cast it is evident that the opera will be well presented. The subscription ticket holders are entitled to admission one night of the season. General admission, 75 cents. Balcony, 50 cents. No charge for reserved seats.

The Problem Solved.

We noticed a queer caption to a newspaper article a few days ago—Brch Edanomel. An investigation disclosed that this was a mere transposition of Herb Lemonade. This does not, however, detract from the heading—Problem Solved—because Messrs. Postel & Schnerr have made a valuable discovery in light drinks by the introduction of a herb compound which they call Herb Lemonade. This splendid, invigorating and stimulating beverage is composed of certain health-giving herbs specially imported from France by the enterprising firm of Postel & Schnerr. This new drink will be a public blessing, because it stimulates without intoxicating, and possesses properties that retard and prevent malaria, as well as a most pleasant beverage to allay thirst. We commend this healthful discovery.

McKenna Goes East To-night.

Congressman Joseph McKenna will pass through this city on the 10:10 train to-night on his way to Washington. A number of republicans have arranged to meet him at the depot and bid him farewell. A band will be in attendance, and the matter is arranged as a surprise to the Congressman, as he has not been notified that it is in contemplation.

Ethics of Journalism.

We have read with attention the lecture administered by the Bee to the Record-Union, on the ethics of journalism. The Bee discovered corruption in the Police Department, but intimated that the informants of the journal desired to be kept in the background, and that their names would be developed on the official examination. We have little faith usually in the bluster of journalistic secret investigations. The Bee seems to have an idea that the "managing editor" is responsible for whatever anybody else writes. Upon the same principle, and with the same weight of reasoning, it might be contended that the drum-major would be responsible for the wealth of wind exercised by the gentleman wearing out his lungs on a large wind instrument in the band. If the man who writes an article is not responsible for that which he pens, who possibly can be? We can conceive no condition that exempts one from personal responsibility for that which he indites, any more than there could be a shrinking from consequences that would naturally flow from verbal expressions in society. That a man is connected with a paper should not release him from personal responsibility for his utterances. The public have rights. It very often happens that articles are written and printed from motives of petty malice, and that covert attacks are made by individuals, who would be very careful were there a certainty they would be held to personal responsibility for each line coming from their pens. This paper pursues a different policy. In anything that appears in its columns, with the writer, it is like dying—he must do it alone. If he gets into trouble, he must get out of it as best he can; there is no protecting mantle cast over him. Each of our writers has an individuality, in that the authorship of every line we print can be ascertained, and whoever is interested can meet the particular writer, talk to him, and, if mistake has been committed, a full retraction will be intelligently made. The Bee announces, as the code of newspaper ethics, that "the province of a reporter is to obey orders—to 'dig up' what he is asked to investigate. He has no personality." We do not recognize any such rule, and hardly think it will be recognized by the great public, who look at a newspaper man as but a plain, ordinary mortal.

"Five O'clock Tea."

In the basement of St. Paul's church, last night, the lady members of the congregation gave an interesting literary entertainment. The programme included the amusing piece entitled, "Five O'clock Tea," by William Deal Howells, and the cast of characters was as follows: "Mrs. Somers," Miss Jennie Govan; "Mr. Campbell," Selden Hetzel; "Mrs. Curwen," Miss Lillie Spillman; "Mrs. Roberts," Miss Phoe Burns; "Mr. Roberts," Mr. Reynolds; "Dr. Lawton," L. Ripley; "Old Mr. Bemis," Mr. Spillman; "Young Mr. Bemis," Guy Maydwell; "Young Mrs. Bemis," Miss Frankie Spaulding; "Miss Bailey," Miss Georgie Spaulding; "Miss Lillie Wallace," Miss Miller; "Mrs. Wharton," Mrs. Webber; "Maid," Mrs. Burgess; "Miss Canfield," Miss Ruth Catlin; "Mrs. Crashaw," Miss Ella Waddilove. Misses Nellie and Edna Wright gave a song; Miss Pearl Baldwin delivered a recitation. There were also solos by Miss Mand Noyes and Mr. Parker. After the exercises, refreshments were served.

A Great Event.

The baseball game to-day between the "Reds" and "Blues," at Snowflake Park, will be the event of the season. The object of this great athletic contest is a benefit for the Kindergarten. H. Clay Chipman and Sam Leake have been appointed umpires, and the batting order of the nines has been fixed as follows: "Blues"—Mayor Gregory, W. R. Ormsby, F. D. Ryan, V. S. McClatchy, J. L. Gillis, Elwood Bruner, Wm. Luce, Frank Orcutt, W. Lampert. "Reds"—C. N. Post, Gus Buchanan, W. F. McFadden, W. Wood, George McLaughlin, C. J. Cox, Frank L. White, D. A. Lindley, Frank Hickman. Game will be called at 2 o'clock P. M. The clubs will be promiscuously uniformed.

The Weather.

The highest and lowest Signal Service temperature during the past week was 68 and 38, as against 71 and 35 during the same time last year. The first generally visible light frost of this season occurred on last Thursday, the 14th. The weather reports at 5 o'clock this morning show a cold wave east from Cheyenne and Denver to Omaha and Chicago, the temperature ranging from 2 to 18 degrees below the freezing point, while in this valley the temperature is from 8 to 12 and 15 above the freezing point at the hour above named (5 A. M.).

One of the most popular places of resort in the city is the Skating Rink, corner Sixth and M streets. This evening there will be a mile race by four new beginners, and it is sure to make lots of fun. The management of the rink is perfect and everything first-class. There will be a band of music in attendance, and as this is one of the most healthful and pleasant amusements, it is sure to be well patronized this winter.

SNOWFLAKE PARK.

Twenty-eighth and R Streets.

BASEBALL—CALIFORNIA LEAGUE.

Sunday.....November 17, 1889

At 2 o'clock P. M., sharp,

Oakland vs. Sacramento.

Prices of admission: Men, 50 cents; ladies, 25 cents; small boys, 10 cents; reserved seats, 25 cents extra. Trains leave depot at 12:45, 1:05, 1:25, and 1:45 P. M.—stopping at Third, Tenth and Eighteenth streets. Fare, for round trip, 15 cents. Admission to Park (including fare both ways), 50 cents.

ROLLER SKATING RINK.

OLD PAVILION,

Corner Sixth and M Streets, - Sacramento,

CLARK & HOLDEN, Proprietors.

OPEN MORNINGS FROM 10 TO 12 O'CLOCK, for ladies exclusively.

Open Afternoons from 2 till 4 o'clock.

Open Evenings from 7 to 10 o'clock.

Music Wednesdays and Saturdays,

Ladies' admission, free, except on music nights; ladies admission on music nights, 10 cents.

GENTLEMEN'S ADMISSION, 25 CENTS.

Commutation Tickets for sale.

GEO. H. CLARK.
FRED. A. HOLDEN, MANAGER.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Open Valve A, pull off the Hose, and water follows immediately.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

GEM GALLERY, THE ONLY
627 J STREET, Ferrottype Gallery
In the City.

Sixteen "Gems" for 50 cents. Card size proportionately low. Photographic Work in general.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS, Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & AND & MECHANICAL & DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

FRIEND & TERRY
LUMBER CO.

Wholesale and Retail Lumber Dealers, Also Shakes, Bolts, Ties, Doors, Windows, Blinds and Screens. Main Yard and Office, No. 1310 Second Street. Branch Yard, corner Twelfth and J Sts. P. O. Box 233. E. J. HOLT, Manager. Sacramento

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.

L. RADLOFF,

LADIES' TAILOR,

218 POST STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

A. C. SWEETSER & CO.,

Real Estate & Insurance Brokers

Lands For Sale in all parts of the State.

Some Good Investments in School Lands.

Send for Catalogue.

Office, No. 1012 Fourth Street,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Bainbridge

Business

J. C. BAINBRIDGE, } PRINCIPAL. College

No. 1017 J Street, Sacramento.

A full Business Course, together with Short-hand, Telegraphy, Bookkeeping, Penmanship and all the branches usually taught in schools of this kind. A full corps of Teachers of the first rank only employed. MRS. BAINBRIDGE has charge of the Music Department.

STABLE TO LET!

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

The Late Prince of Monaco.

The late Prince Charles III died at Chateau Marchais, at the advanced age of seventy-one. The deceased Prince had for many years been blind, and this circumstance, combined with bad health, had prevented him from taking an active part in the affairs of Monaco during the latter part of his reign. Descended from the ancient family of the Grimaldis of Genoa, the Prince had inherited a long list of titles; he was Duc de Valentinois, a peer of France, and a Grandee of Spain. He was born in 1818, and succeeded his father, Prince Florestan, in 1856. On September 28, 1846, he married the Princess Antoinette, Countess de Merode, who died in February, 1864, having in November, 1848, borne him a son, now Prince Albert of Monaco.

The celebrated Casino of Monte Carlo took its name from Prince Charles, who conceded the land on which it is built to M. Blanc, of Homburg Kursaal. The result of this arrangement was that the Monegasques were excused the payment of rates and taxes. The late Prince was devoted to art and literature, and hospitably entertained any celebrity who visited his little principality, while he was extremely pleasant and affable to his court. During his illness he was nursed by his sister, the Duchess of Wurtemberg-Urach, who became her brother's constant companion at his wife's death. The funeral took place at Monaco on the 26th ult., and the ceremony, which was of a private character, was attended by all the military and civil authorities. The Casino was closed, as well as all the places of entertainment.

Prince Albert of Monaco, by whom he is succeeded, married, in 1869, Marie Victoria, sister of the Duke of Hamilton, Brandon and Chateaubault, by whom he has a son, Prince Louis, born July 12, 1870. The marriage was annulled by the Pope in 1880. The Prince, who is captain of a frigate in the Spanish navy, is a man of scientific tastes. He has made many researches during his voyage into marine fauna and flora, the results of which have occasionally been published in the Revue des Deux-Mondes. His Royal Highness is about to be married to the Dowager Duchess of Richelieu. This lady's maiden name was Heine, and she is a descendant of the well-known Hamburg Jewish banker's family of that name. The poet Heine was a member of the same family. This marriage will unite the descendants of the two great cardinals—Mazarin and Richelieu. The lady will be the first Jewess to share the throne of a reigning Christian sovereign.

The Palace of Monaco is full of historical interest, and contains some splendid rooms. One of the larger apartments is known as the Duke of York's Chamber, for here the English Prince died more than a century ago. Pictures of many of the former monarchs adorn the palace walls, and the stories told in connection with them date back to the time of the Crusades. It is hoped that Monaco will awaken to fresh life when Prince Albert brings his bride to his ancestral home.

Curious stories are being related by the continental newspapers about the late Prince, and it is said that if the story of his life could be told in detail, it would prove exceedingly piquant reading. His youth was wild and adventurous. Fond of excitement, he actually served for a time as an actor, and "for a few nights only" appeared on the boards of the Porte Saint-Martin Theater. His career on the stage, though short, is said to have been very successful. To the end of his days, even when stricken with blindness, his wit and gaiety did not desert him. When he first heard that his sight was irrecoverable, he said to his physician, with a grave smile, "Well, I am now like the Emperor Charles V; I can never see the sun set in my dominions." Even on his death-bed he made jokes.—London Queen.

A Romance of China.

China, in its slow, shy way, is enjoying just now a little romance. Years ago, when the last Ming emperor ended his troubles in a coal mound in Peking, his heir was made a marquis, and the Manchu dynasty succeeded to the rule of the Land of the Sun. During the reign of the last emperor but one, the then holder of the marquisate died without sons and with no direct heir to succeed to the titles and estates. References to the family records showed that the rightful heir was an obscure personage, who had been completely lost sight of, and search was made for him everywhere by the officials of the banner under which the marquis was enrolled. High and low, in byway and highway, the gallant knights of the banner sought for the missing heir, and no trace could anywhere be found of him. Nevertheless he was close at hand all the time. Day by day, for a goodly number of years, there had stood outside one of the gates of Peking a man with a barrow crying pumpkins for sale—a sort of celestial costermonger, very rough, very rustic and totally uneducated. Beneath his ragged robe, although he did not know it, there beat the heart of a marquis, and those who had sought the lost heir had passed him a hundred times without knowing how close they were to the object of their search. Accident revealed it at last, and the costermonger, bewildered and alarmed, was conveyed, barrow and all, to the office of the banner under the shadow of the palace wall. With much difficulty the idea was hammered into him that he was no longer a pumpkin seller—that he was a marquis and the descendant of kings. When at length he understood, he permitted the banner to wash and shave him and fix up his hair in approved marquisate style, and clothe him in costly garments—which he looked at, it is recorded, with a wavering and a doubtful eye. Then began a painful period of polishing up, for before he could be presented to the emperor the ex-coster had to be taught such elements of etiquette as his original profession had not proved favorable to, and had to learn also the few Manchu phrases necessary for a presentation at court. When this was all done his succession was allowed, and he went to his palace and took possession. Report speaks of him as an honest and kind-hearted man, who has done his best to educate himself and fulfill the duties of his high position. He is about fifty-four years of age, and still retains his rustic appearance. The birth of sons has secured the succession, so that the family is now in as strong a position as ever. It is his duty to offer a sacrifice each autumn at the Ming tombs. His palace is near one of the gates of the imperial city, and he is popularly known as the pumpkin marquis. And in course of time a celestial novelist will arise, and with a camel's hair pencil and a box of paints will chronicle his romantic life under the title of "Costermonger and Coronet; or, From the Pumpkins to the Palace."

To Conquer Obesity.

Professor Schweniger, the German doctor who gave Prince Bismarck a new lease of life by curing him of his obesity, is now one of the most influential men in Berlin. His list of lady patients is as long as the Unter den Linden drive, and he asks and gets fees that turn the other doctors green with envy. His system consists principally of doing without liquids. No beer at all, and the strain of doing without this is very nearly sufficient to reduce a German to a skeleton; no coffee, except once a day a small cupful, very hot, and with no milk and one lump of sugar; no tea and no water. If the patient suffers from thirst she may eat fruit, suck the juice of an orange or mix the juice of a lemon with a few tablespoonfuls of water and drink it. When the thirst becomes difficult to bear any longer, a cupful of boiling water, as hot as it can be drunk, is allowed. It is surprising to find, however, with what a very small quantity of liquid one can accustom one's self to live. At first Professor Schweniger's patients protest loudly their inability to do without liquid of some sort, but his invariable reply is, "Very well, madam; you can do as like, but don't expect to get thin." That always reduces them to terms, and though they find it difficult at first, they soon learn to live very comfortably on a few tablespoonfuls of liquid in twenty-four hours and joy to find their too, too solid flesh beginning to decrease "visibly." The German women are all prone to flesh, and hardly are they out of their teens before they begin to thicken alarmingly and grow ponderous and unwieldy. Even the theatrical people cannot conquer the national tendency, and resort to tight lacing to in some measure overcome their avoirdupois. One of the leading actresses in Berlin lies every afternoon for an hour with cracked ice in a cloth wrapped around her body to numb it so that she can bear the lacing for the night's performance, which is done by two muscular maids.—N. Y. World.

A Fable of To-day.

A mouse fell into a beer vat, poor thing, and a cat passing by saw the struggling little creature. The mouse said to the cat:

"Help me out of my difficulty."

"If I do I shall eat you," said the cat.

"Very well," replied the mouse; "I would rather be eaten by a decent cat than drowned in such a horrible mess of stuff as this."

It was a sensible cat, and said:

"I certainly shall eat you, and you must promise me on your word of honor that I may do so."

"Very well, I will give you the promise. I promise."

So the cat fished the mouse out, and, trusting to the promise, she dropped it for an instant to clean her own mouth of the abomination of the vat, thinking she had better do so before she took a meal of the mouse.

The mouse instantly darted away and crept into a hole in the corner where the cat could not get him.

"But didn't you promise me I might eat you?" said puss.

"Yes, I did," replied the mouse; "but didn't you know that when I made that promise I was in liquor?"

And how many promises made in liquor have been broken?

The unkindest cut of all upon a "news-paper man" is when, after being pursued with a club by an infuriated citizen whose name he has misspelled in the paper, he makes reparation by another and a very complimentary paragraph, wherein by a nefarious conspiracy in "the composing room" the name gets misspelled again.

CHAS. J. FREDERICKS & CO.

Fashionable and Practical

HATTERS,

802 J STREET,

Importers and Manufacturers of Fine Hats and Caps.

Latest Novelties on hand and constantly arriving. REPAIRING A SPECIALTY.

J. O. MILLS,

High Art Crayon Portraits

Executed from Life or Tin-types or Photographs. Inquire or leave orders at

406 J STREET, or 413 K STREET.

San Francisco Studio, 12 Dehane street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth, Church and Sanchez streets. References: Timothy Lee, Chief of Police, Col. Guthrie, Capt. Fouratt.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEETING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6. Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4. Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

SAN FRANCISCO

Steam & Dyeing Works

Removed to 524 K Street.

Branch, 805 K St. Dye Works, 2511 J St.

All orders promptly attended to. Don't make a mistake—Main office at Capital Transfer Company.

JOHN STEEN, Proprietor Dye Works.

Trunks Removed, 25 Cents.

JAS. LONGSHORE,

SACRAMENTO TRUNK FACTORY,

530 K STREET.

Trunks, Valises & Bags Wholesale and Retail.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware, SACRAMENTO.

Barrett & Berkey

PACIFIC RESTAURANT,

OYSTER HOUSE AND

WINE PARLORS

701 J Street, cor. 7th.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

BELL & CO.,

GENERAL AUCTIONEERS.

Salesroom, 927 K Street, Sacramento, Cal.

Regular Salesdays—Wednesdays and Saturdays at 10 o'clock A. M.

Assistants—W. T. Crowell, Real Estate; J. Pulvermacher, Bookkeeper; J. Lambert, Furniture and Stock.

Particular attention paid to sales of real estate, house sales, and sales of farms, stock, etc.

Highest price paid for all kinds of household goods.

R. H. PETTIT,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

IMPORTED & DOMESTIC CIGARS

Smoke the "Lone Fisherman,"

The BEST FIVE-CENT CIGAR in the Market

NO. 225 K STREET.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Wm. Kuhlow, Peter Miller, Elizabeth Davis, Henry Greisel, Robt. Robinson, and B. F. White, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 12th day of October, 1889, in which action M. G. Handried is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: That you, the defendants, and each of you, be required to set forth your several claims, or right, title or interest of, in and to Lots One to Eight, inclusive, in the block bounded by J and K and Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California; and that said claims, or either of them, may be determined by a decree of this Court, and that they, or either of said claims, may be adjudged an l declared invalid, and that the defendants, nor either of them, have no right, title or interest of, in, or to said land, and that plaintiff do have judgment against said defendants, decreeing plaintiff to have a good and valid title, and that the defendants be forever debarred from ever asserting any claim adverse to plaintiff, and for costs and for general relief, all of which will more fully appear from the complaint on file herein, to which reference is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said county of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that, unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief prayed for in his said complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [c19-9t]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Charles Farley and J. W. Richmond, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 24th day of October, 1889, in which action Michael Haley is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To require you, defendants, to set forth the nature, character and extent of your claims to that certain real property in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California, known upon the official map of said Sacramento City as Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, in the Block between T and U, Ninth and Tenth streets; and to obtain a decree of Court adjudging that defendants, or either of them, have no estate, right, or title in said premises, or any part thereof; and that defendants be forever debarred and estopped from asserting or claiming any right, title, or interest to said premises, or any part thereof; and for such other and further relief as the Court may deem fit and proper in the premises; and for costs of suit. All of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that, unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

FRANK D. RYAN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Coe W. Birdsall, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 1st day of November, 1889, in which action Emma Birdsall is plaintiff, and you are defendant. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the grounds of willful neglect and willful desertion, all of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 1st day of November, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

ISAAC JOSEPH, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t]

The Drummer's Latest.

The drummer always brings the latest trick. Here it is:

Take a spool of white basting cotton, drop it into your inside coat-pocket, and, threading a needle with it, pass it up through the shoulder of your coat. Leave the end an inch or so long on the outside of your coat and take off the needle. Four men out of five will try to pick that whole thread off your shoulder, and will pull on the spool until it actually does seem as though your clothes are all bastings, and that they are unraveling not only your clothes but yourself.

"I was in to see Wilson Barrett in Claudian in Boston last week," said the traveling man. "It was in the most interesting and pathetic portion of the play. Everybody was rapt. I was sitting bold upright, and didn't know or care to know a soul around me, when suddenly I felt some one tugging at that basting cotton that I myself had clean forgotten. I didn't say a word and did not move. Foot by foot it unrolled. Half glancing around I saw a man—a total stranger, yanking at that thread. His face was scarlet. He had pulled out about ten yards and was now hauling in hand over hand. He didn't dare to stop, because he had decorated my back and the whole aisle with basting cotton. He hardly dared to go ahead, for he didn't know what portion of my domestic interior economy he was trifling with. Rip! rip! went the thread. Hand over hand he yanked it in. The aisle was full of it. 'For Heaven's sake! Will it never end?' said he above his breath. I sat perfectly still and ran the spool while he pulled. How I wanted to yell. I never saw anything in my life half so funny. The whole section of the house got onto it. They didn't know whether to laugh at me or him, and some looked on amazed at the spectacle. At last the stranger behind me gave one frantic rip and yanked out about eleven yards on one bunch, and as the cotton got twisted around his watch chain, over his eye-glasses, in his very hair, and filled his lap, I turned around, and producing the spool from my pocket, said: 'I am very much obliged for your interest, and very sorry that I misled you. You see I have about 124 yards left, but I presume that you don't care for any more to-night. I am honestly sorry, but I can't help smiling.'"

"The man was a modest sort of gentleman in appearance. His face was as red as fire, even to his ears. He looked at me and then at the spool. He changed color once or twice, and then as the crowd caught on a big laugh went up right in one of the painful passages of Claudian, and the gentleman who had intended to pull that thread off joined in the laugh and said: 'I will square that up on my wife when I get home; but, my friend, I swear to Heaven that I did think at one time that I was going to undress you where you sat.'"

"It catches every time, and my wife has been fooled twice on it.—Lewiston Journal."

Mysteries.

There are more things in Heaven and earth, Horatio, Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.—Hamlet.

Along the shore of the Oneida lake there is an Indian's grave where at times a weird and supernatural light makes its appearance. It is described as a ball of fire about the size of a large orange, and sways to and fro in the air about thirty feet from the ground, continuing its irregular movements within a space about one hundred feet square. People have attempted to go near enough to solve the mystery, but it would suddenly disappear before reaching it. A very peculiar story is told by the neighbors near the spot. They claim that many years ago the locality was the part of an Indian reservation. A man by the name of Belknap frequently dreamed that there was a crock in the Indian cemetery containing immense treasures, and if he went there at the hour when the graveyards yawn he could secure it. These dreams were repeated so often that they had a strong effect, and he went there with pick and shovel, according to instructions, but he failed to turn round three times when he found the crock, as the dream directed. He went to pick it up, but was stunned by a flash of lightning, and the crock disappeared. Since that time the spot has been haunted by this mysterious light.

To Make Children Lovely.

There is just one way, and that is to surround them by day and night with an atmosphere of love. Restraint and reproof may be mingled with the love, but love must be a constant element. "I found my little girl was growing unamiable and plain," said a mother to us the other day, "and, reflecting on it sadly, I could only accuse myself of the cause thereof. So I changed my management and improved my opportunity to praise and encourage her, to assure her of my unbounded affection for her, and earnest desire that she should grow up to lovely and harmonious womanhood. As a rose opens to sunshine, so the child heart opened in the warmth of the constant affection and caresses showered upon her; her peevishness passed away, her face grew beautiful, and now one look from me brings her to my side, obedient to my will, and happiest when she is nearest me."—Women's News.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON, The * Leading * Merchant * Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501 -- 507 K, cor. Fifth

Furniture

Bedding.

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

Klune & Floberg,

WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS
Agents for Rockford Watch Co.
NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Wm. J. Hassett.

A. J. Johnston.

A. J. Johnston & Co.

PRINTERS,

410 J Street,

Sacramento

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J,

SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.
Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city. Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J Street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exeresences, etc., Positively Cured or No Pay. No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated.
Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lipns.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington. Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

ANGLO-NEVADA ASSURANCE CORPORATION

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

FIRE.—Cash Capital, $2,000,000—MARINE.

Sacramento Branch:

No. 1018 SECOND STREET.

JOSEPH STEFFENS, Manager.

HOWARD KIMBROUGH, Local Agent.

R. DAVIS,

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.
1002 J Street, Sacramento.

R. W. PARKER,

Dealer in Choice Family

GROCERIES and PROVISIONS

Sold at the Lowest Cash Price.

Give him a call and be convinced.

Corner of Seventeenth and N Streets.

Also, Office of the Superintendent of the City Cemetery.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and

Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER,

1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S St. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMANN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMANN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

FLASHES.

Wealth is about as uncertain as an elderly maiden's age.

The way to straighten up business affairs—straighten up yourself.

The ways of compositors are like the ways of Providence—past finding out.

If juries "hang" they are censured. If they don't hang they are condemned.

God created the world, but the devil must have taken a hand in creating policemen.

Grand juries sometimes go behind the returns. Example, the Eldred indictment.

Stains on clothing may be removed by benzine, but it makes stains upon character.

Our unmarried females were much interested in the work of the Patrons of Husbandry.

When "hush money" is used, it creates more noise. Some of our guardians of the peace have realized this fact.

Drop a nickel in the slot and see what J. O. Coleman and Tom Enright think of the drummer's thread-puzzle.

There is a Democrat in Indiana whose name is Piety. This is the first instance of Piety in the Democratic party.

It is one of the tenets of the Mohammedans that old maids have no chance in Heaven. This is tough, because they have no chance on earth.

In some of the Oriental countries a wife has only to place her slippers outside of the door to secure herself from the intrusion of any person, even her husband. Those slippers must be whoppers.

BELL & FOUNTAIN

HAVE OPENED THE

Plaza Cash Grocery

STORE,

Corner Tenth and J Streets,

And have stocked the same with all New and Fresh Goods, which they will sell for CASH at the smallest living margin.

All Goods Warranted as Represented.

Goods delivered to any part of the city.

Our Motto: "The nimbler sixpence against the slow shilling!"

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

—Gas and Steam Fitter.—

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET, Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

TAXES.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 3748 OF THE Political Code, as amended March 16, 1889, State and County Taxes will be received at the office of the County Tax Collector, northwest corner of Seventh and I streets, in the City of Sacramento, on and after FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1889. Taxpayers will please take notice that on the last Monday in December (the 30th day), 1889, at 6 o'clock p. m. of that day, taxes will be delinquent, and unless paid prior thereto five per cent penalty will be added, as provided by law.

CEO. C. McMULLEN,
Tax Collector of Sacramento County,
Sacramento, Cal., November 5, 1889.

H. WACHHORST Leading Jeweler of Sacramento

SIGN OF THE TOWN CLOCK,
No. 315 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

J. A. MOYNIHAN. G. E. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihan's

418 J STREET.

FOR THE LADIES:

Just received, direct from Manufacturers, an elegant line of Silver and Oxydized Bonbonniere Boxes Ladies' Cachon Flasks, and other Novelties.

Call and inspect them. THE ONLY FIRST-CLASS HOUSE IN THE CITY.

J. R. Wheat DITTMAR & WHEAT, A. Dittmar.

Sacramento Lounge & Mattress Factory

BEDDING. FURNITURE

No. 916 J STREET.

JOE POHEIM, The Tailor,

MAKES THE BEST-FITTING CLOTHES IN THE STATE.

Fine Tailoring at Prices Thirty-five per cent Cheaper than any other Establishment on the Pacific Coast.

LATEST DESIGNS OF FALL AND WINTER GOODS

Now on Exhibition at

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

JAS. G. DAVIS Furniture, Carpets and Wall Paper

411 AND 413 K STREET,
Branch, 315 K St. Send for Catalogue. Prices Lowest.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

BOOTS AND SHOES made to order. Boots, $6 to $11. Shoes, $4 to $9. Ladies' Shoes, best quality French Kid, $5 to $7.

REPAIRING DONE at lowest prices.

NONE BUT BEST mechanics employed.

WE GUARANTEE to make perfect fitting to the worst of crooked and crippled feet.

COMPETE WITH any shoes on the market.

216 J Street
—AND—
208 K Street,
SACRAMENTO.

A. CASELLI & COMPANY.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,
San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

Hotfilter & Grafmiller,

MANUFACTURING JEWELERS,

Jewelry made to order. Watches, Clocks and Jewelry Repaired and Warranted.

No. 1026 Sixth Street, Sacramento.

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.

Southern Pacific Company

PACIFIC SYSTEM.

Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.25 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico.	3.40 A
7.05 P	Deming, El Paso and East.	6.45 P
7.25 P	Knights' Landing.	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave.	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East.	6.25 P
12-01 A	Central Atlantic Express.	6.00 A
	Ogden and East.
3.00 P	Oroville.	10.30 A
3.00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville.	10.30 A
10.40 A	Redding via Willows.	4.00 P
6.15 A	San Francisco via Benicia.	7.25 P
6.50 A	San Francisco via Benicia.	8.35 P
3.05 P	San Francisco via Benicia.	11.40 A
4.00 A	San Francisco via Benicia.	10.40 P
10.00 A	San Francisco via Steamer.	26.00 A
11.25 A	San Francisco via Livermore.	2.25 P
6.50 P	San Francisco via Benicia.	11.40 A
11.25 A	San Jose.	2.25 P
7.05 P	Santa Barbara.	9.55 A
6.50 A	Santa Rosa.	11.40 A
3.05 P	Santa Rosa.	7.25 P
3.00 P	Stockton and Galt.	6.45 P
7.05 P	Stockton and Galt.	9.55 A
8.00 P	Truckee and Reno.	6.25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno.	6.00 A
12.05 P	Colfax.	10.20 A
6.50 A	Vallejo.	11.40 A
3.05 P	Vallejo.	7.55 P
12.15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed).	10.25 A
7.15 A	Folsom and Placerville.	2.40 P
5.20 P	Folsom.	6.50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning. P for afternoon.

A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.

T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED K COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

Capital Iron Works.

Vertical and Horizontal Engines

BOILERS,

STEAM AND POWER

PUMPS,

Deep Well Pumps,
Hand Pumps,
Stock Pumps,
PUMPMAKERS' SUPPLIES,

HORSE-POWERS, WIND MILLS,

Tanks and Tank Houses.

904 K Street, Sacramento.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars.

ROBERT ALLEN,
Formerly of Agricultural Park.

ALBERT GRUBBS,

No. 1417 Fourth Street,

Will do all kinds of House Cleaning, Lay Carpets, Whitewashing, and everything in that line.

He also has the only wagon for the REMOVAL OF DEAD ANIMALS, and any orders left at his place of business will receive prompt attention.

Remember the address!

No. 1417 Fourth Street, Sacramento, Cal.

JESSE SLAUGHTER,

Office, No. 1217 Fifth Street.

Plastering, Whitewashing, Cleaning of Cesspools, Etc.

Also, CITY SCAVENGER.

Burying of dead animals attended to at short notice.

Don't forget the number—1217 Fifth Street, the old stand, where I have been for 25 years.

THEMIS

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1889.

No. 40.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

The Alta California claims to have discovered a provision of the general laws, that in its effect circumscribes the charter powers of municipal corporations of the second class. The Record-Union editorially assumes that the Acts and the amendments to Acts relating to bonds of municipal corporations are of such a character as to defeat the enumerated powers conferred by charters framed by freeholders, adopted by municipal corporations of over 10,000 and less than 100,000 inhabitants, and enacted by the Legislature after such adoption. The proposition contended for is that an amendment to the Constitution is necessary to prevent the Legislature from interfering with charters adopted by the people under the constitutional amendment of 1887. If the Legislature has an arbitrary power to annul or change at will charters of the second class, the same power exists over those of the first class—where the population is over 100,000. Now, let us see if there could be any stronger restriction than that existing under the Constitution, both before and after the amendment of 1887. Here is the provision of Section 8, of Article XI, of the Constitution, as it now stands, which provides that after the charter has been submitted to a vote of the people, and ratified by this vote, it shall be also submitted to the Legislature, and if approved by a majority vote thereof, whereupon it becomes the organic law of the municipality, and all special laws are by it superceded. Courts shall take judicial notice of this charter. "The charter so ratified may be amended at intervals of not less than two years by proposals therefor, submitted by the legislative authority of the city to the qualified electors thereof, at a general or special election, held at least sixty days after the publication of such proposals, and ratified by at least three-fifths of the qualified electors voting thereat, and approved by the Legislature, as herein provided for the approval of the charter." This restriction is as plain as language can make it. The Legislature has no power to arbitrarily amend, change, limit or enlarge the provisions of the organic law of a municipality after its adoption. The first and second class municipal corporations form their organic laws under Section 8, of Article XI, of the Constitution, which are beyond legislative control after approval, except at the will of three-fifths of the electors of such municipality. There is no doubt, however, that the Legislature can amend or change at will any of the provisions of the laws relating to municipalities of any of the other classes. It is with this regard, we must presume, that the Alta and Record-Union have become confounded in their ideas of legislative control over municipal governments.

In one sense the summary establishment of a republican form of government in Brazil can be regarded with surprise; in another, but an event that reasonably could have been expected. The deposed Emperor, Dom Pedro II, reigned over the country from April 7, 1831, ascending the throne when but 6 years old, his father having abdicated in his favor. The late Emperor developed into one of the most liberal and progressive monarchal rulers of the age. Under his administration an era of general prosperity was brought about, very extensive internal improvements made, and slavery quietly abolished. His advanced administration naturally bred a feeling with his people for the most liberal form of government—a republic. At the age of 64, he doubtless felt that he could accomplish but little more, and was not disposed to retard the time for the consummation of the result that would naturally eventuate from the policy he had pursued. That there has been a pronounced sentiment among some Brazilians against an imperial government was manifested last August, when an endeavor was made to assassinate Emperor Pedro. The act was, of course, that of an irresponsible, and doubtless had no effect to bring about the events of this week, other than to in a measure reconcile the Emperor to the change. That he leaves the country over which he has reigned for nearly sixty years with the kindly feelings of his people, was manifested by the circumstances immediately surrounding his deposition, and the munificence of the provision made for his future support. It is perhaps the first instance in the history of the world where monarch and people coincided that there should be a change in the form of government; where the sceptre was quietly, yea cheerfully, laid aside by a ruler from hereditary, and the Presidency of the Republic offered to him and declined.

Pedro, during his long reign, witnessed many changes in nations and much progress in the world. When he ascended the throne, Andrew Jackson was President of the United States, John C. Calhoun, Vice-President, Martin Van Buren, Secretary of State, Samuel D. Ingham, of the Treasury, John H. Eaton, of War, John Branch, of the Navy, and John M. Berrien, Attorney-General. William IV was ruler of England; Louis Philippe, of France; Francis II, of Germany; Frederick VI, of Denmark; Miguel I, of Portugal; Nicolas I, of Russia; Ferdinand VII, of Spain; Charles XIV, of Sweden, and Gregory XVI, was the Pope at Rome. During Pedro's reign occurred the Crimean war, and those between England and China; between England and Persia; the East India mutiny; the wars between England and Abyssinia, Afghanistan, the Zulus, and with Egypt. Also, the French revolutions of 1848 and 1870; the wars of that country with Austria and with Prussia. The wars between Prussia and Denmark; Austria and Prussia; Austria and Hungary; Austria, France and Italy; Russia and Turkey; United States and Mexico; the civil war in the United States; the French troubles in Mexico, and the war between Chili and Peru. During the reign of Pedro there were admitted into the American Union the States of Arkansas, Michigan, Florida, Texas, Iowa, Wisconsin, California, Minnesota, Oregon, Kansas, West Virginia, Nevada, Nebraska, Colorado, Washington, Montana, North Dakota, and South Dakota.

There is not too much learning in the world, but there is too much learning misapplied. Every year our numerous institutions of learning are turning out thousands who are bent upon some professional career, principally doctors and lawyers. We would have to introduce some great epidemic or contagion to furnish patients for this prolific grist of disciples of the healing art, and improvise some marvelous convulsion in legal matters to secure clients for the batch of lawyers. Thus the vast majority of those who are graduated with the idea of filling professional positions must perforce be disappointed in their ambitions. When these young men realize that there is no room for them in the learned professions, many of them become despondent, and their learning actually seems to make them helpless. They feel that there is no place on earth for them, and, through a faulty training, and a mistaken idea of their positions in life, literally throw themselves away. It is difficult to bring themselves to any of the trades or avocations of manual labor, and thus this army of educated nonentities become stranded early in the voyage of life. The training and education in the trades will never be overdone, and the demand will always exceed the supply. The education of mechanical tradesmen, engineers, practical bookkeepers, and experts in fruit and vine growing will at all times be the best, and these will stand a far better show in the struggle for existence than the big army of learned men in the professions. Thousands of these college-trained young men eke out a poor existence in performing the drudgery of journalism—piece and space writers for the smallest compensation. Many of those who seek to become members of the bar and physicians have not the benefit even of any considerable educational training. This class attend some cheap alleged medical institutions, from which documents called diplomas are issued to them, and armed with this, they set up as M. D's. Some young men study a few law books for a few months, and familiarize a series of propositions that they are likely to be examined upon, and with this surface knowledge, go before the Supreme Court, and are admitted to practice the most honored profession, when, in fact, they have not the most remote idea of the great principles of law. Some of these superficially educated men manage to make money in the practice of law—but how? Not by the application of learned principles. It is this class that brings the profession often into disfavor and ill repute. In these days of advanced ideas, there should be some remedy for these evils.

Apostasy to the Mormon Church means death to the apostate. This tenet of the Mormon Church was developed in the investigation in regard to the Mormon obligations. In the light of the past history of Salt Lake Mormonism, we are prepared for almost any development. Blood atonement is one of the doctrines of Mormonism, but they seek to confine this to those who commit murder and adultery. We apprehend that any place where there is Mormon rule would be decidedly unhealthy for any backslider in the faith. Their means of vengeance are of such a character that there would be little chance of discovery when the judgment of the Church had been executed, and the apostate sent on his long journey. The Gentile authorities in Salt Lake are drawing the line very close, and it may be that the day of absolute Mormon dominion is about over. We hope so at all events.

We publish in this issue a birdseye view of Sutter's Fort and its ground plan, as it was in 1848. Months ago, and before there was any agitation of the subject of the purchase of the fort site for public use, and the preservation of that around which there is so much of historic interest, the gentlemen connected with THEMIS took steps to collect data that would make possible the restoration of the fort as it originally was, in case a purchase could be effected of the land. Accordingly, on July 28th last a party consisting of Judge J. H. McKune, C. E. Grunsky (civil engineer), A. J. Johnston, W. A. Anderson and W. J. Davis, made a careful survey of the fort grounds, and of the interior building, now standing. In that work, the data we had been theretofore able to collect was utilized, so far as it could be made of avail. Plats of the results of this survey were made, and with a number of printed questions sent to persons who were known to have been familiar with the fort a the time mentioned. From the replies we have received, from a consultation of every particle of data accessible, and from the careful survey referred to, the drawings we now publish have been made, and we feel that they are as accurate as it is possible to arrive at the then situation of the fort and grounds. If it ensue, there will be a public ownership of the site of the fort, the data we have presented in our previous numbers in "Unwritten History," and the diagrams we now publish will be of value in assisting to restore the fort and its buildings as they originally existed. From our investigations we are led to conclude that the early pictures of the fort are very unreliable, as a rule, so much so that we determined to place little reliance in them, so far as minor details were concerned. The drawings we present were prepared by Mr. Grunsky.

SOME UNWRITTEN HISTORY.

Sacramento in Embryo—How Government was Established from Chaos.

PART VI.

THEMIS has collected such evidence of the actual status of Sutter's Fort as is accessible, and we lay before our readers in this number the best views of that historic place extant. We have chosen as the time the year 1848, and the first cut is a birdseye view as it then appeared. The eye is supposed to be elevated 70 feet, and to be about one-eighth of a mile distant southwest from the entrance.

The second view is a ground plan of Sutter's Fort, as it then appeared, connected with a plan of the streets of Sacramento where they intersect the walls of the fort. These plans have been prepared with great care by C. E. Grunsky, civil engineer, who has made accurate surveys of the locality and assisted us in collating the evidence from which the diagrams have been made.

"a" on diagram represents the southeast bastion, 20x20 on outside, 10x10 inside, walls 5 feet thick for lower story, 3 feet for upper story; the rooms of both stories 8 feet in the clear. The lower story was used by Captain Sutter as a prison for incorrigibles. The entrance to that prison was through a heavy oak door from room D. The upper story was reached by rough stairs, also from room D. The guns mounted in that bastion before 1844 were removed in 1846 and mounted on carriages in the yard of the fort, and from 1846 to 1849 the upper story was used as a receptacle of old iron, discarded guns, etc. Room marked D on diagram was wholly dark when the door to it was closed. This room 17x17, was only opened by Captain Sutter, or under his instructions. It was used by him as a storeroom, and through it were the entrances to the two rooms of the southeast bastion.

"b" on diagram represents a room 55x17, used by Captain Sutter prior to 1848 as a workshop for making the woodwork of wagons, repairing wagons, making saddle-trees, etc. It had two doors, and early in 1848 it was fitted up as a saloon and rented to Peter Slater, who occupied it until late in 1849.

"c" represents a room 55x17, used by Captain Sutter prior to 1848 as a general storeroom. This room he kept locked, and allowed no one to enter except himself and key-carrier, or under his direction. Early in 1848 room in the fort was much sought after, and Captain Sutter fitted up the room marked c on diagram as a billiard saloon and rented it to one White, who occupied it as such until the fort was abandoned as a business locality, late in 1849.

"d" on ground plan represents the south gate of the fort. This gate was 18 feet wide, double, 10 feet high, hung on heavy iron hinges, well fastened to heavy oak posts set in the ground and capped with an oak beam 20 feet high, extending from post to post. The whole gate was evidently made by a good workman. Prior to 1848 Captain Sutter kept a soldier (generally an Indian) in uniform, as a guard at the gate.

"e" Room 17x17, Sutter's private sleeping apartment, with good bed, well upholstered. This room was seldom visited except by Sutter himself and those who took charge of his private rooms.

"f" Sutter's private kitchen, and also a sitting-room. Rooms e and f were in charge of Sutter's best cooks.

"g" Sutter's private office, 17x17. Here he kept his books and did most of his business. George McKinstry was his clerk, and so continued until gold was discovered. In this room Marshall held his first conference with Sutter concerning the discovery of gold at Sutter's mill, and here was the first attempt of the discoverers to analyze their discovery and to test its value.

"h" The room next west of Sutter's office, 40x17, was used by Capt. Sutter as headquarters for his body-guard. This guard was composed of Indians, trained at the Mission San José, and each was and all were under the immediate control of Sutter himself, doing his bidding without question as to the propriety of their acts. The Mission San José as early as 1846 had fallen into decay, and Sutter, having a more thrifty establishment, secured the services of about forty of their most reliable men. From seven to ten of these constituted the body-guard of Sutter, and the balance were used by him to scour the country, bring in Indians and others accused of crime, and generally to act as policemen in Sutter's department.

"i" Blacksmith shop, 17x17.

"j" Coal bin, 15x17.

These two rooms, with a small one not shown in diagram, next north of room j, were used as a blacksmith shop, and from 1847 to 1850 were occupied as such by our fellow townsman Ephraim Fairchild, to whom we are indebted for many particulars contained in these notes. Sutter sold these rooms to Fairchild, by deed dated November 6, 1847, with twenty feet of ground in the fort, fronting the rooms.

"k" Room on west side of fort, next north of blacksmith shop, 40x17, was from 1842 to the fall of 1848 used by Sutter as a storehouse for wheat in bulk. In the fall of 1848 it was rented to James Cary, and he fitted it up as a boarding-house. In this house was held a celebrated trial, the circumstances of which are worthy to be recorded. We get them from an eyewitness. Late in October or early in November, 1848, a resident of the fort, an immigrant from Oregon, known to our informant only by the name of "The White Horse," undertook to fence in an open space in the fort shown in diagram, and marked q. C. E. Picket, also a resident at the fort, and since a well-known character in the State, claimed the open space, and, taking the law into his own hands, knocked down the fence put up by the other. "White Horse" started to rebuild his fence and Picket interfered, an altercation occurred, and Picket shot and killed his antagonist. There were then some 200 white men at the fort. There was a man at the fort named Tanner who was there acting as sheriff by appointment of Captain Sutter. He took Picket in charge, detaining him as a prisoner. Picket refused to submit, but Tanner was a stalwart, courageous officer, fitted for his place, and he disarmed his prisoner and compelled him to submit.

Picket plead his own case, and Brannan acted as Judge Advocate.

The trial came off the afternoon of the day of the killing. Picket insisted that he was an American citizen and, as such, entitled to bear arms, and Brannan decided that his two revolvers should be returned to him, and they were placed on the table during the trial. Picket was very nervous during the trial, as the Court, including the jury, were mainly strangers, and he was not wholly without fault.

Brannan charged the jury that this was a country governed by law and that breaches of the law should be punished. But he said if the jury found the prisoner guilty and determined to punish by imprisonment, there was no prison in which he could be confined.

The case was submitted to the jury about 10 P. M., and they deliberated till near morning, when they returned a verdict of not guilty, and Picket was discharged.

"l" This room in 1847-8 was furnished by Sutter as a bedroom, and occupied by a German friend named Unkenberger.

"m" This room, 15x17, was at first used as a blacksmith shop, and afterwards turned into a boarding house for men connected with the labor at the mill.

Rooms n and u, 17x17 each, were at first occupied as storerooms for tools, etc., and afterwards occupied by Wm. Campbell as a boarding house.

"o" This room was used first as an entrance to the northwestern bastion, through a door into the lower story, and by a stairway into the upper story. Second as a flour-mill, the motive power of which was a power run by ten mules, the sweep partly outside the room. The millstones were of granite. The miller was an Indian, trained to the business. He also kept the stones and mill in order, and frequently called in the blacksmith at the fort for repairs of machinery.

"p" The northwest bastion 30x35 outside; walls of lower story 5 feet thick, upper story 3 feet; joists supporting floor of upper story oak, sawed with whipsaw. The flooring of pine, sawed with same implement. The height of the stories same as in southeast bastion. The roofs of both bastions flat, covered with earth, Mexican style, with an additional roof covered with shingles, as shown in birdseye view of the fort. The guns mounted in this bastion were taken out in 1846, and in 1847 the floor of the second story was removed. The room was thereafter used as a storage for hay, until the fort was abandoned.

"q" Open space—no room—where Picket killed "The White Horse."

The building marked r was erected before 1844, for a distillery. Fremont found it in use for distilling native grapes. It was 60x25 feet, two stories high. Sutter continued to use this building as a distillery until 1846, when he discontinued the business of distilling, because he found that he could not keep the product from his Indian laborers or soldiers. The whole distilling apparatus was still kept in the building, with a view to future use; but when the immigration of 1848 came his wheat was destroyed and he never resumed the business.

"s" Tool-house, for implements used in distilling.

"t" was a temporary structure, put up in the fall of 1847 or spring of 1848, for the convenience of immigrants; built by one Kyburz.

The building marked u is the structure still standing, and we propose in our next number of this series of articles to give in detail an account of it.

The room marked v, 50x17, in 1848-9 was used by the firm of Priest, Lee & Co., as a store for general supplies to miners.

The room w was for the same time occupied for a like purpose by Hensley, Reading & Co.

The room x, at the northeast corner, was for the same time occupied for a like purpose by C. E. Picket.

The room y, with those marked z and a, were family rooms, kept for the accommodation of immigrants. The open space between rooms marked y and z in diagram was a gate, kept generally closed in early times. The wall of the fort was built above the gate, and the opening was through the wall.

REMARKS.

Sutter's Fort has become a thing of the past. Until the summer of 1849 certain business men clung to it as headquarters for business, but trade went to the river-front and along the streets of the city, and the fort, as a business center, was abandoned as early as November, 1849.

BIRDS-EYE VIEW OF SUTTER'S FORT—1848.

GROUND PLAN OF SUTTER'S FORT.

Brannan's store, shown at B in the cut, was turned into a hospital. The materials of which the fort was constructed were required for buildings elsewhere, as building materials in 1849 and 1850 were scarce and high.

The outer walls of the fort, built of adobes, were two and a half feet thick and eighteen feet high. The inner and partition walls eighteen inches thick and the inner wall about fourteen feet high. The slope of the roof was inward and covered with sugar pine shingles.

The interior building was occupied first as a boarding house in 1847, and afterwards in 1850 as a dwelling. The walls of the fort shut out the world from view, and those living inside wanted them removed.

Under these circumstances before 1853 all the materials constituting the fort had been removed and used elsewhere.

The abobes even were taken away for use and no vestige of the structure remains to mark any line of the fort, except at the place where was the northwest bastion, a little elevation is shown to mark it. No man can trace the walls of the fort by any appearance on the surface.

We were able to establish the corners only in this way: L street near the southwest angle was a fill not an excavation. Blacksmith Fairchild kept his coal in the room at that angle. An enterprising attorney in 1872 had a case where it was necessary to establish that angle. He sent Mr. Fairchild with a surveyor and some laborers to make explorations. They found the line of the coal room by excavation and thus established the inner angle of the fort. By adding the thickness of the wall, the outer line was established, and by aid of the building still standing, the whole fort is spread out to view in THEMIS, as it appeared in 1848, with as much accuracy in its details as is now possible.

The lines marked in diagram "Stock Corral" we do not give as wholly correct. The corral was built at the same time as the fort. The lines of this corral are lost. The entrance to the corral was where the west line of the corral intersects the north line of L street. The walls of the corral were nearly as high as the walls of the fort, and the gate into it was through the wall.

The health of Jefferson Davis is reported as being poor of late. He has outlived most of his contemporaries in politics, being over 81 years old. He graduated from West Point in 1828, having been appointed a cadet to that institution in 1824. He served in the army until June, 1835. Afterward he engaged actively in politics, and served in both Houses of Congress. During the Mexican war he rendered distinguished service on the field. President Pierce appointed him Secretary of War, and on his retirement from that office was returned to the Senate. On February 9, 1861, he was chosen President of the Southern Confederacy, and served in that capacity until its downfall. After his capture by the Union troops, he was kept in confinement for some time, charged with treason, but was finally released, and has since been in retirement, being but occasionally heard from in a "lost cause" speech. He has outlived his age; the early career that should have creditably distinguished him is about forgotten.

The strange history of King Milan and Queen Natalie of Serbia is becoming stranger every day. When King Milan first succeeded in divorcing his wife and then succeeded in dethroning himself it might have been thought that the politico-matrimonial adventures of this remarkable pair were pretty nearly at an end. But it is not so. The dethroned king has come back to the scene of his former disgraces; and he has been speedily followed by the divorced wife. Faithful to her threat, that lady has returned to the capital. Her entry was an interesting and rather touching scene, and there is no disputing the enthusiasm which this handsome and high-spirited lady has aroused among the people of Belgrade. It is rather significant to hear that when she was on the throne her favorite reading (Milan's was French "yellow"-backs, of course) was the history of Catherine the Great. She seems to be in a fair way to emulate at least one portion of her great exemplar's career.

"Excuse me, miss," said a smart young man to a lady who affects juvenility in head dress, "but your hair is all down." "Thank you," was the reply; "possibly you have observed the same fact in connection with your mustache."

One of the amusing features of the anarchist demonstrations in this country is the effort of the idle, beer-swilling squad to connect themselves in some way with workingmen and bear the name of that class.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

Charles Wyndham, the great English comedian, has made a success of The Candidate in New York.

Maud Granger, a former California favorite, has made her reappearance on the stage in Almost a Life.

Kiralfy's great spectacle Antiope will be the attraction at the Metropolitan Theater, on December 6th and 7th.

The cable says Patti has dyed her hair a peculiar shade of yellow, but does not add that she may have been induced to do so by the possible appearance of "silver threads among the gold," or rather, black.

Among the inscriptions in her album most prized by Mme. Patti-Nicoliui is this, by the elder Dumas: "Being a man and a Christian, I love to listen to your singing; but if I were a bird I should die of envy."

Mr. Cable has dramatized his story, Bonaventure, with the hope of having it put upon the stage. The dramatization has been read by one or two actors and managers, who are agreed that in its present form it lacks sufficient action.

Rosina Vokes will appear at the Metropolitan on Monday and Tuesday nights. On Monday night will be given, A Game of Cards, My Mitlin's Bill and The Rough Diamond; Tuesday, Crocodile Tears, The Circus Rider and A Pantomime Rehearsal.

The Philadelphia Ledger thinks that Miss Beatrice Cameron "has the feminine quality much as Ellen Terry has it," and that her performance of "Nora" in A Doll's Home is a very great triumph indeed. Another journal says that she is now "definitely on the road to honor and fame."

Mrs. Kendal, by extraction, is a Jewess. The actress' mother was a Jewess and her mother's father was a Jewish rabbi. Her mother's name was Elizabetha Merinus. The family came originally from Holland, where their ancestry had migrated from Spain, and, like Rachel, Bernhardt and other great stars, her Jewish blood has been no mean factor in making her so fine an artist.

Giuseppe Verdi is the son of an innkeeper. He was refused admission to the conservatory, because he had no aptitude for music. This reason seems laughable since Verdi has achieved such renown. His first opera was performed at La Scala, and was a great success. His widest known operas are Nebucadonozor, Ernani, Attila, Macbeth, Rigoletto, Il Trovatore, La Traviata, Otello, Giovanni D'Arco, and Aida.

The theater is the most popular of all schemes of amusement. It is universally popular. It attracts no particular class. It appeals to no particular taste. It is an amusement—a pastime of the people. Its place in a large city is as important as any educational institution. It is as important as the press—because of its influence. The magnet of the theater is pleasure—it therefore draws voluntarily; while many of the contemporaneous educators draw through a sense of duty. The spirit of duty moves only the minority. The desire for pleasure is voluntary and impels the majority.—Tempest.

Edwin Booth, in his younger days, was said to be a banjo player. When a youth he traveled with his father, playing small parts to fill up. The following story is going the rounds, but we don't vouch for it: One night he was sitting in his room strumming away while his father sat listening. The elder Booth was always a little shy of Edwin Forrest and would not for the world have had the great tragedian see him in anything but a dignified mood. But he was nicely caught on one occasion. Edwin was playing the banjo and his father was enjoying it when a knock came to the door. "Come in," said the elder Booth, rather gruffly, when the door opened and in strode Edwin Forrest. "How are you, Junius?" said he to the father. "How are you, Ed?" said he to the son. The father arose, shook hands with Mr. Forrest and at the same time motioned Edwin with his hand to put the banjo away. "No, no," said Mr. Forrest; "no, no, I like to hear it." Both resumed their seats. "Can you play 'Old Zip Coon'?" said he to Edwin. The younger Booth began playing the tune. When it was finished, Mr. Forrest asked for half a dozen familiar plantation melodies, and Edwin played them. Finally he struck the air of an old Virginia hoe-down. The elder Booth began keeping time with his foot, and so did Mr. Forrest. Very soon the feet of both the great tragedians began to move in a half-way shuffle, and, finally, as the full spirit of the music caught them, both began to dance the familiar steps which the music provoked. The harder Edwin played, the more vigorous the steps of the two tragedians, and the frolic continued until all were tired. What a scene! The two greatest actors of their time, or any other time, dancing to the tune of a negro melody played by the acknowledged leader of his profession in this day.

Book Chat.

James Payn, the novelist, has written a new serial entitled, "The Word and the Will."

Zola's new novel is to be called "La Bête Humaine." It deals with a murder in a railway carriage.

In literature an epigram is usually understood to mean something sharp and short, and generally, though not always, stated in terse rhyme. Martial, a Latin writer who was famous in this line, gave this definition: "An epigram is a bee—a thing of little size, with honey and a sting."

A female novelist is said to be touring through the west in search of some high tones of local color to touch up a new novel of the lurid type. If the novel be really lurid—that is, dull gray smoke-color—it will need high color to touch it up and make it something more than a sedative.

A most unexpected literary novelty is announced in England in the form of a new series of letters by the famous Lord Chesterfield. "The correspondence, in question, is considerably later in date than the celebrated letters to his son, and was addressed to his cousin and heir, the fifth earl. These letters passed to his sister, Lady Carnarvon. They are now prepared for the press by Lord Carnarvon, and are said to be quite as remarkable and valuable in their way as their classic predecessors.

Kenilworth, one of the most beautiful, as it is one of the most historical of English towns, suffers from "prolonged depression" still, and is of very little mercantile or social consequence as English towns go. Even tourists to see the picturesque castle towns, old St. Nicholas church and the other sights are not as numerous in summer as they once were, and the experiment of a second hotel in the place is said to have lately failed. It is one of the cleanest, best kept and most orderly towns one can find in weeks of travel.

A short while ago the Atlanta Constitution published a story by Mrs. Ward called Mrs. Brown's Burglar. Mrs. Ward located the story in a town which she named "Blackshire," Georgia, and made "Mrs. Brown" the keeper of a hotel, and her husband a dentist. And now it turns out that there is a Blackshire, Georgia, and in the town there lives a Mrs. Brown who runs a hotel, and her husband is a dentist. Mr. Brown threatens to sue the Constitution for $25,000 damages. A few years ago Wallace P. Reed wrote a story about Jefferson Thomas, a Georgia convict guard. The name was fictitious, but in a few days the paper heard from Jefferson Thomas, a convict guard in South Georgia.

Here is a pretty little last summer lyric:

Swallows soar into the blue,
Butterflies dance on the green,
Roses are blushing the garden through,
With lilies laughing between;
O'er the boughs long bare to the blast
A fluttering pomp has passed,
And the whole earth is shouting:
"Away with all doubting,
'Tis summer, 'tis summer at last!"

No pale face presses the pane,
Open the casements start—
To the breeze that is balm to the burning brain,
Surcease to the stricken heart,
And from out of a may-bush white
The blackbird lilts with delight,
"All melancholy
Is folly, is folly,
When Luna she is glowing bright."

The successful novel of to-day is that which contains some social problem woven into the narrative. This fact I learned in a recent conversation with a prominent publisher. Said he: "There was a time, not long ago, when people wanted fiction pure and simple, and there are people of the same idea now. But novel reading has changed. Take Mrs. Ward's or Mr. Bellamy's novels, or Mr. Froude's latest, and each presents a social problem. Of course, everything depends upon the topic woven into the narrative, and much upon the public's willingness to take it up. Let an author, however, take some problem which the public has had before it for some time, treat it well in narrative form, and the book is brought out just at the right time, and that author stands one hundred per cent. better chance of success than if his story was pure fiction. It is like a sugar-coated pellet, you know, and the public taste in literature to-day has to be attracted by something novel or out of the common. If I were an author I would seek fame and fortune in this direction." Wherein there may be a hint for ambitious young writers.—Boston Journal.

Professional Chat.

Many years ago Lawyer Rufus Anderson, of Hannibal, was engaged in a case before Judge Redd, of Marion county, and, in presenting a paper to the Judge, Mr. Anderson spelled the word "wagon" with two g's. Judge Redd, who was a very accurate speller, rebuked him for the mistake, whereupon the witty lawyer insisted that it was a "two horse wagon."

It is told that Senator Vest was once playing poker when he had on a new and particularly handsome flannel "outing" shirt. He had been losing steadily, and his chips were nearly gone, when one of the other players remarked: "That's a mighty handsome shirt you're wearing, Vest." "That settles it," exclaimed the statesman, jumping up; "blessed if I'm going to play in a game where they cast lots for a fellow's garments."

There is a familiar story about how Daniel Webster, when he was practicing law in New Hampshire, loftily denounced a quotation from a text-book made by a rival attorney as absurd and untenable, upon which the opposing lawyer quietly explained that the passage so contemptuously treated had been introduced into the volume from one of Lord Mansfield's decisions, that great jurist's exact language being preserved.

It is related of Cyrus W. Field that when he owned the Mail and Express, he asked his managing editor what a certain member of the editorial force was doing. "That's Mr. —, our exchange editor," replied the managing editor. "Well," said Mr. Field, frowning, "it's my opinion that he isn't worth his salt. As often as I have been in his office I've never seen him doing anything except read newspapers, and he's always got a big pile of 'em in front of him."

Daniel Webster never uttered a truer or grander thought than the following—couched, too, in that sturdy Saxon he handled so well: "If we work upon marble, it will perish. If we work upon brass, time will efface. If we rear temples, they will crumble into dust. But if we work upon immortal minds—if we imbue them with high principles—with the just fear of God and their fellow men, we engrave upon those tablets, something which no time can efface, but which will brighten to all eternity. In this way we may all be artists, and even the most ordinary and unlearned, if he has but a loving heart, may produce a master-piece. The professor or lecturer may cut deep lines and fashion wondrous forms on the unwrought material before him. The teacher in the common school, or the Sabbath school may, with the sunlight of truth, photograph upon the tender minds committed to his charge, a thousand forms of holy beauty.

General Payne, one of the past generation of Kentucky's prominent men, used to delight in telling of the peculiarities of one of Virginia's chief magistrates. "Once upon a time," said General Payne, "a citizen of Virginia, having business with Patrick Henry, then Governor of this old Dominion, went to the executive mansion and found an ordinary appearing man in the yard of the mansion, with but a shirt and a pair of trousers on, the latter rolled up to his knees. The grass was about a foot high, and it being morning, the great orator turned up his trouser legs to escape the contact of the dew. The man asked to see the Governor. He was told to walk in, and the old chap, clothed in shirt and trousers, seated himself in the Governor's chair and said: 'Well, sir, what can I do for you?' It was with some difficulty that the visitor could be convinced that the barefooted, scantily-clad man was the great Virginia orator and Governor."

NOTES.

A Halifax man sold his wife for $40. Well, that man was already in Halifax.

The manager of the Royal Laboratory has disclosed the secret of the manufacture of smokeless powder. Whew! what a smell he has created.

A Pan-American Congressman introduced a resolution to recognize the Republic of Brazil. His fellow-members voted him a little too previous.

The San Francisco Chronicle has a very severe attack of the anti-railroad fever. The owner of the paper is erecting a nine-story building. We have not yet fully understood if it is intended to be built of mind.

A St. Louis man preferred to go to prison rather than marry. He had been sentenced to five years' imprisonment, but could have saved himself by marrying the prosecutrix. This is a second De Mauprat.

We have heard of some pretty ancient clothes, but the following description, in the Bee, is rather ahead of anything on record: "His name is John C. Martin, and he is described as wearing a black suit about fifty years old with chin whiskers and mustache."

Really is it of consequence to be the father of a country? Washington gives way in 1889 to Boruck. Washington lives in the hearts of his countrymen; so does Boruck now. However, time may come when the inquiry will be made: "We knew of Washington, but who in the world was the Marquis de Borax?"

It is said that watermelon seeds have been found in an Egyptian tomb over 3,000 years old. We wonder if our old Egyptian friends ever sat on the sunny side of a barn and ate watermelons, and shook with the ague? If they did not, then we doubt the existence of watermelons in the times of the Pharaohs.

It is said of Redwald, King of East Angila, that on his shield was a picture of God on one side and the devil on the other, with the legend beneath: "Ready for either." There are not a few of our people to-day who profess to serve God, who are equally ready to do homage to the spirit of darkness as well. With them it is only a matter of business or policy. The legend may be apropos ultimately, for these hypocrites will have to be ready to meet the devil in the end.

Thursday, the 28th, will be the one-hundredth anniversary of the first Thanksgiving observed under a call authorized by the federal government. The first national observance was on the 26th day of November, 1789. In his proclamation, Washington spoke of it as a day "to be devoted by the people of these States to the service of that great and glorious Being who is the beneficent author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be."

Between now and the close of the year property owners will have an opportunity to practically familiarize themselves with the cost flowing from the wholesale appropriations made by the late Legislature, when they walk up to the Sheriff's office and pay their taxes. To the credit of the people of this county it can be said that the burden was not imposed by our local representatives. One good effect will follow. Generally the public of the State will be more particular in the selection of representatives.

F. L. Sanders informs the Herald that a San Francisco company is boring on A. H. Gates' place, near Lincoln, for sand for manufacturing glass. They have found sand in several places, which they say is equal to any in the United States for that purpose. They intend to continue boring to ascertain whether the deposit is sufficient to warrant the establishment of a manufactory.—Placer Herald. [We understand that the results of experimental borings so far made have been extremely satisfactory, and such that make the establishment of glass works in that locality not at all improbable in a very short time.—Encls.]

The historic building occupied by William H. Seward at Washington, while Secretary of State to President Lincoln, is being remodeled for occupancy by Secretary Blaine. In this building there are an inordinate number of windows fronting the White House. A recent story is told of a conversation with an old Washington dandy, which is as follows: "Uncle, what is the reason of so many windows in that house yonder?" "Don't you know, boss, dat Massa Blaine is goin' to live dar?" "Well, what has that to do with the windows?" "Why, massa," and the old dandy laughed and fairly quaked with merriment—"I 'spects it's so Massa Blaine can keep his eye on de White House."

What a contrast between the pageantry of the funeral of the rich, and that of poverty. There is little to excite deep feeling by any at the funeral of poverty. Poverty robs death of its pathos. There is no pageantry at the pauper's burial; scant ceremony is performed. If a minister of God's holy word is called to administer the last sacred rites, which is rare, it is done in a hasty, matter-of-fact manner. Religion does not look with favor on the burial of the poverty stricken—rather, we should say it does look with that kind of favor, which means, "It is better thus." Few prayers are said over these superfluous scions of humanity. A shabby hearse—if hearse at all—few friends; and this is all the pomp that death yields to Poverty.

The New York World has a cartoon of the contest for the World's Fair in 1892. The World's Fair is represented in the cartoon as "Cinderella's" slipper. Uncle Sam is kneeling to fit the slipper on those who who are trying for the prize. Chicago appears as a bouncing girl of the period, but has an exceedingly large foot. The exclamation of Uncle Sam is: "Hardly Miss Chicago's Size." St. Louis is a modest little maiden in the back ground, while Miss New York is looking over a map of Central Park, with a tiny little foot peeping out beneath her dress. The cartoon has the legend: "It begins to look as if Miss New York might be the real Cinderella, after all." Chicago was always the object of a jest relating to her big-footed girls, and the World has made a telling hit in the cartoon.

The typewriter girl is one of the institutions of modern times. She has become a monopolist, and really does the business of the world to-day. Many are the jests, and much ridicule has been expended upon her devoted head, but she is here to stay. Wives may become jealous and threaten all manner of vengeance and hairpulling, but the typewriter girl moves on in her quiet course just the same. The merchant, the lawyer, and the literary man has a decided preference for the pretty, neat, and modest typewriter girl. She is a fixture in his office, not to be displaced by any sentimental notion of jealous wives. All mankind like the petite, feminine manipulator of the keyboard of caligraph, correspondingly as much as the other females of the world hate her. She is an angel of loveliness about the office. Her presence has a refining influence upon her male companions. Who among business men will say a hard word against this typewriter girl?

A drove of deer, nearly famished with cold and hunger, was driven from the mountains into the valley at Elverano, where a farmer drove the deer into a barn and captured the whole drove. County Clerk Billy Hamilton, reading this account, remarked: "This reminds me of an instance in one of the Western States that I have read of, where a drove of deer was overtaken by a terrible snowstorm, which banked the snow up fifteen or twenty feet. The deer tramped around in a circle until a corral was formed of snow to such a height that the deer could not escape. Presently an old western farmer discovered the imprisoned deer, and not being animated with that desire for deer pelts that prompts some of our California vandals, in place of instituting a general slaughter, went home, loaded his wagons with hay, corn and provender, and fed the deer until the snow melted so they could escape." After this speech, Billy, in response to some skeptical comments, said: "It is a fact, gentlemen, I know the farmer, and have often visited the scene."

There is no grace equal to courtesy. The courtesies of life are blessings alike to those who receive them, as well as to those who extend them. The gentle, polite, courteous man is a king among his fellows. With that gentle power the rough edges are rubbed off of the hardships with which we are often beset in our journey through life. The courteous are never rough or offensive, no matter under what circumstances they may be placed. Selfishness is not akin to courtesy. The Americans, as a rule, are courteous, which is only another name for chivalrous. It is courtesy that raises man above the brute creation. A discourteous act toward the poorest, or most unfortunate of our fellow beings, discloses the brute element in man. A natural man must perforce be courteous and chivalrous. It is so easy and natural to be a gentleman, that we fail to understand why some people prefer to discard these good impulses and remain brutes. We find them, however, in nearly all the walks and conditions of life. At the theater, on the cars, in the street, at the bar, among the learned professions, in fact, everywhere.

A correspondent writes us inquiring if John C. Fremont was a Presidential candidate more than once. The first National Convention of the Republican party was held at Pittsburg, Pa., February 22, 1856. By it an address, prepared by the late Henry J. Raymond, and laying down the basis of the new party organization, was issued, and a convention to make a Presidential nomination was called, to assemble at Philadelphia on the 17th of June following. Over a thousand delegates were present. On the first ballot John C. Fremont, for President, received 359 votes, to 196 for John McLean, 2 for Charles Sumner, 1 for N. P. Banks, and 1 for William H. Seward. On the second ballot Fremont was nominated unanimously. For Vice-President, the candidates were William L. Dayton, Abraham Lincoln, David Wilmore, Preston King, Charles Sumner, Thomas H. Ford, Cassius M. Clay, and others. On the informal ballot Dayton received 259 votes, to 110 for Lincoln, and 180 scattering. Dayton was thereupon unanimously nominated. In 1864 a movement was gotten up by the Radical opponents to Lincoln in the Republican party, and it culminated in a convention, or rather, mass-meeting, of but 350 strong, which assembled at Cleveland on the 31st of May, and nominated Fremont for President and John Cochrane for the second place. They adopted a platform, and the candidates at first accepted, but afterwards withdrew from the race in favor of Lincoln.

As time passes, the nations and States are constantly being brought closer together. In the days of our forefathers, months elapsed before the events transpiring in the great nations of Europe, were known in the metropolises of America. To-day, we of California read the events of yesterday transpiring throughout the world, with the utmost composure. The young men of this coast can remember "Steamer Day," and the long time it took for a letter to cross the continent or come by way of Panama. With the construction of the overland railroad, communication with the great East was shortened to seven days. Upon the fast mail train recently established, mails were delivered in San Francisco at the office of the merchant and home of the mechanic in four days and fifteen hours from the moment they left New York. Time and distance are no longer an appreciable quantity in the ordinary affairs of the world. Within twenty-four hours of the event, we are aware that the great empire of Brazil has discarded kingly rule and adopted that of a republic, and it creates but passing comment with the ordinary newspaper reader of the day. What great changes the close of the nineteenth century may yet develop, are, of course, unknown, but past achievements in science have fully prepared us to expect still greater ones to follow.

The Pony Express.

A few days since a representative of the Republic had a talk with John Scudder, one of the men who established the pony express, that carried the letter mail between San Francisco and the East in the early sixties. During the conversation, Mr. Scudder said: "When the momentous 9th day of April, 1860, arrived, a magnificent black horse, carrying a mail pouch and rider, left St. Joseph on the ferryboat, bound west, in the presence of 10,000 cheering spectators. At the same hour a splendid white horse left San Francisco on the steamer for Sacramento. Over plains and mountains they sped, past station after station, day and night, without halting longer than to transfer the pouch from horse to horse, and in eight days and four hours the letters that left St. Joseph were in Sacramento. Mr. Russell's scheme was an assured success, and the pony express became for a time one of the most potent factors in civilization. It brought the Far West into closer communication and sympathy with the East, and advanced the development of the West, in my opinion, fully fifty years. The stage companies' contract scheme fell through, and one year later Mr. Russell was awarded the contract for carrying the overland mails. In closing, I will state that the stations were from nine to fifteen miles apart, according to the nature of the country, and each rider covered from two to three stations, changing horses at each. They were a hardy, fearless set of men, and capable of enduring great exertion. The saddle, bridle and pouch were strongly and compactly made, and weighed together thirteen pounds. Each rider carried a small horn, by means of which he announced his approach from a distance, in order to warn the stable attendants, and in this way the horses were always in readiness on his arrival and no time was lost."—St. Louis Republic.

Fashions are sometimes very amusing. Here, for instance, is the pea-jacket, which has been a much-worn but not fashionable garment in this country for perhaps twenty-five years. Along came Lieutenant Henn and a few other Englishmen of social standing, and, seeing the virtues of this humble garment, introduced it in England. Then a few American dudes began to adopt it as a very swaggar English fad, in utter ignorance of the fact that myriads of plain Americans had been wearing it for many years. No wonder Puck remarked: "What fools these mortals be."

A certain girl is a persistent scrap-book maker. The other day she greatly horrified her mother. The minister had just called and asked for the young lady, and she was sent for. "How do you entertain yourself, Miss Blanche, during these warm days?" asked the reverend man. The bright girl smiled. "Scraping," she demurely answered. The minister looked scared. He was slightly familiar with the slang of the day. Then she came from her chair. "Would you like to have me paste you one?" she sweetly asked. "No-o-o," stammered the clergyman and his call suddenly ended.

Fall Millinery!

The above cut represents a POPULAR SHAPE for young ladies. Untrimmed in felt, 70 cts. Stylishly trimmed with ribbon and fancy feathers, for $2.75 and $4.00.

New Goods for this Department are placed in stock daily. Note the following prices: Rough and Ready Straw Turbans, 45 cts. Milan Braid Turbans, $1.00. Soft Felt Cigarette Hats, trimmed with cord, 69 cts. Aigrettes, 25 and 35 cts. a bunch. Blackbirds, 40 and 50 cts. Children's Trimmed Straw School Hats, 25c. Felts, neatly trimmed with ribbon, 95 cts.

Millinery Department
RED HOUSE

J Street, between Seventh and Eighth.

Fine Table Wines
From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.
Grand Humphrey & Co.
Producers of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.

CHAMPAGNE
PERRIER-JOUËT
"SPECIAL"
W. B. CHAPMAN,
123 California St. San Francisco.
SOLE AGENT FOR THE PACIFIC COAST
10 sale by all first-class Wine Merchants and Grocers.

A. AITKEN,
PREMIUM PIONEER MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS
423 J Street, bet. 4th and 5th, Sacramento.

Costic Tile, etc. Cemetery lots enclosed with Granite. All kinds of work done in Italian and Vermont Marble. Direct importer of Scotch and Eastern Granite Monuments. Also, Marble, Slate, Wooden and Iron Mantels, direct from manufacturers, at Reduced Prices. Call and examine.

Earthquake and Fire Proof
BUILDINGS

Constructed on my patent system. Perfect protection guaranteed. For estimates and particulars see E. HAWES, Twelfth and B streets, Sacramento.

RHODES & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

FLASHES.

Pan-American—the slap-jack pan.
A fellow with a cold generally blows a good deal about it.

A man's discontent is his worst evil, unless he has a corn.

The sharpest wits are often wounded with their own weapons.

Those who work on cases—printers, lawyers and detectives.

All men are not homeless—but some are home less than others.

There is frequently a turn in the affairs of politicians—the return.

A wife, to be very good, should practice what her husband preaches—not what he practices.

The democratic Thanksgiving bird will be a "rooster" this year. It was "crow" of another kind last year.

The judge charges the jury, but the lawyer charges his client. Then the client charges, but in a different manner.

You may have a place for everything, but if there is a walking baby in the house, he will know where to find it.

In many marriages the parties think they are one. It does not take long to develop the fact that they come two.

There are said to be men who hide their light under a bushel. We fancy that a much smaller measure would answer the purpose.

A poet is an imaginative fellow, but he cannot extend his imagination so that he can fancy a piece of rye bread is a roast turkey, or a cup of water fine burgundy.

"The Chimes."

Our neighbor, the Bee, has monopolized the entire field of criticism in the matter of the production of the opera Chimes of Normandy. The alleged critic first got in his deadly work, and was followed by the critic who spares not the high nor the humble. Strange to relate, this critical censor dealt most kindly with the amateurs, something heretofore unknown in the Bee office. It is fair and just to say of the young ladies and gentlemen who took part in the opera, that they did exceedingly well. Had a stranger visited the presentation, he could not have discovered that they were amateurs, unless previously advised. The "Serpolette" of Mrs. Hubbard was better than the majority of professionals. The same can be said of Miss Irma Fitch's "Germaine." J. A. Moynihan dressed, acted and sang the "Marquis" equal to a professional. Richard Cohn has a soft, sweet tenor, which served him well. One fault with the young ladies and gentlemen—they gesticulated rather much, and somewhat awkwardly. Messrs. Lovdal and Bodefeld were exceptionally good. "Gaspard," a difficult role, was in the hands of M. Foster, the only professional, and was well rendered. No opera company, great or small, has ever presented such a handsome and efficient chorus. The young ladies were handsome, and displayed excellent training with their sweet voices. W. H. Kinross has proved himself a superb drill-master. We hope for more of these entertainments. The liberal patronage bestowed for the three nights of the Chimes of Normandy shows that a good amateur production will receive public favor. The orchestra must not be omitted in these commendations. Rarely has any grand opera had a better orchestra. So popular has been this production, that the opera will be repeated this evening.

Summary of Railroad Facts.

We are in receipt of a report of the "Relations Between the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the United States Government," prepared at the request of Senator Stanford by the Secretary and Controller of the Southern Pacific Company. The work is a general review of all the Acts of Congress and the equities in behalf of the Central Pacific Company. The conclusions of this summary of facts are: That the contract obligations have all been complied with. Had the control of the debt not been taken from the company and assumed by the Government in 1878, the company would have been able to provide for it. The Government is delinquent in its contract obligations to the company, and continues to disregard the requirements of its own laws and to ignore the decisions of its own courts. While the predicted benefits on behalf of the Government have been more than realized, those promised to the company have as completely failed. The report is well worthy of a careful consideration.

Masquerade.

The Eureka Social Club is noted for the elegance of its entertainments. On Wednesday evening, December 11th, this club will give a grand masquerade ball at Castle Hall, Ninth and I streets, in this city. In the past the masquerade balls of the Eureka have been the social events of the season. It is contemplated by the club managers to make this ball excel all others.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The deer pelt case was tried yesterday before Justice Devine, and the jury failed to agree.

To-morrow morning Rev. W. C. Merrill will preach a Thanksgiving sermon on "Caesar, America, God."

The Police investigation will be brought to a close on Monday afternoon. The present investigation we mean.

A man named William Adams was arrested for grand larceny yesterday by Officers McLaughlin and Cunningham.

P. E. Platt delivered an instructive lecture to the students of Professor Atkinson's Business College yesterday afternoon.

Fred. Mason's residence was burglarized yesterday. The thief captured a lock and revolver. The thief has not been captured.

William T. Pierce, agent for the Sophie Eyre Dramatic Company, is here making arrangements for an early appearance of that troupe.

Rev. A. C. Herrick delivered another of his instructive and illustrated lectures at Calvary Baptist Church last night. The subject was "Ancient and Modern Rome."

There was a "camp fire" of the Veterans on Thursday evening, under direction of Post Commander, J. W. Reeves. Department Commander Gard, Senior and Junior Vice-Commanders Smith and Buckles, and Assistant Adjutant-General Bacon were present.

Frank Daniels, with Bessie Sanson and a fine company, gave us Little Puck on Thursday and Friday evenings to large and delighted audiences. There were some changes in the cast from that of the last production in this city, but the changes were for the better. This bright comedy has proved a success everywhere, and it stands at the head of all farce-comedies.

It is assured that M. R. Beard will be re-nominated for City Superintendent of Public Schools. Mr. Beard has filled the office with credit. His administration has been beyond adverse criticism. The disposition of the people has been to lay aside politics in the selection of school officers, and in this particular instance it is apparent that the republicans must make a strong nomination if they hope to be successful.

It is stated by those well informed that Charles F. Reed, who met with such a financial disaster a few years ago in the great wheat deal, has made a lucky strike in the Drummond Mine, near Forest Hill, Placer county. We saw a quantity of extremely rich rock that came from the mine, and are informed that the recent strike is fabulously rich. We are glad of Mr. Reed's success, and cordially congratulate him upon the prospect to regain his lost fortune. There are more rich deposits of gold in the hills of that portion of Placer and El Dorado counties than our philosophy dreamed of.

Barwick on Lightning and Weather.

The rainfall during the past week was 2.83, making for the season 6.85 inches, as against 4.83 inches to a corresponding date last year. The highest and lowest Signal Service temperature during the past week was 66 and 38, while during the same period last year it was 46 and 42. The lowest temperature this morning was 42. During the past week a thunder and lightning storm passed over this city, accompanied by high winds and a fall of hail for about half an hour, between 7 and 7:30 Monday night, during which time the rapid flashes of nature's lightning kept the heavens brilliantly lighted almost constantly; or, in other words, the darkened dome of heaven's blue vault was luridly lit with lightning. There have been but three light frosts this season, and they occurring on the 14th, 15th and 16th of this month, while killing frosts have been frequent in Southern Oregon. The barometer is slowly rising in this city to-day.

Orphans' Benefit.

On Monday evening next a benefit entertainment will be given at the new Knights of Pythias Castle Hall, corner Ninth and I, for the benefit of the Good Templars' Home for Orphans. The entertainment promised is the best programme offered in some time, comprising not only leading local talent, but also Miss Parce, elocutionist; Miss Noble, solo cornetist; Mr. Frank Hart, champion athlete, all of San Francisco, and the inimitable "Mr. Barnes, of San Francisco," who telegraphs this morning that he will come up and give an antidote for the blues, guaranteeing to remove all traces of them at the end of his "fifteen minutes." Those who attend, therefore, will not alone have the satisfaction of contributing to a most praiseworthy institution, and the care of the orphan, but will also receive the full value of their contribution in a splendid entertainment. There ought, and doubtless will be, a "full house."

Province of the Press.

In passing sentence of death upon ex-police officer Joseph W. Wallace, recently convicted of the murder of Albert H. Rice, Judge Shafter, of the Superior Court of San Francisco, began his remarks by calling attention to newspaper articles said to have influenced the jurors who found the verdict. He said such articles were criminal on their face and disreputable in their nature. "People who publish such articles are criminals, and should be punished as such. They are contemptuous to the Court and the community, and should not be permitted to go unpunished. It was not the province of the Judge to take notice of contempts committed outside of Court, unless properly brought before it by affidavits or indictment for libel. People who write seem not to fear punishment, as they think the Courts are afraid to do so. But if such cases are properly brought before me I shall do my duty. Such outrageous publications, such license on the part of the press, seems to have resolved itself into a fourth department of the government. It can be endured and passed in silence, but if permitted to continue we might as well shut the doors of our Courts. However, I do not see any evidence in the trial of the case to show that the jury was affected by these articles." Judge Shafter is about right, and he reflects the sentiment of the people, that a man writing in a newspaper is no more privileged than one engaged in other business, and that his opinions are only to be gauged by the amount of brains backing them.

Justly Entitled to Credit.

General J. G. Martine, a member of the well-known firm of L. L. Lewis & Co., has taken from the start a commendable interest in the matter of the preservation and restoration of the Sutter Fort property, and to him is largely due the agitation that has been had on the subject. General Martine's efforts in this regard are in keeping with those which have characterized his past history in this State, and from the knowledge we have of what he has done in this particular matter, we feel it but just that due credit should be accorded to him. There is room in any enterprising communities for citizens of his spirit.

The County Teachers' Institute will meet in this city on Monday at the Capital Grammar School building. The evening sessions will be held on Monday and Tuesday evenings at the Congregational and Sixth-street Methodist churches, respectively. Professor Howard has arranged an interesting programme.

An Ancient Lawsuit.

We have heard of the law's delay, but we may think that this was all a mistake when we learn of a case in Poland. A lawsuit has just been ended between the Sobieskis in Warsaw, which has been carried on for four centuries. In the year 1490, two years before Columbus discovered America, the Sobieskis of Orlowo and the Sobieskis of Podlowo went to law over the ownership of a piece of land, about forty acres in extent, which lay between their respective properties. This legal quarrel was only finally settled in August, 1889, when the land was divided between Radjost Sobieski and Jacob Sobieski. Perhaps this shall be the signal for peace and harmony generally. But then, again, of course, perhaps not.—N. Y. Sun.

ROLLER SKATING RINK.

OLD PAVILION.

Corner Sixth and M Streets, - Sacramento.

CLARK & HOLDEN, Proprietors.

OPEN MORNINGS FROM 10 TO 12 O'CLOCK, for ladies exclusively.

Open Afternoons from 2 till 4 o'clock.

Open Evenings from 7 to 10 o'clock.

Music Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Ladies' admission, free, except on music nights; ladies admission on music nights, 10 cents.

GENTLEMEN'S ADMISSION, 25 CENTS.

Commutation Tickets for sale.

GEO. H. CLARK,
FRED. A. HOLDEN, MANAGER.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & AND & MECHANICAL & DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

FRIEND & TERRY
LUMBER CO.

Wholesale and Retail Lumber Dealers, Also Shakes, Bolts, Ties, Doors, Windows, Blinds and Screens. Main Yard and Office, No. 1310 Second Street. Branch Yard, corner Twelfth and J Sts. P. O. Box 233. E. J. HOLT, Manager. Sacramento

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.

L. RADLOFF,

LADIES' TAILOR.

218 POST STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

A. C. SWEETSER & CO.,

Real Estate & Insurance Brokers

Lands For Sale in all parts of the State.

Some Good Investments in School Lands.

Send for Catalogue.

Office, No. 1012 Fourth Street,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Bainbridge
Business College

J. C. BAINBRIDGE, }
PRINCIPAL.

No. 1017 J Street, Sacramento.

A full Business Course, together with Short-hand, Telegraphy, Bookkeeping, Penmanship and all the branches usually taught in schools of this kind. A full corps of Teachers of the first rank only employed. MRS. BAINBRIDGE has charge of the Music Department.

STABLE TO LET!

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

THE DEAF AND DUMB LOVER.

Reginald Tracy was standing (to shelter himself from the wind) under a wide-spreading chestnut tree near the farm-house where he had just arrived to spend his fortnight's vacation. As he thus stood, two long shadows were cast before him on the ground. Turning, he saw, walking noiselessly over the green turf, two young people—man and woman—carrying a basket between them, and speaking never a word.

"Good evening, friends," said he, pleased at the sight, for Reginald Tracy was never "his own best company."

The girl blushed, and timidly responded to his greeting as she passed, but the man looked straight before him as he walked on, still speaking never a word.

Reginald, being a conceited youth and easily offended, looked on the young man's silence as a personal affront, and followed the couple, his temper badly ruffled.

Having reached the door of the farm-house, the pair set down the basket and paused.

And now Reginald saw the man raise his hand and point at him with his finger—point at him scornfully, Reginald thought.

"Point at yourself, can't you?" cried he, beside himself with rage at this additional insult; but the wind seized his voice and hustled it behind him, while only a faint whisper reached the couple on the steps.

The girl—who was Anna Bogert, the daughter of Reginald's host—heard the whisper, and said:

"Sure, and there's no use in talking to him," motioning towards her companion as Reginald approached. "He's a deaf and dumb mute from his birth, so he is."

Anna then made a few motions on her fingers, probably meaning "Good night," for the young man responded in the same manner, and, turning away, hastened toward a farmhouse, dimly seen in the distance among the trees.

Reginald Tracy sat down beside the basket and laughed until he was tired, to the great wrath of Anna, who stood looking down on him in speechless indignation and amazement.

"Pardon me," at last gasped Reginald. "Such a surprise, don't you know!"

Without saying a word, Anna turned contemptuously away, and carried the basket into the house.

Before his two weeks' vacation was over Reginald felt himself in love with pretty, half-Irish Anna Bogert, and his conceit led him to believe that his affection was returned.

Antiochus Smith, the poor deaf and dumb son of Farmer Bogert's next neighbor, had loved Anna since childhood, but on seeing the attentions paid to her by Reginald Tracy, he, with the shrinking sensitiveness of the physically afflicted, at once doubted his ability to win her love, and refrained from visiting her as frequently as he had been accustomed to do.

Reginald stayed on beyond his allotted fortnight. Though afraid of losing his position as dry goods clerk in a large store on Sixth avenue, New York, he could not tear himself from the home of the lovely Anna until the following tragic event happened:

Farmer Bogert kept a bull of which the people of the country round were much afraid. As our hero was crossing a field near the house one morning, musing on his love, and smiling as he recalled the doleful face of Antiochus Smith, he forgot to cast his eye about to see if Old Roarer—the bull—was near. Fatal mistake! For Old Roarer was near—very near.

Antiochus Smith, hastening across an adjoining field with a basket of sweet apples, which he was taking to Anna, saw his rival peacefully meandering with a smile upon his lips, while in the near distance Old Roarer was charging down upon him.

For one wild moment Antiochus Smith was a demon; for one revengeful moment he thought, as he gazed at Reginald:

"He has ruined my wretched life; let him die!"

And then came the thought—

"She loves him! I will save his life."

Instantly dropping his basket of apples and leaping the intervening fence Antiochus rushed forward to the aid of Reginald, who was still unconscious of his danger.

Poor Antiochus! What agony not to be able to cry out, to warn his rival or to attract the attention of that man over there carrying a pitchfork!

With a prayer on his poor dumb lips he dashed between the mad bull and the man whom he would save and fell fainting to the ground.

A woman's shriek rends the air:

"John! run! run!—the bull!—your pitchfork!"

It was Anna, who had been watching Antiochus cross the field, oblivious of the presence of the other lover.

John did run, and used his pitchfork so effectively that Old Roarer went bellowing across the field.

When the poor mnte opened his eyes it was to find Anna's face close to his, Anna's kisses upon his lips, Anna's tears mingled with his own happy ones.

"I thought," he manages to say with his trembling fingers, "that—"

"And sure you never thought at all, poor

dear," interrupts Anna, nearly smothering him, as she gathers his head in a tearful embrace.

Reginald left for town that same afternoon, firmly resolved that next year he will "take no vacation among country people."

Where Grant Died.

The Drexel cottage at Mount McGregor, in which General Grant passed his last hours, is kept just as it was when he died, with the exception of the removal of a few personal belongings of the family. The two big leather-covered easy-chairs in which he passed so many painful days are draped in black and left in the same position they were in when he occupied them. The clock on the mantel has been silent since the moment of his death, when the doctor stopped it, and the writing tablets he used when speech was prohibited are in a case on the wall, together with his pencil and a couple of messages in writing to Mr. Drexel.—Washington Post.

The tremendous hurricane in the harbor of Apia on March 15th, is recalled by the fact that the "Nipsic," the only one of the three United States men-of-war which escaped destruction, has just been repaired at Honolulu, and is said to be good for two years' service without further expense. The cost of the repairs is placed at $27,000, and it is stated that the work was done more cheaply than it could have been done in any of our navy yards. It does not necessarily follow that when one of our warships needs overhauling she ought to be sent forthwith to Honolulu, but the result justifies Admiral Kimberly's insistence on having the "Nipsic" repaired, instead of abandoning her, as some of the officers interested strongly urged.—N. Y. Tribune.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

Gas and Steam Fitter.

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

GEM GALLERY, THE ONLY

Ferrottype Gallery

627 J STREET,

In the City.

Sixteen "Gems" for 50 cents. Card size proportionately low. Photographic Work in general.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS, Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

CHAS. J. FREDERICKS & CO.

Fashionable and Practical

HATTERS,

802 J STREET,

Importers and Manufacturers of Fine Hats and Caps.

Latest Novelties, on hand and constantly arriving. REPAIRING A SPECIALTY.

J. O. MILLS,

High Art Crayon Portraits

Executed from Life or Tin-types or Photographs. Inquire or leave orders at

406 J STREET, or 413 K STREET.

San Francisco Studio, 12 Dehane street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth, Church and Sanchez streets. References: Timothy Lee, Chief of Police, Col. Guthrie, Capt. Fouratt.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEETING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6. Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4. Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

SAN FRANCISCO

Steam Dyeing Works

Removed to 524 K Street.

Branch, 805 K St. Dye Works, 2511 J St.

All orders promptly attended to. Don't make a mistake—Main office at Capital Transfer Company.

JOHN STEEN, Proprietor Dye Works.

Trunks Removed, 25 Cents.

JAS. LONGSHORE,

SACRAMENTO TRUNK FACTORY,

530 K STREET.

Trunks, Valises & Bags Wholesale and Retail.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,

SACRAMENTO.

Barrett & Berkey

PACIFIC RESTAURANT,

OYSTER HOUSE AND

WINE PARLORS

701 J Street, cor. 7th.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

BELL & CO., GENERAL AUCTIONEERS.

Salesroom, 927 K Street, Sacramento, Cal.

Regular Salesdays—Wednesdays and Saturdays at 10 o'clock A. M.

Assistants—W. T. Crowell, Real Estate; J. Pulvermacher, Bookkeeper; J. Lambert, Furniture and Stock.

Particular attention paid to sales of real estate, house sales, and sales of farms, stock, etc.

Highest price paid for all kinds of household goods.

R. H. PETTIT,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

IMPORTED & DOMESTIC CIGARS

Smoke the "Lone Fisherman,"

The BEST FIVE-CENT CIGAR in the Market.

NO. 225 K STREET.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Wm. Kuhlav, Peter Miller, Elizabeth Davis, Henry Greisel, Robt. Robinson, and B. F. White, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 12th day of October, 1889, in which action M. G. Dandridge is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: That you, the defendants, and each of you, be required to set forth your several claims, or right, title or interest of, in and to Lots One to Eight, inclusive, in the Block bounded by J and K and Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California; and that said claims, or either of them, may be determined by a decree of this Court, and that they, or either of said claims, may be adjudged and declared invalid, and that the defendants, nor either of them, have no right, title or interest of, in, or to said land, and that plaintiff do have judgment against said defendants, decreeing plaintiff to have a good and valid title, and that the defendants be forever debarred from ever asserting any claim adverse to plaintiff, and for costs and for general relief, all of which will more fully appear from the complaint on file herein, to which reference is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified, that, unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief prayed for in his said complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [10-19]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Charles Farley and J. W. Richmond, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 24th day of October, 1889, in which action Michael Haley is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To require you, defendants, to set forth the nature, character and extent of your claims to that certain real property in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California, known upon the official map of said Sacramento City as Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, in the Block between T and U, Ninth and Tenth streets; and to obtain a decree of Court adjudging that defendants, or either of them, have no estate, right, or title in said premises, or any part thereof; and that defendants be forever debarred and stopped from asserting or claiming any right, title, or interest to said premises, or any part thereof; and for such other and further relief as the Court may deem fit and proper in the premises; and for costs of suit. All of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

FRANK D. RYAN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [10-29]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Coe W. Bird-sall, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 1st day of November, 1889, in which action Emma Birdsall is plaintiff, and you are defendant. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the grounds of wilful neglect and wilful desertion, all of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 1st day of November, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

ISAAC JOSEPH, Attorney for Plaintiff. [11-29]

A Knowledge of Art.

Here is a good story of Governor Gray, of Indiana, which does not disclose a very familiar knowledge of art. It might fit our Governor. It seems that the Democratic Governor of Indiana was given a dinner lately by a well-known lawyer of Ft. Wayne. Half a dozen prominent citizens were invited to meet him, all of whom were loyal Democrats. After dinner the guests adjourned to the library, where the host had some fair imitations of the "old masters." The Governor strolled around the room, smoking his cigar and looking at the paintings. Before one he stopped, evidently pleased. He put up his eyeglass, and, after an admiring inspection, turned to his host:

"Ah-h—," speaking his host's name, "this is an amiable, pleasant-faced lady. Ah-h, relative of yours?"

"That's the Sistine Madonna, Governor," replied the host, indulgently, as he looked nervously at the other occupants of the room.

"Heh? Sister—? I didn't quite catch the name. Now that I look at it closely," again adjusting his glasses, "it does resemble you slightly, but I didn't know that your father had any daughters. May I ask, is your sister—, ah, your sister—, didn't quite catch the name, is she still living?"

The host and his other guests were convulsed, but Isaac was so intent on the picture that he did not notice it, and among them they managed to let the Governor down easy, without giving him any more definite information about the Madonna's relationship to the host.

"A truly amiable face," mused the Governor, pocketing the glass. "My friend here is blessed in having such a female relative."

After he had left, the host and his guests made a compact not to let the story go beyond the library walls, but as the host himself is a raconteur of tales, as well as a good Democrat, it leaked out; and now, from one end of Indiana to another, the initiated know the story of Gov. Isaac P. Gray and the Sistine Madonna.

Why We are Right-Handed.

Primitive man, being by nature a fighting animal, fought for the most part at first with his canine teeth, his nails and his fists, till in process of time he added to those early and natural weapons the further persuasions of a club or shillalah. He also fought, as Darwin has conclusively shown, in the main for the possession of the ladies of his kind, against other members of his own sex and species. And if you fight, you soon learn to protect the most exposed and vulnerable portion of your body. Or, if you don't, natural selection manages it for you, by killing you off as an immediate consequence.

To the boxer, wrestler or hand to hand combatant, the most vulnerable portion is undoubtedly the heart. A hard blow, well delivered on the left breast, will easily kill, or at any rate stun, even a strong man. Hence, from an early period, men have used the right hand to fight with, and have employed the left arm chiefly to cover the heart and to parry a blow aimed at that specially vulnerable region. And when weapons of offense and defense supersede mere fists and teeth, it is the right hand that grasps the spear or sword, while the left holds over the heart, for defense, the shield or buckler.

From this simple origin, then, the whole vast difference of right and left in civilized life takes its beginning. At first, no doubt, the superiority of the right hand was only felt in the manner of fighting. But that alone gave it a distinct pull, and paved the way at last for the supremacy elsewhere. —Journal of Health.

Customs in Other Climes.

It is common in Arabia to put check to cheek.

The Hindoo falls in the dust before his superior.

The Chinaman dismounts when a great man goes by.

A Japanese removes his sandals, crosses his hands and cries out, "Spare me!"

The Burmese pretend to smell of a person's face, pronounce it sweet, and then asks for a "smell."

The Australian natives practice the singular custom when meeting of sticking out their tongues at each other.

A striking salutation of the South Sea Islands is to fling a jar of water over the head of a friend.

The Arabs hug and kiss each other, making simultaneously a host of inquiries about each other's health and prospects.

The Turk crosses his hands upon his breast and makes a profound obeisance, thus manifesting his regard without coming in personal contact with its object. —New York Mail-Express.

A Pennsylvanian, John Hinton, who forty years ago was a friendless orphan boy in Westmoreland county, is now one of the most trusted officers in the army of the Ameer of Afghanistan. Having learned the arts of war as a soldier and an Indian fighter in this country, and then under the British flag in India, he finally drifted to Afghanistan and became a successful merchant. Then he helped suppress a local rebellion which the Ameer had found dangerous, and that gave him his present prestige.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON, The * Leading * Merchant * Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501 -- 507 K, cor. Fifth

Furniture

Bedding.

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

Klune & Floberg,

WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS
Agents for Rockford Watch Co.
NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Wm. J. Hassett.

A. J. Johnston.

A. J. Johnston & Co.

PRINTERS,

410 J Street,

Sacramento

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J,

SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.

Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.
(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city. Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exerescences, etc., Positively Cured or No Pay. No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated.

Mrs. O. C. Nielsen, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington. Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

ANGLO-NEVADA ASSURANCE CORPORATION

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

FIRE.—Cash Capital, $2,000,000—MARINE.

Sacramento Branch:

No. 1018 SECOND STREET.

JOSEPH STEFFENS,
Manager.HOWARD KIMBROUGH,
Local Agent.

R. DAVIS,

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

R. W. PARKER,

Dealer in Choice Family

GROCERIES and PROVISIONS

Sold at the Lowest Cash Price.

Give him a call and be convinced.

Corner of Seventeenth and N Streets.

Also, Office of the Superintendent of the City Cemetery.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and

Blauk Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

[SACRAMENTO.]

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY & BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER,

1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER,

BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

Beauty Pads for the Cheek.

Hollow cheeks and wrinkles are awkward things. Ladies do their best to prevent their appearance. The clever ones seem to be able to ward off the wrinkles, but hollow cheeks completely baffle their skill. A gentleman who lives at Islington is providing ladies whose cheeks are hollow with small pads. These pads are attached to natural or artificial teeth by means of tiny gold springs. The price of a face pad is a trifle heavy, like everything else guaranteed to improve the personal appearance. A pair of pads cost something like £5. The maker of the face pad said that gentlemen as well as ladies are wearing them. One gentleman had never looked anything but cadaverous until he took to the pad. Now his cheeks are rounded like a cherub's and he looks ten years younger. The curious thing about the face pad is its inflexibility. It is made of the same material as the case of a set of artificial teeth.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Value of a Life.

Before our civil war the money value placed upon the working force in a slave, a young field hand, was $1,000 and upward, and upon a skilled mechanic over $3,000. Dr. Farr and Edwin Chadwick, both eminent sanitarians, practically confirm these estimates. Dr. Farr says that in England an agricultural laborer at the age of twenty-five years is worth, over and above what it costs to maintain him, $1,191, and that the average value of every man, woman and child is $771. Edwin Chadwick says that each individual of the English working classes (mere children work there, we must remember), is worth $890, and at forty years of age, $1,780. Our values in this country are much greater. Take the probabilities of our length of life from the insurance tables, and put our labor on the market for that term of years and you will find what we are worth to the community.—Medical Classics.

A few days ago a good-natured traveler on a train fell asleep and was carried beyond his destination, whereupon he remarked to a fellow-passenger: "Pretty good joke on me, isn't it?" "Well, yes," said the gentleman, but rather too far-fetched."

BELL & FOUNTAIN

HAVE OPENED THE

Plaza Cash Grocery

STORE,

Corner Tenth and J Streets,

And have stocked the same with all New and Fresh Goods, which they will sell for CASH at the smallest living margin.

All Goods Warranted as Represented.

Goods delivered to any part of the city.

Our Motto: "The nimble sixpence against the slow shilling!"

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K.

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

TAXES.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 3748 OF THE Political Code, as amended March 16, 1889, State and County Taxes will be received at the office of the County Tax Collector, northwest corner of Seventh and I streets, in the City of Sacramento, on and after FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1889. Taxpayers will please take notice that on the last Monday in December (the 30th day), 1889, at 6 o'clock P. M. of that day, taxes will be delinquent, and unless paid prior thereto five per cent penalty will be added, as provided by law.

CEO. C. McMULLEN,
Tax Collector of Sacramento County,
Sacramento, Cal., November 5, 1889.

H. WACHHORST

Leading Jeweler of Sacramento

SIGN OF THE TOWN CLOCK,

No. 315 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

MOYNIHAN'S

418 J STREET.

FOR THE LADIES:

Just received, direct from Manufacturers, an elegant line of Silver and Oxidized Bonbonniere Boxes Ladies' Cachon Flasks, and other Novelties.

Call and inspect them. THE ONLY FIRST-CLASS HOUSE IN THE CITY.

J. R. Wheat

DITTMAR & WHEAT,

A. Dittmar.

Sacramento Lounge & Mattress Factory

No. 916 J STREET.

Important and Worth Investigation

We are making Suits to order of the fine Huddersfield Worsteds for $25, which are worth $40. As the sales of these fine worsteds during the past three weeks have proved such a success in San Francisco, we have added a large line of Kerseys and Meltons, for Overcoats, with fine silk-serve lining all through, made to order from $30 to $35, which would cost elsewhere from $40 to $60. We have also received, direct from the mill, over forty pieces of fine Trouserings, which we bought at an immense reduction, and are now prepared to give our customers and the public of Sacramento the benefit. These are fine all-wool goods, at prices never before known in Sacramento. Please call and examine goods and be convinced of the bargains now offered for the holidays by

JOE POHEIM, THE TAILOR,

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

JAS. G. DAVIS

Furniture, Carpets and Wall Paper

411 AND 413 K STREET,

Branch, 315 K St. Send for Catalogue. Prices Lowest.

BOOTS AND SHOES made to order. Boots, $6 to $11. Shoes, $4 to $9. Ladies' Shoes, best quality French Kid, $5 to $7.

REPAIRING DONE at lowest prices.

NONE BUT BEST mechanics employed.

WE GUARANTEE to make perfect fitting to the worst of crooked and crippled feet.

COMPETE WITH any shoes on the market.

216 J Street

—AND—

208 K Street,

SACRAMENTO.

A. CASELLI

& COMPANY.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

Hotfilter & Grafmiller,

MANUFACTURING JEWELERS,

Jewelry made to order. Watches, Clocks and Jewelry Repaired and Warranted.

No. 1026 Sixth Street, Sacramento.

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.

Southern Pacific Company

PACIFIC SYSTEM.

Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6:50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11:40 A
3:05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7:25 P
11:00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3:40 A
7:05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6:45 P
7:25 P	Knights Landing	7:40 A
9:00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9:55 A
8:00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6:25 P
12:01 A	Central Atlantic Express	6:00 A
3:00 P	Oroville	10:30 A
3:00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10:30 A
10:40 A	Redding via Willows	4:00 P
6:15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7:25 P
6:50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8:35 P
3:05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11:40 A
4:00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10:40 P
*10:00 A	San Francisco via Steamer	26:00 A
11:25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2:25 P
6:50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11:40 P
11:25 A	San Jose	2:25 P
7:05 P	Santa Barbara	9:55 A
6:50 A	Santa Rosa	11:40 A
3:05 P	Santa Rosa	7:25 P
9:00 A	Stockton and Galt	6:45 P
7:05 P	Stockton and Galt	9:55 A
5:00 P	Truckee and Reno	6:25 P
12:01 A	Truckee and Reno	6:00 A
12:05 P	Colfax	10:20 A
6:50 A	Vallejo	11:40 A
3:05 P	Vallejo	11:35 P
*12:15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10:25 A
*7:15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2:40 P
*5:20 P	Folsom	*6:50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning, P for afternoon.

A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED K. COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

Capital Iron Works.

Vertical and Horizontal Engines

BOILERS,

STEAM AND POWER

PUMPS,

Deep Well Pumps,

Hand Pumps,

Stock Pumps,

PUMPMAKERS' SUPPLIES.

HORSE-POWERS, WIND MILLS,

Tanks and Tank Houses.

904 K Street, Sacramento.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars.
ROBERT ALLEN,
Formerly of Agricultural Park.

ALBERT GRUBBS,

No. 1417 Fourth Street,

Will do all kinds of House Cleaning, Lay Carpets, Whitewashing, and everything in that line.

He also has the only wagon for the REMOVAL OF DEAD ANIMALS, and any orders left at his place of business will receive prompt attention.

Remember the address!

No. 1417 Fourth Street, Sacramento, Cal.

JESSE SLAUGHTER,

Office, No. 1217 Fifth Street.

Plastering, Whitewashing, Cleaning of Cesspools, Etc.

Also, CITY SCAVENGER.

Burying of dead animals attended to at short notice.

Don't forget the number—1217 Fifth Street, the old stand, where I have been for 25 years.

THEMIS

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1889.

No. 41.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

On Monday the people of the city of Sacramento will hold an election for the selection of a City Superintendent of Public Schools, and one member of the Board of School Directors from each ward. The importance of this election, if we are to judge from the small vote cast in the past, seems not to be fully realized. From our standpoint, we view the matter of the education of our children as of the first concern. This paper has heretofore called attention to this subject, and we have taken the position that more care should be exercised in the matter of making selections for these positions. Custom has been for the two members of the City Committee from a ward to name the candidate for Director. For the first time in the history of this city the people are presented with a ticket selected by the committee as a whole. Several months ago, in view of this election, the members of the Republican Committee set about to interview the people as to who would be the most acceptable candidates, and from such canvass and the expressions of opinion thus obtained, the nominations have been made. They have presented a ticket composed of Albert Hart as candidate for City Superintendent of Schools, W. H. Sherburn for Director from the First Ward, Alonzo Conklin from the Second, Richmond Davis from the Third, and O. W. Erlewine from the Fourth. These gentlemen are well known in this community.

Mr. Hart is a man of rare attainments. He has lived among us for very many years—more than a quarter of a century, and in this city his children grew to maturity. When Governor Booth was elected to the Executive office, he chose Mr. Hart as his private and confidential adviser. The same honor was accorded to him by Governors Pacheco and Perkins.

Major Sherburn was reared and educated among us. He is a man of absolute independence and of undisputed ability. Mr. Conklin, before making his home in this city, was for many years Mayor of an Eastern city not of in consequence. He has served upon the Board of Education here and acted in the capacity of President of that body. He is in every way qualified, and will bring to the position the ability that its importance merits. Mr. Davis is one of the oldest and most respected citizens of this community. He has been identified with the permanent interests of Sacramento since early days. A successful business man, he has earned deservedly the confidence and respect of his fellow citizens. He has served on the Board of Education, and is now a member. His record is clean. Mr. Erlewine has been a practical educator, and has also been a member of the Board. He has occupied positions of very great business responsibility.

This is the ticket presented to the people of Sacramento by the Republican party. With a full knowledge of the circumstances surrounding its nomination, a knowledge that the greatest possible care was exercised in its selection, that it comes to the people free from any taint of ward politics, and from the standing and abilities of the nominees, we earnestly solicit for it the unqualified support of the people. With a Board composed of men of the character of those here presented, there will not be a "sword of Damocles" held above the heads of our teachers, with the severing of the thread within the power of some political "boss." Merit will count; and it will not be necessary for the friends of a deserving teacher to make humiliating concessions to retain her in position. We mention this matter because we know precisely what we are talking about, having been importuned to do so. As an exemplification of the regard in which these candidates are held by some of the gentlemen who have volunteered to control the politics of Sacramento, the remark of one of them to an editor of this paper was very pertinent. Speaking of one of the nominees, he said, "Why, that man is too positive; you cannot get near him; you cannot touch him with a forty-foot pole." If we mistake not, the class of men liable to this criticism are the very ones who should be sent to the School Board. We can assure the people that the gentlemen presented on the Republican ticket will enter their offices, if elected, entirely untrammelled; and that in their official conduct they will intelligently act for the best educational interests of the city. There is no gentleman upon the ticket whose place of business is such that he cannot with propriety be visited by any teacher or patron of the schools.

In this matter of the election of educational officers we feel that the mothers in this city should be interested as well as the fathers; perhaps they are more interested, in that the care of the children falls more directly upon them. The Republican Committee, as we have said, acted in this matter with entire fairness, and have taken a step in advance of former precedents. Their action, in that regard, is deserving of recognition.

The policy of this paper, while decidedly partisan, is not to abuse political opponents. We recognize that in a country so free as this, any gentleman has the right to subject himself to political martyrdom, and it would be unjust to deprive him of the satisfaction of explaining in future years how it happened he was defeated. This journal has very pronounced views upon all public questions. Its controllers are members of the Republican party, and in the expressions we will make on matters there will be no misunderstanding of our political opinions. We do not take stock in the style of journalism which involves a confounding of erraticalness with independence. Like an individual, we believe that a paper should have pronounced political views; and that it should exert its influence to secure proper nominations by its party.

It is sincerely hoped our citizens will realize the importance of this election, and that they will turn out and vote. An opportunity is now afforded to make a very advanced step in the matter of our local public education. The election of the Republican ticket, as we have indicated, means an endorsement of a very important reform in the mode of making nominations, and will be the entering wedge that will open up an era devoutly to be wished for.

Thanksgiving day in Sacramento marked two events of importance. There was unveiled, with appropriate ceremonies, a statue to the memory of the late A. J. Stevens, Master Mechanic of the Southern Pacific Railway system. A tribute as was on that day accorded is rarely given to a man. Viewing the procession and the unveiling of the statue, we were impressed with the sentiment uttered by Daniel Webster, and which we published in the last issue of this journal: "If we work upon marble, it will perish. If we work upon brass, time will efface. If we rear temples, they will crumble into dust. But if we work upon immortal minds—if we imbue them with high principles, with the just fear of God and their fellow men, we engrave upon those tablets something which no time can efface, but which will brighten to all eternity." We thought of Mr. Stevens as we knew him in life—one of habit, quiet and unassuming. Permanent as the granite and bronze will be, it will yet be true that the work of the man upon immortal minds will be an engraving which years will not efface, and which will brighten with the progress of time. We can add nothing of eulogy now; when we sit to write in memory of a man such as Stevens was, there seems an emptiness in the words we pen. The address of the President of the Statue Association, E. B. Hussey, justly portrays the life and character of him to whose memory this distinguished consideration was paid. This address is full of thought, and came from a young man who was reared and has made himself in this community. It was neat.

On the same day, Pythian Castle, recently erected at the corner of Ninth and I streets by the various lodges of the Knights of Pythias, was dedicated. This castle is the most pretentious on the coast, and for its construction and furnishing the Order expended upwards of $25,000. The building is one of the most imposing in the city, and a credit to the lodges of the Order that erected it.

There was quite a contest in Washington over the election of Speaker of the next Congress. It always was supposed that Tom Reed of Maine would be the successful candidate, but he had a very strong competitor in Wm. McKinley of Ohio. It is claimed that Mr. Reed is entitled to the position because he has twice received the honor of the caucus nomination when the Democrats had the majority in the House, and that now, when the Republicans have a majority, he should receive it again and fill the office. We do not believe in any such reason for giving office to any man. The feeling has been growing lately that Mr. Reed is not sound on the silver question, and that he will be controlled in his appointment of important committees by the "gold bugs" of New York. We believe in giving the office to the man who is most thoroughly in sympathy with the growing industries of the West, whoever the man may be.

We are not so strictly partisan hide-bound as not to recognize the fact that M. R. Beard, the present Superintendent, has made a superior officer, and has popularized himself to a remarkable degree. His official course has been perfectly independent and free from all partisan feelings or motives in the discharge of his public duties. As the managing editor, we know this fact, and will not be so unjust as to refuse an acknowledgement of Mr. Beard's merits, notwithstanding the fact that we are Republican in principle. As the title of our paper—THEMIS—indicates, we will counsel justice, do justice to all, not excepting our political opponents. When a public officer does his duty, no matter of what political party faith, we will do him justice before the people.

We present to-day a picture of all that now remains of Sutter's Fort, and plans of the various stories of the building, as it was originally. We feel some little pride at the reception of our last article, which was illustrated, relating to the old fort. Since the publication of our cuts and descriptions, we have talked to many who were familiar with the establishment before and at the time designed for its reproduction, 1848, and they agree we are about correct.

SOME UNWRITTEN HISTORY.

Sacramento in Embryo—How Government was Established from Chaos.

PART VII.

Continuing our remarks from Part VI. Sutter, from 1839 to 1848, claimed and exercised judicial, as well as executive functions.

From an eye-witness we learn that in the fall of 1847 a chief of a tribe of Indians of the Upper Cosumnes was suspected of stealing the cattle of Captain Sutter. He sent out a squad of his soldiers, well mounted, and captured the chief, brought him to the fort, and put him in prison ("a" on diagram, in Part VI). A few days later he was brought to trial, Sutter sitting as Judge and jury. Geo. McKinstry as clerk. The Court was held in room "g" on same diagram. No king ever assumed more dignity than Sutter in the exercise of the functions of his office. The chief had no lawyer or friends. His tribe was far away, and the power of the Court trying him was absolute. It was necessary to make an example, and we may suspect that the evidence was meager. The presumption of innocence in a criminal case was not the rule of that Court. The witnesses were sworn and examined by McKinstry, through an interpreter, and the prisoner was also interrogated. The chief was found guilty, and the judgment of the Court was that he should be punished by fifty lashes from a lariat, well laid on. Before Sutter pronounced his judgment in the presence of his soldiers, friendly Indians and the spectators, he addressed the prisoner in a long speech in different languages, in which he took occasion to read those Aborigines a lecture on the enormity of the offense of stealing, and the certainty and severity of the punishment.

SUTTER FORT TO-DAY.

He was immediately taken in charge by the Mission Indians, under the command of Sutter, lashed to a cannon, over the muzzle, in the yard of the fort, his body lying along the cannon, head to the breech, and the lashes were given by a stalwart Indian, who seemed to relish the affair.

George McKinstry was also surgeon and turn-key. He took charge of the chief, dressed his wounds, put him again in prison, and after a few days, on promise that none of his tribe should again steal Sutter's cattle, he was released. Sutter also had a paternal care over his colonists. One of them, named Nicolas Algeo, settled at the junction of Bear and Feather rivers. On one occasion, in the fall of 1847, Nicolas came to Sutter with the plaint that his favorite Indian girl had suddenly become sulky, refused to do his cooking or washing, or other menial services, absented herself from his house, and consorted with the neighboring members of her tribe. Sutter advised him to bring her to the fort and put her in his charge, and he doubted not he could induce her to return to her allegiance. So Algeo brought the girl to the fort, and she was put in the prison "a" on diagram, to be taught the duties she owed her master, and Algeo went away, assured that sooner or later she would, by his friend Sutter, be induced to return to her allegiance. After Algeo left, Sutter gave her the privileges of the fort, and the high living there compared with the home of her master, consoled her, and she became a favorite at court. Sutter ordered his vaqueros to advise him when Algeo came to the fort. And when he did come to see how matters were with his girl, he found her in the prison, but determined not to go back to her master. So he went away with the promise of Sutter that he would send word when the girl gave in and promised to go back. So the girl continued at Sutter's household till the summer of 1848, when Sutter sent word to his friend that the girl had changed her mind and would return to him, which she did.

The north and south lines of the fort were 320 feet long; course S. 9° 45' E. The west line 160 feet, east line, 140 feet long. The course of the streets noted by letters is N. 18° 45' E. One building, which may be called headquarters, still remains standing. This building has been for a long time out of use, with no one to take charge of or to preserve it. The doors and windows are all gone. The door casings and window frames are mostly gone. The floors are all taken away, except the oak joists, and all stairways, as well the inside as the outside, are wanting. We give below cuts of that building:

1. View, as seen from the southeast.
2. Plan of the basement.

3. Plan of the main floor.
4. Plan of the attic.

The walls of this building are two and one-half feet thick. The middle wall extends to the peak of the roof, surmounted by a 6x6 scantling, set cornerwise in the wall, on which rest the rafters. The rafters, plates and joists were sawed by means of a whip saw. These were all in place as early as 1843. The shingles are of sugar pine. These, with a wear of near fifty years, are giving way, worn through by the rains, blown away by the winds, and the whole structure seems in the last stages of dissolution. The building measures outside 63 $\frac{9}{12}$ feet by 35 feet. The south wall of the building was not sufficiently strong to resist the southeast rainstorms, and in 1849 commenced to give way.

Mike McClelland was from early in 1848 to late in 1849 the lessee of the building, and he used it for a hotel. He made many changes in the building, and he made some repairs in the south wall with bricks, and finally the whole south wall was taken away by Mrs. R. D. Torney and replaced with bricks, which still remain.

The basement is 6 $\frac{9}{12}$ feet high. As originally built, the walls were without openings, and reached by a private staircase from the main floor. No one was allowed to enter it except Sutter, or under his immediate direction. We have not been able to find any one who can point out the secret entrance. The basement was used by Sutter as a storage for powder, balls, firearms not in use, and generally for all articles and goods which he chose to keep under his sole charge.

The openings shown in the middle wall of the basement were put there when the building was constructed. The entrances shown in the outer wall of the basement were put there by M. McClelland when he turned the building into a hotel.

The east wall of basement south of middle opening has been torn away, and unless vandalism is arrested, the east wall must soon fall, and the whole building tumble about its foundations. From the middle of 1848 to early in 1850 the basement was used by McClelland as a kitchen and dining room for his hotel. There is no chimney in the house, and the cooking was done and rooms warmed by stoves, the pipes to which were carried through openings in the walls of the building.

The main floor of the building is shown in cut, with its openings, rooms and stairways, with their dimensions carefully and accurately noted. The room is 9 $\frac{9}{12}$ feet high. There were two main entrances—one on the east and one on the west side. The platforms outside those doors rested on the joists for floor, extended outside the walls about five feet. Stairs were constructed to reach those platforms at both north and south ends. These stairs and platforms have been gone for years, and most of the boards constituting the floor have been removed, and the measurements of the rooms could only be made with difficulty. Before 1847 this floor was used by Sutter to entertain his guests when he had purposes of state in view. Here Colonel Fremont was entertained, and here the officers of the Mexican government, when they visited New Helvetia, held their conferences with a nominal subordinate, whose power was dominant in this department of the north; and here the officers of the United States Government planned with Sutter their campaigns, resulting in displacing Mexican rule in California and the establishment of a government recognizing the stars and the stripes as its national emblem.

The stairs shown in cut in the east side of the middle wall were used to reach the attic. This attic has no special history. Until the year 1847 the room was not needed, other space being ample for all purposes. After the discovery of gold the influx of immigrants was such as to require more room, and there were few building materials accessible, consequently this attic was fitted up by McClelland for transient guests of the principal hotel in the vicinity of the gold fields, then known to rival the mines of Golconda.

The water used at Sutter's Fort for drinking purposes was obtained from a well dug east of the building we have thus described, drawn by buckets, and a chain passing over a drum. During much of the year the slough on the north side of the fort furnished water for many purposes.

THEMIS has thus furnished in such detail as it could the past and present condition of Sutter's Fort and its remaining building. The adobes from which the fort was made were taken from the banks of the slough north of the fort, and molded and dried in the yard of the fort. Some of these adobes were, in 1850-1, taken away, but most of them were taken down and scattered over the land inside and outside the fort. The lands on which these adobes were thrown have been frequently plowed, and the materials of the fort have become mingled with the soil. The cattle, horses, men, guns, wagons, mill irons and tools have all been swept away, or are kept as relics by strangers. The Indian soldiers kept by Sutter are no more. Sutter himself has approached and passed beyond the veil which hides from us futurity, careless alike of praise or censure, and now, after a lapse of forty years since, his fort has been dismantled and he himself relegated to a subordinate position and finally driven by adverse circumstances into exile, a movement is on foot to do tardy justice to his memory. The press of the country rings changes on the cry: "Let us rebuild Sutter's Fort! Let us buy the land on which it stood, and, if needs be, take it by the power of eminent domain!"

THEMIS having taken a lead in furnishing the facts connected with the settlement at New Helvetia, may be indulged in a few reflections calculated to regulate and direct public attention to the actual condition of things, as well as to suggest a line of action calculated to accomplish what we all earnestly desire: Can Sutter's Fort, i. e. the walls and building constituting the fort be rebuilt? We answer emphatically, No! Not a single adobe can be found of the old fort. The shingles of the roof, the rafters, the bastions, including stairs leading to it, and the floor are all gone. The enterprise of this paper has given the location of the walls and the dimensions of the several rooms, with a description of the uses to which they were put. But to reinstate those walls and buildings means simply to build a like structure of new material.

In 1840 these structures had a distinct meaning. They were made for an emergency then imminent, and each wall and room had its use. To-day all things are changed. Those bastions, which, to a Mexican looking with jealous eye on what he deemed an intrusion, seemed formidable, now would have no significance. The colosseum could not now be reconstructed to any profit, because the circumstances which called it into being are no more, and a building now constructed in humble imitation of Sutter's Fort would be an example of folly, which we trust the present population of the State may not be guilty of. Monuments are made in granite, marble or bronze, not adobe. Monuments are made to endure, pointing out a worthy example in human life to all coming generations. An imitation of Sutter's Fort, constructed of adobe, could scarcely exist half a century, and for the time it did remain, could only be kept in repair by constant attention.

Monuments should be compact, not spread over acres of ground. An imitation of Sutter's Fort would present too much soft surface of material to be destroyed by the elements. The southwest angle of the fort must be made in L street, a thoroughfare of this city, and to this the authorities of the city should not assent, besides, Twenty-seventh street must, if the fort be rebuilt, remain closed for all time.

The same reasons why the fort proper should not be reproduced apply with nearly the same force against renovating and trying to preserve the remains of the building still standing. It cannot be made enduring unless another structure is built over it, and then it cannot be made habitable or otherwise useful. What there is left of it gives no idea of the fort proper or its uses. The wood still about the building might be preserved and exhibited in a new structure. But if the remains could, by any process be crystallized, as it now is, or preserved in amber, it would have very little attraction for the historian or patriot.

THEMIS suggests, as a substitute:

First.—That lots 7 and 8, K and L, Twenty-seven and Twenty-eighth streets, be purchased of the owner, or condemned to a public use.

Second.—That a marble or granite structure sixty feet square be erected thereon, containing rooms for a janitor and his family, with appropriate rooms for all articles extant connected with Sutter fort.

Third.—That from the center of that building there be an obelisk of suitable height and structure, also of marble or granite.

Fourth.—That surmounting that obelisk be the statue of General Sutter, in bronze.

Fifth.—That all guns and other articles existing, used at Sutter fort, be studiously collected and appropriately shown in that building and kept there for all time.

Sixth.—That Ephraim Fairchild, during his life, or some descendant of Sutter, be induced to act as janitor, so that all visitors caring to know the facts connected with that historic place may learn how Northern California was represented and governed prior to the discovery of gold.

THANKSGIVING IN CALIFORNIA.

First Observance of the Day at San Francisco, in 1847.
—The Proclamation of Governor Riley.

The first Thanksgiving celebration in California was appointed by a half dozen New Englanders, assembled in San Francisco in the beginning of November, 1847. The meeting was held at the house of Robert Gordon, afterward a lawyer in Boston. The day set for Thanksgiving was the 18th of the month. On that day a company of thirty sons of New England sat down to a fine dinner in the City Hotel of San Francisco, at which Captain John Paty, of Plymouth, presided. Thus was inaugurated the custom on these shores. A year later the country was in a state of revolution, and but one impulse swayed the excited multitude thronging to the land of gold. The next Thanksgiving was ordered by General Riley, in 1849, who set apart the 29th of November for the purpose. The following is a copy of General Riley's proclamation, as we extract it from the records of the War Department:

PROCLAMATION.

In conformity with the custom of other States and Territories, and in order that the people of California may make a general and public acknowledgment of their gratitude to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe for his kind and fostering care during the past year, and for the boundless blessings which we now enjoy, it is recommended that Thursday, the 29th day of November next, be set apart and kept as a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

Given at Monterey, California, this 24th day of October, in the year of our Lord, 1849.

B. RILEY,
Bvt. Brigadier Gen., U. S. A., and Governor of California.
By the Governor:

H. W. HALLECK,
Brevet Captain and Secretary of State.

The first proclamation under the State government was issued by Governor Burnett, in 1850, who appointed the 30th day of November. On each of the above occasions the day was observed with the usual feasting, and in some places with Divine service. That which gives most interest to these early anniversaries, however, is the situation of the country and the singular appropriateness of the Thanksgiving festival to each recurring November. The San Francisco papers of November, 1847, which contained the report of the first Thanksgiving, congratulated their readers on the improved prospects of the country, as follows:

In California we already anticipate the day when the jurisdiction of the United States shall be extended over us. The country is beginning to recover from the disasters of civil war. The murmurs of unpaid volunteers no longer echo upon our ears. All eyes have been turned with affection to the parent government; we ask its fostering care; we ask a properly organized government; protection to the immigrants, and the establishment of mail routes.

Thus spake the Californian. The Star, of the same week, took up the strain:

Settlements are forming, new cities building up around us. But the great event of this anniversary period was the introduction of steam on the Bay of San Francisco, on the 15th of November.

In 1848 there was no Thanksgiving, but the record of the month in which the festival is usually held was accompanied by signal benefits, which would seem to have made its observance especially appropriate. November of that year is memorable for having brought the first promise of civil government to California. Said the Star of November 25th, announcing great news:

Both Commodore Jones and Governor Mason unite in recommending the appointment of delegates by the people to frame laws and make other arrangements for a provisional government.

In this month, also, a Protestant religion was first regularly established in this country, and the first permanent newspaper founded in San Francisco. November, 1849, was not less an occasion of public rejoicing and thanksgiving, for on the 13th of that month the Constitution was ratified, and California entered upon her career as a State. Said the Alta California of that period, alluding to Governor Riley's proclamation for Thanksgiving:

Her people have enjoyed health, order has been preserved almost without law, wealth has been accumulated with a rapidity never known before, and her population has increased five hundred fold. Morally and politically she has advanced in the same ratio.

We reproduce one of the earliest proclamations of Thanksgiving, issued by a colonial Governor of the province of Massachusetts Bay:

[British Coat of Arms.]

By His EXCELLENCY,
SAMUEL SHUTE, Esq.:
Captain General and Governour in Chief in and over His Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, &c.

A Proclamation for a General THANKSGIVING.

FORASMUCH as amidst the various awful Rebukes of Heaven, with which we are righteously afflicted, in the Contagious and Mortal Sickness among us, especially in the town of Boston; The long and immoderate Rains, which have been so hurtful to the Husbandry and fishery; And the threatening Aspect of Affairs with respect to our frontiers: We are still under the highest and most indispensable Obligations of Gratitude for the many Instances of the Divine Goodness in the Favours vouchsafed to us in the course of the Year past, Particularly, For the LIFE of our Gracious Sovereign Lord the KING, Their Royal Highnesses the Prince, and Princess of Wales and their Issue, and the increase of the Royal Family; The Preservation of His Majesty's Kingdoms and Dominions from the terrible and desolating Pestilence, which hath for so long a Time been wasting the Kingdom of France; And the happy success of His Majesty's Wise Councils for Restoring and Confirming the Peace of Europe; For the Continuance of our valuable Privileges, both Civil and Ecclesiastical; And the Divine Blessing upon this Government in their Administrations; Particularly in succeeding the Methods taken to prevent the insults of the Eastern Indians; For giving so great a Measure of Health within this Province, and Moderating the Small Pox, so that a great Number of Persons are Recovered from that Distemper: And for granting us so comfortable a former harvest, and so hopeful a Prospect of the latter:

I have therefore thought fit with the Advice of His Majesty's Council, to Order and appoint Thursday, the Twenty-sixth of October next, to be Observed as a Day of Public THANKSGIVING throughout this Province, strictly forbidding all Servile Labour thereon, and Exhorting both Ministers and People in their respective assemblies on the said Day, to offer up humble and sincere THANKS to Almighty GOD for His many favours as aforesaid, and for many other Blessings bestowed on a Sinful People.

Given at Boston the Eighteenth Day of September, 1721. And in the Eighth Year of the Reign of Our Sovereign Lord GEORGE, by the Grace of GOD, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, KING, Defender of the Faith, &c.

By Order of the Governour, with advice of the Council,
JOSHUA WILLARD, Secr.

S. SHUTE.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

The report that Charles Reed had left the City Directory company was not true.

W. A. Mestayer and Theresa Vaughan will revive The Tourists in a Pullman Car.

Louis James has purchased a new romantic drama founded on an incident in Spanish history. It will be produced next season.

The alleged actress Mrs. Potter, has quietly faded out of sight. It always looked Bellew for her in the dramatic firmament.

Ivan Dozorshky, the transparent man, who is regarded as one of the physiological marvels of the age, is attracting a great deal of attention.

The London theater-goers will have an opportunity of seeing a genuine American drama on English soil next summer, when Shenandoah will be produced there.

Kajanka, the new pantomimic spectacle which will be seen at Niblo's December 2d, is said to be one of the most elaborate pageants ever presented on the American stage.

Henrik Ibsen, the author of A Doll's House, The Pillars of Society and other plays, will not visit the United States this season. His literary work has kept him close to his desk.

Madame Janauschek announces that she will play her farewell engagement in the United States next month. The old lady should have played her farewell engagement a number of years ago, thus preserving her laurels.

Sardou's great drama, The Exiles, now being played at Niblo's, has caught the public fancy, and the great spectacle is crowding the famous old play-house. The drama is so admirably staged and so well acted that it affords an enjoyable evening's entertainment.

Isabelle Coe is winning high compliments throughout the country for her performance of "Mrs. Meredith" in Nat Goodwin's comedy, A Gold Mine. Her characterization of the part is said to be a charming bit of stage work and indicative of a bright future.

Rosina Vokes and her excellent comedy company gave us some of the genuine comedy, not the miserable stuff that now passes current for comedy. It is very refreshing to catch some slight glimmer of what comedy is and should be. Felix Morris, Courtenay Thorpe and Ferdinand Gottschalk are comedians in the broad sense of the term. Miss Eleanor Lane and Miss Emily Baucker are superb actresses. Miss Vokes has no superior on the stage in her line.

Sophie Eyre, in Claire and the Forgemaster, drew a crowded house on Thursday night. Her rendition of the leading role was fine. The support was all that could be wished. Charles Edmunds and wife and Miss Ida Aubrey did excellent work. Miss Lucy O'Brien, so well known in this city as a former teacher and public-spirited young lady, is a member of this company, and had a very difficult role to enact, which she personated with a high degree of dramatic art. Miss O'Brien, whose stage name is Clyde Harron, is an accomplished lady, and should she continue in the histrionic art, will become famous. It is said, however, that the lady intends to adopt the profession of medicine, and that she has already taken a course of lectures preparatory to the profession.

Book Chat.

There is no lack of mental provender, good, bad and indifferent, spread out in the deluge of cheap paper covered book, issued by the various publishing houses. They are made to suit all tastes and characters, and appeal strongly to the pocketbook.

We are in receipt of four numbers of the present series of Rabbi Joseph Krauskopf's lectures, the subjects are: Eppur si Muove, meaning "And yet she (the earth) moves;" Jew against Jew, Possibilities of Youth, Possibilities of Age. The reverend gentleman is one of the brightest intellects in this country. His lectures are learned, eloquent, and strike a responsive chord with Jew and Gentile alike. His views and expressions are of the broad-gauge character. The reading of his productions reminds us forcibly of Beecher and Talmage. Rabbi Krauskopf is a resident of Philadelphia.

"The Hermitage and Later Poems" of the late Edward Rowland Sill have been compiled and published. Mr. Sill was a natural poet. In his literary work, there was that delicate power which gave magnetism to his native genius. We had an early acquaintance with Mr. Sill, dating back thirty years, when he first came to California fresh from college, a mere boy. He was employed in Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express office, at Folsom, under C. T. H. Palmer. At that early day he evinced the genuine poetic spirit. He wrote several choice little gems which were never published. After Mr. Sill became a professor in the university at Berkeley, he gave his poetic fancy wide range, and gave to the literary world the poems included in this late volume, as well as many others. The present volume opens with some lines written by T. B. Aldrich, and suggested by a letter he had received from Mr. Sill at the very hour the news arrived of the latter's death. We quote the lines:

I held his letter in my hand
And even while I read
The lightning flashed across the land
The word that he was dead.
How strange it seemed! His living voice
Was speaking from the page,
Those courteous phrases, tersely choice,
Light-hearted, witty, sage.
I wondered what it was that died!
The man, himself, was here;
His modesty, his scholar's pride,
His soul, serene and clear.
These neither death nor time shall dim,
Still this sad thing must be—
Henceforth I may not speak to him
Though he can speak to me!

Mr. Sill was modern in his ideals. The confession of the "Hermit," which forms the text of the poem, is upon the breaking of a woman's tender love bond. The hermit extols the possibilities of the human brain:

That coming race
Shall loose the bonds by which the earth attracts;
A drop of occult tincture, a spring touched
Shall outwit gravitation; men shall float,
Or lift the hills and set them where they will.
The savage crossed the lake and we the sea.
That coming race shall have no bounds or bars,
But, like the fledging eaglet, leave the nest—
Our earthly eyrie up among the stars—
And freely soar, to tread the desolate moon,
Or mingle with neighbor folk of Mars.
Yea, if the savage learned by sign and sound
To bridge the chasm to his fellows' brain,
Till now we flash our whispers round the globe,
That race shall signal over the abyss
To those bright souls who throng the outer courts
Of life, impatient who shall greet men first
And solve the riddles that we die to know.

He found in the matter of society and solitude, one was impracticable, and the other fatal to all human hopes.

Professional Chat.

Sir Charles Russell, the English barrister, is said to make more money than any lawyer in the world. He is a comparatively young man, lives well and works hard.

"Never since the creation," says ex-Minister Phelps in Scribner's, "has there come upon the earth such a deluge of talk as the latter half of the nineteenth century has heard. The orator is everywhere and has all subjects for his own. The writer stayeth not his hand by day or by night. Every successive day brings forth in the English tongue more discourse than all the great speakers of the past have left behind them, and more printed matter, such as it is, than the contents of an ordinary library. * * * We certainly seem to be approaching the time when hardly anything will be left to be said on any subject that has not been said before—perhaps many times over—when all known topics will begin to be exhausted."

Everybody knows the outspoken and blunt manner of Judge McFarland. One "law day," while he was Judge of the Superior Court of this county, the majority of the Sacramento bar, were sitting in the courtroom chatting and waiting for the Judge to open court to call the "law calendar." A few moments before the time for opening court, the Judge came leisurely through the clerk's office into the courtroom, and startled the bar with this pointed exclamation to: "Is there a gentleman in this crowd of lawyers?" The lawyers looked at each other, then at the Judge in wonderment. "If so," said the Judge, "let him give me a 'claw' of tobacco." This character of quaint humorous expression was peculiar to the Judge, and he delighted in having his joke on any member of the bar.

When Abby Kelly went on the lecture platform to speak for the slave, a preacher, who noticed her sitting in his audience, took as his text, "This Jeebel is come among us," and when Lucy Stone was to speak for anti-slavery in Malden, Massachusetts, the clergyman who announced the address, did it after this wise: "I have been requested by Mr. Morey to say that at the town hall, at 3 o'clock this afternoon, a hen will try to crow like a cock. All who would like to hear that kind of music will, no doubt, be on hand." It is doubtful if the younger women ever can appreciate through what martyrdom the right to free speech and free action has been bought for them, but one comes nearest to such understanding when listening to one like Mrs. Stone, to whom the past is still present in mind and vividly real.

NOTES.

Brazil is still "for the old flag and an appropriation." The appropriation was made first, and now comes the adoption of the "old flag." France recognizes the "old flag" of Brazil—Portugal attends to the appropriation.

The remarks of Joseph Steffens at the ceremonies of unveiling the Stevens' monument were full of meat, and furnish food for reflection to those who have the interests and welfare of our community at heart. For terse Mr. Steffens is a model.

The poem of Ralph Turner at the dedication of the Stevens monument is a splendid production. The real poetic fire is there. The efforts of this gentleman are destined to pass down to posterity, and will find a place in literary works of the world when he has ceased to exist.

The attempts at "unaffectedness" by some of our society people, particularly the women, becomes a burlesque when viewed by sensible people. Such actions are like a very much intoxicated individual trying to appear dignified—he is dignified only in his own opinion, all the rest of the world knows he is drunk.

Governor Waterman's speech at the unveiling of the Stevens monument was a marvel, aye, a revelation. He said almost all men are laborers, with hands or head, "and he did not propose to keep any away from Thanksgiving turkey with a long-winded speech." A "long-winded" Thanksgiving turkey is something new.

When our boys are properly taught, two grand ideals will always appear to their minds—a manly man and a womanly woman. A good father's example, and a noble mother's teachings will ever be the guide through life, and a boy will adhere to the ideals—a manly man, and a womanly woman. Nothing will ever shake him in this faith.

A new brand of soothing syrup for restless children has been discovered and used in Quebec. The directions are to give a teaspoonful every hour until the child is quiet. About the second hour does the business, and the child is perfectly and perpetually quiet. It is a sure remedy, and never fails to make the child who takes more than one dose quiet for all time.

Every person thinks he is as good, if not a little better, than his fellows. There is a deep seated idea in our hearts that we are exceptions to nature's as well as man's laws. If many of us could suddenly become millionaires, we just as suddenly become politicians and desire to control the country. What an upheaval would occur in political affairs if some of us had a million or two to throw away on ambition.

The astronomers have reported half a dozen comets picnicking around this sphere and now visible. We have, in the interest of science, remained out late 'nights lately to witness the advent of these vagrant visitors, but the comets have thus far failed to materialize. The managing editor has frequently taken observations through the glass, but as far as the discovery of a comet is concerned the experiments have been failures.

Our associate, for some inconceivable reason, certainly not beauty, is letting his beard grow. If he had accepted all the offers of "quarters" to get shaved, since he adopted his crank notion, he would have sufficient funds to purchase a railroad and become a bloated bondholder. His stubby, grizzled beard continues to grow, however, and he will not hearken to the advice and charitable proffers of his friends—not even his wife.

Our compositors are constantly in arms against the "copy" furnished, as being unintelligible. We remember when some of them set up a leading editorial of the late James McClatchy, entitled "Mind and Matter," and when it came from the hands of the intelligent compositor it read "Wind and Weather." The great trouble with our compositors is, they want to do the editing at the case. They manage to get in their deadly work sometimes, because we fail to identify our pet editorials when we see them in print.

In Kansas the managers of theaters will not tolerate a man kissing his own wife in the theater during a performance. They draw the line, however, at a private box. Here this little matrimonial affection may be indulged in. There seems to be a shade of unreason in this arbitrary rule. A man may kiss his wife in a private box. Another may kiss another man's wife on the stage. There is some inequality in this. Possibly young married couples should keep such indulgences for the cloister; but, then, young love is impulsive. If the parties enjoy this little display of affection, certainly the audience should find no fault.

If our recollection of history is not at fault, General Fitz John Porter has been a greatly maligned and ill-treated man. We pin our faith on the opinion of the great hearted soldier and statesman, General Grant, who ignored the charges made against his faithful subordinate, as being weak inventions of enemies, and who, while he was in power, brushed them aside like cobwebs. This matter has been recently made prominent through the articles of John Hay and John G. Nicolay, contributed to the Century. These gentlemen have it in their power to do justice to the old soldier who has so long been maligned.

The wires announce that A. S. Terry is on his way to Washington to lay the facts of the killing of David S. Terry, his brother, before the Department of Justice. It would seem to an ordinary mind that all the facts had been laid before the Department of Justice. It is possible that this member of the Terry family is still a disciple of the vendetta, and contemplates a resort to this peculiar code. There are no facts connected with the killing of David S. Terry that are not as familiar as household words to nearly every man, woman or child in the United States. The only question now before the Federal Supreme Court is the one touching the jurisdiction of Neagle, who killed Judge Terry while acting as escort for Justice Field. No question of the justification of or non-justification of the killing occurs.

There is among the leading Democratic papers in the United States, an apparent concerted system of littleness and petty fault finding with the administration of President Harrison. These political vultures are constantly on the alert for something to censure, and in the absence of any important matter of state, or any event of political note, they create "little nothings," and charge them to the critic account of the administration. Even the Thanksgiving proclamation must be subject to some snarling comment. The New York World "wonders what the President has to be thankful for, any way." The Sun and Cincinnati Enquirer wax into hysterics because Postmaster General Wanamaker invited the Pan-American Congress to visit his commercial houses. Even Mrs. Harrison and Miss Wanamaker have been made the subject of ridicule—and all this because the administration is not of their political faith. The American press should be above such petty actions. Blaine is a perfect nightmare to them. Every conceivable misrepresentation is created against him, but their venomous shafts fall harmless at his feet. When the administration or any member of the cabinet does any act deserving censure, it will be time enough to speak.

The address of E. B. Hussey at the unveiling of the Stevens' monument was a broad left-handed slap at the silurians and non-productive rent gatherers, as well as to those who neglect or refuse to protect our home industries and institutions. The reference to the genuine protective spirit that animated A. J. Stevens in his lifetime was most apropos, and must have brought a blush of shame to the faces of some of those alleged public enterprise men, who pose as friends of the people, who cannot find anything good enough in this city and State, but must send all important work to some Eastern institution, or import Eastern or foreign artisans. A goodly portion of Mr. Hussey's remarks formed an unanswerable argument in favor of protection in its broad and comprehensive sense. His allusion to the assistance always rendered by A. J. Stevens to our home artisans, and the construction of that model pump for the city, whereby the money for its construction was retained here, which otherwise would have gone to some other country or place, was in full accord with the broad and generous views always entertained by A. J. Stevens. Another hard rap over the knuckles of our alleged Improvement Association was administered by the speaker when attention was called to the fact that we had to go to some other place to obtain even our street cars, while our nickels have to pay for them. The speaker might have added the fact that the lack of enterprise with our people has caused our neighboring city of Stockton to levy an assessment on the agricultural community of hundreds of thousands of dollars for plows and agricultural machinery, when we could, with but a little display of enterprise, have extensive manufacturing in this city. Few such men as Stevens have been created in the world's history.

"The Japanese are equally ready to believe or disbelieve in God and a future life," is the opinion of a recent traveler in that country. "And which they will do depends on the question whether faith or infidelity is most in accordance with reason. They are acute metaphysicians, and have the most profound respect for logic. If they become Christians they will strip Christianity of a great many traditional dogmas that seem to them to be irrational. But they are so mercurial in temperament that they cannot take even religion seriously."

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

The Oakland Enquirer calls on Police Judge Laidlaw to resign, because of alleged habitual intemperance.

A young lad, named Charles Lane, while stealing a ride near Winnemucca, Nevada, fell between the cars and was killed.

Henry M. Stanley has sold his forthcoming book for $200,000. This is about on a level with some of the wonderful stories told of him.

The "lone highwayman" is getting in effectual work again. The Weaversville stage was robbed last night by a single highwayman.

C. C. O'Donnell has again been indicted for the vile practice of procuring abortions. Will it end as all other such prosecutions have resulted?

The Prime Minister of the Dominion of Canada has refused to allow the Canadian Pacific to make Halifax the terminal point of the ocean route. This is a hard blow to the Canadian road.

The disagreeable epidemic, influenza, is prevalent at St. Petersburg. The whole royal family is afflicted. Between dynamite and other evils which Russian flesh is heir to, the Czar and family have a hard row to hoe.

First Hydraulic Mining.

ST. HELENA, November 25, 1889.

Editors Themis:—In conversation with Mr. E. P. Palmer of this place, the other day, he gave me the particulars of a circumstance in connection with the history of mining in California which is of great importance, and, so far as I am aware, has never before been made public—namely, the origin of hydraulic mining. In the spring of 1853, Edward E. Mattison, Horace B. Mattison, Valentine J. Hathaway, Lewis B. Shanklin and Mr. Palmer were partners in a ground-slice claim on Wet Hill, near Soggs' quartz mill, not far from Wood's Ravine, a few miles distant from Nevada City, Nevada county. They had a 40-foot bank in the claim, which they were working down with pick and shovel, and found the work very laborious, when the idea occurred to Mr. Edward E. Mattison to direct their head of water immediately on the bank, and thus save the handling. Taking a stick of wood about 14 inches long, and boring a hole through it for a nozzle, and riveting together a strip of canvas as a hose, the experiment was tried. It succeeded so well that improvements were made, and pretty soon word of the affair getting out, miners began to flock in hundreds to see the device. The idea was so good that it was generally adopted, and the system of hydraulic mining, now in use over the world, had its beginning. Mr. Mattison kept a foundry at Nevada City for some years, but Mr. Palmer could not inform me whether he was still alive.

Yours, truly, R. A. C.

Friendships.

This is one of the amenities of life which has largely been lost sight of while we have watched the rolling of the wheel of progress and listened to its hum. An Eastern proverb says that "man knoweth not man till they have broken bread together," and this may explain why the great mass of people in great cities have few acquaintances. The lonely horseman on the plains camps for the night with the man who he has met on the day's journey, and they share each other's supper before stretching their weary limbs upon the turf. The soldier shares his hard tack with the prisoner he may be guarding, and both hearts are softened by the act. Men gather in twos or fours in some wayside snuggery and enjoy themselves over a brace of chops, roast potatoes, and maybe a pot of ale; but why is it that there are not more social gatherings around the family board, where the flashing firelight casts a cheerful ray and the languishing faces of the children furnish seasoning for the feast?

The "Jay" Abroad.

Signs of a jay abroad: He has a quarrel with the ticket agent before getting his ticket; he says good-bye to every one in hailing distance before getting on the train, and then says the same things through the car window; he leaves his final instructions with the solemnity and importance of making a will; he asks the conductor and all the passengers around him twenty different times if they are sure he is on the right train; he puts up the window only to put it down again; he finds out all about his neighbor's business; he piles his valises around him like a barricade; he prepares to take a nap, but can't go to sleep for fear some one will rob him; he begins to collect his baggage and sit nervously on the edge of the seat, for fear he will not have time to get out, half an hour before the train reaches his station; and finally, at the end of an hour's journey, when he reaches his destination and gets out, he rushes back after the train has started to pick up something he had forgotten. The jay is a great traveler.—Atchison Globe.

A. L. HART,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,
Attorney at Law,
Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.
No. 914 SIXTH STREET,
Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,
SURGICAL & MECHANICAL DENTIST
511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.
Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

FRIEND & TERRY
LUMBER CO.
Wholesale and Retail Lumber Dealers, Also Shakes, Bolts, Ties, Doors, Windows, Blinds and Screens. Main Yard and Office, No. 1310 Second Street. Branch Yard, corner Twelfth and J Sts. P. O. Box 233. E. J. HOLT, Manager. Sacramento

Fine Table Wines
From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.
Producers of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO

CHAMPAGNE

PERRIER-JOUËT
"SPECIAL"

W. B. CHAPMAN,
123 California St. San Francisco.
SOLE AGENT FOR THE PACIFIC COAST
To be sold by all first-class Wine Merchants and Grocers.

R. W. PARKER,
Dealer in Choice Family

GROCERIES and PROVISIONS

Sold at the Lowest Cash Price.

Give him a call and be convinced.

Corner of Seventeenth and N Streets.

Also, Office of the Superintendent of the City Cemetery.

A. AITKEN,
PREMIUM PIONEER MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS
423 J Street, bet. 4th and 5th, Sacramento.

Costic Tile, etc. Cemetery lots enclosed with Granite. All kinds of work done in Italian and Vermont Marble. Direct importer of Scotch and Eastern Granite Monuments. Also, Marble, Slate, Wooden and Iron Mantels, direct from manufacturers, at Reduced Prices. Call and examine.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

A number of stores and public places were left in darkness last night for a time, on account of the failure of one of the electric light circuits.

The city is infested with thieves. Their depredations are in all parts of the city, and not confined to any particular class or neighborhood. Our police should look well to the tramps and vagrants that congregate in dives.

Osmer Anderson, son of W. A. Anderson, one of the editors of THEMIS, has received an appointment in the treasury department of the United States mint, San Francisco. He has been ordered to report for duty on Monday next.

The Catholic festival at Armory Hall on Thursday night was well attended. Daniel J. Long was floor director, and the floor managers were, W. F. Gormley, D. McDougall, J. Longshore, J. S. O'Callaghan, Ed. Kransse, M. Nelis, and Fred Neary.

On Tuesday evening last the McNeill Club gave a social party at Pythian Hall, to the ladies who so laboriously and successfully assisted the club in the recent rendition of the Chimes of Normandy. Music and dancing, and a fine collation were the means of passing a few very enjoyable hours.

We acknowledge the receipt from G. W. Railton, the resident agent, of a copy of the Atlas of the Santa Fe route, containing well-executed maps of the United States, and of the various States and Territories and Mexico, through which the system traverses. Aside from the information given concerning the route, the atlas is of permanent value and is worthy of preservation.

Our theater-going public will have an opportunity for the first time to witness an opera by the Duff Comic Opera company on Tuesday and Wednesday nights next. Paola will be given for the first night, and for the first time on this coast. On Wednesday night the comic opera A Trip to Africa, will be produced, and will also be a novelty to a Sacramento public. The company has about sixty members in all, and is said to be strong.

Califia Party.

Califia Parlor, No. 22, Native Daughters of the Golden West, gave a splendid party at Turner Hall on Wednesday night. The managers gave it the name of "Cauliflower Party." There was indeed,

No sleep till morn,
When youth and pleasure meet,
To chase the glowing hours with flying feet.

The Young ladies deserve great credit for the manner in which all the details were arranged and executed. Any one looking upon that happy, joyous throng of young loveliness could not help being inspired at the spectacle. The floor director was Mrs. N. K. Leake; floor managers, Misses M. Johnson, M. Talbot, J. Leonard, M. Wood, E. McCleery, A. Luther, and K. Brenner. Royally did they perform their duties.

The Weather.

The rainfall for the past week, according to the Signal Service measurements, was .32 of an inch, making 9.15 inches for the season, against 4.83 inches to an equal date last year. The highest and lowest temperature for the week ending at 5 o'clock this morning was 61° and 40°, while for the same time last year it was 64° and 32°. The temperature in Central California this morning was spring-like, and the weather most excellent for growing crops; while at the same time the temperature east of the Rocky Mountains, and on to Chicago, is from 2° to 28° below the freezing point, with clear, cold weather prevailing. This portion of California is 28° above the freezing point, or between 40° and 50° warmer than Iowa.

Result of a Trifling Accident.

John S. Miller, the Secretary of the Sacramento Society of California Pioneers, has been confined to his room for several days as the result of an accident comparatively trivial. At the last meeting of the Board of Directors, Mr. Miller, in closing his pocket knife, slightly cut one of his fingers. For several days the circumstance occasioned no particular inconvenience, but the finger and hand became painful, and finally the swelling extended to the arm. There is some apprehension that blood poisoning may ensue.

Athletic.

This evening, at the Metropolitan Theater, the Sacramento Athletic Club will give an exhibition. Assistance will be rendered by members of the Olympic Club, of San Francisco. Prof. J. J. Corbett, the noted boxer, and Prof. Wm. Smyth, the celebrated gymnastic instructor, will be present and take part in the exhibition. A full house should greet this performance.

Nine-tenths of the saloon keepers are either total abstainers or very abstemious drinkers. It is also remarked that lawyers are seldom found in court as plaintiffs or defendants, and that physicians take very little medicine. If snickers would stop biting long enough to consider these facts they would be better off.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

General H. I. Willey, of San Francisco, is in the city.

Wallace Terry was home from the State University Thursday.

Controller Dunn will return from Los Angeles Tuesday evening.

Capt. Thos. B. Hall and wife have returned from a visit to the East.

Miss Mamie Block, of Gridley, is visiting Mrs. John Batchler, of this city.

H. A. Weaver came over from Stockton yesterday, and will return to-day.

Mrs. E. Block and daughter, of San Francisco, are visiting Mrs. Samuel Nathan.

A. L. Waterhouse, a traveling correspondent of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, was in the city yesterday, en route to Alaska.

S. R. Hart, of Fresno, brother of General A. L. and Hon. E. C. Hart, was in the city on Thursday. To-day he will be married at Colusa to Miss Delter.

Joseph W. Hughes and Miss Georgie Griswold were married during the week. The young couple are well known in Sacramento, and our congratulations are in order.

Frank A. Smith and Jennie Kilgour, both well known in this city, were married at Mazatlan, Mexico, recently. We, with the very many friends of the contracting parties, extend to them our congratulations. We have but one regret, that we are not able to tender our compliments in person, but Mexico is too far away. However, the heart sentiments are recorded.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Lauder celebrated their golden wedding at their home Thursday evening. There were sixty-eight invited guests present, and the hospitable manner in which they were entertained made it a most enjoyable evening. Instrumental and vocal music, card parties, dancing and pleasant social converse was the order of the evening. At 11 o'clock the party were conducted to the dining-room, where three large tables were spread with an old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner, and the wedding that took place twenty years ago was duly celebrated, the bride and groom apparently as happy as they were on the day they pledged to "love, honor and protect" each other through life. The "dinner" was not only a sumptuous affair, but the short speeches, toasts and pleasant conversation added an additional charm. The host and hostess were the recipients of many handsome and valuable presents. The hospitality of the host and hostess, who are admirable entertainers, made all feel free from the least restraint.

Compound Interest on a Quarter.

About thirty-five years ago a little boy was given a quarter of a dollar for spending money. As he walked down the street, very happy, he met with an older boy and showed him the money, saying, as he did so: "See what my good papa gave me to spend." The older boy knocked it out of the little fellow's hand, snatched it up and ran away with it. The little boy was almost heart-broken, but when he went home and told about it his mother gave him another quarter. This mollified him, but he never forgave that older boy. The war came on and the older boy was given a commission in the army, while the little one, who was too young to enlist, remained at home.

After the war the younger boy became a clerk in the War Department. Within the past fifteen years the older boy, who had become a lawyer and an orator, announced himself as a candidate for the United States Senate, and he had a large following. It looked as though he might be elected. But one morning the newspapers in many portions of the country, and especially those of his own State, published a statement to the effect that the candidate had been dismissed from the army for cowardice and other questionable conduct. The lawyer denied the charge, and extracts from the records of the War Department were published, showing that the charge was true. He was not elected. After his defeat was accomplished, he received a letter postmarked Washington, D. C., of which the following is an exact copy: "Do you remember the day you outraged a little boy's feelings, and almost broke his heart by stealing a quarter from him? That deed cost you a seat in the Senate."

The Pearl of Savoy.

Queen Margherita, whose Italian subjects speak of her as "the Pearl of Savoy," is yearly presented by her husband with a new string of pearls, the finest that can be found, and they now fall from her throat to below her waist, a solid mass. Her jewel caskets are heaped up with them like the treasure chambers of the Shah of Persia. At a court ball costume she once appeared as the Princess of Pearl, when she wore not only all of those wonderful things, but all the other pearls in her collection, and was completely covered with them. Her dress was cloth of silver, brocaded in pearls, while beautiful pearl-shaped pendants hung from the centers of the flowers in raised pearl embroidery.

"Bredren," observed a negro preacher, as he leaned on the edge of the pulpit, "man-kind am like a meerscham pipe—all de more valuable when dey's colored."

REGULAR

Republican * Ticket.

Election: Monday, December 2d.

For Superintendent of City Schools,

ALBERT HART.

FOR SCHOOL DIRECTORS:

First Ward.....W. H. SHERBURN

Second Ward.....ALONZO CONKLIN

Third Ward.....RICHMOND DAVIS

Fourth Ward.....O. W. ERLEWINE

By order of the Republican City Central Committee.

R. J. VAN VOORHIES, Chairman.

D. J. LONG, Secretary.

METROPOLITAN THEATER.

THIS (SATURDAY) EVENING.

GRAND EXHIBITION

BY THE

Sacramento Athletic Club

ASSISTED BY

MEMBERS OF THE OLYMPIC CLUB

Of San Francisco.

Among the most notable Athletes who will appear are:

PROFESSOR J. J. CORBETT, the Celebrated Boxer.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM SMYTH, Gymnastic Instructor of the Olympic Club.

PROFESSOR GEORGE MIEHLING (Young Bibby).

ROBERT LEANDRO,

E. A. KOLB,

THE STACK BROTHERS.

ROBERT McCORD,

D. C. DAVIS,

E. J. RYAN,

P. P. BERNHARD,

—And a host of others.—

GENERAL ADMISSION.....FIFTY CENTS.

Reserved Seats (to be had at Houghtons), 25 Cents extra.

American Eagle Hotel

Corner Twelfth and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO.

This house has been put in first-class condition, and also newly furnished—everything being new from office to kitchen.

Board and Room, per Week, - - $5.00 to $7.00

MEALS, 25 CENTS.

Terms made with families.

GEO. W. NEWBERT, Proprietor.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice, SACRAMENTO.

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SOUR MASH BOURBON WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagele & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGELE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.—ESTATE OF JAMES MCENANEY, Deceased. Notice is hereby given by the undersigned administrator of the Estate of James McEnaney, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against said deceased to exhibit them with their necessary affidavits and vouchers within four months after the first publication of this notice, to him at the office of Frank D. Ryan, Attorney at Law, No. 504 J street, Sacramento City, Cal.

Dated Nov. 30th, 1889.
LAWRENCE MCENANEY, Administrator.

REGULAR

Democratic * Ticket.

Election: Monday, December 2d.

For Superintendent of City Schools,

M. R. BEARD.

FOR SCHOOL DIRECTORS,

First Ward.....J. E. D. BALDWIN

Second Ward.....J. N. PAYNE

Third Ward.....J. R. FOSTER

Fourth Ward.....OSCAR S. FLINT

By order of the Democratic City Central Committee.

W. S. SHIELDS, Chairman.

M. J. SULLIVAN, Secretary.

ROLLER SKATING RINK.

OLD PAVILION,

Corner Sixth and M Streets, - Sacramento,

CLARK & HOLDEN, Proprietors.

OPEN MORNINGS FROM 10 TO 12 O'CLOCK, for ladies exclusively.

Open Afternoons from 2 till 4 o'clock.

Open Evenings from 7 to 10 o'clock.

Music Wednesdays and Saturdays,

Ladies' admission, free, except on music nights; ladies admission on music nights, 10 cents.

GENTLEMEN'S ADMISSION, 25 CENTS.

Commutation Tickets for sale.

GEO. H. CLARK,
FRED. A. HOLDEN, MANAGER.

Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.

L. RADLOFF,

LADIES' TAILOR.

218 POST STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

Bainbridge Business College

J. C. BAINBRIDGE, PRINCIPAL.

No. 1017 J Street, Sacramento.

A full Business Course, together with Short-hand, Telegraphy, Bookkeeping, Penmanship and all the branches usually taught in schools of this kind.

A full corps of Teachers of the first rank only employed.

MRS. BAINBRIDGE has charge of the Music Department.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

TO A WAVE.

The following beautiful lines were written in the album of a lady friend in Springfield, Ill., by Colonel E. D. Baker:

Dost thou seek a star with thy swelling crest?
Oh, wave that leavest thy mother's breast,
Dost thou leap from the prisoned depths below,
In scorn of their calm and constant flow?
Art thou seeking some distant land,
To die in murmurs upon the strand?

Hast thou tales to tell of the pearl-lit deep,
Where the wave-whelm'd mariner rocks in sleep?

Canst thou speak of names that sunk in pride,
Ere the roll of their thunder in echo died?
What troubles—what banners are floating free
In the shadowy depths of that silent sea?

It were vain to ask, as thou rollest afar,
Of banner or mariner, ship or star.
It were vain to seek in thy stormy face
Some tale of the sorrowful past to trace;
Thou art swelling high, thou are flashing free,
How vain, then, the questions we ask of thee.

I, too, am a wave on a stormy sea;
I, too, am a wanderer, driven like thee;
I, too, am seeking a distant land,
To die in murmurs upon its strand;
But the land I seek is a waveless shore,
And those who reach it shall roam no more,

Two Ways to Propose.

Here are two styles of "proposing." This one is the kind you read about, but the other is the one most popular in the realm of fact: "My angel, I have long waited for this opportunity. You must have detected ere now the growth of my love for you. From the day I first met you that love took root, and to-night it is strong and sturdy, unwavering, undying. Your sweet smiles have lighted up my life, your every word has been to me a note of exquisite music, thrilling, entrancing me. You have filled a place in my heart, in my affections, that no one has ever before occupied. My lifelong happiness depends solely upon the answer you give me. Say you will be mine to love, caress, cherish, idolize through time and eternity, and make me of all men most envied. But if you refuse, I can not! I can not! The thought is madness. You will be my wife? I see the answer of your heart mirrored in your lustrous eyes; you know I love you as no other man ever has loved you, or ever can love you, darling. I know you will not thrust me off."

The angel assumes a stereotyped really-this-is-so-sudden expression, and assures Mr. Wordie she would derive great pleasure from being his sister.

Here is the other way:

"Maude, I've been thinking seriously of late."

"Really, Fred, you ought to be more judicious than to do anything so rash as that."

"Yes, I know it is a heavy tax on my mental capacity, but then I always was reckless that way. This time, however, I think I have been thinking to some purpose. In fact, I've been thinking you wouldn't object to having your name changed."

"When?"

"Just as soon as possible."

"Will it be home or church?"

"Church, of course; we want to do this thing in style."

"Have you asked pa?"

"Certainly not. I don't want to marry your father."

"Well, I know; but for form's sake."

"All right, dear, for form's sake, I will see pa, and maybe you had better prepare ma for the ordeal."

"Oh, she won't mind it."

Deep silence reigns again, save as it is broken by the soft sighing of the tree-tops, swayed by a gentle breeze. Gleelessly the stars twinkle; the moon looks beamingly down from heaven to earth, and discovers on a vine-bowered piazza two forms with but a single chair.

Frequency of Thunderstorms.

A German periodical gives statistics concerning the frequency of thunderstorms in various regions of the world. Java has thunderstorms on the average of 97 days in the year; Sumatra, 86; Hindostan, 56; Borneo, 54; the Gold Coast, 52; Rio de Janeiro, 51; Italy, 38; West Indies, 36; South Guinea, 32; Buenos Ayres, Canada and Austria, 23; Baden, Wurtemberg, and Hungary, 22; Silesia, Bavaria and Belgium, 21; Holland, 18; Saxony and Brandenburg, 17; France, Austria and South Russia, 16; Spain and Portugal, 15; Sweden and Finland, 8; England and the high Swiss mountains, 7; Norway, 4; Cairo, 3. In East Turkestan, as well as in the extreme north, there are almost no thunderstorms. The northern limits of the thunderstorms are Cape Ogle, northern part of North America, Iceland, Novaja Semelja, and the coast of the Siberian ice sea.

King George, of Greece, the father of the Duke of Sparta, is about forty-five years old. He has a thin, elegant figure, a fresh complexion, a fair mustache, and is very bald.

How Musk is Obtained.

Most people take it for granted that because musk is sold in what is called a pod, therefore it is a vegetable product. But the truth is that it is entirely an animal product, being a substance found in a two or three-inch sac in the body of the little musk-deer of Asia. This sac, when tied up and dried, goes by the name of a pod among the hunters who bring it into market. Probably there are few things subject to such adulteration, as one part of pure musk will scent thousands of parts of some other powder mingled with it; and as the pods sell for from fifteen to twenty dollars apiece, the adulteration has its profit. It is indeed so pungent that when just fresh it has been known to produce violent bleeding at the nose, and many people are so susceptible to it as to have sad headaches brought about by contact with the pure article; and while a suspicion of it is very agreeable to many persons, one atom too much becomes offensive, as the case is with patchouli and many other odorous substances. It was formerly largely used in therapeutics, especially in the Orient, having become disused as much from the difficulty of obtaining it in a pure state as from anything else, and it is now seldom given except in hysteria and hiccuph.—Harper's Bazar.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

—Gas and Steam Fitter.—

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

GEM GALLERY, THE ONLY

Ferrottype Gallery

627 J STREET,

In the City.

Sixteen "Gems" for 50 cents. Card size proportionately low. Photographic Work in general.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel,

Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.

Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

CHAS. J. FREDERICKS & CO.

Fashionable and Practical

HATTERS,

802 J STREET,

Importers and Manufacturers of Fine Hats and Caps.

Latest Novelties on hand and constantly arriving. REPAIRING A SPECIALTY.

J. O. MILLS,

High Art Crayon Portraits

Executed from Life or Tin-types or Photographs. Inquire or leave orders at

406 J STREET, or 413 K STREET.

San Francisco Studio, 12 Delone street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth, Church and Sanchez streets. References: Timothy Lee, Chief of Police, Col. Guthrie, Capt. Fouratt.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEEPING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6. Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4. Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

SAN FRANCISCO

Steam & Dyeing Works

Removed to 524 K Street.

Branch, 805 K St. Dye Works, 2511 J St.

All orders promptly attended to. Don't make a mistake—Main office at Capital Transfer Company.

JOHN STEEN, Proprietor Dye Works.

Trunks Removed, 25 Cents.

JAS. LONGSHORE,

SACRAMENTO TRUNK FACTORY,

530 K STREET.

Trunks, Valises & Bags Wholesale and Retail.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware, SACRAMENTO.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS, Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,
PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

R. H. PETTIT,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

IMPORTED & DOMESTIC CIGARS

Smoke the "Lone Fisherman,"

The BEST FIVE-CENT CIGAR in the Market.

NO. 225 K STREET.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Wm. Kuhlaw, Peter Miller, Elizabeth Davis, Henry Greisel, Robt. Robinson, and B. F. White, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 12th day of October, 1889, in which action M. G. Dandridge is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: That you, the defendants, and each of you, be required to set forth your several claims, or right, title or interest of, in and to Lots One to Eight, inclusive, in the Block bounded by J and K and Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, in the city of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California; and that said claims, or either of them, may be determined by a decree of this Court, and that they, or either of said claims, may be adjudged and declared invalid, and that the defendants, nor either of them, have no right, title or interest of, in, or to said land, and that plaintiff do have judgment against said defendants, decreeing plaintiff to have a good and valid title, and that the defendants be forever debarred from ever asserting any claim adverse to plaintiff, and for costs and for general relief, all of which will more fully appear from the complaint on file herein, to which reference is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said county of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified, that, unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief prayed for in his said complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n19-94]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Charles Farley and J. W. Richmond, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 24th day of October, 1889, in which action Michael Huley is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To require you, defendants, to set forth the nature, character and extent of your claims to that certain real property in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California, known upon the official map of said Sacramento City as Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, in the Block between T and U, Ninth and Tenth streets; and to obtain a decree of Court adjudging that defendants, or either of them, have no estate, right, or title in said premises, or any part thereof; and that defendants be forever debarred and estopped from asserting or claiming any right, title, or interest to said premises, or any part thereof; and for such other and further relief as the Court may deem fit and proper in the premises; and for costs of suit. All of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

FRANK D. RYAN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Coe W. Bird-sall, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 1st day of November, 1889, in which action Emma Bird-sall is plaintiff, and you are defendant. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the grounds of wilful neglect and wilful desertion, all of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 1st day of November, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

ISAAC JOSEPH, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t]

TAXES.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 3748 OF THE Political Code, as amended March 16, 1889, State and County Taxes will be received at the office of the County Tax Collector, northwest corner of Seventh and I streets, in the City of Sacramento, on and after FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1889. Taxpayers will please take notice that on the last Monday in December (the 30th day), 1889, at 6 o'clock p. m. of that day, taxes will be delinquent, and unless paid prior thereto five per cent penalty will be added, as provided by law.

CEO. C. McMULLEN,
Tax Collector of Sacramento County,
Sacramento, Cal., November 5, 1889. [n9-4t]

The Majesty of Man.

In vision off an outward look we claim—
I saw the stars, from circling systems run,
Pulsing with light and heat a molten sun,
Together roll, and all the heavens aflame
With lurid lustre, blinding, as it came In reddened rays before mine eyes. Undone,

Upon my knees I bowed my head, as one Sinking to naught, amid the dust, with shame.

But soon the Lord, upon a fiery cloud,
Rode high above the burning, seething mass,
Which paled before the brightness of His face.

"Oh, man!" He cried, "let not thy head be bowed;

Rise in that majesty which doth surpass
The mingled glory of all worlds in space."

The Popular Woman of To-day.

Who is the popular woman of to-day?
She is the one who wears well-fitting clothes and never minds telling the name of her dressmaker.

She is the one who sees the possibilities of a bashful young man and cultivates him when everybody counts him a bore.

She is the one who may believe in Christian science or mind cure, or a special way to remove freckles, or the Turkish bath, or in not wearing corsets, but who doesn't give dissertations on these subjects and insist on converting you.

She is the one who never makes you conscious of the amount of money she has, or her lack of it.

She is the one who, when you are a guest in her house, makes you feel that she has simply been waiting for this opportunity to be happy and that you are the honored guest.

She is the one whose hair doesn't come down, or whose frock doesn't tear when she is some place where it is not easy to fix it.

She is one whose children are seen but not heard.

She is the one who doesn't tell people unpleasant things, and if she has a bad opinion of anybody, sums it all by saying, "I do not like her," and gives no further explanation.

She is the one who knows that big hats were intended for the street and little bonnets for the theater.

She is one who is loyal to her friends, ignores her enemies, and loves her husband and children.

She is the best type of the American woman. —Bab.

The Waves of the Sea.

A very satisfactory experiment for learning how high the ocean waves rise was made recently by the Hon. Ralph Abercromby, a member of a British scientific expedition through the South Pacific.

Within a year there was an account published in the Sun of some calculations made by an observer from a ship's topmast. The latter climbed to a point at which, when his ship lay in the trough of the sea, he was on a level with the crest of the waves. These observations were made off Cape Horn, and they led to the belief that, notwithstanding all previous theories tending to credit the waves with a comparatively small rise, they actually rose to a height of between sixty and seventy feet. Another authority, Admiral Fitzroy, has published his conclusion that they can rise as high as sixty feet. Mr.
Abercromby's experiment, which was by a very original method, tended to establish this opinion.

He placed upon the surface of the water a very sensitive aneroid barometer, capable of recording its extreme rise or fall. With a sea not subjected to an atmosphere of unusual violence, the barometer indicated an elevation of forty feet from the wave's base to crest. Mr. Abercromby concluded that under extraordinary conditions the waves would without doubt become sixty feet high.

It is not an uncommon thing for people when they first travel by ship to express disappointment at the majesty of the ocean. It may seem anything but awful to them. If they do not find those qualities in it when it is quiet, they certainly would if they could ever see it raised by a genuine storm. —New York Sun.

A Female Chesterfield.

A few years ago a strange mistake was made in New York society. Two ladies of the same name gave an entertainment within a few doors of each other's houses. Many persons got into the wrong house. The hostess who gained that day the admiring comments of all New York was the one who received perfect strangers as if they were her best friends, and made them her friends by that gracious reception. She knew how awkwardly they would feel when they found out their mistake; she did all she could to prevent their feeling awkwardly while with her.

The other lady, less well-bred, said to a person who had come into her house, under a mistake, "I think you have got into the wrong house."

"Yes, Madam, I have," said he. "I thought before I entered it that this was a lady's house."

It was a terrible revenge, but, under the circumstances, an entirely justifiable one.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON, The * Leading * Merchant * Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501 -- 507 K, cor. Fifth

Furniture

Bedding.

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

Klune & Floberg, WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS

Agents for Rockford Watch Co.
NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR ^d _a COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

Wm. J. Hassett.

A. J. Johnston.

A. J. Johnston & Co.

PRINTERS,

410 J Street,

Sacramento

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR
only. Linen polished in the neatest manner.
We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing
called for and delivered to any part of the city.
Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J
street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE
Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also,
Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night.
EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exerescences, etc.,
Positively Cured or No Pay.
No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names
of a few of the many cured. By addressing them
they will give any information required—and it pays
to investigate before being treated.

Mrs. O. C. Neilson, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington. Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.

Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets.
Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

ANGLO-NEVADA ASSURANCE CORPORATION

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

FIRE.—Cash Capital, $2,000,000.—MARINE.

Sacramento Branch:

No. 1018 SECOND STREET.

JOSEPH STEFFENS,
Manager.HOWARD KIMBROUGH,
Local Agent.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J,

SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and

Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

[SACRAMENTO.]

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY & BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199.

Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER,

1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER.

BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

FLASHES.

A good drawing—when you fill on two pair.

A case of hearsay evidence—that a man snores.

What we most desire, is always just beyond our reach.

When a fellow falls into bad habits, the only thing that gets broke is himself.

Our city officers are like the autumn trees—they will be re-leaved in the Spring.

When a fellow gets through "painting things red," he's generally very blue."

In law it is said there is always a redress. The poor devil with only one suit has no re-dress.

Hearing things do not amount to much. But when you begin to "see things," break the jug.

The passion for dress grows upon women. Many women wish the dresses themselves would grow upon them.

While there is nothing so good for the eyes as "green," the "green" cloth is not good for the pocket of the green ones.

A Texas Democrat of 85 years of age has just had his twenty-first son born to him. No wonder Texas always rolls up such a Democratic majority.

"What are those funny little pieces of brass in your pockets?" asked an investigating wife who had been through his clothes. "Oh, they are Growler checks," replied the husband. "Cave canem," responded the wife, which means "Beware of the growler."

Confessions of a Corkscrew.

"O, to tell the truth, I have lived a very crooked life," said the Corkscrew. "My ways have been devious, and I attribute it largely to the fact that I have been brought so much in contact with strong drink. I have tried to straighten up, but it is no use. My habits are fixed. I cannot go in the straight and narrow way. My way is narrow enough, but it isn't straight. I have a strong pull on society and club circles. Perhaps I should not mention it, but I am thrown much with people who are tight. Even the corks I come in contact with are tight. Thank Heaven, there is nothing in common between me and the plebeian agricultural people who leave an inch or so of a corn-cob stopper sticking out of the bottle. They have no use for me, and I have no use for them. I am of a convivial nature, and generous to a fault. I am always first to open a bottle. In regard to champagne, I have only this to say: Beware of a drink that has dynamite enough in it to fire the cork out of the bottle. I am in and out of drinking places so much that I am feeling pretty groggy, and hoping you are enjoying the same blessing, I am yours truly.—N. Y. World.

There is in Wales an inn run entirely by women. The proprietor is a woman, a little mature, but still buxom. The clerk is a woman more buxom than the landlady, who in the intervals of clerking, mixes drinks behind the bar. The "boots" is also a girl, younger and more buxom than the clerk.

A London engineer has made the wonderful discovery that the density of London fogs is largely due to smoke and soot. Applying the same principle, he may find that the density of the fogs contributes largely to the density of the average Englishman in seeing the point of an American joke.

BELL & CO.,
GENERAL AUCTIONEERS.

Salesroom, 927 K Street, Sacramento, Cal.

Regular Salesdays—Wednesdays and Saturdays at 10 o'clock A. M.

Assistants—W. T. Crowell, Real Estate; J. Pulvermacher, Bookkeeper; J. Lambert, Furniture and Stock.

Particular attention paid to sales of real estate, house sales, and sales of farms, stock, etc.

Highest price paid for all kinds of household goods.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

H. WACHHORST Leading Jeweler of Sacramento

SIGN OF THE TOWN CLOCK,

No. 315 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

MOYNIHAN'S

418 J STREET.

FOR THE LADIES:

Just received, direct from Manufacturers, an elegant line of Silver and Oxydized Bonbonniere Boxes Ladies' Cachou Flasks, and other Novelties. Call and inspect them. THE ONLY FIRST-CLASS HOUSE IN THE CITY.

J. R. Wheat

DITTMAR & WHEAT,

A. Dittmar.

Sacramento Lounge & Mattress Factory.

No. 916 J STREET.

Important and Worth Investigation

We are making Suits to order of the fine Huddersfield Worsteds for $25, which are worth $40. As the sales of these fine worsteds during the past three weeks have proved such a success in San Francisco, we have added a large line of Jerseys and Meltons, for Overcoats, with fine silk- serge lining all through, made to order from $30 to $55, which would cost elsewhere from $40 to $60. We have also received, direct from the mill, over forty pieces of fine Trusserings, which we bought at an immense reduction, and are now prepared to give our customers and the public of Sacramento the benefit. These are fine all-wool goods, at prices never before known in Sacramento. Please call and examine goods and be convinced of the bargains now offered for the holidays by

JOE POHEIM, THE TAILOR,

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

JAS. G. DAVIS Furniture, Carpets and Wall Paper

411 AND 413 K STREET,

Branch, 315 K St. Send for Catalogue. Prices Lowest.

BOOTS AND SHOES made to order. Boots, $5 to $11. Shoes, $4 to $9. Ladies' Shoes, best quality French Kid, $5 to $7.

REPAIRING DONE at lowest prices.

NONE BUT BEST mechanics employed.

WE GUARANTEE to make perfect fitting to the worst of crooked and crippled feet.

COMPETE WITH any shoes on the market.

216 J Street

—AND—

208 K Street,

SACRAMENTO.

A. CASELLI & COMPANY.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

R. DAVIS,

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh; Scotland; London and Lancashire, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers

and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.

Southern Pacific Company
PACIFIC SYSTEM.

Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.45 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3.40 A
7.05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6.45 P
7.25 P	Knight's Landing	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6.25 P
12-01 A	Central Atlantic Express	6.00 A
	Ogden and East
3-00 P	Oroville	10.30 A
3-00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10.30 A
10.40 A	Redding via Willows	4.00 P
6.15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7.25 P
6.50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8.35 P
3-05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11.40 A
4-00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10.40 P
*10.00 A	San Francisco via Steamer	6.00 A
11.25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2.25 P
6.50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11.40 P
11.25 A	San Jose	2.25 P
7-05 P	Santa Barbara	9.55 A
6.50 A	Santa Rosa	11.40 A
3-05 P	Santa Rosa	7.25 P
9-00 A	Stockton and Galt	6.45 P
7-05 P	Stockton and Galt	9.55 A
8-00 P	Truckee and Reno	6.25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno	6.00 A
12-05 P	Colfax	10.20 A
6.50 A	Vallejo	11.40 A
3-05 P	Vallejo	18.35 P
*12.15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10.25 A
*7.15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2.40 P
*5.20 P	Folsom	*6.50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning. P for afternoon.

A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.

T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED K COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

BELL & FOUNTAIN

HAVE OPENED THE

Plaza Cash Grocery
STORE,

Corner Tenth and J Streets,

And have stocked the same with all New and Fresh Goods, which they will sell for CASH at the smallest living margin.

All Goods Warranted as Represented.

Goods delivered to any part of the city.

Our Motto: "The nimble sixpence against the slow shilling!"

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wu. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars.

ROBERT ALLEN,
Formerly of Agricultural Park.

THE EMERSON

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1889.

No. 42.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

The school election, held Monday, resulted in victory for the Republican ticket. Among the members generally of the party it had been understood there must be reform, and a suppression of the spirits that have been keeping up petty internal war. It is not necessary that we review the history of the party in this city in the last few years; nor is it necessary we should point out the sources from which our defeats have emanated. We are content that the past shall live only in history; we look to matters that are of accomplishment in the future. The principles of a national political organization are quite far-reaching—the election of Mr. Harrison in its influence extended beyond these United States. The man was not so much voted for as was the declaration of principles of the party he was chosen to represent. We believe that the same rule which guides us in the selection of the executive head of the nation should obtain when we are called upon to choose those to administer our municipal, county and State affairs. The Republicans of Sacramento city placed in the field an excellent ticket for school officers; it was successful. There is no reason why, with appropriate management, the party cannot be successful at the municipal election in March.

The Republican City Central Committee, in view of the spring election, is now in a position of vantage. It can make a step that will result in the absolute cementation of the party. Its individual members have but to lay aside every consideration except that which will tend to partisan success, and ignore the smaller matters liable to arouse resentments within the party. We feel that the disposition of the committee is to act for the furtherance of the objects for which it was created: the advancement of the interests of the party in this city. We feel that its members, chosen by a convention selected by the Republican voters of Sacramento, have a full understanding of the object in view. We have no doubt the committee has a full appreciation of the causes which have in the past been creative of dissensions, and that they realize that in a large measure they have been occasioned by the interjection of factional views that had a tendency to control the action of the political agents to the party. In most instances the trouble has been engendered by the apportionment of delegates to the conventions. Heretofore in the cases of municipal conventions the delegates have been selected from entire wards. This system has proved unsatisfactory, for the reason that it enabled a few men who might obtain the control of the caucus to name the delegates to represent one-fourth of the city. In the elections for delegates to a convention there have been instances where undue advantages have been taken, and where, presumptively, if not manifestly, the popular partisan will of an entire ward was thwarted.

The tendency of the later legislation of the State has been to limit the votes cast at each polling-place to a small number. For instance, at the last general election, the city of Sacramento was divided into fifteen precincts. The lowest Republican vote cast at any of the precincts was 169, and the largest, 334. This law has worked very satisfactorily and has many substantial arguments in its favor. We suggest that the Republican city committee adopt the same plan for the selection of delegates to the convention next spring. Based upon the highest vote cast for the Harrison electors, the Republican vote in this city was as follows: On the north side of K street: In the precinct from Front to Fourth, 232 votes; Fourth to Seventh, 322; Seventh to Tenth, 334; Tenth to Twelfth, 235; Twelfth to Fourteenth, 186; Fourteenth to Eighteenth, 240; Eighteenth to Thirty-first, 187. On the south side of K street: From Front to Second, K and O, and Front to Fourth, O and Y, 170 votes; Second to Fourth, K and O, 209; Fourth to Sixth, south of K, 224; Sixth to Eighth, 240; Eighth to Tenth, 234; Tenth to Fourteenth, 241; Fourteenth to Nineteenth, 240; and Nineteenth to Thirty-first, 169.

If the apportionment should be one delegate for each twenty Republican votes and one for each fraction of ten or over, it will give each precinct a representation varying from eight to eighteen delegates, according to the voting population of the party, and the total number of delegates to the convention will be 173. We believe there are very strong considerations for the adoption of some such plan. It will certainly be fair in that it will give to each of the small precincts the exact representation that its Republican vote entitles it, and each of these minor subdivisions will make its selections independently of the rest of the city. If it should happen—which would be very improbable, where so few votes are cast at a polling place—that one precinct was manipulated by fraud, the taint would not affect the entire ward. We believe in large conventions, and one of a size that will permit the selection of one of each twenty Republican voters could not be manipulated by any clique. The result will be, we feel assured, that a ticket thus nominated will be invincible. If the committee should take action of this character, so far in advance in the selection of the delegates, the people will be prepared and there will be no apprehension that at the very latest moment some course will be pursued which will engender bitterness in the party. The last Republican county convention adopted a resolution of this character, and directed that future apportionments should be on that basis. While the next county convention will not meet perhaps until August, the people have been able from the moment the official canvass of the Presidential election was made a year ago to ascertain precisely the number of delegates that will be returned from each precinct in the city and county to the body that will nominate the next Republican county ticket.

The President's message is a great state document. There is no mistaking his meaning—no attempt to straddle the fence on any proposition. On the condition in the South he treats with statesman-like views. The silver question is handled with a master hand, and while it may not accord with our radical ideas, still he considers it a matter of political economy to be carefully considered by Congress. The all-absorbing revenue reform question is presented in a broad and liberal light, and, while protection to home industries is the cardinal feature, the President would suggest many radical changes in our revenue system, tending to lighten the burden of taxation and reduce the accumulating surplus in the treasury. He but reiterates the sentiments of Secretary Blaine in both the late Presidential campaigns, when he suggests the withdrawal of the internal tax on tobacco and spirits. While our Democratic friends and English philanthropists are claiming that there has been an indorsement of their pernicious free trade dogmas, there is nothing but the great principles of protection dominating the whole message. The President has shown a thorough understanding of the Chinese question, and has taken a firm stand in favor of restriction to Mongolian immigration. He is sound on coast defenses, and the creation of a suitable navy. We like the details of this great document; the protection to railroad employees, the bankrupt and naturalization laws, and his broad views on education, all have a meaning and purpose of great national advancement. All can read and digest this state paper with profit and pleasure.

A few months ago we expressed the opinion that Mayor Eugene J. Gregory was the most available man for the nomination for Governor. We have seen nothing to shake our faith in this view since that time. Mayor Gregory possesses elements of political strength far above any other candidate thus far mentioned. He is not subject to any of the political party entanglements that beset all the others. The mountains and the valleys alike are favorable to his aspirations. The administration of Mayor Gregory over the municipal affairs of this city has been marked with good results, the greatest of which are now about being realized. The firm stand on fighting the inordinate demands of the bond creditors, which has been vindicated by the courts, is greatly in his favor, and is an admonition to the people of this city that he should be retained as the chief executive of this city until the people call him to the executive chair of State. Mayor Gregory should be continued as Mayor until the new charter shall go into effect, which will, in all probability, be within the next two years. The Mayor and other city officers elected next spring will only hold until a new charter is adopted, whereupon a new charter election under the same will occur. Keep Mayor Gregory there until the happening of that event, and then let us honor him with the chair of State.

A remarkable man has just passed from life's stage. Jefferson Davis died yesterday. His bitter animosities left him almost without a country or a home. To say that this once great political leader was not a man of force and brains would be to belie history. While his ideas were based upon the wrong principles of what should constitute substantial government, he evidently was firmly impressed with his own convictions. His name, will, however, go down to posterity associated with those who struggled to overthrow the greatest and most liberal government the world ever knew. His misguided notions of the rights of his southern brethren lead him and them to be recorded on the black pages of our nation's history. Had his efforts been successful in founding a southern republic, based on his peculiar views of liberty, his name might have found a different place in the world's history.

Some of the great dailies, notably the New York World, sound the warning of the ephemeral character of the literature of the day, not only in this country, but in Europe. Nothing of lasting value has been produced for almost a generation. Literary critics in the newspapers and magazines praise the literature of this time lavishly, without regard to intrinsic merit, but generally upon "plain business principles." That is to say, the publishers alone control the criticisms of the world, and by a covert system of advertising patronage, which develops into critic bribery, secure the indorsement of the literary departments of magazines and the leading daily newspapers. The lighter and more ephemeral the author's work, the more readily is it favorably "reviewed" by the book critics. All the old veterans have fallen into the prevailing style of writing, not caring to do legitimate work, because the former pays better. Thus, literature has retrograded into money making, rather than the development of genius. Thousands of volumes of imaginative literature flood the bookstalls, railroad carriages, steamers, and every avenue of the world, of which the most that can be said is that they are in some instances clever phases of life, without any lasting merit, or without teaching any valuable or moral lesson. The World says:

How many books of a distinctly literary character that will be remembered after their pages have yellowed have been written in England or America during the last twenty years? How many books of any real literary importance have been written in that time by authors who are not now either dead or inactive from age? Has there been a single one? Apart from the few veterans, whose work is completely done, what names in either country can one mention as those of the great writers of our time? There is absolutely none. The imaginative literature of the age is at best clever and ephemeral. No great novels and no great poems are produced. There is not a single novel or poem under twenty years of age which anyone need feel bound to read in order to be well informed in literature. Is productive capacity worn out, then, in the field of imaginative literature? Or is it only that the old forms have been exhausted in use, and that the man has not yet arisen who is to create the new and set imagination free again?

There are some strong advocates of "Home Industries" in England, notwithstanding the powerful influence of the Cobden Club. We find in Sir Edward Sullivan a stalwart Protectionist. He pointedly views the subject and maintains that it is better for the wage-earning class of the community that it should be employed at home. The object of all government is to assist the people and to enable them to thrive in their own country. Protection means protection to labor, to native industry. Foreign competition means cheap labor, and competition in cheap labor, means competition in flesh and blood, ultimately reduced to slavery. Says Mr. Sullivan: "A short time ago a firm gave an order in Germany for £50,000 worth of labels; the firm saved £10,000, but the working community—the papermakers, typemakers, inkmakers, printers and hundreds of industries connected with them—lost £40,000." Free trade means cheapness to the rich, the idlers, those with fixed incomes, but longer hours, lower wages, harder work to the workers. Owing to the low cost of carriage, the competition of foreign operatives working in their own countries at from twenty to thirty per cent. less wages and from twenty to thirty per cent. longer hours, is just as fatal to home industries as if they were working at our own doors. Free trade places before the workers cheap importations, but put it out of their power to earn money to buy it. Says Mr. Sullivan:

It is an absolute fact that the working classes have only been allowed to see the face of the free trade medal; but there is a reverse even more important than the face. The face of the medal is cheapness; the reverse of it is cheap labor. "You cannot grow your loaf as cheaply as you can buy it," says the Cobden Club. They forget to add "you cannot buy it at all unless you earn something to buy it with."

When our English cousins are beginning to realize the danger of free trade doctrines, there is some hope for advanced ideas.

MORTALITY OF OUR STATESMEN.

Our Candidates for President and Vice-President—When They were Born and When They Died.

George H. Pendleton, late United States Minister to Germany, died at Brussels on the 25th ult. Mr. Pendleton came of a distinguished family, and was himself a man of no insignificant attainments. In 1864 he was nominated for Vice-President on the Democratic ticket, headed by the late General McClellan. The ticket was run in the midst of the civil war, and as against that headed by Mr. Lincoln there was no possibility of success. Both General McClellan and Mr. Pendleton were gentlemen of distinguished abilities, but their candidacy at that particular time had the effect to detract from the consideration their abilities entitled them. The death of Mr. Pendleton reminds us that very many of our public men of the last two decades have passed away. We will go a little further back and instance the candidates for President and Vice-President, who have been nominated since 1856. In that year the Democrats nominated James Buchanan for President and John Cabell Breckinridge for Vice-President; the Republicans John Charles Fremont and William Lewis Dayton; and the American party Millard Fillmore and Andrew Jackson Donelson. Buchanan was born April 22, 1791, and died June 1, 1868. He was the only bachelor President, although Mr. Cleveland was not married until after his inauguration. Breckinridge was born January 21, 1821, and died May 17, 1875. He was the youngest man who filled the office of Vice-President. Fremont was born January 21, 1813, and still lives. Dayton was born February 17, 1807, and died December 1, 1864. Fillmore, who had filled the Presidential office, was born February 7, 1800, and died March 7, 1874. Donelson was a nephew of President Jackson. He was born August 25, 1800, and died June 26, 1871. In 1860, the Republicans nominated Abraham Lincoln and Hannibal Hamlin, the southern Democrats, Breckinridge and Joseph Lane; the northern Democrats, Stephen Arnold Douglas and Herschel Vespasian Johnson, and the Union Constitutional party, John Bell and Edward Everett. Lincoln was born February 12, 1809, and was killed April 15, 1865. Hamlin was born August 27, 1809, and still lives. Lane was born December 14, 1801, and died April 19, 1881. Douglas was born April 23, 1813, and died June 3, 1861. Johnson was born September 18, 1812, and died August 16, 1880. Bell was born February 15, 1797, and died September 10, 1869. Everett was born April 11, 1794, and died January 15, 1865. In 1864, the Republicans nominated Lincoln and Andrew Johnson; and the Democrats, George Brinton McClellan and George Hunt Pendleton. Johnson, who succeeded to the Presidency, on the assassination of Lincoln, was born December 29, 1808, and died July 31, 1875. McClellan was born December 3, 1826, and died October 29, 1885. Pendleton was born July 25, 1825. In 1868, the Republicans nominated Ulysses S. Grant and Schuyler Colfax, and the Democrats, Horatio Seymour and Francis Preston Blair, Jr. Grant was born April 27, 1822, and died July 23, 1885. Colfax was born March 23, 1823, and died January 13, 1885. Seymour was born May 31, 1810, and died February 12, 1886. He was a brother-in-law of the late Roscoe Conkling. Blair was born February 19, 1821, and died July 8, 1875. In 1872, the Republicans nominated Grant and Henry Wilson, the Liberal Republicans, Horace Greeley and Benjamin Gratz Brown, and the Democrats, Charles O'Connor and Charles Francis Adams. Wilson was born February 16, 1812, and died November 22, 1875. Greeley was born February 3, 1811, and died November 29, 1872. Brown was born May 28, 1826, and died December 13, 1885. O'Connor was born January 22, 1804, and died May 12, 1884. Adams, who was a son of John Quincy, and the grandson of John—both Presidents—was born August 18, 1807, and died November 21, 1886. In 1876, the Republicans nominated Rutherford Birchard Hayes and William Almon Wheeler, and the Democrats, Samuel Jones Tilden and Thomas Andrews Hendricks. Hayes was born October 4, 1822, and still lives. Wheeler was born June 30, 1819, and died June 4, 1887. Tilden was born February 9, 1814, and died August 4, 1886. Hendricks was born September 7, 1819, and died November 25, 1885. In 1880, the Republicans nominated James Abram Garfield and Chester Alan Arthur, and the Democrats, Winfield Scott Hancock and William Hayden English. Garfield was born November 19, 1831, and died from the effects of the bullet wound inflicted by the assassin, Guiteau, September 19, 1881. Arthur, who succeeded to the Presidency, was born October 5, 1830, and died November 18, 1886. Hancock was born February 14, 1824, and died February 9, 1886. English was born August 27, 1822, and still lives. In 1884, the Democrats nominated Grover Cleveland and Hendricks, and the Republicans, James Gillespie Blaine and John Alexander Logan. Cleveland was born March 18, 1837, and still lives. Blaine was born January 31, 1830, and is now Secretary of State. Logan was born February 9, 1826, and died December 26, 1886. In 1888, the Republicans nominated Benjamin Harrison and Levi Parsons Morton, and the Democrats, Cleveland and Allen Granberry Thurman. Harrison was born August 20, 1833; Morton, May 16, 1824; and Thurman, November 13, 1813.

The Engineer's Warning.

"I was on the night run," said the engineer, "and my train was about thirty minutes late. I said to my fireman: 'Keep her hot; I mean to go to meeting point on time.' During the next fifteen minutes I was not long in passing the mile posts, for my engine flew along at the rate of fifty miles an hour down a long grade as straight as an arrow. Suddenly something struck me in the face, making a slight wound. I slowed down. 'What's that near the furnace door?' I asked the fireman, pointing to a little bit of white paper lying just to my left. The fireman stooped, picked up the paper and handed it to me. In the dim light of the steam-gauge I read: 'Look out at the river bridge; there's a tie on the track.' Sure enough, just at the entrance to the bridge I found a tie securely fastened across the track. Who put it there? I don't know; but I do know if the author of that message will make himself known to me he may ask me any favor he pleases with the assurance that it will be granted. Where is the piece of paper? My wife, Molly, has it in a gilt frame, hanging over the parlor mantelpiece. Whenever I am out on my run she stands before it and breathes a prayer for my safety. That piece of paper is my mascot, for I've never even been behind time since the night it was thrown into my engine cab."

'TIS SWEET TO LOVE.

'Tis sweet to love, e'en though the fond emotion
Finds no response in those we hold so dear:
E'en though the object of our deep devotion
Repay with scorn the tender, pleading tear,
It matters not how vain the aspiration.
Nor yet how void our passion's dreams may prove;
Betrayed, rejected, doomed to desolation,
The spirit still doth find 'tis sweet to love.
'Tis sweet to love, though every hope has perished
That love engrafted in the feeling soul;
Though all delight and consolation cherished
Hath drooped and withered 'neath its strange control.
The votive heart, its fatal sway divining,
Conceives no power that might the spell remove;
And when at last it breaks, all unrepining,
In quivering accents breathes, "'Tis sweet to love."
—Richard Denny Young.

The Battle of Hastings.

The battle of Hastings, fought on Saturday, the 14th day of October, 1066, was one of those decisive engagements which at various periods have marked the commencement of a new epoch or chapter in the world's history. On Friday, October 13th, the Normans, after finishing their warlike preparations, betook themselves to the offices of devotion, confessed, and received the holy sacrament by thousands at a time. Early the next morning William marched toward the Saxons, who remained firmly intrenched in their position and for many hours repulsed steadily with their batteries the charge of the Norman cavalry, and with their closed shields rendered the clouds of arrows almost inoperative. Up to 3 o'clock in the afternoon the superiority of the conflict remained with the latter. Then, however, William ordered a thousand horsemen to advance and then take to flight as if routed. This stratagem proved fatal to the Saxons, who, leaving their position to pursue the retreating foe, were astounded by the latter suddenly facing about, and, falling into disorder, were struck down on every side. The same maneuver was twice again repeated, with the same calamitous results to the English, and on the last occasion Harold, struck by a random arrow, which entered the left eye and penetrated to the brain, was instantaneously killed. At sunset the combat was terminated, and the Normans remained masters of the field.

A Madonna by Leonardo da Vinci.

A hitherto unknown painting by Leonardo da Vinci has just been placed in the gallery of the Pinakothek in Munich. Considering the small number of Leonardo's paintings, this discovery, if genuine, is of inestimable value. The picture was bought not long ago for twenty-two marks at an auction in a small town in South Germany, and the buyer, who little dreamed that he was the possessor of a Leonardo, sold it at a good profit to the Pinakothek, which has had it well restored by A. Hauser. It represents Mary with the infant Jesus in a room, through the window of which one sees a hilly landscape. The Madonna, somewhat life-size, is visible down to the knees. On one side stands a glass with flowers. The picture is believed to be one of the earliest works of the great master. Mary's head is very like that in a famous drawing in the Palazzo degli Uffizi, which is believed to be a study for Leonardo's smaller picture of the "Annunciation" at the Louvre. The drapery and coloring, and the drawing of the hands and flowers, remind one vividly of the splendid large "Annunciation" in the Palazzo degli Uffizi. Some parts of the picture, especially the admirably drawn child, seem unfinished; while others, notably the landscape, are almost perfect. It may be inferred from this that Leonardo left this picture like most of his paintings, unfinished, and that his fellow-pupil, Lorenzo di Credi, finished it as best he could.

A romantic story comes from Kalocsa, the see of Cardinal L. De Haynald, Primate of Hungary. Some time ago a young student applied for admission as pupil to the priests' seminary, and, being duly provided with examination certificates, was at once received. The new pupil led exactly the same life as the other inmates of the establishment, and showed a marked disposition for study. In a few days Cardinal Haynald visited the seminary and in the garden met the newcomer, who bowed respectfully, but, contrary to custom, did not kiss the Cardinal's hand. His Eminence not only noticed the omission, but it led him to examine the candidate-priest somewhat closer. The effeminate face of the young student turned scarlet under the Cardinal's scrutinizing gaze, whereupon the prelate uttered a few words in a low tone that caused the former to return quickly to the house. Five minutes afterward this mysterious personage had left the premises, and has not since gone back. Rumor says the individual was a lady, who felt an irresistible vocation to become a priest. Some of the Hungarian papers even give her name.

The common theory of the Chinese as to the benefit of pagodas is that they keep down disturbances in the earth. A dragon is embodied in a hill. A certain place is the location of its pulse, and the pagoda is built over that place to keep the pulse from becoming excited.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

Gus Hill and his World of Novelties are on their westward way, with the Pacific coast as their destination.

Myron W. Whitney, the popular Boston basso, is proud of the fact that he was a bricklayer for seven years of his life. It was not his trowel, but his voice, however, that laid the foundation of his fortune.

Mrs. Gilbert, the widow of John Gilbert, the actor, has presented his library of some three hundred volumes relating to the stage to the Players'. Curiously enough, they just fill the space left vacant on the shelves opposite Mr. Barrett's collection.

Milton Nobles, with his combination, will hold the boards of the Metropolitan on Monday and Tuesday evenings next. The attractions will be From Sire to Son and Love and Law, both from the pen of Mr. Nobles. The dramas are said to be superior to any of Mr. Noble's former creations.

Clara Louise Kellogg is the first lady to carry a Tosca cane in New York. This cane is made of light wood, is about five feet long, and has a chased-silver top. A few inches from the top a hole is drilled through the wood, and this is decorated with a light silk cord and tassel. Tosca canes used in the mountains as alpenstocks have an excuse for being, but in the streets of a city they can hardly be considered a necessity.

A pure tenor is like a flawless diamond; there is nothing rarer. Yet within the past week the operatic managers of New York claim to have discovered something even more remarkable. It is nothing less than a feminine tenor, with a double register. The lady is Miss C. E. Nicolai, a native of Baltimore, where she is well known and moves in the highest society. Wealthy, and passionately fond of music, Miss Nicolai has had every opportunity for the cultivation of her voice.

Thirty-seven thousand and nine hundred dollars for opera boxes is, indeed, a pretty good showing for the wild and woolly west. It is the most eloquent answer that could possibly be made to the aspersions cast by Mr. Astor upon Chicago culture. Would it be unkind to remind that gentleman, in connection with this fact, that he is a citizen of a city too niggardly to support a good orchestra? When Astor talks about New York civilization, it makes Theodore Thomas smile and Chicago laugh.

What Lawrence Barrett is to the actors of this country Helen Barry may certainly be said to be to the actresses. He buys every book he can get time to read and she does the same. She has familiarized herself with the essential points in the history of every city of prominence in the country. She can probably tell how many elevators there are in Buffalo, though she cannot tell how much grain is stolen from them or how it is mixed. She is a perfect encyclopedia of American statistics and an ardent admirer of our progress and enterprise. She is not in any sense a Lillie Deveraux Blake or an Elizabeth Cady Stanton, but if she ever settles down to a life off the stage she will be able to show the diplomatic and fascinating characteristics of Madame Adam.

The Duff comic opera company presented two operas in this city this week—Paola and A Trip to Africa. The singing in the latter was exceptionally fine. The company is strong and with a well-drilled chorus. Mark Smith, Digby Bell, the prima donna, with an unpronounceable name, Laura Joyce Bell, and Kate Gilbert, make a good combination. Miss Minnie DeRue looked and acted the character of "Lehil" superbly. We suggest that the interest in the work of the artists would not suffer if some of the vulgar gags should be omitted; this applies more particularly to Digby Bell. Kate Gilbert looked and acted as charmingly as she did a number of years ago as "Nelly Howard," in the Strategist. Belle Thorne will be added to the company on arrival at San Francisco.

The stage has its foibles and its weakness, but on the whole its influence is ennobling. A good actor is always a moral teacher. Booth and Barrett stir not only the intellectual but the moral depths of our nature, and even the lighter plays of Reed and Sol Smith Russell tell the simple story of human life and touch the heart. By the power of a noble actor memory becomes incarnate, art becomes living and poetry takes form. The past on the stage becomes the present, and in its ideal representations we behold what we may become. If it is said that the province of the theater is to please, I agree. But innocent pleasure is moral and happiness is next door to holiness. But it is said, go behind the scenes. Yes, but is the stage the only institution that has its back door as well as front door? There are pulpits and churches which might not look so well if we went through the back door instead of the front.—Rev. Dr. Townsend.

The gaslight flickered and flared in my face,
And the dancers danced with a nimble grace,
But the play was o'er and the curtain fell,
And the thoughts that came to me then—ah! well—I would not give such a dream, I say,
For the whole wide world with its pleasures gay.
I was back again with each throbbing note,
On dreamland wings, to the past afloat.
And oh! How I longed such music to hold,
With the vision it brought to my saddened soul.
'Tis strange how the sweetest and saddest of things,
Such melody back to our mem'ry brings,
For it brought me odor of roses rare,
That nestled and hid in her fragrant hair.
And the snowy lilies that loving rest
On the snowy white of her lily breast;
And the love-light there in her fringed eyes,
That vied with the blue of the autumn skies.
And the primroses made in the twilight gray,
At the close of that calm, September day.
And the faint, sweet smell of the cedared grove,
When I woo'd her, and won her, my own true love.
And the world with its treasures and pleasures so bright,
Seemed, oh! so small in their power that night.
And I rose and followed the crowd with a start,
With the music still throbbing within my heart;
For oh! 'Tis the sweetest and saddest of things,
That melody back to our memory brings.

Good manners are neither more nor less than good behavior, consisting of courtesy and kindness.

Book Chat.

Marion Crawford, the novelist, has been awarded a prize by the French Academy.

Rhoda Broughton has written a novel entitled "Alas." The force of its name the all in its sigh.

Lady Colin Campbell's first literary work was "Topo," a children's story, written when she was sixteen.

Spielhagen, the pessimistic German novelist, has made an American woman the heroine of his latest romance. "A New Pharo."

Mabel Collins, a disciple of Theosophy, claims that she read upon the walls of a temple the revelations contained in "Light on the Path."

Lord Macaulay was the author of a number of short poems that have never been published. For some unknown reason it was his request that they should never be given to the public.

Mirabeau depended very much for oratorical success upon his excessive ugliness. He had the ferocity of a polar bear, and yet, as Mme. de Salliant says, he was but "an empty bugbear."

Captain Andrew Haggard, brother of Rider Haggard, is about to publish his first novel. It is called, "Dodo and I," and is said to contain some vivid descriptions of stirring scenes in the last Abyssinian war.

Emile Zola will republish a book written in his younger days, entitled "Le Vœu d'une Morte." His idea by this act, is to give the literary world a chance to make comparisons between his early production and those of the present.

The modesty of Mrs. Margaret Hungerford, "The Duchess," is proverbial among her friends, and many of her neighbors in the little Irish town where she lives are ignorant of the fact that "Madame Hungerford" is the author of the popular novels by "The Duchess," found on their library tables.

Emile Zola first went to Médan in 1878, to avoid the Paris Exposition of that year. During the last eleven years he has written all his books at Médan. He has composed only about two hundred pages in Paris during that period. He has lived at Médan summer and winter, but will hereafter reside permanently in Paris.

Amélie Rives-Chanler has grown fond of Paris. She writes to a friend: "There is so much going on continuously that life has an ever-changing interest. Each evening finds us amid some new enjoyment; and what with keeping our eyes, ears, hands, and mouths ever busy with all sorts of good things, this is an ideal life we are leading."

For cold-blooded fiendishness and intense malice the American student takes the laurel. So profound was the hatred felt by the sophomores of a Wisconsin college toward analytical geometry, that developer of the human thinker, that they burned their text books on the campus last night. It is this spirit of opposition to all tyranny which maintains the independence of this great and glorious nation.

Librarianship is the new profession, and an attractive one it is in many ways. The life is a sedentary one, as is that of many occupations, but to persons of literary tastes and scholarly ambitions constant contact with a houseful of books opens the way to the highest things. Then, too, there are great questions of sociology, political economy, and education that look to librarians for the wisest solution. These officials have rare opportunities for watching public tendencies, and by their counsel the literary taste of the nation may be, to a degree, shaped. From this springs the corollary that by stimulating reading of the best books by the public the morals and the aspirations of the people may be affected. The profession is certainly capable of great development, and young people who find everything else crowded may wisely consider the wisdom of fitting themselves to be librarians.

A German paper some time ago invited all masculine readers over forty who had remained single to make a public statement of their reasons for not entering into the matrimonial alliance. The best and wittiest piece was to receive a prize of twenty marks. The jury appointed to decide upon the merits of the statements consisted of three persons—a young girl, a young married lady and a mother-in-law. In response to the invitation one hundred and forty-seven answers were received at the office of the paper. After long discussion and deliberation the jury awarded the prize to the author of the following declaration: "From my earliest youth I was hot-tempered and vain, and never was satisfied with the good things which I enjoyed, but always wished and strived for better things; therefore, I was guided by the words of the Holy Gospel, which says that he does well who gets a wife unto him, but that he who does not do so acts still better. As an idealist I could be perfectly sure that the poet's words in reference to 'two hearts that beat as one' would never be justified in matrimony. As a realist I could understand that marriage was a lottery, and that, in view of the small chances for success, it was not worth while to take any risks. As an egotist I can say that 'I entirely gratify my own self, and why should I make any sacrifice?' for marriage is nothing but a sacrifice of the ego. As a crank I add that a girl without a dowry I do not wish to marry, and a girl with a dowry I cannot get."

A group of English sat at a table in a hostelry much patronized by actor-folk. They were discussing Miss Eastlake. One of the ladies remarked, in the gamiest cockney: "To my mind, don't you know, she's a cross between a wax doll, Rose Eytinge, and an angel." And then they switched off into a vigorous denunciation of "vile American pronunciation." They were a happy family, all engaged in reviling a country in which they were gaining a better living than they had ever known before. Well fed, well clothed, well housed, it is strange that so many English professionals are never so happy as when "damning" and "blasting" everything American.—N. Y. Dramatic News.

No woman is happy nowadays unless she can say her prayers on a real bona-fide prayer rug—one that has been used for centuries by some heathen Turk who was doubtless kneeling on it when Peter the Hermit breathed anathemas against them, and Richard the Lion-Hearted clove them with his good sword. The incongruity of the thing does not seem to strike these pretty nineteenth century Christians. One of them—a very rich one it goes without saying—has a rug which she prizes very highly because of the mystic design of four horses' heads worked in it. These are symbolic of the four horses that carried Mahomet through the air on his famous journey to Mecca.

Professional Chat.

A well-known business man recently discovered a rug-worm growing on his neck, and to have it treated by a physician, had his heavy beard shaved off. The learned M. D., after making a careful survey of the spot affected, gave it as his opinion that it was caused by shaving and must be barber's itch. It was something of a surprise to the doctor when he learned that the man had not shaved for many years.

The Hon. Scott Wike, of the Twelfth Illinois District, has moved on Washington. He packed his valise, taking care not to omit the night shirt, the absence of which once brought him into confusion. Before leaving Pittsfield he was asked by Emery Bush if he intended to patronize the Vice-President's bar. "Look here, Emery," said he, "don't you know that it would kill any Democrat in this District to do that? In the first place, Morton is a Republican, and in the next place, the gallant Democracy of the Twelfth District have no use for a nabob who drinks 20-cent whisky. Ten cents is my limit, both in whisky and poker."

Judge William Blackburn was Alcalde of Santa Cruz, under the military regime of Governor (Colonel) R. B. Mason. He was prominent among the early pioneers, having served in the War of the Conquest, but was astonished when commissioned Alcalde by Mason, for he knew no more of jurisprudence than the next farmer. He accepted the position, however, for the same reason that it was given to him, to wit: he was the leading American in his neighborhood. His decisions were not only remarkable for impartiality, but their originality surpassed that of the decisions of Sancho Panza when Governor of the Island. His library consisted of the "swearing book," and one volume bound in calf—supposed to be a law book—which he made a pretense of consulting on all occasions, prior to rendering judgment, but he invariably announced that he found "no law exactly applicable to this case," etc. One peculiar case came before him for the solution of a judicial problem. It seems that even in those wild times the God of Love held his court also in Santa Cruz. Among the members of an old Spanish family was a beautiful girl, who had hosts of admirers. Of the number there were two fine-looking young men who stood with favor in her eyes. One was a dashing fellow with a well stocked rancho, who also possessed a magnificent horse with splendid flowing tail. When astride this beautiful charger, elegantly caparisoned with silver-mounted saddle and bridle, the owner was a veritable model of that form and mold which women do most prize. The other was also a handsome and accomplished fellow, who sang and played the guitar exquisitely, but who was not blessed with an over abundance of wealth, still he found great favor with the dark-eyed beauty when the other dear charmer was absent. On one occasion the two rivals met at the home of the adored one, and it fared badly with the gay troubadour, as the rival was taken into particular favor and the other left out in the cold. Revenge is one of the traits of Spanish existence, and the troubadour knowing that the beauty of the horse was the cause of his rival's favor, resolved upon a dire vengeance. While the lovers were revelling in their happiness, he approached the horse and in a moment's time shaved off the beautiful flowing tail of the noble animal, leaving him a most comical and unsightly object. The discovery of this vandalism prompted an immediate arrest of the culprit, and he was brought before Judge Blackburn, who found him guilty, but could not devise the nature of the crime nor its penalty. After his accustomed habit he turned the leaves of the calf-bound volume for a few moments, and then said: "I find no law applicable in this case, and will therefore fall back upon the old Mosaic law of 'an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth.' Take the rascal out and shave his head." The judgment was promptly executed amid the shouts and jeers of the assembled crowd.

On another occasion, a native Californian, in a fit of jealousy, had murdered his wife in a most brutal manner by tying her to a bedstead, plunging a knife in various parts of her body thirty or forty times, almost cutting her to pieces. The feud was caught while the body of his wife was still warm, and was about to be summarily hanged by the people—every man in the place, except the Judge, ready to assist—when the Judge interfered after this wise: "Boys, you must not do it that way. The man must die, but I won't have you disgrace Santa Cruz and yourselves by hanging a man without a trial. Bring him to the court-room. I'll impanel a jury and try him in the regular way, and if the jury finds him guilty, justice shall be done, without violence to the majesty of the law." The mob obeyed, was resolved into a posse comitatus, according to the notion of those who composed it, and the prisoner was arraigned before the Court. A jury was selected, but no counsel was appointed, for there was no lawyer in the place. The Judge conducted the proceedings, and when the evidence was closed the case was presented to the jury, who rendered a verdict of guilty in the first degree. The Judge, after examining the volume in calf, announced: "I find no law exactly applicable to the case, but my judgment is that the prisoner, having been found guilty of murder in the first degree, shall have one hour to prepare himself, and then he shall be shot." No persons were appointed to do the shooting. After the expiration of an hour the condemned was tied to a tree, the crowd retired a convenient distance, the word was given, every man who felt inclined "blazed away," and there were more bullet holes in his body than knife wounds in the body of his murdered victim. Thus was Santa Cruz saved from the disgrace of a man being hanged by a mob. The Judge, having witnessed the execution, immediately wrote an account of the proceedings and dispatched it by a courier to Governor Mason. When the courier returned he brought with him a letter from the Governor to Blackburn, severely reprimanding him for having transgressed the law so outrageously, and warning him against the repetition of a similar offense. A second courier was dispatched with another letter to the Governor, informing him that if he supposed the writer (Blackburn) had been serving as Alcalde for the honor or profit of the office, he was much mistaken; that he (Blackburn) had accepted the place to preserve good order and to administer justice in his neighborhood, and if the Governor did not like his way of doing it, he might take the commission and go to the devil with it.

A man in Kansas has what can be justly termed an educated bullfrog. It has a great fondness for music, and during family worship, when the head of the family is praying, the frog will keep his eyes closed until the amen is sounded.

The highest mountain in North America is said to be Mt. Wrangle, in the Coast Range, Alaska, 20,400 feet; in California, Mt. Whitney, Sierra Nevada, 14,887 feet.

NOTES.

Scientists, of the Johns-Hopkins University, are investigating the alleged peculiar powers of a Baltimore boy who has magnetic fingers, and to which polished substances adhere like a magnet. There is nothing astonishing in this. There are plenty of people whose fingers cling to almost anything with which they come in contact, particularly money and articles of value. In fact, there is a perfect itching to get hold of such smooth articles as coin and other valuables—they don't let go either very readily. Neither is this power called magnetism.

That Buffalo doctor, Lewis Musburger, who died a couple of days ago, and ordered his body incinerated, was a model. There was no nonsense about him, no matter what may be said about his peculiarities. His motto evidently was "eat, drink and be merry for to-morrow ye die." But he provided a little further, that after his death his friends should spend $500 of his money in eating oysters and drinking champagne amid free music, instead of that barbarous custom of a modern funeral. We think the innovation is to be commended.

In our childhood days the little girl who had red hair was an object of fun and merriment to all her playmates. We used to designate our fiery-headed playfellows as "brick-top," "fire-head." Indeed, fire-head was in most cases extremely appropriate, without regard to the color of the hair. The poor victims of this so-called off-colored hair were keenly alive to the misfortune of having red hair. At the present day we find that red hair is an ambition of the modern girl. When nature has failed to provide the fiery locks, art has been employed to change nature and supply a luxuriant crop of "auburn" hair. The red-haired girl is no longer an object of merriment.

We have heard of a new means of sobering up an inebriated friend. We all know that sometimes our friend gets on a booze, and the more he drinks the more obstinate he becomes, and refuses to go home, or do anything rational or reasonable. Well, the remedy for such a case is: Get that friend to go into the nearest restaurant; order a cup of strong coffee, pour about a gill of sweet oil in the cup of coffee, make him drink it, and the effect will be astonishing. The result of such an application is magical, and the medicine acts quickly. This patient will, in an incredibly short space of time, sober up and go home. There is nothing that will straighten up a drunken man so quick.

Apropos to the idea of the ancients, that the first principles of the healing art were taught by a centaur, we read of the great curative powers of a brass mule in one of the temples of China. From the description, there is a superstitious belief that any one afflicted with any of the ailments that flesh is heir to, can secure immediate relief and positive cure by visiting this brass mule, and rubbing the part of the mule corresponding with the part of the body affected. That is, if you have rheumatism in the leg, why rub the mule's leg; if in the eye, rub the mule's eye, and so on throughout the whole anatomy of the body. So great has been the run on this brass mule that he has been patched up with chunks of brass where the faithful patients have rubbed. From this historical proof, our medical friends cannot now dispute the fact that there are long-eared healers.

During Cromwell's time there was a strict enforcement of the law against swearing. The usual penalty was 6s 8d. Almost anything that had the appearance of an oath was made subject to prosecution and conviction. One man was adjudged guilty who said, "Upon my life," that being deemed an oath. Another was fined for using the words, "On my troth." The use of the expression, "God is my witness," was an infraction of the law. If such was the interpretation of the law in those days, what a round sum would have been exacted had they heard some of the well-rounded, bouncing, and explosive oaths of to-day. Such as, "By the jumping Jehosophat," "By the great hornspoon," "Damn the world by quarter sections," and some of the good big explosives that a fellow uses when he bangs his nose against the door in the dark, or when he steps on a tack with his bare foot, or when he gets three aces beaten in a jack-pot.

For wise sayings, as well as unlooked for responses, the Young American will always have the call. A friend of ours has a little four-year old tot, whom his mother has been teaching the principal features of great historical events as a means of strengthening his memory as well as to afford amusement and surprise to visitors. Among other events she has taught the precocious youngster to make answer to the question, "Who discovered America?" The little tot had become an adept in his answer that Columbus was the discoverer of this great and glorious country, and would promptly answer "Christopher Columbus." Several months elapsed before the little household angel had been put through his historical examination, and during which time the Iibernian servant girl, who was a very ardent disciple at the shrine of the great slogger, John L. Sullivan, had so often mentioned that name in the hearing of the child that it had made an impression on his mind. A few evenings since the father and mother desired to "show off" their precious darling to some visitors, and for the purpose called the youngster up and propounded the usual question, "Well, my boy, can you tell us who discovered America?" The little one answered, "Yes, sir." "Well, who was it?" There was a general consternation, when the young hopeful answered, "John L. Sullivan."

We have heretofore called attention to the increase in the rate of State taxation this year, consequent on the excessively unnecessary appropriations made by the last Legislature. We quote from the Sutter County Farmer the rate of State and county taxes in some of the counties. Of it the Farmer says: "It will be seen that the rate levied for Sutter county is the lowest of all the counties except Sacramento, outside of the city. Since the city of Sacramento is a very large proportion of the county, her lower rate is more apparent than real, because her city rate included in the county levy puts her figures far beyond those of Sutter. As it is, her county rate is $1.25 on the $100, while Sutter's is only $1.33." From the showing of the Farmer, the tax rates in the counties range from $3 on the $100 to $1.25. In San Joaquin the rate is $1.40, in Santa Clara $1.45, in Yuba $2, in Los Angeles $1.80, in Alameda $1.45, in Napa $1.70, and in San Diego $2.15. In each of the counties we have enumerated cities of considerable size exist, and while Sutter is justly entitled to credit, in view of the rates in other counties similarly situated with Sacramento in the relation of proportionate population in city and county, we must claim some credit for our local governmental administration. In the estimates for the support of the government of this county provision was made for very important and permanent improvements, which of necessity called for large expenditures. It is a matter of gratification that we can predict that, so far as local governmental expense is concerned here, there will be a reduction in the next and succeeding years, and if the people of the other counties—particularly San Francisco—will exercise the care we do in the selection of representatives in the Legislature, the State rate will also be reduced.

A Characteristic Letter.

It occurring to a gentleman connected with THEMIS that a friend, whose facile pen had been laid aside for years, might consent to "come out of his shell," he wrote him, with the view of securing him as a contributor to this journal. Following is a portion of his reply, which is characteristic, and our readers may judge what they have lost by his declination:

My Dear Sir: Whatever have I done to you? Write a "breezy" letter to the left-handed spouse of Zeus, whose photo tops your title-page? Couldn't do it with less than three cocktails and one headache, and there would be a tornado. Never could raise the wind by epistolary efforts, and my pen is so afflicted with "erraticallness" that Stanley might explore the wilderness of words it has traced, and find him himself lost, to the damage of his reputation and the further bleaching of his hair. The fact of the matter is, literary ambition was squelched in me in the year of grace 1857. At that time, Jim Ayers (probably you have heard of him) was editor of the Call, and in an editorial had mixed up some of Bulwer's characters. With the temerity begotten of superior knowledge or a better reading of the Englishman, I dared to drop him a line, calling attention to the errors. I was unknown to him at the time (and am not sure that I do not enjoy the same happiness now), but he favored my communication by a notice—thus: "It will afford us pleasure to publish the letter on Bulwer if the author of it will call at this office and explain his unintelligible rhodomontade." After being sworn at in this horrid way, my literary soul shrunk within itself, finally going out in darkness, and it is safe to say that the world will never know what it has lost. I have been panting for revenge for thirty-two long, weary years, and have registered a vow never, never to cease pursuit of him.

Writing for publication with me is a clear case of parturient montes, and the wretched little rodent which is brought forth is about as "breezy" as a barnacle after a Thanksgiving dinner of Germicide Paint (large P, if you please—it's a good article and worth double the money). If I happen to possess any ability, it does not lie in original composition, but is mainly useful in slashing contributors' MSS. and growing at editors. I own up, too, that on occasions I have caused intelligent compositors some discomfort, for which, however, I forgive them—but editors, never! Therefore and consequently, thoroughly appalled by that first page of yours, and with a full sense of my inability to write such a letter as would be acceptable to THEMIS (ye gods—or, anyhow, the rest of them—what a name in this progressive age!), or one which would at all satisfy my own criticism; yet with the idea darting around in the corners of my consciousness that I am about as smart as they make 'em, I shall be obliged to decline your flattering invitation, though it breaks my heart to know that the "compensation" will be withheld. * * *

What is the Use of Lawyers?

One of the most amusing cases ever tried in the higher courts of this county transpired this week. A German, named Nahl, had been induced to come to California by the flattering reports he had received in the old country of the possibilities for advancement here, and, determining to make his fortune at farming, he rented twelve acres of land on Sutter island from Mr. Peck. Disagreements arose between landlord and tenant, and litigation ensued. Nahl had rented the land by a verbal lease for two years, with the understanding that for the first year's rental he was to grub a strip along the bank of the river, to prepare it for the construction of a levee, and that he should dig a drainage ditch. For the second year he was to pay a cash rent. Nahl claimed he could do the work any time within the two years, while Peck maintained it should be performed the first year. Peck sued Nahl in the Justice's Court for forcible entry and unlawful detainer, and judgment was obtained by default. An execution was issued, and Nahl and family, and personal property, removed from the land, across the slough, into another county. Nahl then commenced suit in the Superior Court against Peck in ejectment, and the case was tried in Department One. Peck contended, in defense, that the lease, being verbal, could not extend beyond one year, and that, therefore, the work would have to be performed during that year, and that period had elapsed. Upon that ground the lease was declared void, and judgment went for Peck. Nahl appealed the original case to the Superior Court, and Peck then claimed that the lease was valid for one year and that that had been their agreement, but the Court found that there had never been an agreement between the parties as to the terms of the lease, and gave judgment for Nahl. In the last case tried, Nahl employed counsel, but when the case was called for trial, it appeared that one of his lawyers was sick and the others had been discharged. When the case was called in Court, Nahl announced, in very broken English, his determination to proceed alone, and he started in. He said: "I will get the facts before the Court; I don't know anything about law, but will trust the Judge to decide." As we have intimated, the trial was most amusing. He cross-examined the witnesses closely, and when the time came for him to present his defense, he stated that the only other witness besides himself had met with a friendly bar-keeper since his arrival in the city, and was not in a condition to appear; "but," he remarked, "I will not expose dot de udder side makes him full."

Judge Armstrong said: "Well, Mr. Nahl, go ahead and call your witnesses." Nahl said, "Vell, ve vill call Mistor Nahl. Mistor Nahl, take de sthandt." The Judge said, "Very well, Mr. Nahl, come forward and be sworn." When the witness took the stand he unrolled an elaborate manuscript, which developed to contain the questions to be asked of the witness on direct examination. These questions he read and verbally gave the answers. The examination started in as follows, as we extract it from the notes of the Official Reporter:

Question. Mistor Nahl, vat ish your name? Answer. My name vas J. Nahl.
Q. Vat vas your beezness, Mr. Nahl?
A. Vell, I vas in the farming beezness.
Q. How long vas you midt the farming beezness?
A. Well, since the 19th of March, 1887.
Q. Vat vas the reason you go farming?
A. Vonce in a vile, in Sherman, midt mine family, I read always in the nuschabers, and I find outt that vone who vas villing to vork and be a good citizen could easy find in dish coundry a good baying shob ven he comes and starts in farming, and I makes myself a broducing member midt society.

At the conclusion of the case, when judgment was awarded him, some of the court officers, to help him out, suggested he must prepare his cost bill and serve it within five days. "Oh," he said, with a shrug of his shoulders, "I guess I vill go mit my lawyers aw now. I have won the case. I vill let dem attend mid der little details."

The matter was appreciated by all counsel concerned in good humor, and the tact he displayed in defending himself was generally appreciated. Possibly no prouder man than Nahl ever walked out of our court-house.

A. L. HART,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J. west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & MECHANICAL & DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

FRIEND & TERRY
LUMBER CO.

Wholesale and Retail Lumber Dealers, Also Shakes, Bolts, Ties, Doors, Windows, Blinds and Screens. Main Yard and Office, No. 1310 Second Street. Branch Yard, corner Twelfth and J Sts. P. O. Box 233. E. J. Holt, Manager. Sacramento

Fine Table
Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Producers of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

CHAMPAGNE

PERRIER-JOUËT

W. B. CHAPMAN,
123 California St. San Francisco.

SOLE AGENT FOR THE PACIFIC COAST

For sale by all first-class Wine Merchants and Grocers.

R. W. PARKER,

Dealer in Choice Family

GROCERIES and PROVISIONS

Sold at the Lowest Cash Price.

Give him a call and be convinced.

Corner of Seventeenth and N Streets.

Also, Office of the Superintendent of the City Cemetery.

A. AITKEN,

PREMIUM PIONEER MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS

423 J Street, bet. 4th and 5th, Sacramento.

Costic Tile, etc. Cemetery lots enclosed with Granite. All kinds of work done in Italian and Vermont Marble. Direct importer of Scotch and Eastern Granite Monuments. Also, Marble, Slate, Wooden and Iron Mantels, direct from manufacturers, at Reduced Prices. Call and examine.

FLASHES.

Man always liked spare ribs—Adam set the example.

Departure and arrival—Autumn leaves—winter comes.

Money makes the man—the man has to make the money first.

The most unprofitable fishing—Fishing for compliments. Suckers only bite.

It is easy enough to look wise, and if you only keep your mouth shut, in most cases it will serve you as well as wisdom.

When women are eligible to public office, and become members of the Legislature, each one will want to be the "Speaker."

Alone she trod life's dreary stage,

How long? you ask—ah, well—

Why should the fair one tell her age,

When age itself will tell?

The healthful condition of a community is often due to the physicians' skill. The undue mortality can also often be attributed to the physician's kill.

There are two classes we can "put up" with—hotel-keepers and pawnbrokers. It is said, however, that certain classes have to "put up" with policemen.

Real estate rates: The real estate agents charge from $50 to $500 per acre. The dentist $1 for an acher. The poundman will give you a cur for $2.50.

The worst citizens we have are those who became rich on the rise in real estate, and from rents collected off the poor, who now refuse to aid any public enterprise because they do not see ready cash for themselves.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

W. E. Ashley, Mayor of Cool, El Dorado county, spent Tuesday in Sacramento.

To-night there will be an election of officers of Sunset Parlor No. 26, N. S. G. W., for the ensuing term.

The highest and lowest temperature during the past week was 56° and 48°, while for the same time last year it was 52° and 38°. The rainfall for the season to date is 11.20 inches, as against 4.97 inches to a corresponding date last year.

Will Preserve the Old Fort.

At a meeting of the committee heretofore appointed by the Grand Parlor of Native Sons, which committee consisted of Frank D. Ryan, Eugene J. Gregory and C. E. Grunsky, a permanent organization was effected, with Frank D. Ryan, Chairman, C. E. Grunsky, Secretary, and Eugene J. Gregory, Treasurer. The object was to devise ways and means to purchase the site of "Sutter's Fort." Committees were appointed as follows to solicit funds for the purchase of the property and its improvement:

Citizens' Committee for J street—L. L. Lewis, Frank Miller, J. O. Funston, F. R. Dray, P. E. Platt, Thos. Fox, L. Elkus, J. O. Coleman, V. S. McClatchy, W. A. Anderson.

Citizens' Committee for K street—R. D. Stephens, G. L. Simmons, Col. J. McNasser, Jas. McGuire, A. Abbott, E. B. Willis, E. W. Hale, Win. J. Davis, H. Weinstock, B. Leonard.

Committee to secure subscriptions from Pioneers and Pioneer Association—P. S. Lawson, Jas. McGuire, W. H. Luther, J. S. Miller, W. W. Light.

Committee to secure subscriptions from the Native Daughters of the Golden West—Mrs. W. W. Greer, Mrs. C. E. Grunsky, Mrs. Eugene Gregory, Mrs. F. D. Ryan, Mrs. Henry Breckenfeld, Mrs. W. S. Leake, Miss Mollie Johnson, Miss May Talbot, Mrs. F. W. Williams, Mrs. Al. Folger.

Committee-at-large—General J. G. Martine.

An address has been prepared by the committee to be sent to all Native Sons, requesting that contributions to the purchase fund be forwarded to the Treasurer, Mayor E. J. Gregory, of this city.

The purchase price of the site is $18,000. There should be little trouble in securing contributions to this amount.

Moving Exhibit.

Our California exhibition is now in motion, and will be in this city on Monday, at which time our citizens will have an opportunity to see the choice products of California on wheels. From here the traveling show will proceed eastward by the southern route. There are three cars in the train, but the exhibition is contained in two cars, arranged in such a manner as to make a fine exhibition of the various fruits and products in all sorts of forms, in cans, jars, boxes—preserved, dried and fresh. Our wine interest is a feature of the show, there being wines of all kinds put up in the most tempting manner. The grain products are represented in a tasteful manner. The mineral resources are fully represented by the choicest specimens. The big vegetables are there to astonish our eastern brethren. This splendid exhibit will certainly create a boom for California. Nothing has ever before been heard of to compare in nature with our "California on Wheels."

Antiope.

We tried to discover what the classic name of Antiope had to do with the play last night. While the author has taken the name Antiope, which is accorded to the Greek legend and who was described as the daughter of the great Theban ruler, Lycurgus, and whose beauty tempted Jove to abduct her, he has not adopted any romance or plot. Around such a character there should have been a grand plot to aid the spectacle. But in the Antiope on the stage last night, there was not even the semblance of romance, or wit. It was simply a bald spectacle of suggestive nudity. It was the

Muse of many twinkling feet, whose charms
Are now extended up from legs to arms.

As a spectacular and variety show, it might pass muster, and give enjoyment to the bald heads in the front row. But there is no possible excuse for a lack of plot, and the absence of art and romance. The legendary Antiope furnishes material for one of the most finished plays, and at the same time can be made a gorgeous fairy spectacle. Even the Amazonian Antiope of Theseus forms the basis of a great play. Why the author of this apology for a play did not avail himself of the splendid material that history and romance give to Antiope is past understanding. There was a great temptation for the "gallery gods" last night. Shortly before the curtain rose, three sporting-looking gentlemen marched into the right stage box, each loaded down with bouquets. Their marked appearance brought forth a wild yell from the "gods." There was a pent up quietness until one of the footlight favorites received the due homage of a bouquet, when the "gods" let an unearthly yell. When a premier danseuse came forth and there was no recognition from the box, the gallery was wild, and while calling out the dancer, called upon the "box" to respond with flowers. Our young gentlemen, in disclosing their preferences, displayed very bad taste in their manner of so doing. In Kiralfy's company there are some artists, a few pretty faces and shapely limbs, and with this show of nudity we can only say,

Hail moving Muse! to whom the fair one's breast
Gives all it can, and bids us take the rest

Antiope matinee this afternoon. Antiope this evening when the baldheads will have a last chance.

The Result of Well Directed Energy.

Yesterday, as we were passing up J street, our attention was directed to the great improvement made in the old store of Ben Cohen, and upon investigating the matter, found the wide-awake firm of Scott & Gilbert had removed their manufacturing establishment from their old stand, No. 323 J street, to the present and more commodious apartments. The floor room of the present store is 40x160 feet, with basement equally as large, giving them 12,800 square feet of room; and they find that it is not any too large for their immense stock of goods, now on hand and being constantly manufactured by them. The firm has only been in business in this city for the last two years, and their success augurs well for the future of our fair city as a manufacturing center. All we want is a few more business men with the push of Scott & Gilbert, and the city will be on a fair way to prosperity. This firm now keeps constantly employed fifteen hands in the store and laboratory, also, three traveling salesmen constantly on the road, and their trade reaches from Washington on the north to Mexico on the south. But with all of this, the firm is noted for its fair dealings, and any goods having their brand on them are sure to give good satisfaction to the persons using them, for they do not allow anything to leave their store that is not as it is represented, as by that means a customer once made is sure to remain with them, and this is one of the secrets of their success. Scott & Gilbert are the owners of the trade mark "Top Notch," and most of their goods are labeled with this brand. Their extracts, baking powder, and other articles bear this brand. They carry also Gill's Botanic Cough Syrup, Stockman's Condition Powder and Lintiment, Egyptian Corn Remover, Top Notch Tonic for malaria, and, in fact, everything in the drug line except patent medicine. We bespeak for this firm a trial, and are satisfied that one order will be followed by others. Their present address is 419 and 421 J street, Sacramento.

An Amusing Announcement.

The custom has prevailed with a certain Episcopal Church in a California diocese of presenting each scholar of the Sabbath-school with an egg during the exercises at the celebration of Easter. On an occasion of the kind, when that point in the service was reached which had been set apart for this interesting ceremony, the assistant clergyman arose and made this announcement: "Hymn 419, 'Begin, my soul, the exalted lay,' after which the eggs will be distributed."

California onyx is a substance which this season is being extensively used for parlor clocks. The stone, which has a reddish-brown, mottled appearance, is exported to Europe in a crude state and returned in the shape of various household ornaments.

Health Report.

From the Occidental Medical Times for December we obtain the following mortality report: The deaths registered in 102 town districts of the State during the past month, in a population of 845,400, correspond to an annual rate of 14.34 a thousand, the total mortality having been 1,009; 142 deaths were due to zymotic diseases, giving an annual rate of 2.004 a thousand. Of these, 48 were due to typhoid fever, 33 to cholera infantum, 25 to diphtheria, 21 to diarrhea and dysentery, 7 to cerebro-spinal fever, 4 to whooping cough, and 4 to scarlet fever. 232 deaths resulted from diseases of the respiratory organs, giving an annual rate of 3.29. Of these, 149 were due to consumption, 54 to pneumonia, 19 to bronchitis, and 9 to pulmonary congestion; the rate being 1.83 and .780 for consumption and pneumonia respectively. 70 deaths resulted from diseases of the heart. The average annual death rate from all causes occurring in the ten largest cities and towns in the State, and representing a population of 613,000, was 14.71. The highest rate for the month, occurring in cities having a population of 10,000 or more inhabitants, was reported from San Francisco, the lowest from San Diego.

It was Only a Shepherd Dog.

County Clerk Billy Hamilton and Court Reporter Davis were called to San Francisco Friday as witnesses before the Supreme Court, and this incident happened, which is too good to keep:

Passing up Market street they happened by the store of a German taxidermist, and Billy could not resist the temptation to enter it. There were in it all manners of animals, fish and birds, stuffed, and the dressed pelts of various wild beasts. Of course, Davis did not know anything about them, and Billy kindly informed him of the characteristics in life of the several animals. Among other things, he stroked one of the hides, and said: "Now this is the skin of a wolverine, a fierce animal. I have plugged many of them. When I was up north we got into a country that was just thick with them, and they made no bones of eating up a man." Addressing the store man he inquired the price of the skin, and the German came up and said: "Vell, dot ish not very okspensive; dot vas der skin off a shepherd dog." Billy coughed and suggested a stroll up the street.

A Siberian Snow-Flower.

Accounts have been received of a so-called snow-flower said to have been discovered by Count Anthoskoff in the most northern portion of Siberia, where the ground is continually covered with frost. The wonderful object shoots forth from the frozen soil only on the first day of each succeeding year. It lives for but a single day, then resolves to its original elements. The leaves are three in number, and each about three inches in diameter. They are developed only on that side of the stem towards the north, and each seems to be covered with microscopic crystals of snow.—New York Sun.

"THE PLAY,"

Adjoining Entrance to Metropolitan Theater,
K STREET, FOURTH AND FIFTH.

Best of Wines and Liquors.

FAWCETT & KELLY, Proprietors.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured

HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.

STABLE TO LET

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

ROLLER SKATING RINK.

OLD PAVILION,

Corner Sixth and M Streets, - Sacramento,

CLARK & HOLDEN, Proprietors.

OPEN MORNINGS FROM 10 TO 12 O'CLOCK, for ladies exclusively.

Open Afternoons from 2 till 4 o'clock.

Open Evenings from 7 to 10 o'clock.

Music Wednesdays and Saturdays,

Ladies' admission, free, except on music nights, ladies admission on music nights, 10 cents.

GENTLEMEN'S ADMISSION, 25 CENTS.

Commutation Tickets for sale.

GEO. H. CLARK.
FRED. A. HOLDEN, MANAGER.

BOOTS AND SHOES
made to order. Boots,
$6 to $11. Shoes, $4 to $9. Ladies' Shoes, best quality French Kid, $5 to $7.

REPAIRING DONE
at lowest prices.

NONE BUT BEST mechanics employed.

WE GUARANTEE to make perfect fitting to the worst of crooked and crippled feet.

COMPETE WITH any shoes on the market.

216 J Street

—AND—

208 K Street,

SACRAMENTO.

A. CASELLI

& COMPANY.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,
PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.

L. RADLOFF,

LADIES' TAILOR,

218 POST STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors
and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN,
Formerly of Agricultural Park.

The Unfillable Grave.

Fill up the grave
With the heaped mold—enough there is and more
To level higher than it was before
Its hollow cave.
But that grave new
Scooped in the tend'rest tissues of the heart,
That dread dark void—hid as a thing apart
From human view—
The yawning cleft
Sunk deep in the sweet fulness of our life,
Hunger creating where once food was rife—
Of all bereft.
Ah, who may fill
That spirit-chasin, dark, and broad and deep!
What Lethean spell can hush to lasting sleep
Its craving chill?
We take new ties,
New interests, hopes—plan out life's work anew,
And these we use like mould to fill from view
Of tear-filled eyes.
The yawning void.
Alas, our sextoning efforts are in vain
To fill deep spirit graves! We might remain
All unemployed.
We might as well
Pour water into an unbottomed cup
Hoping we may, when we have brimmed it up,
Its measure tell.
Rather we seem,
By filling essays, further to expand
Its gaping sides and depths on every hand
To bounds extreme.
Alas, no skill
We on that spirit-gulf can ever spend
Will level it! We cannot till life's end
Its dark depths fill —John Owen.

Saved from Himself.

The predominating characteristic of the great Napoleon Bonaparte was his intolerance of restraint. As a boy, he was a leader among his comrades, and as a man he ruled men.
To thwart the wishes or disobey the commands of such a man was a very serious matter, and it was a brave man, indeed, who attempted it. But there are brave men in every age who do what they think is right, regardless of consequences.
In the year 1813 Napoleon was very much worried over the frequent visits of the ambassador of Austria to Marie Louise (Napoleon's second wife), the hostile inspiration of which he suspected. One day, in a rage, he wrote a violent article against the Emperor of Austria, his father-in-law, and sent it by an aide-de-camp to M. Etienne, the editor of the Journal de l'Empire, with an order to publish it the next day as a "leader"—that is, the leading and therefore most prominent article on the editorial page.
The next day Napoleon opened the paper eagerly, and to his great rage saw that his article had been omitted. White with anger, he called an orderly and shouted, in a voice of thunder:
"Go and say to M. Etienne that if the article does not appear to-morrow morning I will have him sabred."
Then he waited with impatience the twenty-four hours' grace.
The next, like the day before, no article appeared. Napoleon could contain himself no longer, and his anger burst forth in formidable accents.
"Bring Etienne here, dead or alive!" he shouted to his officers.
With flashing eyes the Emperor paced up and down the room until Etienne arrived, with a pale face, and stood erect in silence.
As if he had not seen him, Napoleon continued to pace up and down, while the spectators of the scene wondered in terror what was going to happen.
Suddenly the Emperor darted straight over to the man like a bullet, seized him by the arm, and shook him with force.
"I thank you, sir," said he hoarsely, and quitted the apartment, leaving Etienne stupefied.
Napoleon understood that such resistance to his autocratic power could only come from sheer madness or from the absolute certainty of saving him from a great blunder, and in either case was not deserving of punishment.
Here is a new way for a girl to get rid of a late bean who is impervious to all hints. She gives him a paper and pencil, with one of her sweetest smiles, and says, "Now make a row of eleven ciphers, and make a perpendicular mark down on the right of the first cipher, upward on the right of the fourth, downward on the right of the fifth, upward on the right of the seventh and eighth, downward on the tenth. The marks should be half an inch in length." Ask him what he has written. The effect is electrical.
A minister closed his sermon the other day with these words: "We would be pleased, moreover, to have the young man who is now standing outside the door to come in and make certain whether she is here or not. That would be a great deal better than opening the door half an inch and exposing the people in the last row of seats to a draught."

Funny Misprints.

A Chicago writer described an exquisite as one "whose manners would adorn a drawing room," but the unthinking compositor made it read, "whose manners would alarm a drowning man."
The Cincinnati Enquirer once created a genuine sensation by stating, in display type, that a gang of American counterfeitters had been "shaving the queen," when "shoving the queer" was evidently what was intended.
One of the worst instances of misprints caused by bad chirography was where the heading "A Honeymoon Cut Short," was printed in full-face type as "A Hungarian Cut Throat."
Perhaps no newspaper writer was ever more disturbed by a trifle than was the society reporter who, in describing the belle of a recent fashionable party, intended to say "she looked au fait," but found that an unfeeling blacksmith had made it, "she looked all feet."
Of all editorial writers, Horace Greeley was most noted for illegible copy. On one occasion the modern Franklin penned something about "Suburban Journalism advancing," but the type setter, thinking it was one of his famous agricultural articles, launched out wildly with the words, "Superb Jerusalem artichokes."

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

Gas and Steam Fitter.

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

GEM GALLERY,

THE ONLY

Ferrottype Gallery

627 J STREET,

In the City.

Sixteen "Gems" for 50 cents. Card size proportionately low. Photographic Work in general.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel,

Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth
Repairing Neatly Done.
Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

American Eagle Hotel

Corner Twelfth and J Streets,
SACRAMENTO.

This house has been put in first-class condition, and also newly furnished—everything being new from office to kitchen.

Board and Room, per Week, - - $5.00 to $7.00

MEALS, 25 CENTS.

Terms made with families.

GEO. W. NEWBERT, Proprietor.

J. O. MILLS,

High Art Crayon Portraits

Executed from Life or Tin-types or Photographs.
Inquire or leave orders at

406 J STREET, or 413 K STREET.

San Francisco Studio, 12 Dehone street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth, Church and Sanchez streets. References: Timothy Lee, Chief of Police, Cot. Guthrie, Capt. Fouratt.

Bainbridge Business College

J. C. BAINBRIDGE, }
PRINCIPAL.

No. 1017 J Street, Sacramento.

A full Business Course, together with Short-hand, Telegraphy, Bookkeeping, Penmanship and all the branches usually taught in schools of this kind. A full corps of Teachers of the first rank only employed.

MRS. BAINBRIDGE has charge of the Music Department.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEEEPING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6.
Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4.
Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

SAN FRANCISCO

Steam Dyeing Works

Removed to 524 K Street.

Branch, 805 K St. Dye Works, 2511 J St.

All orders promptly attended to. Don't make a mistake—Main office at Capital Transfer Company.

JOHN STEEN, Proprietor Dye Works.

Trunks Removed, 25 Cents.

JAS. LONGSHORE,

SACRAMENTO TRUNK FACTORY,

530 K STREET.

Trunks, Valises & Bags Wholesale and Retail.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,
SACRAMENTO.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS,
Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

R. H. PETTIT,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

IMPORTED & DOMESTIC CIGARS

Smoke the "Lone Fisherman,"

The BEST FIVE-CENT CIGAR in the Market.

NO. 225 K STREET.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Wm. Kuhlman, Peter Miller, Elizabeth Davis, Henry Greisel, Robt. Robinson, and B. F. White, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 12th day of October, 1889, in which action M. G. Dandridge is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: That you, the defendants, and each of you, be required to set forth your several claims, or right, title or interest of, in and to Lots One to Eight, inclusive, in the Block bounded by J and K and Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, in the city of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California; and that said claims, or either of them, may be determined by a decree of this Court, and that they, or either of said claims, may be adjudged and declared invalid, and that the defendants, nor either of them, have no right, title or interest of, in, or to said land, and that plaintiff do have judgment against said defendants, in decreeing plaintiff to have a good and valid title, and that the defendants be forever debarred from ever asserting any claim adverse to plaintiff, and for costs and for general relief, all of which will more fully appear from the complaint on file herein, to which reference is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that, unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief prayed for in his said complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

ED. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Charles Farley and J. W. Richmond, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 24th day of October, 1889, in which action Michael Haley is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To require you, defendants, to set forth the nature, character and extent of your claims to that certain real property in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California, known upon the official map of said Sacramento City as Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, in the Block between T and U, Ninth and Tenth streets; and to obtain a decree of Court adjudging that defendants, or either of them, have no estate, right, or title in said premises, or any part thereof; and that defendants be forever debarred and estopped from asserting or claiming any right, title, or interest to said premises, or any part thereof; and for such other and further relief as the Court may deem fit and proper in the premises; and for costs of suit. All of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

FRANK D. RYAN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Coe W. Bird-sall, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 1st day of November, 1889, in which action Emma Birdsall is plaintiff, and you are defendant. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the grounds of wilful neglect and wilful desertion, all of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 1st day of November, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

ISAAC JOSEPH, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t]

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.—ESTATE OF JAMES MCENANEY, Deceased. Notice is hereby given by the undersigned administrator of the Estate of James McEnaney, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against said deceased to exhibit them with their necessary affidavits and vouchers within four months after the first publication of this notice, to him at the office of Frank D. Ryan, Attorney at Law, No. 504 J street, Sacramento City, Cal.

Dated Nov. 30th, 1889. LAWRENCE MCENANEY, Administrator. d30-st.

TAXES.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 3748 OF THE Political Code, as amended March 16, 1889, State and County Taxes will be received at the office of the County Tax Collector, northwest corner of Seventh and I streets, in the City of Sacramento, on and after FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1889. Taxpayers will please take notice that on the last Monday in December (the 30th day), 1889, at 6 o'clock p. m. of that day, taxes will be delinquent, and unless paid prior thereto five per cent penalty will be added, as provided by law.

EO. C. MCNULTEN, Tax Collector of Sacramento County. Sacramento, Cal., November 5, 1889. [n2-9t]

The Chinook Country.

One of the most interesting facts in connection with this country is the retention of the early Indian names that were originally applied to its rivers and valleys. The Indians of Washington are related by many ties of blood and association to all the tribes of the Canadian Northwest. Each tribe has its own peculiar language and customs, but they all speak Chinook. Tradition says that Chinook was invented a century ago by a Canadian-Scotch half-breed, in whose veins ran so many different strains of Indian blood, affording him such a variety of red relations that he was, forsooth, compelled to get up a language of his own that they all might be able to understand. So he took a little Blackfoot, mixed it with a trifle of Crow, seasoned it with bad French, worked in a Dundee accent, and called it Chinook. He provided that the male Indian should be known as a Siwash and the female Indian as a Kloochee, and as the Siwashes and Kloochees worked themselves westward and over the country, they carried this invented language with them and established it throughout the Northwest. There are hunters and trappers and lumbermen who can make themselves well understood through Chinook everywhere they go. In the distant backwoods there are squaw men—that is, white men who have taken Indian wives—who have really forgotten their mother tongue and can now speak nothing but Chinook. The Indian proper names scattered so plentifully over Washington are all Chinook names, and originally possessed some peculiar significance. Snowqualmie, for instance, meant "crowned with snow." Skagit was the name of the wildcat. Stillaquamish signified "quiet water." Nooksack meant "north of the mountain." Nesqually meant "south of the mountain." These and many other names, some of them picturesque in their significance and beautiful in their sound, are now preserved as the names of particular geographical features. Okinagane, "soft and deep," is the name of a lake. Yakima, "white pebbles," Wenatchie, "swiftly running," are names of mountain streams. Almost all the counties of the State are called by names derived from Indian stories. Tacoma was the name of a tribe, Seattle that of a great chief, and when the white people determined to call their town after him, his tribe came in a body to the Common Council and begged them to refrain. The request involved a long explanation of their religious beliefs, from which it appeared that they were worshippers of their ancestors, and that the dead Seattle was to them a great god. They believed that every time his name was mentioned he turned in his grave. I can but feel as if, under these circumstances, their request should have been granted, for if they really believe that the old man is revolving every time the word Seattle is said, reflections quite too horrible for expression must be continually arising in their minds. To think of a majestic, haughty Indian chieftain whirling in his tomb like a buzz saw is certainly anything but agreeable to those whose religion consists in expressions of reverence for his memory.—Tacoma Correspondence.

The People of Iceland.

To the average reader Iceland is as little known as the interior of Africa, says the Sabbath Visitor. Yet Iceland is a famous country—famous for the achievements of its heroes, for the poetry and prose it has given to the world; and, above all, for the education which prevades all classes.

The love of learning is almost a mania in Iceland, and it is the rarest thing in the world to meet a native who cannot read and write.

Another admirable trait is the remarkable honesty which prevails in Iceland. Crime is almost unknown. The people never lock their doors, and but two cases of thieving are known to have taken place in many years.

One was an Icelander who had broken his arm, and whose family in the winter was suffering for food. He stole several sheep, and was finally detected. He was at once put under medical care for his injury, provisions were furnished for his family, and in time he was given work. This was his punishment.

The other case was a German who stole seventeen sheep. He was in comfortable circumstances, and the theft was malicious. His punishment was to sell all his property, restore the value of his theft, and leave the country or be executed. He left at once, well knowing the result if he lingered.

A Little Too Previous.

A youthful married couple, whose house has recently been glorified by the addition of a facsimile of the beautiful mother, decided to have the christening service at home. A venerable missionary was called to officiate. He took the babe in his arms and addressed a few words of advice to the parents. "See that you train up this child in the way that he should go; that you surround him with the best influence, and that you give him a good example. If you do so, who knows but what he may become a John Wesley or a Gladstone? What is his name?" "Nellie, sir," replied the mother.—New York Mercury.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON, The * Leading * Merchant * Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501--507 K, cor. Fifth

Furniture

Bedding.

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

Klune & Floberg,

WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS

Agents for Rockford Watch Co.

No. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR ^d _a COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

Wm. J. Hassett.

A. J. Johnston.

A. J. Johnston & Co.

PRINTERS,

410 J Street,

Sacramento

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

POST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city. Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exceresences, etc., Positively Cured or no Pay. No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated. Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer. John Service, Auburn, lupus. Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer. Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed. N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer. J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer. John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer. Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed. Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer. I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular. Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento. DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

ANGLO-NEVADA ASSURANCE CORPORATION

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

FIRE.—Cash Capital, $2,000,000—MARINE.

Sacramento Branch:

No. 1018 SECOND STREET.

JOSEPH STEFFENS,

HOWARD KIMBROUGH,

Manager.

Local Agent.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J,

SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and

Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY & BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199.

Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER,

1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER,

BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

Not Unlawful.

"I'd give twenty-five cents for permission to kiss that girl," remarked an insipid-looking youth on an Albany-bound train last night, indicating with a motion of his hand an unusually handsome young woman asleep in a seat near by. The youth was one of a group standing in the rear of the crowded car. Another young man said:

"You have my permission, sir, gratis."

"Fraid she wouldn't regard it as sufficient," laughed the first.

"I don't know," replied the other; "I have a great influence with good-looking girls. I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll bet you a good cigar I can kiss her without waking her."

"Done!" cried the insipid youth. "I'll give you a cigar if you dare do it anyway, and two more if she don't wake up."

"It's a go."

The daring young man stepped up to the seat where the pretty girl slept, leaned over softly, and kissed her squarely and audibly upon her mouth. She stirred, smiled a little, but did not wake. The group of men had watched the proceeding in breathless suspense, and a long and simultaneous sigh broke from them as young Impudence straightened up after the operation and rejoined the group, several passengers who had seen the audacious performance staring at him in astonishment.

"By Jove, that was elegant!" the fellow of insipid accent exclaimed as he handed the successful kisser his three cigars.

But there was another reckoning to be made. The conductor came hurrying down the aisle and "went for" the daring passenger, metaphorically speaking, "hammer and tongs," crying: "See here, young man, don't you ever try that again! Are you a gentleman, sir? Don't you know that I can arrest you for such a performance as that?"

The young man colored, but laughed nervously as he answered: "No, I don't much believe you can. I guess there isn't any American law against a fellow's kissing his own sister, is there?"

It has not appeared yet whether or not the young woman learned of her brother's astonishing exhibition of disrespect, or whether, if she did, her displeasure lessened the gratification derived from the cigars won in such a questionable manner.—Albany Express.

Magnetism of the Eye.

"Did you ever try the power of magnetism as expressed through the eye?" asked a friend of mine at the theater, recently. "It's interesting. I've been developing the faculty of late and have great fun over it. Last week as I sat over there on the side aisle of the parquet circle I saw several rows of chairs ahead of me a young lady of my acquaintance. She was sitting so that she would have to turn clear around to look at me, and I thought it a good chance to test my power. I called the attention of my companion to her and said: 'Now, watch me make her look around.' Then I concentrated my gaze on the back of her bonnet and my mind on the idea of controlling her action. By and by she began to look around the house rather nervously, glancing everywhere, and then she turned clear around and looked straight into my eyes. I met her afterward and told her about it, and she told me that she didn't know what caused her to do so unusual a thing. Now, there's an acquaintance of mine down there in the parquet—that man slouched down in his seat with gray hair and a bald spot—see me make him look around."

My friend knitted his brows and looked at the bald spot intently for five minutes without making it wince. Then he frowned ominously and his gaze grew more piercing. Still no effect. After fifteen minutes of this he gave it up, saying the man never had any mind anyway. At the close of the performance an usher went down and awakened the man with the bald spot. He had been asleep. Chicago Times.

"I suppose, Miss Sear," said he
To the maid of thirty-three,
"That you must sometimes feel your weight of years?"

"No, no," said she, "not so;
I'm used to it, you know,
Just as you are to your length and weight of ears."

May—Charlie, you must be careful and not expose yourself. You went out in all that rain last night. Charlie—No, I wasn't. What made you think so? May—Why, papa came home and said he met you coming from the lodge, and that you were thoroughly soaked."

"I have here an article on 'How to Manage a Wife,' remarked a young man, as he advanced to the editor's desk. "You are unmarried, I believe," replied the editor. "Yes; why?" "Nothing. I just thought so."

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SCOUR MASH BOURBON WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagele & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGELE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

H. WACHHORST

Leading Jeweler of Sacramento
SIGN OF THE TOWN CLOCK,
No. 315 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

MOYNIHAN'S

418 J STREET.

FOR THE LADIES:

Just received, direct from Manufacturers, an elegant line of Silver and Oxydized Bonbonniere Boxes Ladies' Cachou Flasks, and other Novelties.
Call and inspect them. THE ONLY FIRST-CLASS HOUSE IN THE CITY.

J. R. Wheat

DITTMAR & WHEAT,

A. Dittmar.

Sacramento Lounge & Mattress Factory

BEDDING.

FURNITURE

No. 916 J STREET.

Important and Worth Investigation

We are making Suits to order of the fine Huddersfield Worsteds for $25, which are worth $40. As the sales of these fine worsteds during the past three weeks have proved such a success in San Francisco, we have added a large line of Jerseys and Meltons, for Overcoats, with fine silk-serge lining all through, made to order from $30 to $55, which would cost elsewhere from $40 to $60. We have also received, direct from the mill, over forty pieces of fine Trouserings, which we bought at an immense reduction, and are now prepared to give our customers and the public of Sacramento the benefit. These are fine all-wool goods, at prices never before known in Sacramento. Please call and examine goods and be convinced of the bargains now offered for the holidays by

JOE POHEIM, THE TAILOR,

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

419 K STREET.

FOR THE PUBLIC! Special attention to the largest assortment of PURE HOME-MADE CANDIES, Bon Bon and Bonniere boxes and French Glazed Fruit in the city. Also, other Fancy Goods.

JAS. G. DAVIS

Furniture, Carpets and Wall Paper

411 and 413 K STREET,

Branch, 315 K St. Send for Catalogue. Prices Lowest.

BELL & CO.,

GENERAL AUCTIONEERS.

Salesroom, 927 K Street, Sacramento, Cal.

Regular Salesdays—Wednesdays and Saturdays at 10 o'clock A. M.

Assistants—W. T. Crowell, Real Estate; J. Pulvermacher, Bookkeeper; J. Lambert, Furniture and Stock.

Particular attention paid to sales of real estate, house sales, and sales of farms, stock, etc.

Highest price paid for all kinds of household goods.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice,

SACRAMENTO

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

R. DAVIS,

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:
Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.
1002 J Street, Sacramento.

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.

Southern Pacific Company

PACIFIC SYSTEM.

Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6 50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11 40 A
3 05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7 25 P
11 00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3 40 A
7 05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6 45 P
7 25 P	Knights Landing	7 40 A
9 00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9 55 A
8 00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6 25 P
12 01 A	Central Atlantic Express	6 00 A
3 00 P	Ogden and East	10 30 A
3 00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10 30 A
10 40 A	Redding via Willows	4 00 P
6 15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7 25 P
6 50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8 35 P
3 05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11 40 A
4 00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10 40 P
*10 00 A	San Francisco via Steamer	26 00 A
11 25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2 25 P
6 50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11 40 P
11 25 A	San Jose	2 25 P
7 05 P	Santa Barbara	9 55 A
6 50 A	Santa Rosa	11 40 A
3 05 P	Stockton and Galt	7 25 P
9 00 A	Stockton and Galt	6 45 P
7 05 P	Stockton and Galt	9 55 A
8 00 P	Truckee and Reno	6 25 P
12 01 A	Truckee and Reno	6 00 A
12 05 P	Colfax	10 20 A
6 50 A	Vallejo	11 40 A
3 05 P	Vallejo	7 25 P
*12 15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10 25 A
*7 15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2 40 P
*5 20 P	Folsom	*6 50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning. P for afternoon.

A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE PRESIDENT.....FRED K. COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers

and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

THEMIS

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1889.

No. 43.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

It is as well the people of Sacramento should make no concealments. The fact that we escaped a flooding this week was due more to an act of Providence than to what we have done for our own security. It is not for us to now say: "We told you so," nevertheless this journal called attention to the insecurity of our levee defenses in the early spring of this year. In our issue of March 17, 1889, we said:

We have had a succession of three dry seasons, with no threat of overflow or break in our levee system, but, as in times of peace it is necessary to prepare for war, so is it necessary to consider and perfect our defenses against floods at times when the danger is remote. In fact, it is too late to remedy defects in our levees when the floods are present.

We then gave a detailed account of the condition of our levees, and suggested what in our judgment should be done to strengthen them. We called upon the authorities to immediately set about and strengthen at the most vulnerable points. That we were not far from right was quite unpleasantly demonstrated by the events of this week, when the gauge in the Sacramento river recorded higher than had ever before been known during the American occupation of this country. We have before us the records of the highest and lowest water in the Sacramento river since 1849, with the exception of the years from 1862 to 1873. The zero of the river gauge was established in September, 1849, at the lowest stage of water, and that point of the gauge is but five feet above the sea level and twenty-nine feet below the railroad track on Front street, according to a circular issued March 15, 1875, by the Chief Signal Officer at Washington. That circular says when the river shows 25 feet on the gauge it is then near the danger line, and at that height is dangerous to levees within twenty miles of Sacramento. In the season of 1861-2, during which the great flood in this city occurred, the highest marking on the gauge was 24 feet. In the winter of 1875-6 it rose to 24.6 feet; in the winter of 1877-8 to 26 feet; in the winter of 1879-80 to 24.4 feet; in the winter of 1880-81 to 26.6 feet; in the winter of 1884-5 to 24.6 feet, and in the winter of 1885-6 to 25.6 feet. In our article in March we wrote:

But how is it on the Sacramento river front? The watershed which discharges its surplus through the American is large, the descent steep, and in times of heavy rains, or of recent snows melted by warm rains, the amount of water forced along our northern defense and falling into the Sacramento river, added to the swollen Sacramento, require a large channel to carry them. We have staring us in the face an unsolved problem: What shall we be able to do with that large amount of water? Hitherto at such times an outlet has been furnished through a break in the levee above Washington and our levee front thus relieved. During the past year a large levee has been built from the northwest end of the Washington causeway, connecting with the levee above the present mouth of the American. This, we presume, has been made higher and stronger than our Sacramento levee from L street south. Thus the waters of both rivers must be forced under the Yolo and Sacramento bridge, and serve to swell the volume of water pressing against our river front. Hydrographic engineering may perhaps solve the problem whether our levee on Front street will protect the city from overflow in that direction. But the problem seems to us unsolved. Heretofore when the water rose sufficiently high to threaten us in that quarter, a large volume of surplus water flowed through the opening at the north side of Washington, thus relieving us from threatened danger. Now, with that amount added, will the river in front of our city carry all the water without overtopping the levee from N to R streets? Given the width, depth, and velocity of a stream of running water, an engineer can estimate the amount of water it will carry. Perhaps our city authorities are furnished with the requisite data. If not, they should be obtained.

The late storm demonstrated the weakness at the point we indicated in the paragraph above quoted. In our issue of October 12, 1889, we again called attention to this important matter, and very clearly pointed out the places from which danger could be expected. We are not disposed to condemn the local authorities for non-action. We realize fully they have not had the money to do what should be done to properly guard the valuable property inclosed by the insignificant levees of this city. We hope one good result will follow the perilous position in which the city has been placed, and that our citizens will be made to feel that we cannot afford to again run such risks.

The question arises naturally: What shall be done? We say, broaden and heighten our levees. It is a matter easy of accomplishment, and one which will involve no considerable expenditure of money. We call attention that there are railroad tracks on the levees surrounding the city. During the months when such work can be done, the labor of the prisoners in our local jails should be utilized on levee work. Dump cars should be brought into requisition, and in a few years our entire line of levees would be broadened and heightened. Time would come when the levees about this city would be of the width of a street, and they could be utilized for driveways. Their strength would be such as to place us beyond possible reach of any high water; we could defy the elements. The situation of the city of Sacramento, considered with respect to protection against overflow, is very favorable when regarded in the light of the accomplishments in other countries. The dikes in Holland protect against the encroachments of the sea. In that country Haarlem lake, a territory twelve miles long and ten broad, was diked and drained, and to-day is cultivated ground and populated by over 10,000 human souls. The people there rest in security behind the protections they have themselves created. In our case, we must admit that whatever we have of apprehension is due to the fact that we do not take the precautions which should be dictated by sound business policy. Time has been when nothing shielded the destruction of our valuable properties but a mere rope of earth. The experience of 1878, when the break occurred below the city and the water splashed over the R street levee, should have been sufficient to convince us of our insecurity. In that instance, there is little doubt that had the wind storm continued from the south our defense on that side would have been broken. This week the water in the river was fully four feet higher than the Y street levee, and a break within any reasonable distance below us would have sent the water over it, and submerged the territory between R and Y. It cannot be said that we never speak of these dangers at a time when they are at our door. The conductors of this journal have property interests here, and have no disposition to print that which will in any degree militate against the prosperity of the city. We believe, however, that good will come from a recital of facts as they exist, and that there is danger in a reliance upon security that may prove fancied. We fully appreciate the very natural tendency not to speak publicly of matters, a reference to which might be regarded as detrimental to the general interests of the community. Our policy, however, has been, and will be, to represent matters as they actually are. It is useless to conceal the fact that within the last few days our citizens seriously apprehended trouble; and any intelligent man who saw the condition of affairs on Front street would view the situation as ominous. We write this article with the hope that our citizens will heed the warning, and that they will place themselves in a position of future security from a destroying element. We insure against the casualties of fire, the happening of which may never occur. We have before us the records of the past forty years of the dangers which may come from the river that sweeps by our doors. Those dangers can be averted forever; the interests we have here justify us in taking the precautions which prudence and sound judgment suggest. So long as the slightest menace hangs over our city, we will be retarded in growth and prosperity. Place Sacramento in a position of absolute security, with the advantages of the surroundings, its progress cannot be checked. We have suffered disasters from fires and floods—we have risen above them. We are in a position of decided advantage, and cannot now afford to suffer a backset, which we can easily avert. As we have indicated, we have the labor that now is hardly utilized. The tracks are laid and the cars exist, or can be made. A very few years will suffice to broaden our defenses. The appreciation of property values will very much more than compensate for the cost.

The State Citrus Fair, to be held at Oroville, beginning on January 7th, deserves immediate attention at the hands of our county and city authorities, to the end that this county make proper arrangements for a creditable exposition of the citrus and other products of Sacramento county. With us it is a matter of obligation as well as duty, for the reason that on every recurring State Fair we call to our assistance the energy and resources of our neighboring counties, and from none comes a more willing and liberal response than from the county of Butte. Now that the appeal comes from the other side, let us prove ourselves as ready to give as to receive. Oroville was justly entitled to the honor of having held within her walls, so to speak, the first Northern State Citrus Fair. Having at her own expense held for two successive years citrus fairs that attracted the attention of the whole Union, and being herself in the midst of one of the grandest citrus sections of the world, the selection was indeed a happy one. At that place preparations for the coming exhibit are being pushed rapidly. The frame for the immense pavilion extends the full length of the court-house yard, and encloses many growing trees loaded with luscious golden fruit. It will be covered with canvas, and that protection will be more than ample. The premium list includes awards for first, second, third, fourth and fifth best county exhibits, with prizes from $500 down, and proportionally liberal prizes for individual exhibitors, several thousands of dollars being subject to distribution. The railroad company has manifested its disposition to further the citrus fair interests, by announcing its intention to carry all articles for exposition there at half rates, and no doubt liberal excursion rates will be made for passenger travel. Our citizens should also contribute to the success of the fair by personal attendance, and in addition to the exposition in itself, the extent of the growth of orange culture, as exemplified by the extensive groves of Thermalito and Palermo, will prove a beneficial surprise, even to those who have in a measure endeavored to keep themselves posted regarding the growth of citrus fruits in Northern California.

There are Utopian ideas in conducting a newspaper. Now comes a writer in the North American Review, and after a severe censure of modern journalism, to the extent of showing its partial and mercenary character in suppressing all news that might affect its advertising columns, branches off into Utopian notions of what a public journal should be. Journals of to-day are edited from the counting-room. They will not mention any event that is likely to interfere with their debit and credit columns, and cater to any element that might have influence in a financial way with their well-being. In fact, there is no absolute independence. The Review writer suggests that the ideal newspaper should print in its news columns nothing but what is verified. The readers might not obtain news of great sensations such as "enterprising" journals publish, but when there was any publication this could be absolutely relied upon. All great questions should be freely discussed on all sides, in order that the searcher after truth might obtain the facts upon which to base a judgment. The Southern question should be discussed so that there would be nothing of a partisan character in the matter, and the readers could then reflect and decide which is right. The paper founded upon such a basis would become the medium of thought, and would be read throughout the land; its influence and power inestimable and transcendent. Evil doers would fear it, and good citizens would support it. The Review writer then proposes that some of our millionaires endow such a paper just as colleges are endowed, and that the finest talent in the land be placed over its columns. The idea is a good one, but then it is about on a level with "Looking Backward," and the time will never come when this extreme purity sentiment will overcome the peculiar principles of modern journalism.

We read and hear of very much sentimentality regarding the ruin of young girls. When a girl reaches the age of seventeen or eighteen years, if she goes the wrong pathway, in nine cases out of ten it is her own choice, her own fault. This notion, so prevalent with police officers and newspaper reporters, that girls of this age can be forced into disreputable houses, is all sickly sentiment. There may be exceptional cases, isolated instances where some innocent or unsophisticated girl is enticed into the gilded palaces, but such are rare indeed. To give credit to such a view would be to say that the young girls growing up in our community are without brains, without the ordinary perceptive qualities which nature, aside from education, has given them. When we learn of a young girl having been led astray, we look to the direct cause, and usually are not long in ascertaining that fact. The ruling passion of girls in these times is the inordinate desire for dress. If she is poor and her parents unable to gratify this passion, she will make any sacrifice to emulate those who are able to dress. The secret of the downfall of the great majority of our young females is this passion for fine clothes—she must have them, no matter how obtained. When, therefore, we hear of some young girl being enticed into a house of ill-repute, we are impulsively inclined to the opinion that there has been a willing sacrifice of virtue, honor, purity, for dress—only dress. This ruinous passion is not confined to young girls. Many married women—poor men's wives, mechanics' wives—sacrifice themselves for dress. When we see some women whose husbands are in the walks of life that cannot afford fine and expensive dress, decked out in the richest costumes, the proposition at once comes to mind: How does she obtain these things? The answer is at once suggested: At the cost of honor, purity, virtue.

Some questions have been raised with regard to the title to a small portion of the Sutter Fort property. It has been decided by our Supreme Court and the United States Circuit Court that the power of attorney from Sutter to Schoolcraft never conferred any power to sell real estate. All the deeds, therefore, made by Henry A. Schoolcraft, as the attorney in fact for John A. Sutter, have been declared void, and do not convey title to any real estate. The title of the present owner will, of course, be carefully examined before the purchase is consummated, and if any defects exist, they will be cured before the deed passes.

We in Sacramento are now secure from flooding. We should remember that elsewhere in the valley good fortune favored not. There are those whose Christmas will be sorrowful; should we not assist if such be?

Musical Lizards.

As is well known, lizards of all colors and sizes abound in Italy. They lie basking on all the stones, they run along all the walls, they peep out of every chink and crevice; but as soon as they hear the faintest noise they disappear with lightning speed, and it is hard to see them near and to observe them closely. Walking carelessly, and noticing the dear little animals darting now here, now there, I noticed the Greek statue of Apollo Sauroktonos, who is always represented as busied with a lizard—Apollo, god of the sun and of music. "Suppose I try," I thought, and softly, quite softly, I began to whistle a dreamy old German air, and behold! a lizard lies still, as though rooted to the spot, raising his little head in a listening attitude, and looking at me with his sharp little eyes. Without stirring I continued my melody. The lizard came nearer and nearer, and at last approached quite close, always listening and forgetting all its fears. As soon, however, as the whistler made the smallest movement, it vanished into some crevice, but to peep forth again a moment later, and to listen once more, as though entirely entranced. A delightful discovery, truly, and one of which I extended the field of observation daily. At least as many as eight or nine of these little music lovers would sit around me in the most comic attitudes. Nay, two of them, a mother and its young one, would sit awaiting me as I arrived whistling at the same hour of day, sitting on a large stone, under which was probably their home. With these two I made some further experiments. After having made music to them a while, I cautiously went a few steps further, whistling on in soft, drawling tone, such as I had found they best loved to hear, and see, verily, they followed me! Watching them with intense interest, I continued to whistle as I walked on slowly, halting every few paces and being silent when I halted, and truly the little creatures followed, slowly, it is true, but in a straight line, at a distance of about fifteen steps, until at last, unhappily, the heavy tread of a peasant put them to flight. But my experiment had lasted long enough to make me understand the Apollo Sauroktonos, and I once more revered the keen native observation of those old Hellenes. Beside this, the legend of the "Rat Catcher of Hamelin" suddenly became much more credible.—Leisure Hours.

A Battle-Scarred Dog.

An interesting dog story was related by General Joe Bartlett, to some friends in Washington, not many days ago. The canine was named Budge, and he followed the Army of the Potomac during the early years of the war. Budge had a habit of chasing cannon balls, and while thus engaged during a battle, he lost one of his legs. He was left on the field, the men being too busy to care for him, but some days afterward he limped into camp. A surgeon of the Twenty-seventh New York fixed up the stump, and in course of time it healed. Budge was all through the Peninsula campaign, and during the advance and retreat he hobbled along, and during engagements followed his favorite pastime, chasing cannon balls and shells. Nothing could abate his zeal in that direction. Budge followed the troops back to Washington, took part in the second battle of Bull Run, the battle of South Mountain, and then hobbled along until he reached Antietam. In the battle of the second day Budge chose to take part in the conflict on our right, and seemed to enjoy it. He was very busy that day, and had got so that he could make good time on three legs. He had plenty of balls and shells to look after, too. When the fight was over, along in the afternoon, Budge was missing. The next morning, in passing through the terrible corn field in search of the dead and wounded, some of the boys ran across the lifeless body of old Budge, and by his side was the body of a wounded member of the brigade who had been in the habit of feeding him. Budge, he said, remained with him when he fell, and when the rebels swept through the corn field in one of the numerous charges made, Budge defended him against what he knew was the assault of an enemy, and was shot down, loyal to the last to the cause, the old flag, the Constitution and the Union, too, if you please, if he was nothing but a dog.

A Wonderful Seed.

Reporting the particulars of a sale of state jewelry in Calcutta, a local paper states: "The most remarkable item in the sale is lot No. 209, which is a wonderful seed called 'Ekumkhi Rudrakshi,' regarded with veneration by the followers of Shiva, and of such uncommon rarity as to be practically unobtainable. Most marvelous stories in regard to the origin of this seed are current. It is said to be produced in Nepal, and, according to the laws there, if any one except a priest is found in possession of the seed he will be beheaded. The tree on which this seed is said to grow is the only one in the territory of Nepal, and is guarded by soldiery, whose heads pay the penalty of the slightest indiscretion. It is said that many years elapse before any seed of the kind is produced by this tree, and out of a million of the seeds produced, it is very rarely that three of the genuine ones, recognized as sacred, are found.

EARLY PACIFIC RAILROAD HISTORY.

Inception of a Gigantic Enterprise—Life Work of Theodore D. Judah—Deserving Credit Should Be Accorded.

To the remarkable genius and indomitable perseverance of Theodore D. Judah is largely due the projection and construction of the first railroad across the American continent. It is to be regretted that the work of this great engineer is not more fully appreciated. He lived not to witness the completion of the mighty enterprise he projected, and to the fostering of which he expended his time, money and magnificent talents for years. We are kindly permitted to publish a letter from Mrs. Judah, recently received by a lady in this city, in which the helpmate of Mr. Judah writes much that has been heretofore unwritten history. We feel it is but due it should be preserved in print as an important chapter in the history of the nation. The writer—the constant companion of her talented husband—tells the inside history of his life and accomplishments from the diary kept in her heart, and we feel with her that just appreciation has not been had of the work of the young engineer. Let the reader think when reading the narrative what Judah did in his brief life. He died in New York November 2, 1863, aged 37 years, after having spent ten years of his life in his work to bring about the construction of the Pacific railroad. On January 8, 1863, ground was broken for the construction of the road at Front and K streets in this city; it was not until May 10, 1869, that the last spike was driven in the completion of the work. We have before us various reports prepared by Mr. Judah. In them and on his maps he outlined routes of railroads in this State that were not projected and constructed until years after his death. For instance, on a map prepared February 1, 1856, he laid down the line of road from San Francisco to Sacramento that was subsequently adopted by the California Pacific, and over a portion of which most of the trains pass between the two cities to-day. He also marked out the route on his map now traversed by the Southern Pacific from San Francisco to San Jose on the south side of the bay. In a report submitted to the Executive Committee of the Pacific Railroad Convention, by which he was accredited in 1859 to present the matter of the construction of an overland railroad to Congress and the departmental heads at Washington, he carefully reviewed his work, and added: "I would also state that, although the expenses of my mission, apart from my time, have cost me over $2,500, the only bills I have to present are: For printing at New York and Washington, $40." This self-sacrifice was but characteristic of the man. The subsequently published reports of his operations on later visits to Washington, and of estimates for the construction of the road, show that he was a hard worker. Among the first to espouse the ideas of Mr. Judah was the late General Lauren Upson, then editor of the Sacramento Union. From first to last Upson wielded his power by speech and pen to bring about the inauguration of the enterprise and its accomplishment. Later on—in 1859—Horace Greeley visited the State and became an enthusiastic advocate of the continental railroad project. He joined Upson in the fight, and threw to its prosecution the powerful influence of the Tribune. After the passage of the bill by Congress, and work had been commenced, leading papers in San Francisco dubbed the enterprise "The Dutch Flat Swindle," and endeavored to discourage it. In view of the service Mr. Judah performed, it is but due that appropriate credit should be accorded him—the Father of the Pacific railroad. The letter of Mrs. Judah is as follows:

You ask me for a biography or notice of Mr. Judah. I feel that I am not equal to the task with my poor pen; it is all so personal. Would that I could talk with you; with tongue I could do the subject more justice. Theodore D. Judah was born in Bridgeport, Conn., March 4, 1825. His father, the Rev. Henry R. Judah, was at that time rector of St. John's Episcopal church of that city. In the new St. John's church a beautiful memorial window was placed, a few years since, by those who revered the memory of this good man and beloved rector. While Theodore was a lad, his father was called to St. John's church, at Troy, N. Y., accepted the call, and it was in that city that Theodore D. Judah received his education, being a graduate of the Troy school of technology, then the only institution of that kind in the United States. His scientific mind received there the sound learning and culture that marked his life. It is not necessary for me to speak to his personal friends of his varied talents or of his attractive virtues. His life-work shows his genius and iron will. The love of his friends bears testimony to his beautiful nature. The music of his life—you know how he poured out his soul in song and harmony. [This allusion has reference to the great love of Mr. Judah for music. There was hardly a musical instrument upon which he could not play. Eds.] Theodore's boyhood was spent among the good people of Troy. St. John's church had the best of people among its members. Judge Buel and his family of sons, noted among men, were his companions, and these friendships lasted through his life. His father died while rector of that church, and was buried in the family vault at Westport, Conn., the home of his ancestors; so young Judah was a New Englander. His mother was a southern lady, of rare grace of person and mind. The name "Dehone" comes from Bishop Theodore Delhove, of Virginia, who was a close friend of his parents. After his father's death, at the early age of 12, his mother went with her family to the City of New York, which was ever after her home. Soon after this sorrow of his life, Theodore went with S. W. Hall, the civil engineer of the Troy and Schenectady railroad company; and it was on that first railroad in New York State that Mr. Judah had his initial experience in railroad engineering. He had expected to enter the navy, and a move had been made in that direction. This opportunity to go with Mr. Hall and Mr. Laurie, both distinguished railroad engineers and bridge builders of their day, decided him in his life profession. He was young, but his ability was recognized, and he had to do with the various railroad enterprises of New York and New England until he went to California to build the first railroad west of the Rocky Mountains—the Sacramento Valley road. At one time he was resident engineer on the Erie canal, and was located at Jordan, Seneca Falls, etc. At the time he went to California he was living in Buffalo, having charge of the Buffalo and New York railroad, then building across the State to connect with the Erie railroad. Previous to that he laid out, and had built under him, the railroad down the gorge of the Niagara river to Lewiston, on Lake Ontario. When that enterprise was started—being talked of and doubted, as not feasible—Mr. Judah said to the gentlemen interested (among them Daniel Townsend, the Porters, and S. D. Whitney, of the famous cataract route, and other prominent men of Niagara Falls): "Gentlemen, raise the money and I will build your road." He was the only engineer who believed in it who had gone over the ground. Did that not show what was in the man then, to grasp an enterprise so daring and gigantic? The railroad down the gorge was a success, and stands to-day a monument to his young power. Our cottage on the bank of the river, between the falls and the suspension bridge, is still there, with the beautiful view of both falls and whirlpool rapids below the bridge. He selected the site, built the cottage, there had his railroad office and did his work for that, in those days, wonderful piece of railroad engineering. It was through all this railroad work in New England and New York that, young as he was, earned him a reputation and an acquaintance with prominent men, and which sent him to California. Governor Seymour and Colonel Silas Seymour were his friends, and when Colonel Charles L. Wilson came on from California in 1854, fired with the idea of an enterprise like the railroad from Sacramento city to Negro Bar (Folsom), the rich placer gold diggings on the American river, these gentlemen, with others, said to him: "We know a young civil engineer just the man for you, if you can get him." They telegraphed Mr. Judah at Buffalo, "to come to New York city at once on business." How well I remember it; and his coming home, saying, "I am going to New York to-night," and showing me the message. He said: "I must respond to the call of such men, though I do not know what is up." Woman-like, I wanted to go, but it was not best.

The third day after, I received a telegram, "Be home to-night; we sail for California, April 2d." You can imagine my consternation on his arrival that night. It was all laid out in these words: "Anna, I am going to California to be the pioneer railroad engineer of the Pacific coast, to know that country and to help build the Pacific railroad. It is my opportunity, although I have so much here." He had always talked, read and studied the problem of a continental railway and would say, "It will be built, and I am going to have something to do with it." Many a laugh his friends have had at his "air castles" in those days. It may be I was just the wife for him, though I did not know it then as since, for I never held back, and always, as he used to say, "Had the right pair of gaiters on." Thank God, it was so. Three weeks from the date of the telegram sent me, we were on the Atlantic Ocean en route for Greytown, Nicaragua, going to California by that route. And here would come in the interesting notes from my journal kept on that eventful voyage. Theodore's words then, "This is the route for a ship canal" are now about to be verified. But to go back. We had broken up our pretty nest in Buffalo, gone to my old home, Greenfield, Massachusetts, where I was fitted out for the trip to California. What an event it was in those days! My good mother and father gave us all their energies, though with full hearts, for it was a hard thing to send an only daughter so far away and it was a great undertaking in those days. They, with my two brothers, went to New York to see us off. It was a sad parting, but we were full of youth and hope; they, of prayerful trust. Just two years from the month of our departure, we were back in New York and Greenfield, Theodore to go to Washington to try and impress some of his Pacific Railroad ideas and knowledge gained in the far west upon Congress. His reports tell the magnitude of his labors and will give better data than I can here write. You know I was always with him and shared every hope and aspiration of his genius. "God moves in a mysterious way" that He should call him home and leave me to be the living witness of it all! Sometimes when I am oppressed with it all, the long years of silent injustice, I have felt, oh! oh! that I could only climb to the summit of the Sierras where I stood with him those long years ago, looking west and east over the mighty summits stretching out and on before us, and could shout to the world my story. It would be a revelation indeed! "Truth is stranger than fiction." My heart is overwhelmed within me as I write, and my only cry now is, "Lead, oh, lead me to the rock that is higher than I." "Be still, and know that I am God." To enter into the buried secrets of my poor heart—all, all, I know of the wrong doing, the injustice is not what you want, but it is a part of the story, and how can I go on and not, in a measure, tear it open? The books of reports tell Mr. Judah's work in California and Washington better than I can do it. The whole subject matter is there. The sacred personal is within me, as it were. The different interests Mr. Judah represented in California are told in his reports. You know, as I do, that everything he did from the time he went to California to the day of his death was for the great continental Pacific railway. Time, money, brains, strength, body and soul were absorbed. It was the burden of his thought day and night, largely of his conversation, till it used to be said "Judah's Pacific railroad crazy;" and I would say, "Theodore, those people don't care," or "You give your thunder away." He'd laugh and say, "But we must keep the ball rolling."

In Washington he labored largely at his own expense, as from time to time he went on there, till he made up his mind he would never go to Washington again till he had been over the Sierra Nevada mountains, made a survey, and would go back to be with his maps, profiles, estimates, etc., for a railroad across them. In his own words, "That what I believe without it, I can intelligently show to Senators, members of Congress, etc. With facts and figures they cannot gainsay my honest convictions as now." Oh! how we used to talk it all over and over on the steamer en route to California in July, 1860. Three weeks from the time we arrived in California he was in the mountains, accompanied mostly by Dr. D. W. Strong, then of Dutch Flat, Cal., whose friendship was assured, and who was truly a mountaineer. Together they went over the different passes, Beckworth, etc. Last the Dutch Flat route, or Donner Pass. No one knew what they were doing; the "engineer" was in the mountains. I remained in San Francisco and Sacramento among friends.

It was in the drug store of Dr. Strong, at Dutch Flat, that the first profile was marked out from notes taken by them. Dr. Strong used to tell a thrilling story of their last night in the mountains—came near being snowed in, obliged to get up in the middle of the night from their camp and start out in the darkness to find the trail, and none too soon were they. Judah could not rest or sleep after they were in town and the store till he had stretched his paper on the counter and made his figures thereon. Then, turning to Dr. Strong, said for the first time, "Doctor, I shall make my survey over the Donner (Judah) Pass, the Dutch Flat route, above every other." So it goes on. Then began his work right there; getting up an interest; even forming a company, and money was subscribed, stock taken by some of the leading men of that mountain town right then and there. He labored in Sacramento and San Francisco to get the capitalists, men with whom he had had more or less association, to be his backers. Night and day he talked and labored with them. We were in San Francisco. A meeting was called at the office of a leading law firm, and Mr. Judah left me at the Russ House, where we were stopping, firm in the faith the gentlemen he was to meet that evening would give him the aid he required to make his survey the following spring; in other words, would be his backers and form the Pacific Railroad Company. He left me in high hopes. (I could name the gentlemen; none of them were of the present company.) His "high hopes" were doomed to disappointment; and why? Not because they did not believe in Judah, but they all had large interests in various ways. If Congress did not pass a Pacific Railroad bill, no road could be built, and even then it was generally thought it would take from twelve to twenty years to complete it, spite of Mr. Judah's honest assertion, "seven years would build it, under the provisions of such a bill as he believed could and would be passed." Suffice it to say, they did not give the encouragement he asked. Weary and disappointed, that night on his return from the meeting his words to me were these: "Anna, if you want to see your friends in the morning you must pack your bag and trot around to see them, for I am going up to Sacramento on the boat to-morrow afternoon. Remember what I say to you to-night, so you can tell me sometime; not two years will go over the heads of these gentlemen I have left to-night, but they would give all they hope to have from their present enterprises to have what they put away to-night. I shall never talk or labor any more with them. I am going to Sacramento and see what I can do with the citizens and local business men of that city."

How it was carried out to the letter? Mr. Upson, then editor of the Sacramento Union, the leading paper of the State, was his first friend and counselor, always ready to publish anything he wanted to say on railroads, etc. Together they called a meeting of the citizens of Sacramento city the very next day, I believe, after his return. Out of that meeting, or gathering, the work done there largely by these two men, came what followed in quick succession. It was not the "wise heads" (as has been written time and again) around the stove in the back part of a K street hardware store that inaugurated the Pacific railroad. It was the fire and brains of Theodore D. Judah; the pen and press of such men as Upson, and others who believed in him before he even knew the men. He afterward made the company "Central Pacific Railroad Company." The wires Mr. Judah could pull on these "far-seeing wise men" was this: "It is purely local; you are tradesmen of Sacramento city; your property, your business is here; help me to make the survey; I will make you the company, and with the bill passed you will have the control of business interests that will make your fortunes in trade, if nothing more. Why, you can have a wagon road if not a railroad." They grasped that and were led to do what he then asked. The first money they subscribed was $50 each, to make some survey of the levee on Front street and up the American river. Theodore said to me: "If you want to see the first work done on the Pacific railroad, look out of your bed-room window (Vernon House); I am going to work there this forenoon, and I am going to have these men pay for it." My reply was: "I am glad, for it is about time somebody else helped."

It is a fact, even after the survey was made and the next winter's work done in Congress, that the bill was passed. It passed in the following July, the next year after the survey was made. It became a law, and Mr. Judah was back at his post; the work started. They could not take it in as an overland enterprise, nor could they comprehend the magnitude of what they had to do. Judah used to say, when he came home from the Directors' meetings, "I cannot make these men appreciate the elephant they have on their shoulders; they will not do what I want and must do; we shall just as sure have trouble in Congress as the sun rises in the east, if they go on this way; they will not see it as it is. Something must be done. I will not be stultified before Congress and the business world." They did not ratify the contracts made in the East for iron and equipments before he went out and had three months in which to have them ratified. Oh! how he struggled. He had brought them a franchise and laid it at their door; rightly used, giving them unlimited credit throughout the world, and they would beggar it. Oh! some of those days were terrible to us. He felt they were ungrateful to their trust and to him. Governor Stanford was a "Judah man," and so long as he lived he was loyal to him, I believe. Charles Marsh and Dr. Strong were his fast friends. Mr. Judah saw he must place himself differently, and he went to work to accomplish it. It is best shown by his words to me on the steamer, en route to New York in October, 1863. He had secured the right and had the power to buy out the men opposed to him and the true interests of the Pacific railroad at that time. Everything was arranged for a meeting in New York city on his arrival. Gentlemen from New York and Boston were ready to take their places. They could not see him. Two of the gentlemen came to see me in Greenfield, thinking I might be able to give them points for their interests. So you see they were in earnest I have digressed. To go back to the steamer, Theodore said to me one day, lying in his berth, "What can I not do in New York? I have always had to set my brains and will against other men's money. Now, with money—equal—what can I not do?" He knew what he could do; it was all laid out, but God willed it otherwise and called him home. "Done with the Pacific railroad;" "Going abroad with his wife to travel." These were the false stories circulated and printed. Oh, it was such a sin and shame—cruel as death! The truth is, that less than three months would have seen Mr. Judah back, had he lived. These men were satisfied, and new men in their places. His death made them realize the value of what they had in what he had brought them; for others, who appreciated it, made attempts to get it in various ways.

I could go into more details, but why is it necessary? Facts will live; it is hard to kill them out. The papers, letters and scrap-books, and much of what I have written from the deep storehouse of memory, live. I tell it to you, the part which passed between husband and wife—our hopes, our aspirations, our bits of talk, our anxieties, our bearing of one another's burden, live. Glory! There is enough for all, every one who had anything to do with the great enterprise, without detracting one from the other, and I would be the last one to take an iota of credit due any individual connected with the Pacific railroad. Why, oh! why, rob the dead of credit? You know I was always with my husband, and did what I could to cheer and comfort him. The experiences of those eventful days were broad and widespread, more so than at the time I fully understood; but my heart was in all his work, and I knew his every hope, his every discouragement. The romance of our lives together would form a volume. The survey—it was a charmed life for the time. There I did what I could, and the sketches, herbarium and various bits I did were taken by him to Washington, to add to the varied interests. There I found them in his room, "The Pacific Railroad Room," in the Capitol, here and there tacked above the points they represented on his maps and profiles. Senators and Representatives in Congress were eager to know and hear all he could tell and show them of his survey and his gigantic work. Well I remember going there one day and meeting General Thomas Ewing, then interested in a Kansas railroad enterprise.

After talking awhile with me of the survey, etc., and the life so full of venture and romance, with my bits of work spread out before us, he laughingly said, turning to Mr. Judah: "Judah, I see your wife has learned her lesson well. She is as enthusiastic as yourself, and believes in the Pacific railroad without a shadow of doubt." Turning to me, he gracefully said: "Let us hope, Mrs. Judah, we will all go on a grand picnic to the Sierras—to Donner Lake sometime." My sketches of the Pass and Donner Lake, of the Saddleback Mountain, as I named the view below the lake, were engraved on the first and original certificates of the Central Pacific Railroad. The original pencil sketch was framed and given to Governor Stanford when in the chair of state. I made a large one in pastil for Mr. Judah, which hung over his desk in his office at Sacramento at the time of his death and which, with his effects was sent to me and now hangs in this room with his photo under it. I only mention these things as of close personal interest and to show how we were hand in hand in everything, and that I know whereof I speak. Burned into my very soul, is the memory of those days. I see him standing, as it were, single handed and alone, "Railroad crazy," so often called. His four trips to Washington, what did they not contain of labor and struggle? But firm in his faith, he worked away, defeating every obstacle in his way and turning to grasp every new hope and encouragement. He believed in the ultimate success and the feasibility of crossing the Sierras, just as much before as after his survey. The power of genius told him. It was that or he could not have done as he did. What a history! I should have mentioned earlier in this account of Mr. Judah and railway work that he was on the New Haven, Hartford and Springfield railway. Young as he was, he had important positions on the same; was located in the city of Hartford. Then he came with Colonel Childs, chief engineer of the Connecticut River railroad, making his headquarters at Greenfield, Massachusetts, my native town, and here we met and he married Anna Feron Pierce, only daughter of John Joyce and Eliza Dwight Pierce, both of good New England stock. Mr. Pierce was one of the leading business men of Greenfield, his native place, as it was of his father before him; prominent in all the religious and business interests of the town; died in his native town honored and respected, leaving a good name to his two sons, John Dwight Pierce and Charles Prentice Pierce—the former living now on the family estate. It may be of interest to you to know that my mother's birthplace—the estate of her father and grandfather before her—is the place called Mount Hennon, Gill, Massachusetts, the property of the Moody School for Boys. The house she was born in is standing and occupied by the superintendent, a most beautiful location, high and commanding a view of the Connecticut river for a long distance, and Northfield on the opposite bank, where is located the Moody School for Girls—both world famous. We were married in St. James Episcopal church, Greenfield, Massachusetts, my father at that time the senior warden. You asked for a bit of my family pedigree—you see we did not exactly "growl" as did "Topsy"—we had a grandfather. Mr. Judah also did good railroad work in Vermont, at Vergennes, building what in those days was considered a very fine railroad bridge, showing his scientific skill in no small degree in those early days. I could go on and on in detail, but it seems to me, you must weary; indeed much of it is, in a degree, familiar to you. It was a singular fact that the last rail of the Pacific Railroad was laid on the anniversary of our wedding day—10th of May. It was nothing to the gathering of great men and people there to spike it with the "golden spike" of fame—nothing to any living being, but the widow of Theodore D. Judah, who alone in the quiet of her New England home, read and knew everything printed relating to it, as it flashed across the continental telegraph. I say alone—it was truly so—for I refused myself to everyone that day. I could not talk of the common events of daily living. It seemed as though the spirit of my brave husband descended upon me and together we were there, unseen of man. Certainly it was a coincidence—a link for me to pick up and cherish in the chain of hallowed memories.

NOTES.

Many of our laboring men do not have a just appreciation of their power and position in life. A great majority of this class are constantly bemoaning their condition, when, in fact, they are the foundation of the community. The working man is the producer, therefore the creator of the world's needs and supplies. Every human law is based on the estimates made from the products of his labor.

We do not believe that truly worthy men or women would lend themselves to that bane of existence, gossiping, or listening to gossip. In some of the Oriental countries we have heard of a rule that the tale-bearer, and the tale-hearer, when apprehended shall be hung up back to back, one by the tongue the other by the ears. If there was such a law in operation in this city, there would be plenty of work for the court having jurisdiction of the offense.

The eminent poet Robert Browning died Thursday in Venice. No poet of ancient or modern times had such a following as that of Browning. Clubs in all parts of the civilized world were formed and called "Browning Clubs." Browning was born in 1812 at the city of London. He was a great reader, and drew his inspiration from the musty literature of the past. The myths and ideals were a source of much of his literary productions. He was grave or humorous, just as the inspiration moved him.

In the land of Confucius the maidens often prefer sacrifice to marriage. There is quite a contrast between the celestial virgins and the maidens of this country. Here they frequently resort to self-destruction because their lovers refuse to marry them. The great Chinese law-giver, Confucius, said: "Of all people women are the most difficult to manage. If you are familiar with them they become forward, and if you keep them at a distance they become discontented." It seems that under the Chinese laws, the disabilities of married women are many and great, and that any fate is preferable to marriage.

That was a keen satire on Sara Bernhardt, at Paris a few days ago, when the ladies of that great city petitioned her to play something that would permit them to take their daughters to hear her. La Tosca, Fedora, and the Sardon school of plays do not seem to address themselves to the daughters of Paris mothers. It is somewhat strange that the great Bernhardt honored this request, but she did, and has promised to produce Joan of Arc during the Christmas holidays. The Parisian mother must have assumed a virtue not heretofore known or indulged in by Parisians. The daughters of Paris must be sadly in need of virtue when they can be corrupted by the plays of Sara Bernhardt.

There is dramatic effect in everything. We find the influence and power of the actor even in the pulpit. The most effectual preacher is the one who possesses dramatic power. At the bar, before a jury, is this wonderful power developed in a lawyer. We do not mean the usual theatrical posing, but the genuine fire of art, which moves men's souls. This is a combination of oratory with dramatic effect. Many cases have been won through the skillful use of dramatic power. Little incidents of the trial often avail for this purpose that can be utilized by the keen, observing actor at the bar. We say actor, because in such cases, in addition to his legal ability, he must perforce invoke the dramatic art.

The latest use in which mesmerism is said to have been employed, is by the "book agent." This unfortunate creature has been so long the victim of abuse, that he has at last hit upon a plan to get even on the public, as well as turn an honest penny for himself. The fruits of his labor under the mesmeric power have been developed by an eastern book firm. An agent brought in a wonderful number of subscribers. When the books were delivered, each subscriber recognized his signature, but no recollection of the act of subscribing. The books were taken, however, much to the publishers' gain. The wily book agent got in his work on his victims through the mesmeric influence. Publishers will soon be advertising for the hypnotiser for agents.

The article of Mrs. Theodore D. Judah in this issue, recalls an event that has probably been forgotten by the good lady. During the construction of the Sacramento valley railroad, Hartford Anderson had the contract for building the upper portion, which included the only deep cuts and high embankments on the route. The deep cut about a mile and a half this side of Folsom was cut through by means of hydraulic pressure of water and sluice boxes, where by an excavation and embankment was made by the one process. In washing out the earth from the excavation through sluices, there was considerable gold saved. This gold from the first "clean up" was made into a set of jewelry and by Hartford Anderson presented to Mrs. Judah as a souvenir. This was in the year 1855. During the same year, and before the road was in running order, T. D. Judah, Mrs. Judah, James P. Robinson, and several ladies and gentlemen came up to the place where Hartford Anderson was constructing the road, to see how the work was progressing. Among the interested spectators to this unusual assemblage of visitors, were three little dirty faced boys, with bare feet and the boyish flag of distress flying, and Mrs. Judah noticing the comical trio, gave vent to a mirthful laugh, saying, "What awfully dirty faced boys you are." She, however, gave each some little present, which was unusual to boys in those early times. Those bare footed little wretches were, Thomas and Ben O'Neil, the now noted fresco painters, and W. A. Anderson. Mrs. Judah may have forgotten those words, but the boys have not.

Some Snakes.

We had a very enjoyable time at San Francisco recently, having been subpoenaed, with County Clerk Hamilton, to testify before the Supreme Court. On the train down, sitting smoking with Joseph Steffens and chatting, the conversation turned on the intelligence of animals, and in the course of the talk, Mr. Hamilton related the following incident, which struck us as being very remarkable. We write the story as he told it:

"Now, I will tell you, gentlemen—and you may not believe it, but it is true, nevertheless—that a snake has very fine feelings of affection and a great sight of intelligence. Up in El Dorado county there is an old man who used to be a trapper. He is running a little ranch there, and I always go there on my fall vacation. Well, one day I was out in the barn, and saw there the biggest snake I ever saw in my life. That snake was ten feet long, if he was an inch. I went to the house and told old Pete about it, and wanted him to come out with me and help kill the snake. Pete said: 'Why, Billy, you don't want to harm that snake; that's old Jim, my pet gopher snake. I have had him for years, and he kills gophers and squirrels. He always sleeps in this barn.' We went out to the barn, and the snake exhibited marked emotions of pleasure at meeting the old man. You could almost see that he was trying to smile.

"Afterwards I was helping Pete gather hay in the field. He had the hay in little cocks, and don't you know Pete stuck his pitchfork in one of the cocks, and when he had lifted it pretty nearly to the top of the wagon-rack, that snake, Jim, fell out of it to the ground. Well, sir, I never saw a man show the emotion Pete did. He knelt down by the side of the prostrate snake, and in a voice choked with emotion, said: 'My God, James, are you injured? For heaven's sake, stay in the barn after this, and do not expose yourself to injury.' That was the only time I ever heard him call the snake James. He coiled the snake up tenderly, and carrying him into the barn, made a nest in the hay and laid him in it, repeating the admonition to keep out of way of possible danger.

"Well, sir, as I tell you, that snake's business was to kill gophers and squirrels, and he was an expert in his profession. I will tell you, if he was put on the stand in Court, right there before Judge Van Fleet or Judge Armstrong, his testimony would be received as that of an expert. You may not believe me, but this is the way he acted: He would go to a gopher hole and cover the opening with his open mouth. Then he would whack on the ground, and the gopher, of course, would get alarmed at the noise, thinking there was an earthquake or something, and of course would naturally run out right into the snake's mouth. In catching squirrels he pursued a different course. He would watch when a squirrel went out, and then would back into the hole, and open his mouth at the entrance of the hole. Of course the squirrel, when he got ready to come, would come on a dead run, and of course would run right into the snake's throat. That is an absolute fact, all that I am telling you about that snake."

We do not know what Mr. Steffens thought of this story, and could only judge by one question he asked—whether the biting and scratching of the squirrel would not be unpleasant on the interior of the snake? Billy evidently thought the question leading, as he expressed no opinion on the subject.

A Curious Case of Insanity.

One of the curious features of insanity is that in some cases it will come and go with the regularity of shaking spells in ague. A remarkable case of this kind came to light at an inquest held in London, November 25, 1835, upon a Mr. Mackerell, who had committed suicide. For four years this unfortunate man had suffered from insane delusions every alternate day. His physician testified that whether in London or in the country, traveling by road or by sea, he was regularly attacked every other day, the monomania beginning when he woke in the morning and lasting all the day through. On the intermediate days he was a clear-headed and perfectly sane man. On two different occasions his alternations of good and bad days influenced his proceedings in a curious way, leading him to undo each day what he had done the day before. It was just before the era of railways, when long journeys occupied two or more days and nights in succession. At one time he secured a passage in the mail to Paisley, but on reaching Manchester he quitted the coach and returned to London. Again he quitted London by mail for Paisley, but turned back at Birmingham. It would appear that on his good days he was induced to travel northward, but the bad days then supervened and caused him to reverse his plans. This sort of life finally became so unbearable that in spite of his oft-expressed religious views, and on one of his sane days, he ended his sufferings by taking prussic acid.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

GEM GALLERY, THE ONLY

627 J STREET,

Ferotype Gallery
In the City.

Sixteen "Gems" for 50 cents. Card size proportionately low. Photographic Work in general.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.

Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 225.

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K.

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

"THE PLAY,"

Adjoining Entrance to Metropolitan Theater,

K STREET, FOURTH AND FIFTH.

Best of Wines and Liquors.

FAWCETT & KELLY, Proprietors.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J. west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & MECHANICAL DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

FRIEND & TERRY
LUMBER CO.

Wholesale and Retail Lumber Dealers, Also Shakes, Bolts, Ties, Doors, Windows, Blinds and Screens. Main Yard and Office, No. 1310 Second Street. Branch Yard, corner Twelfth and J Sts. P. O. Box 233. E. J. HOLT, Manager. Sacramento

Fine Table
Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Grand Humbly & Co.
Producers of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

CHAMPAGNE

W. B. CHAPMAN,
123 California St. San Francisco.
SOLE AGENT FOR THE PACIFIC COAST

For sale by all first-class Wine Merchants and Grocers.

R. W. PARKER,

Dealer in Choice Family

GROCERIES and PROVISIONS

Sold at the Lowest Cash Price.

Give him a call and be convinced.

Corner of Seventeenth and N Streets.

Also, Office of the Superintendent of the City Cemetery.

A. AITKEN,

PREMIUM PIONEER MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS

423 J Street, bet. 4th and 5th, Sacramento.

Costic Tile, etc. Cemetery lots enclosed with Granite. All kinds of work done in Italian and Vermont Marble. Direct importer of Scotch and Eastern Granite Monuments. Also, Marble Slate, Wooden and Iron Mantels, direct from manufacturers, at Reduced Prices. Call and examine.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The Placer Republican has a splendid cut of the town of Auburn in its last edition.

The Riggs Comedy Company, including Charles Cowles and Eleanor Best, will play Orin Judkins at the Clunie Opera House on Monday and Tuesday evenings.

The Milton Nobles company did a very poor business in From Sire to Son and Love and Law, the continued heavy storm raging at the time preventing the theater-goers from being present.

D. M. Burns has contributed $250 for the Sutter's Fort Fund. Dan always was a brick, and when fortune favors such a generous, whole-souled man, his friends can always rely on not being forgotten. Dan Burns left here without a cent, but Dame Fortune has smiled on him again.

The large stock of holiday goods at Joseph Hahn & Co.'s, corner of Fifth and J streets, will be sold out at a sacrifice and irrespective of cost. The purpose of the firm is to close out this entire stock of fancy and toilet articles, no matter what prices they may realize. Here is a prime chance to obtain cheap Christmas presents.

The great crowd of ladies who were desirous of making cheap purchases at the Dale sale were guilty of a little conspiracy against a policeman. While the crowd was pushing and jamming to obtain entrance to the sale-room, a policeman was discovered trying to push his way amid the throng. As soon as his object was devised, the ladies with one accord just crowded that officer so that he was glad to make his escape.

The communication of Colonel Fred. Crocker, who with his brothers and sisters are natives of Sacramento, regarding the preservation of Sutter's Fort, has a patriotic ring, and means much. He requests Mayor Gregory to ascertain the amount necessary to accomplish the object sought to be obtained, and that he and his family will aid in consummating the plans. This offer evidently looks to the rebuilding of the fort, in the light of a monument. We suggested plans a few numbers ago, which, it would seem to us, should receive the consideration of the committee. Colonel Crocker also makes suggestions in a line with our published plans.

"Henrietta."

Howard Bronson's play, The Henrietta, was produced at the Metropolitan last night, and was greeted by a large audience. This playwright has struck a popular chord in his dramas. While The Henrietta was written to fit Stuart Robson, and as a biting satire on stock transactions, it is not so overdrawn as to take the characters beyond the possibilities. Indeed, there is much that is vividly real cropping out all through the pleasant drama of life. The heartlessness of the manipulator of the stock boards gives place to the true nobleness of character, amid the warm and gentle impulses of those he loves. The base ingratitude and cruel deception of the wordly son, is not a whit overdrawn. There is, perhaps, a little fancy in "Bertie, the Lamb," but then it puts the finishing touch on the satire. Frank Mordaunt was simply great as "Old Vanalstye." Humor and sentiment alternated with him in the most pleasant manner. The deep feeling portrayed when his son's infamy was discovered was a splendid piece of art. Stuart Robson, as "Bertie," was, of course, the central figure, but this is a no one-part play. All the characters are good and in excellent hands. Miss Mary Waldron and Miss Eugenie Lindeman did some exceedingly clever acting in the respective characters of "Cornelia" and "Rose." This afternoon there will be a matinee, and a last performance to-night. The extra charge for reserved seats is unwarranted, neither the artists nor the play being of a standard to exact such a price.

Law and Sentiment.

The reasoning and conclusions of Hon. W. C. Van Fleet yesterday in a divorce case was something entirely unusual in legal matters. The case was one that attracted local public attention on account of the age of the contesting parties, and the peculiar position taken by the sons and daughters of the aged couple. Judge Van Fleet reviewed the history of the old couple during the forty years of married life, and with logical clearness, pointed out the folly of a separate existence during the remainder of their days. The opinion was marked by the choicest sentiment, and replete with the soundest of reason. The young Judge grew eloquent, coupling poetic fancy with sentiment and law—the perfection of reason. The parties to the suit must have been moved by the vivid picture presented to them of their struggles through the early frontier life amid poverty and sorrow and loss of children, and must have recalled their past happy life in such a manner as to make them regret the action which led to the present litigation. The judgment in Margaret Johnston vs. William E. Johnston, will be one that will be a mile post in judicial lore, and a lesson to the contesting parties, that ought to result in the greatest good.

FLASHES.

A strong article—boarding-house butter.

Girls nowadays buy shoes to fit their heads, not their feet.

The simper and giggle of the alleged society girl is unbearable.

When a woman's heart pants—it means she would like to—well, be the boss.

An unpleasant certainty at the close of the year is the fact that our exchequer is low.

It is not always the most sumptuous dinner party that is the most select and refined.

Frank Butler, the barber, boasts that he slapped Peter Jackson's face while the slogger was in the city. He used the lather brush.

The Weather.

The signal service reports for this city show the rainfall for the past week to have been 1.87 inches, as against 1.99 inches for the same time last year. The rainfall for this month, to date, is 5.02 inches, and for the season 14.19 inches, as against 6.96 inches to a corresponding date last year. The highest and lowest temperature during the past week was 56° and 41°, as against 56° and 41° for the corresponding week last year. The temperature this morning along the Pacific slope shows a cold wave in Oregon, the temperature being several degrees below the freezing point, while in this valley it was just bracingly cool and clear.

Bleached Hair No Longer the Rage.

The rage for bleached hair, according to experts, has entirely passed away. It was a species of dementia which has always been difficult to understand, for if there ever was an unpleasant thing to look at in the world, it was a head of straw-color, lusterless, white, and yellow hair, such as women affected here for a time. Its disappearance will be regarded with unmixed satisfaction by mankind in general, and the few women who are gifted with naturally blonde hair will achieve a pleasant ascendancy. The new tint is of a very dark red, and it is said that the fashion can be traced back to two sisters who posed as models for a number of French painters of nude subjects. Both of the girls had red hair, and it found its way into the salon, both of which made some talk. Then one or two of the much-gossiped-about women in Paris dyed their hair red, and the whole of the civilized world has begun slowly to troop after them. It is a curious fact that bleached hair had about the same beginning.—New York Sun.

AMONG THE REDUCTIONS

IN OUR

Music Books and Songsters

We quote the following:

Schneider's Piano School, from	$2 00 to $1 00
Students' Modern Method, from	1 75 to 1 00
Bertini's Piano Method, from	1 25 to 75
New England Conservatory Method, from	2 00 to 1 50
Hunt's Pianoforte, from	1 00 to 40
Clarke's Improved Method, from	1 50 to 80
Cramer's Select Pianoforte Studies, from	2 50 to 1 25
Duvernoy's Fifteen Studies, from	1 50 to 90
Beyer's Pianoforte, from	1 75 to 1 00
Czerny's Studies in Velocity, from	1 75 to 1 00
Peters' Pianoforte Instructor, from	3 00 to 2 00
Burgmüller's Instructor, from	1 25 to 70
Grove's New Method, from	2 00 to 1 00
Moscheles' Studies, from	2 50 to 1 50
Lebert & Stark's Piano School, from	2 25 to 1 25
Cramer's Fifty Select Studies, from	3 00 to 1 50
Campanoli's Violin Method, from	0 00 to 2 00
Winner's Method for Reed Organ, from	1 00 to 50
Gray's Easy Method for Parlor Organ	1 00 to 50
Blake's Method for Reed Organ, from	1 25 to 50
Mack's Method for Parlor Organ, from	2 50 to 1 25
Gems of German and English Song, 1m	1 00 to 50
Song Folios, from	75 to 40
Song Folios, from	50 to 20
National Dance Album, from	1 25 to 75
Schuman's Nine Ball Scenes, from	1 50 to 75
Golden Days Songster, from	35 to 10
Amethyst Songster, from	75 to 40
Favorite Songster, from	75 to 40
Part Song Galaxy, from	1 25 to 75
Anthem Gems, from	1 00 to 50
Gerkin's Choir Anthems, from	1 25 to 50
Bassini's Art Singing, from	3 00 to 1 75
Scotch Songs, from	75 to 40
The Pianist's Matinee, from	2 00 to 75
Operatic Pearls, from	2 50 to 1 50
Walter's Music for Catholic Church, fm	2 50 to 50
Pianoforte Gems, from	2 75 to 1 50
Opera and Oratorio at Home, by Meyer	2 00 to 1 25
Gems of the Dance, from	2 50 to 1 50
Gems of German Songs, from	2 50 to 1 50
Gems of Scottish Songs, from	2 50 to 1 50
Offenbach's Opera Bouffe, from	2 50 to 75
Sudd's Popular Duets, from	2 00 to 1 00

We have Something New Every Day that You Can Save 100 per cent on.

Our Music and Worsted Zephyrs

Will be on sale as soon as we have time to arrange the stock, and at prices that will carry them out rapidly.

BABY CARRIAGES

At prices that will warrant you in laying in a stock for future needs. We have them at $45—now down to $10.

GIRLS' PLUSH UPHOLSTERED TRICYCLES at less than factory prices.
ACCORDIONS at 20 cents on the dollar, original cost.

F. A. JONES,

Dale's Old Store,

625 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured

HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.
STABLE TO LET

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

R. DAVIS,

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.
1002 J Street, Sacramento.

BELL & CO.,

GENERAL AUCTIONEERS.

Salesroom, 927 K Street, Sacramento, Cal.

Regular Salesdays—Wednesdays and Saturdays at 10 o'clock A. M.

Assistants—W. T. Crowell, Real Estate; J. Pulvermacher, Bookkeeper; J. Lambert, Furniture and Stock.

Particular attention paid to sales of real estate, house sales, and sales of farms, stock, etc.

Highest price paid for all kinds of household goods.

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

—Gas and Steam Fitter.—

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice, SACRAMENTO

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SOUR MASH BOURBON WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagle & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGLE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

ROLLER SKATING RINK.

OLD PAVILION,

Corner Sixth and M Streets, Sacramento,

CLARK & HOLDEN, Proprietors.

OPEN MORNINGS FROM 10 TO 12 O'CLOCK, for ladies exclusively.

Open Afternoons from 2 till 4 o'clock.

Open Evenings from 7 to 10 o'clock.

Music Wednesdays and Saturdays,

Ladies' admission, free, except on music nights; ladies admission on music nights, 10 cents.

GENTLEMEN'S ADMISSION, 25 CENTS.

Communtation Tickets for sale.

GEO. H. CLARK.
FRED. A. HOLDEN, MANAGER.

BOOTS AND SHOES made to order. Boots, $6 to $11. Shoes, $4 to $9. Ladies' Shoes, best quality French Kid, $5 to $7.

REPAIRING DONE at lowest prices.

NONE BUT BEST mechanics employed.

WE GUARANTEE to make perfect fitting to the worst of crooked and crippled feet.

COMPETE WITH any shoes on the market.

216 J Street

—AND—

208 K Street,

SACRAMENTO.

A. CASELLI

& COMPANY.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.

L. RADLOFF,

LADIES' TAILOR.

218 POST STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Five Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN, Formerly of Agricultural Park.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

Miss Cody, a niece of Buffalo Bill, plays leading parts in '99 and The Danites.

Frank Cushman and Ned Thomas are at the head of a great minstrel troupe of forty artists. The combination will make the circuit of this coast.

Robert Downing intends to dramatize Sir Walter Scott's "Talisman." The first act is already completed, and the tragedian is hard at work on the remaining ones.

An imperial edict forbids applause in the theaters of St. Petersburg. How the American "gallery gods" would suffer if they should drop into a St. Petersburg theater. They would howl despite the edict.

Brander Matthews, the novelist, finds play-writing more profitable, and in some ways pleasanter, than other lines of literary work. He thinks, however, that the playwright has to undergo more nervous worry than the novelist.

There are two rival claimants to the authorship of "Down Went McGinty to the Bottom of the Sea." The dispute over the origin of these famous verses is nearly as bitter as that over the authorship of "Snow, Beautiful Snow," or of Shakespeare's plays.

Col. W. F. Cody, known on two continents as Buffalo Bill, is entitled to high praise. Having the entre to the highest social circles of the old world, he has allowed his daughter, Arta L. Cody, to marry Morton S. Boal, of North Platte, Neb. Mr. Boal is an American citizen, wearing no gilded coronet, destitute of pawn tickets, and completely out of debt. It is evident that Buffalo Bill is still loyal to his country.

Notwithstanding her collection of jewels, Fanny Davenport never affects any jewelry in private life, excepting a large and curious carbuncle ring and a silver-headed scarf-pin, with which she fastens the neck of her dress. She has had this pin for fifteen years, and considers that if it should be lost it would bring her ill-luck. She is also a believer in the horseshoe superstition, and carries with her a shoe found on Mount Tallac, at Lake Tahoe.

Rev. Robert Collyer wrote to Denman Thompson a few days ago in this language: "I do not wonder that the city and country far and wide should take such delight in The Old Homestead, because, as I sit and look, and listen, I can see how we cannot help ourselves if we would. Some things in it touch all our hearts. It touched me afresh as I sat there laughing and crying in the same breath. It is given to not many men and fewer women so to touch the hidden springs of what is noblest and best in us, and deepen and sweeten them."

Bronson Howard says of Gilbert, the dramatist: His cynicism is something unmatched in literature. It spares nothing, not even himself. There is a characteristic story of him that comes from Charles Wyndham. It seems that Wyndham had given him an order for a three-act play, and Gilbert had written two acts. The third was not forthcoming, and all Wyndham's coaxing and urging could not get it out of him. The actor at last lost his patience, and indicted a note like the following: "My Dear Sir: I have waited as long as I propose to for that third act. You will send it to me at noon to-morrow, or please to consider our business relations at an end." This was Gilbert's reply: "My Dear Sir: Since you choose to address me in this peremptory and arrogant manner, the third act will be ready for you at the hour mentioned."

John McWade, the popular baritone of the Said Pasha company, who is well known in Chicago, says the Herald, has but one arm, as every one knows. He used to wear a false arm, attached by straps, and this he first wore when he traveled through the Northwest in comic opera under the management of Will Davis, of the Haymarket. One morning the company arrived at a small town where they were to sing that night. Their arrival had been noised abroad, and there was a large crowd assembled on the station platform to see the "trouper." As the train pulled into the station, John was on the rear platform of one of the cars. He jumped off before the train came to a standstill, and the bent fingers of his false arm caught on the car rail. The straps snapped at the shoulder, and the arm slipped out of the coat sleeve and fell to the platform. Jessie Bartlett-Davis, the contralto, who was just behind John, jumped off, secured the lost arm, and slipped it under her coat. Then she took John's good right arm and walked off with him, leaving the crowd of curious country people staring after them in amazement. That evening they packed the opera house to hear a man who could lose an arm without flinching, and a woman who could pick up the lost member without fainting.

The comic opera comedian of to-day "is not in it" without the threadbare topical song. Time was once when these topical songs were enjoyable because they were something of a novelty, says the Chicago Herald, but when every singing comedian came along with a batch of alleged verses about the Mayor, the gamblers, the smoke, and the north side cable, the topical song began to get tiresome. One of the most successful of all of these topical songs was, "Bob 'Up Sincerely," as sung in Olivette. When the old firm of Comley & Barton first put that opera on the road, the part of "Coquelicot" was sung by Fred Lennox, the comedian, who was here recently with Said Pasha. He tells how hard he used to work to get up local verses for the song; and relates one instance when, in a certain small town, he asked a tough-looking stage carpenter for the names of two prominent men in the place who were enemies. The stage hand gave him the names of Kelly and Johnson, and Lennox thought up a verse about a quarrel between them, which he could wind up with "now is the time for disappearing" and the chorus. Well, he went on and sang the verse in response to an encore. He remembered Kelly's name, but forgot Johnson's, and he substituted "Umskates." Of course, he did not get a laugh. When he left the stage the tough stage carpenter approached him and asked: "What was that last name you mentioned?" Fred said: "Umskates." The stage hand looked at him a moment, and then remarked: "Yonng man, I've lived in this town thirty years, and I never heard of a man named 'Umskates.'" Giving the comedian a disgusted look he walked away. Thereafter Fred wrote local names on his cuffs.

Professional Chat.

General Singleton, of Quincy, Ill., who was one of the bright young lawyers of Springfield when Abraham Lincoln was a green youth there, tells this story, says the Washington Post, which we believe has never been printed before: The bevy of bright young ladies to which Miss Todd belonged before her marriage to Mr. Lincoln, used to have a good deal of sport at this awkward young man's expense. One evening at a little party Mr. Lincoln approached Miss Todd and said in his peculiar idiom: "Miss Todd, I should like to dance with you the worst way." The young lady accepted the inevitable and hobbled around the room with him. When Miss Todd returned to her seat, one of her mischievous companions said: "Well, Mary, did he dance with you the worst way?" "Yes," she answered; "the very worst."

It was Elder Buzzell who called on a worthy deacon to open a meeting with prayer says the Lewiston (Me.) Journal, and was surprised when the good man began his petition with: "O, Thou great, insignificant God." "Omnipotent, brother; you mean omnipotent God," whispered the horrified pastor. "Hush," ejaculated the surprised supplicant; "what's that you say?" The preacher repeated the correction, whereupon the deacon continued his prayer to a great length, and concluded as follows: "Finally, Lord, bless our edicated parson. Stuff him with religion as well as with words; break him of the habit of fault-finding, if possible, and at the 'leventh hour gather him with the saints to Thy kingdom." Elder Buzzell who was fond of telling the story, always ended by declaring that it was his first and last attempt at correcting the speech of his brethren.

Not to know Jim Townsend, would be to argue yourself unknown on this coast. The sharp, witty and quaint sayings of this "Wandering Jew" of the profession, are among the humorous literature of the day. Jim Townsend's humor furnished much material for Mark Twain's fame. Many of the good stories that emanated from jovial Jim were dressed up in a new garb, embellished, then sent upon the great sea of literature, carrying fame and renown to Sam Clemens. The famous "Jumping Frog" story, which gave Sam a starter as a humorist, is said to have originated with Jim Townsend. Sam Clemens and Jim Townsend were companions in the "flush times"—the times when everything fairly reveled in gold, whisky, fights and fandangoes. The good things that have been created by the brain of Jim Townsend would fill volumes and make humor equal to that of the greatest humorist of the day. Sam Clemens has grown wealthy and famous, but old Jim Townsend is still the modern wandering Homer; but in place of chanting verse, entertains his typo friends with his inexhaustible fund of humorous stories and sketches. Last week we had a vivid reminder of the good old times when Jim Townsend came into our office. We had not noted his arrival until attracted by these remarks: "Well, I'm —, 't this ain't 'Old Bill Miner? I know the old rooster by the back of his head." We knew that was Jim Townsend, and asked him how he was. He answered, "O, finer than a cut-off shotgun, by thunder." Now, a comparison to a cut-off shotgun might not be understood in these times. In early days, Wells-Fargo's messengers, who were sent out to guard the treasure boxes on the stages from stage robbers, were always armed with cut-off shotguns, these weapons being handy for offense and defense; thus a cut off shotgun was near perfection. After chatting a while we asked Jim what had become of his teeth, the absence of those members having been noticed. "Hang it, man, I bought those teeth to eat with, and have left them at the hotel; you don't suppose I need any teeth to drink with, do you?" Jim is a little deaf, and always talks loud, and emphasizes his utterances with sharp expletives—sometime ripe-roundered explosives. During this brief conversation Jim had not observed a lady compositor who works in the office. Upon this discovery it occurred to him that some of his language was rather harsh for the ears of a lady, and, being of a chivalrous nature, he deemed an apology necessary to the young lady. While the lady compositor was not personally acquainted with him, she knew him by repute, and would not take offense at his expressions. But Jim must apologize, and this is how he did it: "Well, Miss, you must not feel hurt at what a damned old fool like me says. Why, I wouldn't offend you for the richest strike on the thousand-foot level of the old Con. Virginia. I just dropped in to see the old boys, and used some of our old-time endearing terms in addressing them. We understand each other, and it would not be a family greeting if we didn't use some plain language." With this characteristic apology Jim resumed his chat with the boys. "Say, Bill," said Jim, "I would ask you out to have some oysters—you know I don't need teeth for oysters—but my recollection of inviting Sam Davis to have oysters is too vivid in my mind. Why, I invited Sam out to have oysters, and he said he wasn't hungry—had just dined—but if he didn't keep the oyster man opening the bivalves until $4.50 had been downed before he drew a long breath, I'm a sinner, and not one did I get. Well, if I had only struck him before he had his dinner, I would have been a hopeless bankrupt. No, Bill, I won't invite you to oysters to-day. Sam may have sent his appetite down to you." "We have something new over our way in setting type; we have a boy with electric fingers, who can set type ten times faster than the old way. He passes his hands over the type, and the type becomes magnetized to such an extent that it jumps right into the stick in regular order, and all he has to do is space it out. He can set a column while you are setting two lines. I tell you this electricity can be utilized in almost any manner." If Jim had not been deaf, he might have heard a slight expression of skepticism. But, then, Jim Townsend would not deceive us in a little matter like that.

Here is one of the stories that A. M. Palmer brought back from his summer's trip to Europe. He overheard an animated discussion in the Victoria Hotel, London, between an Englishman and a "Yankee," as all citizens of the United States are called on the other side. The dispute, of course, was relative to the merits of the disputants' respective countries. It happened, says the Sun, that the American was a bit the readier with his tongue, and maintained his ground so stubbornly that the Briton at last gave it up with the remark: "Well, you Yankees are getting so bumptious that we shall have to send over an army pretty soon to take some of the conceit out of you." The American's reply was one word: "Again?"

A woman in love is a very poor judge of character. She can see nothing but excellence where others see nothing but shallowness. Veritably, love is blind.

Book Chat.

Mr. Froude, the historian, is little known in London society at the present time, his almost continuous travels for several years past having kept him away from the world's metropolis.

Senator Ingalls is bothered by publishers who want his forthcoming novel. Even a London house has made him offers. By nearly every mail he receives letters on this subject. He has determined, however, to bring out the book himself, as he is desirous of obtaining a fair return for his labor.

Considerable interest seems to have been taken in our recent article on "The Smallest Book in the World." We now proceed, therefore, to describe a much greater (no, a much less) curio than any of those hitherto mentioned. For indication of its whereabouts we are indebted to Mr. Axon, M. R. S. L., of Manchester, and for courteous permission minutely to examine it, to Mr. John Plant, F. G. S., the accomplished curator of the Salford Royal Borough Library and Museum. The work in question (which differs from the rest in the essential point, that while like them, de jure, a book, it is also, de facto, a manuscript) consists of one hundred leaves of the finest rice paper, octagonal in shape, and measuring from side to side exactly one-half inch, stitched together and covered in silk. Nothing can exceed the lightness, delicacy, and softness of the material, or the neatness of the penmanship. This dainty little morsel of calligraphy, which, at the first glance, precisely resembles, in its glass prison, a very tiny butterfly of some uncommon kind, is, very probably, unique in the western world. How it escaped imminent destruction is not the least wonderful feature of its history; for it was looted at Ghanzi, in India, by a private soldier during the mutiny; but it has been safe in Mr. Plant's possession for many years. The work has not been translated, but is officially defined, on the authority of an Indian scholar, to be an example of the "Pathas, or Sacred Recitations of the Mahrattas Brahmans," and it is written without blot or alteration in the Mahrattas character, in glossy black ink, with a brilliant margin of vermilion to every page, which is also numbered. Possibly the acme of biblical minuteness is reached in this beautiful little work of art, which, for the present at any rate, may claim to be the "smallest book," as well as the "least (collective) manuscript in the world."—Pall Mall Gazette.

There is nothing easier than to get a book extravagantly mispraised, if only one or two persons who are in a position to set the fashion can be induced to give opinions, in advance, of the kind that the publisher desires. These opinions have each the same effect as a modern toilet soap advertisement, and their character is identical with that. It is the bane of modern literature, that criticism is thus disposed sheepishly to follow leaders. It is not criticism at all. It is identical in character with the opinions which fashionable folk imagine themselves to entertain with regard to home decorations, furniture, and dress. Their concern is to be in the fashion, to admire that which it is fashionable to admire, and to hold as immutable truth the dogma, whatever it may be, which underlies the latest "fad." The essence of fashion is conformity; the essence of real criticism is non-conformity; and when criticism surrenders itself to fashion and becomes afraid to dissent, it ceases to be criticism and becomes mere claqué. The critics of our age are, perhaps, the more complacent because it is a good-natured age, in which men are indisposed to say disagreeable things, and because the critics themselves are no longer dwellers in garrets, but men who wear dress coats, belong to clubs, and go into society, where they meet and have pleasant social intercourse with the men and women about whose books they write. They are usually acquainted with the publishers, also, and the publishers are good fellows, who advertise liberally in the newspapers for which the critics write. Unfortunately, certain publishers, and a considerable race of female authors, have found out how easy it is to influence criticism and turn it to profitable advertising account; and during the last few years the successful books have been those which have been most adroitly advertised and persistently pushed by their publishers, or, as is regrettably common, by their authors.—Geo. Elery Eggleston, in N. Y. World.

Jealousy an Inspiration to Dogs.

"One of the best ways to train an animal," said a dealer in trick dogs last week to a reporter, "is by exciting its jealousy. I have almost abandoned the use of the whip, and whenever I want to punish a dog now, I simply resort to a little plan that invariably works. For example, the other day I was trying to teach a dog to jump over a chair. He did it several times and knew very well what I wanted, but, somehow, he thought he would be a little stubborn, and I could not do a thing with him. Finally, I took another dog that knew the trick and had him do it several times in the other dog's presence. After he had done it as I desired, I caressed and rewarded him with an unusually large piece of meat. I refused to notice the first dog, but presently he began to try and attract my attention. Without a word from me he began to caper around the room and go through some of his tricks; and finally, with a little bark, as if to make certain I knew what he was about to do, leaped over the chair.—Indianapolis Journal.

The Secret of Beauty.

Nero, who fiddled while Rome was burning, was so near-sighted that, although he had the very best seat in the amphitheater at the gladiator shows, he could not see what was going on. One day he discovered that a certain concave emerald in his collection of jewels aided his vision materially, and from that time he always carried the emerald about with him, and, when he wanted to see anything at a distance, looked through it. He regarded the stone as a talisman and supposed that its properties were magical.

There comes from Kentucky a really charming story. A turkey hatched a large brood of young. The farmer who owned the hen and brood placed a bell on the mother, and the chicks, after they had instinctively ceased to follow their feathered parent, by force of habit continued to follow the bell. The farmer, observing this, took the bell from the hen and, when he hoed his tobacco, fastened it about his own neck. The young turkeys then followed him up one row and down another, eating the worms from the plants. They did the work of five men and saved the crop.

Why is it dangerous to go out in the spring? Because the trees shoot, the flowers have pistils, and the bullrush is out.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY BREWERY

FRANK RUSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER, BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON, The Leading Merchant Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501 -- 507 K, cor. Fifth

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

Klune & Floberg,

WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS

Agents for Rockford Watch Co.

NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Wm. J. Hassett.

A. J. Johnston.

A. J. Johnston & Co. PRINTERS,

410 J Street,

Sacramento

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city. Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exerescences, etc., Positively Cured or no Pay. No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated.
Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

ANGLO-NEVADA ASSURANCE CORPORATION

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

FIRE.—Cash Capital, $2,000,000—MARINE.

Sacramento Branch:

No. 1018 SECOND STREET.

JOSEPH STEFFENS, Manager.

HOWARD KIMBROUGH, Local Agent.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J,

SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and

Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

[SACRAMENTO.

R. H. PETTIT,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

IMPORTED & DOMESTIC CIGARS

Smoke the "Lone Fisherman,"

The BEST FIVE-CENT CIGAR in the Market.

NO. 225 K STREET.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Wm. Kuhlaw, Peter Miller, Elizabeth Davis, Henry Greisel, Robt. Robinson, and B. F. White, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 12th day of October, 1889, in which action M. G. Dandriel is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: That you, the defendants, and each of you, be required to set forth your several claims, or right, title or interest of, in and to Lots One to Eight, inclusive, in the Block bounded by J and K and Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California; and that said claims, or either of them, may be determined by a decree of this Court, and that they, or either of said claims, may be adjudged and declared invalid, and that the defendants, nor either of them, have no right, title or interest of, in, or to said land, and that plaintiff do have judgment against said defendants, decreeing plaintiff to have a good and valid title, and that the defendants be forever debarred from ever asserting any claim adverse to plaintiff, and for costs and for general relief, all of which will more fully appear from the complaint on file herein, to which reference is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said county of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified, that, unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief prayed for in his said complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [019-9t

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Charles Farley and J. W. Richmond, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 24th day of October, 1889, in which action Michael Haley is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To require you, defendants, to set forth the nature, character and extent of your claims to that certain real property in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California, known upon the official map of said Sacramento City as Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, in the Block between T and U, Ninth and Tenth streets; and to obtain a decree of Court adjudging that defendants, or either of them, have no estate, right, or title in said premises, or any part thereof; and that defendants be forever debarred and estopped from asserting or claiming any right, title, or interest to said premises, or any part thereof; and for such other and further relief as the Court may deem fit and proper in the premises; and for costs of suit. All of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

FRANK D. RYAN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Coe W. Birdsell, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 1st day of November, 1889, in which action Emma Birdsell is plaintiff, and you are defendant. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the grounds of wilful neglect and wilful desertion, all of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 1st day of November, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

ISAAC JOSEPH, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.—ESTATE OF JAMES MCENANEY, Deceased. Notice is hereby given by the undersigned administrator of the Estate of James McEnaney, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against said deceased to exhibit them with their necessary affidavits and vouchers within four months after the first publication of this notice, to him at the office of Frank D. Ryan, Attorney at Law, No. 504 J street, Sacramento City, Cal.

Dated Nov. 30th, 1889. LAWRENCE MCENANEY, Administrator.

d30-st.

TAXES.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 3748 OF THE Political Code, as amended March 16, 1889, State and County Taxes will be received at the office of the County Tax Collector, northwest corner of Seventh and I streets, in the City of Sacramento, on and after FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1889. Taxpayers will please take notice that on the last Monday in December (the 30th day), 1889, at 6 o'clock P. M. of that day, taxes will be delinquent, and unless paid prior thereto five per cent penalty will be added, as provided by law.

Tax Collector of Sacramento County, Sacramento, Cal., November 5, 1889. n9-4t

American Eagle Hotel

Corner Twelfth and J Streets,
SACRAMENTO.

This house has been put in first-class condition, and also newly furnished—everything being new from office to kitchen.

Board and Room, per Week, - - $5.00 to $7.00

MEALS, 25 CENTS.

Terms made with families.

GEO. W. NEWBERT, Proprietor.

J. O. MILLS,

High Art Crayon Portraits

Executed from Life or Tin-types or Photographs.
Inquire or leave orders at

406 J STREET, or 413 K STREET.

Sau Francisco Studio, 12 Dehone street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth, Church and Sanchez streets. References: Timothy Lee, Chief of Police, Col. Guthrie, Capt. Pouratt.

Bainbridge Business College

J. C. BAINBRIDGE, }
PRINCIPAL.

No. 1017 J Street, Sacramento.

A full Business Course, together with Short-hand, Telegraphy, Bookkeeping, Penmanship and all the branches usually taught in schools of this kind.
A full corps of Teachers of the first rank only employed.

MRS. BAINBRIDGE has charge of the Music Department.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEEEPING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6.
Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4.
Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

BAKER & HAMILTON,
San Francisco and Sacramento,
Importers and Jobbers of
Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,
MACHINERY
And Agricultural Implements.
Send for Catalogue.

SAN FRANCISCO

Steam Dyeing Works

Removed to 524 K Street.

Branch, 805 K St. Dye Works, 2511 J St.

All orders promptly attended to. Don't make a mistake—Main office at Capital Transfer Company.

JOHN STEEN, Proprietor Dye Works.

Trunks Removed, 25 Cents.

JAS. LONGSHORE,

SACRAMENTO TRUNK FACTORY,
530 K STREET.

Trunks, Valises & Bags Wholesale and Retail.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,
Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,
SACRAMENTO.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS,
Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

H. WACHHORST

Leading Jeweler of Sacramento
SIGN OF THE TOWN CLOCK,
No. 315 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

MOYNIHAN'S

418 J STREET.

FOR THE LADIES:

Just received, direct from Manufacturers, an elegant line of Silver and Oxidized Bonbonniere, Boxes Ladies' Cachon Flasks, and other Novelties.
Call and inspect them. THE ONLY FIRST-CLASS HOUSE IN THE CITY.

J. R. Wheat

DITTMAR & WHEAT,

A. Dittmar.

Sacramento Lounge & Mattress Factory

No. 916 J STREET.

Simon Strumer, WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,

No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

Important and Worth Investigation

We are making Suits to order of the fine Huddersfield Worsteds for $25, which are worth $40. As the sales of these fine worsteds during the past three weeks have proved such a success in San Francisco, we have added a large line of Kerseys and Meltons, for Overcoats, with fine silk-serge lining all through, made to order from $30 to $35, which would cost elsewhere from $40 to $60. We have also received, direct from the mill, over forty pieces of fine Trouserings, which we bought at an immense reduction, and are now prepared to give our customers and the public of Sacramento the benefit. These are fine all-wool goods, at prices never before known in Sacramento. Please call and examine goods and be convinced of the bargain now offered for the holidays by

JOE POHEIM, THE TAILOR,

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

419 K STREET.

FOR THE PUBLIC! Special attention to the largest assortment of PURE HOME-MADE CANDIES, Bon Bon and Bonniere boxes and French Glazed Fruit in the city. Also, other Fancy Goods.

JAS. G. DAVIS

Furniture, Carpets and Wall Paper
411 AND 413 K STREET,
Branch, 315 K St. Send for Catalogue. Prices Lowest.

Announcement.

OUR STOCK IS CONSTANTLY BEING REPLENISHED WITH

—A FULL LINE OF—

HOLIDAY GOODS!

—CONSISTING OF THE—

Latest Designs and Novelties in the Jewelry Line

DIRECT FROM EASTERN MARKETS, WHICH WE OFFER AT LOWEST PRICES.

SAMUEL JELLY, JEWELER, 422 J Street.

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.

Southern Pacific Company

PACIFIC SYSTEM.
Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6:50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11:40 A
3:05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7:25 P
11:00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3:40 A
7:05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6:45 P
7:25 P	Knights Landing	7:40 A
9:00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9:55 A
8:00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6:25 P
12:01 A	Central Atlantic Express	6:00 A
3:00 P	Oroville	10:30 A
3:00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10:30 A
10:40 A	Redding via Willows	4:00 P
6:15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7:25 P
6:50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8:35 P
3:05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11:40 A
4:00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10:40 A
*10:00 A	San Francisco via Steamer	8:00 A
11:25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2:25 P
6:50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11:40 P
11:25 A	San Jose	2:25 P
7:05 P	Santa Barbara	9:55 A
6:50 A	Santa Rosa	11:40 A
3:05 P	Santa Rosa	7:25 P
9:00 A	Stockton and Galt	6:45 P
7:05 P	Stockton and Galt	9:55 A
8:00 P	Truckee and Reno	6:25 P
12:01 A	Truckee and Reno	6:00 A
12:05 P	Vallejo	10:20 A
6:50 A	Vallejo	11:40 A
3:05 P	Vallejo	8:35 P
*12:15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10:25 A
*7:15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2:40 P
*5:20 P	Folsom	*6:50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning, P for afternoon.

A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED K COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

THEMIS

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1889.

No. 44.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

At Christmas-tide the open hand
Scatters its bounty o'er sea and land.
And none are left to grieve alone,
For love is heaven and claims its own.

Christmas is upon us—the season of good cheer; the year's day of charity. Let us not forget to scatter our bounty; let none be left in our midst to grieve alone. Let it be remembered there are many among us to whom Christmas can be made a day of happiness, and a stream of sunshine poured into many an humble home, if those who have abundance will so will. The disasters of this year at Johnstown and elsewhere in our country called for and received a generous response from our people. We have yet plenty. The angry waters of the past ten days have spread a desolation in portions of this valley that appeals for aid to those nearer our homes—our neighbors. While no widespread devastation happened—a matter for which we should be grateful to God—yet sad havoc was occasioned in individual instances. Of late years there has been too much disposition to make an indelicate display of acts of charity, and it would seem, in some cases, the reward for giving was expected to come through the publicity the donors gained in the press. As a general proposition, the people regard such parade in bad taste, and feel more kindly at learning that the bounty was extended by an unknown hand. In some instances, and some have occurred this year, the matter of raising funds for relief was greatly overdone, and large sums of money contributed that were expended for purposes not anticipated or designed by the donors. The matter of the dispensation of aid to the needy, so far as this city is concerned, can be best attended to through the Howard Benevolent Society, in a very large measure, and through such institutions as the orphan asylums and churches. Money and articles contributed to them will be properly directed, and will reach the families and individuals most in need of assistance. Much good can come also from acts of individuals, who may be conscious of the condition of their neighbors. A few years ago several gentlemen here made it a custom each year to privately inform themselves of the needs of the poorer families, and on Christmas eve wagons loaded with appropriate gifts stopped at the doors of those for whom the bounty was intended and a quiet dispensation made of them. The recipients knew not the quarter from whence the articles came, and the giving and reception was relieved of all indelicacy. The satisfaction of having contributed to the merriness of the Christmas of others added to the good cheer of the unknown benefactors. The custom of giving Christmas presents is tending too much to useless and expensive articles—articles that in very many instances are not appreciated by their recipients. It results in throwing away a large amount of money to no purpose of particular good. A very slight curtailment in this respect and the application of the money saved in aid of the deserving poor, would not be felt, except in the humble homes of the unfortunate, from which grateful prayers of thanksgiving would be raised. When seeing the ragged child wistfully looking into windows, filled with all manner of pretty things he could not hope to get, think what a trifle would make him happy—simply to take him inside and buy him the toy of his choice. Let us scatter our bounty.

The high water occasioned by the recent storm has brought the people of this valley to a very keen appreciation of the dangers to which they are liable from winter and spring freshets. As we stated last week, the high water mark reached by the Sacramento was beyond that before known since the American occupation of the country. The break in the levee on the Yolo side, immediately below the city, had the effect to lower the river water level, as it afforded an outlet into the extensive basin lying to the west. This break developed a new danger. Immediately when the water began to run through it a bar formed below the break, and in a period of extreme high water, the passage of steamers was obstructed. So serious is the apprehension that the main watercourse of the State may leave its established channel and seek a new one through the basin to the west, and destroy its navigability, that it has called from the Governor a letter to Senator Stanford, with the request that the matter be presented to the War Department. The letter of Governor Waterman fully explains the impending danger. The suggestion he makes that much good will be accomplished by the immediate closing of the breaks in the levees, is one that appeals to sound reason. If these breaks are closed, the immense volume of water confined by the levees will very soon scour out the channel. We have no doubt that had there been no break in the confinement of the waters, there would have been a very material deepening, that would result to aid navigation and to, in the future, lessen the strain upon the levees. We have no question that when the matter will be presented to the governmental department prompt and efficient action will be taken, as has already been taken with regard to the appropriation already made. The matter of restraining within its channel the volume of water the Sacramento should carry at its highest stage, is not in this day an engineering problem. It has been demonstrated. Rivers more torrential have been subjected in older countries and in ours. The Mississippi has been reduced to the subjugation of man. The Rhine and its branches in Europe have been straightened and levied. Its different arms are enclosed by extensive embankments, that protect the country from inundation and insure its navigation. The skill of engineers will, without considerable cost to government, control the Sacramento and its tributaries, and forever avert the danger of destruction of the valuable properties in the valley from inundation, and insure for all time its practicable navigation. While the losses that have been sustained this high water season have been severe and deplorable, there is the compensation that they will bring to the attention of the people and government a realization that effective improvement should be made without delay. Professor Davidson has fully demonstrated this in his recent opinion, based on experience, and wisely suggests a system of levees that will prevent impediments by local and individual levee schemes, all to be under control of government commissioners.

The Board of Trustees on last Monday declared for a new charter, and will call an election for Freeholders at an early date. While the action of the Trustees in naming fifteen freeholders as the choice of the Board, is not binding on electors, still, if good representative citizens are suggested, this should have some weight with the people. We, however, present a list of names to select from, any fifteen of whom would make excellent charter-makers. There should be nothing of a partisan nature in this matter. There should be no cranks or men with hobbies on this Board of Freeholders. Here is our list to select from: W. F. Knox, J. H. McKune, A. P. Catlin, Matt. F. Johnson, V. S. McClatchy, N. Greene Curtis, C. H. Hubbard, H. M. LaRue, C. L. White, E. W. Hale, Dr. W. R. Cluness, Dr. H. L. Nichols, Alonzo R. Conklin, W. D. Comstock, C. S. Houghton, H. B. Nielsen, L. Elkus, Ed. F. Smith, W. F. Huntoon, Joseph Hahn, August Heilbron, Douglass Lindley, H. Weinstock, Thos. H. Berkey, Chris. Green, John Rider, E. G. Blessing, Dr. M. Gardner, F. D. Ryan, Ed. F. Taylor. Any fifteen names selected from the above list would furnish material to frame an excellent charter.

There is no branch of modern education so little understood generally, or about which there is so much popular misunderstanding, as short-hand. Its principles are easily acquired by any one of ordinary intelligence, after a short season of application, but to become so skillful as to write it with the speed of speech is the result only of years of very patient study and practice. At the best, no man, however experienced, has ever been able to read his original notes with the facility of print or ordinary manuscript, and the most prominent reporters have difficulty, at times, to read portions of their notes. We see it suggested, in the East, that the study of the art should be included in the curriculum of the public schools. Some years ago the study was introduced in the schools of San Francisco, but was abandoned. Circumstances, however, have changed, so far as the utility of short-hand is concerned, in the last few years. Formerly it was employed only for reporting the proceedings of legislative bodies, courts, speeches, sermons, etc., and for that class of work very few have been able to obtain the requisite speed to follow the speakers, combined with the varied general knowledge needed, for a reporter cannot report upon a subject with which he is not familiar. As it is, a reporter of reputation, who has been accustomed to work on legal and political matters, will make a sad failure when attempting to report a sermon or a scientific lecture, and one drilled in reporting religious or scientific discourses will be lost if called to work in a court or a legislature. We venture there are not three reporters in the State who would undertake to furnish a correct and verbatim report of a convention of medical men for the discussion of subjects concerning their profession. Very few there are who are able to report a speech, argument, or proceedings of a legislature, and dress their work so that it will read properly in print. It must be remembered that, with very few exceptions, speakers are very incorrect in their utterances, and were their remarks not trimmed up before going to the printers, they would read awkwardly. An important qualification of a reporter is to put the language he takes in short-hand in shape for the press; in most instances he has to almost write the speech, preserving the ideas of the speaker, and so adapting his language that the persons who heard it uttered will not detect the change in the construction of the sentences and of the words. In reporting testimony given in courts, the rule is different, and the words as they fall from the lips of lawyers and witnesses in the questions and answers, are taken down and written out literally. Except in reporting the proceedings of Congress, and now and then a political speech, short-hand, written with the speed of speech, is now seldom employed, aside from matters connected with the law courts. Its employment in and about the courts is constantly increasing, and particularly has that been the case in the last few years. Twenty years ago few courts were equipped with a reporter; now, every Superior Court has such an officer, and important criminal cases in Police and Justice's Courts are reported. The supply of highly-skilled short-hand reporters is not equal to the demand, and it is not at all likely to be for many years to come.

Of late years, since type-writing machines have come into general use, short-hand has become an important feature in business and other offices of large correspondence, and an extensive field of employment has been opened up to our young people—a field for which young ladies are particularly fitted. The necessary qualifications in short-hand there are not exacting, as the work in correspondence is generally routine. It was but a few years ago that a wholesale merchant of this city happened into the office of the Court Reporter and occasion required that several letters be written. The merchant sat at the desk and prepared to do the writing, but the Reporter said: "We cannot waste time to write; I will dictate the letters." He dictated them to one of the short-hand clerks, and they were soon transcribed on a type-writer. The merchant expressed astonishment that the work was so soon accomplished, and by another. He said: "I have to write no less than fifty letters a day. Sometimes I have to sit in my office and write until 11 o'clock at night. I wish I had your facilities; it would save very much of my time and relieve me of drudgery." He experimented with a clerk who wrote short-hand and on a type-writer. His firm now employs two short-hand clerks constantly; they have become a necessity. Other firms followed his example; the field widened, and now, as we remarked, the short-hand clerk and type-writer has a desk in every considerable mercantile house, and in every office that has any great volume of correspondence. In view of the rapidly increasing demand for help of this class, the study of the art has been successfully introduced in commercial colleges, and the time will come when it will be found necessary to teach it in the public schools. As an accomplishment, short-hand is valuable in almost any avocation of life. It can be easily acquired to be of use for ordinary business purposes; but a person who adopts it as an independent profession must calculate on very many years of study and practice to fit him for the general and varied work he will be called on to perform in court-rooms, legislative halls and newspaper offices. Every professional reporter has a full appreciation of the troubles of David Copperfield and his statement: "I bought an approved scheme of the noble art and mystery of stenography, and plunged into a sea of perplexity that brought me, in a few weeks, to the confines of distraction." Dickens learned short-hand in his youth, and in young manhood reported the debates in Parliament for newspapers. No doubt in Copperfield he pictured his own experience in his endeavor to acquire the mysteries of the noble art.

On March 2, 1889, Congress passed an Act providing, in certain cases, for the removal of the charge of desertion from the military record of regular soldiers and volunteers of the late war; also the regular soldiers and volunteers of the war with Mexico. The object of this enactment was to enable those who have meritorious cases to receive their pensions and other benefits. While we think that there should be no clemency shown the wilful deserter in time of war, there are cases where there was some excuse, some mitigating circumstances, which would justify an amendment of the military record and a removal of all disabilities to enable the soldier to regain an honorable standing, and receive the benefits given by the Government to its defenders. There is a case within our knowledge of an old resident of this city, which calls loudly for an amendment to his military record, and the removal of the charge of desertion set opposite his name in the Adjutant-General's office of the United States. John Ruggles, who has been a resident of this State ever since 1847, and a resident of Sacramento county since 1848, enlisted at Governor's Island, August, 1846, as a member of Stevenson's regiment, Company K, Captain K. H. Dimmick commanding. Ruggles came with his regiment to California, served faithfully until about the middle of July, 1848. At this time the gold discovery excitement was very great, and the soldiers stationed at Los Angeles and San Francisco partook of the excitement, and hundreds deserted and rushed to the mines—officers and privates alike were seized with the gold fever. As a matter of history, the war with Mexico had terminated before this time, and peace declared, but the news had not reached the military department of California. About the middle of July, 1848, John Ruggles happened to be with five or six soldiers, who had determined to go to the mines and abandon soldiering. When they got into their boat to go up to Sacramento, they forced Ruggles to join them, fearing he would inform on them before they could reach a safe distance. He accompanied them to Sutter's Fort, the present site of Sacramento, and here he left them and at once returned to his command, not having been absent more than two weeks. He reported for duty and explained the circumstances. The officers in command, however, concluded to make an example of Ruggles, who was the only one that ever returned, or that ever was apprehended for desertion, for the purpose of deterring others from deserting. A court-martial was convened, and notwithstanding the mitigating circumstances, Ruggles was convicted, punished, and dishonorably discharged. Of course this judgment deprived him of all benefits, and the fact that he served all through the Mexican war counted nothing in his favor, in face of this conviction and dishonorable discharge. Within six weeks of this action the news of the declaration of peace came, and all the soldiers were mustered out and given honorable discharges. Since that time various pension and other benefit Acts have been passed by Congress in favor of the Mexican War Veterans, and while all old John Ruggles' comrades have received pensions and benefits, he has been compelled to rest under this unmerited disgrace and disability for forty-one years. The Act of Congress of March 2, 1889, it seems to us, was passed to fit just such a case as that of John Ruggles. We understand that some of the friends and comrades of Mr. Ruggles have taken his case in hand and applied to the Secretary of War, under the Act, to have this dishonor removed from his name, so as to enable him to share the benefits accorded his companions in arms. Forty-one years is a long time to suffer under an unjust charge, but tardy justice may be done the old man before his gray hairs go to the grave.

Did the Dead Move?

A well-known photographer will vouch for the following facts: He was called in one day to take a photograph of a young girl of about twenty, who had died a few days before. The corpse was laid out upon a bed, with the hands clasped over the breast. Death had come very gentle to her, and, except for the stillness, she lay there as if asleep. Some flowers had been strewn over the body, and on the floor by the side of the bed, and standing out in black relief against it, was the coffin. The photographer silently adjusted his lens and took the photograph. During the ten minutes needed for the exposure, the photographer paced up and down in the long corridor outside the room where the dead girl lay. When he returned he saw that on the lid of the coffin was a flower, which was not so before. How did that flower come there? No one had entered the room; the windows were closed, and there was not a breath of air stirring. Why was the flower now lying on the coffin, when a few minutes before it was on the bed, between the hands of the corpse? The photographer listened, but he could hear no sound except the beating of his own heart. In a few minutes, however, he determined to dismiss the question from his mind, and busied himself with packing up his instrument. The he paused—possibly the falling flower had left a trace on the negative, or, as the day was gloomy, the photograph might not be quite successful. He would try again. A second photograph was taken, and the artist returned home. That night, sitting up late in his studio, he developed the two negatives. The position of the corpse was not the same in the two negatives. The photographer strained his eyes, half disbelieving the evidence of his own senses, but there were the two negatives before him, telling in their silent, unmistakable truthfulness that between the taking of the two photographs the arm of the dead girl had distinctly moved. The mystery of the flower on the coffin was solved, but it was succeeded by a mystery more terrible still.—London Tablet.

First California Newspaper.

James O'Meara, in the Overland, says: "Walter Colton and Robert Semple were the first editors of the first newspaper published in California; the two founded the Californian, in Monterey, August, 1846. Colton had brought the press and type from the American missionaries in Honolulu. It was an old Ramage press, of wooden frame, wooden bed, and platen of hard wood, worked by a screw, and capable of making 100 impressions an hour. It had been sent from Boston to Honolulu. The type had been long in use, and was of faulty font, without the letter 'w' or italic. Two 'v's' were substituted to represent 'w,' in capitals and small letters alike."

Concerning this matter, the Colusa Sun, of the 14th inst., says: "We have heard Dr. Semple talk of this paper often, and our recollection is that Commodore Stockton captured the 'outfit' and gave it to the parties named. It was a Spanish font, and hence was without the 'w.' If it had been sent from Boston to Honolulu it would have had that letter. We are not positive about where they got the material, but we fully believe that we have heard Dr. Semple say Commodore Stockton gave it to them. The type, he said, was all in one pile. It had to be worked on cigarette paper. Colton was Chaplain in the Navy, and at that time Dr. Semple was an enlisted soldier, and both got leave of absence to run the paper."

To Remove Sunburn and Freckles.

To get off the freckles, to cause the sunburn to disappear, you have got to put on your face and neck, and on your arms, darkened by battling with the waves, a mixture of two parts of Jamaica rum to one of lemon-juice; dabble it well on the surface, let it dry, and wash it off in the morning in your hot bath. Besides whitening the skin, which the lemon does, the rum gives it a vigor and makes a rosy flush come to the surface. You will gain no good from this by doing it for one or two nights; keep it up for two weeks at the least, and remember that when your skin has that depressed, worn-out look that comes from sitting up too late at night, nothing will invigorate it like a few drops of Jamaica rum put into the water with which you wash your face.—N. Y. Sun.

The Mighty Armies of Europe.

Statements vary as to the magnitude of the army which Xerxes brought with him from Persia for the overthrow of Greece, but, even if Oriental imagination is allowed to dwell upon the figures, the array would be smaller than the armies that several of the European governments can now call out in case of need. A complete mobilization would give to France an army numbering between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000. Indeed, some recent authorities have estimated that, under the new military rule, in a few years more the number of men who would be directly connected with the army, or connected with its military operations, could not fall short of 4,000,000. Germany could now put into the field an army of 2,650,000, which will doubtless be increased by the proposed changes in the military law to more than 3,000,000. Austria has prepared for war a force numbering about 1,300,000. The Italian army, upon a war footing, numbers about 2,500,000, while the Russian army has resources in troops which amount up to 5,000,000.

The First Meerschaum Pipe.

In 1793 there lived in Pesth, the capital of Hungary, Karol Kowatee, a shoemaker, whose ingenuity in cutting and carving on wood brought him into contact with Count Andrassy, with whom he became a great favorite. The Count, on his return from a mission to Turkey, brought with him a piece of whitish clay which had been presented to him as a curiosity on account of its extraordinary light specific gravity. It struck the shoemaker that, being porous, it would be well adapted for pipes, as it would absorb the nicotine. The experiment was tried and Karol cut a pipe for the Count and one for himself. He would work on them at odd moments during working hours, without wiping the wax from his hands. He noticed that the wax gave the pipes a pretty brown polish and also that they smoked more sweetly. Other noblemen, hearing of the wonderful species of clay, imported it in considerable quantities for the manufacture of pipes. The natural scarcity of this clay, known as meerschaum, and the great cost of importation in those days of limited facilities for transportation, rendered its use exclusively confined to the richest noblemen of Europe up to 1830, when it became a more general article of trade. The first meerschaum pipe made by Karol Kowatee has been preserved and is now in the museum at Pesth.

Thomas Edwards, of Erie, was walking along the street the other day when his dog came up, pulled his coat and tried to make him retrace his steps. He turned around and followed the dog a short distance and picked up a fine revolver. The dog seemed to know that the weapon was valuable, although it was too heavy for him to carry in his mouth.

The Enchanted Lady of the Mountain Castle.

There was once a young peasant girl who was the handsomest maiden in all the country round, but she was wretchedly poor in everything except blood. Her cheeks were as red as two peonies, and one day when she cut her hand with the sickle, it seemed as if the blood would never stop flowing. Fortunately the shepherd's house was not far off, and the shepherd was at home. He was a man who understood more about the art of healing than ten city doctors. He repeated a charm, and as an extra precaution stuck a plaster over the wound. Then it stopped bleeding, and of course it was the charm that did it.

Three days afterward the beautiful girl took her apron to the brook to wash out the drops of blood which had fallen on it. The water came down from a wooded hill, which was crowned with an old ruined castle, and not far from its source formed a wide, deep basin, on whose shore grew willows and alder bushes. The maiden knelt down by the edge of the water and began her work without looking up.

But after a while she chanced to raise her eyes, and to her astonishment she saw that she was not alone. Opposite her, on the other side of the brook, knelt a beautiful, pale woman, dressed in pure white, who was also trying to wash out some blood-stained linen. But as often as she took the garment out of the stream, the drops rolled off as from the feathers of a swan, the cloth remained dry, and the stains as bright a crimson as before. The maiden looked with amazement at the strange washerwoman, and scarcely dared to breathe.

At last the pale lady saw that her work was useless. She looked at the bloody garment and said half aloud;

"My veil I have washed for three hundred years,
But as bloody as ever it still appears."

Then the maiden was seized with terror; she jumped up and ran in wild haste away from the uncanny washerwoman and back to the village.

In the village lived an old wise woman, who could give advice about all sorts of things. After the angelus the young girl went to her and told her what had happened.

"That was the enchanted lady of the mountain castle," said the old woman, and then she related what she knew of her history.

"Many years ago a knight lived up there in the castle, and he had a wife who was beautiful beyond all compare, but likewise proud and vain. And because she prized beauty above everything else, she had recourse to witchcraft, and committed a horrible deed. When her little child was born she stabbed it through the heart, and bathed herself in the warm blood. By this means she expected to win eternal youth and imperishable beauty. As the penalty for her crime she finds no rest in the grave, but has to wander about in the old ruins of the castle. The huntsmen and woodcutters often see her there as she goes about wailing and wringing her hands. The long veil which floats down from her head is dotted with red pinks; in reality they are drops of blood. And when the day on which she committed the horrible crime comes around, she goes down to the water in the forest to wash the blood stains from her veil, but she has never succeeded, and never will. They say, besides, that she guards a treasure that lies buried in the old castle; and who knows, my child, but it might have fallen to your lot if you had held your ground."

The young girl listened to the old woman with awe. But in spite of her fear she ventured the next day to go to the brook again, where the ghostly washerwoman had appeared to her, but the pale lady did not come. Indeed, the old woman spoke truly when she said the enchanted one appeared by the water only on the anniversary of her evil deed. So the girl took notice of the exact day and hour and waited patiently a whole year long.

When the year had passed away and the day had come back again, the courageous maiden went with a bundle of washing on her head, to the place where the spell-bound lady of the castle had appeared. She took the precaution to hide a little wooden cross in her bodice as a charm against evil spirits. But the nearer she came to the brook, the more her footsteps faltered, and her heart beat louder and louder, and when she really saw the enchanted washerwoman by the edge of the water, she came very near turning back. But the pale lady gave her a look so inexpressibly sad that the young girl overcame her fears and lingered.

"My veil I have washed for three hundred years,
But as bloody as ever it still appears."

murmured the unhappy woman, and she rubbed and rinsed the bloody linen while she groaned and sighed.

Then the young girl took heart and said: "In the name of the Lord, give me the cloth!" The pale lady looked up with delight and handed the veil to the maiden. And lo, beneath the hands of the virgin, the red stains disappeared, and the linen became as white and clean as newly fallen snow.

Then bright tears rolled down the pale face of the spell-bound lady; she took the proffered veil and beckoned to the maiden with her white hand.

Like a will-o'-the-wisp she glided over the ground, swerving now to the right, now to the left, among the fir trees. From time to time she turned her head to see whether the maiden was following her. She had grasped her little cross and walked bravely behind her weird leader, who went toward the ruined castle.

In an underground vault, whose roof had fallen in, the pale lady checked her footsteps and pointed to a stone which was set into the floor.

The maiden raised the stone with her strong arm, but the next moment she started back with horror. In the hole stood a kettle filled with gold pieces and costly ornaments, but on the top of it lay a little dead child with a bloody wound in its breast.

The young girl was about to run away, but when she saw how the pale lady wrung her hands in deep distress, she remained where she was and laid the wooden cross she carried in her hand on the dead child's breast.

Then the lady in white folded her hands and bent her head low. She grew paler and paler like a dream at the crowing of the morn-heralding cock, and finally the misty form faded from sight.

When the young girl turned her eyes again toward the hole, the dead child had disappeared, the cross lay on the precious kettle, the yellow gold shone and glistened in the sunlight which came through the broken wall.

Without any further fears of apparitions, she carried her treasure trove safely home, and in the eyes of the young men became three times as beautiful as before. —Current Literature.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

The Riggs Comedy company was a miserable failure. We want no more such travesties on the drama.

Patti expects to make $500,000 from her present American trip. She evidently wants the world, and regards it as her oyster patti.

The Grand Duke of Oldenberg has written a drama in three acts, entitled Schloss Parad, to be brought out at the theater of Presburg, Germany. The author pays all the expenses of production. It is a great thing to be a Grand Duke and a playwright.

Sarasate has become a greater idol to certain New York women, young and impressionable, than was Kyrle Bellew or Herbert Kelsey. His photographs are selling at a rapid rate and his mail is filled with scented notes. But Sarasate cares only for the notes of his art—not for the notes of the heart.

To-night at the Clunie Opera House the Howard Athenaeum company will give one of its unique entertainments. When the combination last appeared in this city it gave universal satisfaction. George Thateher, unsurpassed in eccentric minstrelsy, has been added to the company. There is a large number of specialty artists which go to make up the combination.

A correspondent, writing of Gilbert and Sullivan's new opera, says that a fine touch of humor is shown by supplying a woman about to undergo torture with the London funny papers, in order that time may not hang heavy on her hands. The correspondent labors under a misapprehension. The woman's torture begins when the London "humorous periodicals" are given to her.

The cause of the decline and fall of burnt cork negro minstrelsy, after flourishing more or less luxuriantly for a quarter of a century, is not hard to find. The minstrel performance of to-day is, as a rule, nothing more than a variety show given by blackfaced artists. The burnt cork on their faces, the boues and tambo as end men, and the man in the middle have been retained as a matter of form. But the faithful portrayal of negro character is no more seen in these nondescript productions. The spirit that made colored minstrels popular is dead; there is no good reason for postponing the counterfeit's departure from the stage.

William H. Crane, the comedian, arrived at the Union Square Hotel on Sunday morning, and while he stopped at the office to get his letters, Mrs. Crane went up to the rooms overlooking Union Square, which had been assigned them, in company with one of the hall boys. On opening the door she saw a large bird standing directly in the middle of the floor. Her instantaneous conclusion was that the bird was stuffed, but at the same instant that this conclusion had been reached, she saw the bird move its head, which was at the end of a very long neck. "Did it move, Chris?" she asked, turning to the bell boy. "I guess it did, mum," was the reply. "Is it—is it wound up, then?" Mrs. Crane asked again. "I think it's alive, mum," said the boy very stolidly. And alive it was, sure enough. It was a very lively specimen of a crane, a bird whose outlines have been made very familiar to the public, because of reproductive sketches on æsthetic draperies. When the bird began to squawk, after a very inharmonious fashion, Mrs. Crane had it bundled very incontinently out of the room. After its departure, she found a note on the table. This note was addressed to the comedian, and was signed "A Hundred Friends," and was to the effect that these friends had known for some time how ardently Mr. Crane had desired that the Crane family should be more numerous than it is at present, and that they were bound to do what they could to have his ambition gratified. —N. Y. World.

There are a few incidents in the life of every actress which stand out from others by reasons peculiar to themselves. Miss Margaret Mather, last night, at the Park Theater, was the subject of one such incident which she will doubtless remember forever. The play was Gretchen and a large audience had assembled to pay their respects. Many floral tributes awaited a curtain call in the lobby, and everything looked auspicious. The first act of Gretchen opens on a churchyard stretching away from a dark ivy-covered monastery. The time is almost midnight, and only the faintest beams of the moon enliven the gloom of the graveyard. From the obscurity march among the tombs a long line of Dominican fathers muttering their prayers. They pass from the churchyard to the monastery. These fathers are the intelligent supers draped in appropriate garb. One more interested than the rest in the thread of the story, pauses in the wing to await the arrival of "Gretchen," who, under the art of "Mephisto," appears as a vision at the back, among the graves, covered with a halo, the joint effect of a calcium and electric light. "Mephisto" and "Faustus" among the tombs await the conjured vision. It comes in the form of Miss Mather arrayed as a vision. The super in the wing presses forward with excitement, until, unknowingly in the darkness, he stands upon the stage in full view of the audience, somewhat obscured, however, by the darkness. Miss Mather sees the unsuspecting auxiliary, and knowing that in a moment the light from the calcium will discover him fully, with commendable presence of mind and with a dreamy motion waves her hand toward the super, supposing he would at once retire. He thinks an emergency is at hand and rushes forward, shaking the outstretched hand of the actress. Of course the light discloses the entire transaction to the convulsed audience.—Philadelphia North American.

Professional Chat.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said an Irish barrister, "it will be for you to say whether this defendant shall be allowed to come into court with unblushing footsteps, with the cloak of hypocrisy in his mouth and draw three bullocks out of my client's pocket with impunity."—The Green Bag.

The longest lawsuit in any country, that is on record, was in England. It appears to have arisen in a litigated question respecting certain possessions near Wooten-under-Edge, in the county of Gloucester, between the heirs of Thomas Talbot, Viscount Lisle, on the one part, and the heirs of Lord Berkeley on the other. The suit was instituted toward the end of the reign of Edward IV, and was still pending in the reign of James I, at which time a compromise took place between the parties, thus embracing a period of 120 years.

Defendant—Now, dochter, by virtue of your oath, didn't I say: "Kill or cure, dochter, I'll give you a guinea?" and didn't you say, "Kill or cure, I'll take it?" Doctor—You did, and I agreed to the bargain, and I want the guinea accordingly. Defendant—Now, dochter, by virtue of your oath, answer this: Did you cure my wife? Doctor—No; she's dead. You know that. Defendant—Then, dochter, by virtue of your oath, answer this: Did you kill my wife? Doctor—No; she died of her illness. Defendant (triumphantly, to the bench)—Your Worship, see this. You heard him tell our bargain—it was to kill or cure. By virtue of his oath, he done neither, and he axes his fee!

Senator "Zeb" Vance of North Carolina, says the New York Tribune, tells the following at the expense of one of the District Attorneys of his State, though he considerably refrains from "mentioning names." It seems that one day a "professional gentleman" established a faro bank in one of the towns of the district whose public morals it was the duty of the District Attorney in question to guard. The fact coming to the knowledge of a law-abiding citizen, the District Attorney was immediately informed of the presence of the wicked man of the "chips." The District Attorney was engaged in the court-house at the time in the discharge of official duties, and when he got through and retired to his room in the hotel, he could not recollect the crime of which the newcomer had been guilty, but remembered that it sounded very much like the name of a King of Egypt of whom he had read in his boyhood days; but here again his memory was at fault, for he could not call to mind the name of that King. So, going to the minister of the town, he stated to him that he had that morning been reading about a very wicked King of Egypt, but had forgotten the place in the Bible where it was to be found, and, wishing to refer to it immediately, had come to him for the information he desired. The minister referred the man of the law to the book and chapter, and he retraced his steps with a satisfied air; but his memory proved treacherous again, for when he reached his room he could not recall anything the minister had told him. Determined, however, to vindicate the majesty of the law, he drew an indictment in the usual form and sent it to the grand jury, charging the contumacious individual with having violated the laws of North Carolina in manner and form following, to wit: "Having taken the name of the King of Egypt (name not recollected) in vain." The story is a good one, as far as it goes. The only trouble is that "Zeb" Vance is unable to make the people to whom he tells it believe that there is a single man in his State who doesn't know all about "chips" and "faro" and other sinful occupations of a like character.

Book Chat.

Among the treasures of the Kansas Historical Society is a "rebel" geography which was compiled in 1862 by General John H. Rice, then a prominent Georgian, but now equally prominent as the editor of the Republican Fort Scott Monitor. Twenty-three pages of it are devoted to the "Confederate States of America," which are cited as "the best example of a Republican form of Government."

Who, after reading that pathetic story, "The Runaway," has not wished to know something of "Patience Stapleton?" She is the daughter of an old sea captain, and was born in the little town of Wiscasset, on the coast of Maine. Ten years ago one of her first literary efforts, written at the age of seventeen, drew the prize offered by the publishers of The Youth's Companion for the best story written by a girl under eighteen years of age, and it contained so much merit that the editors at first doubted that it could be the work of one so young. Since then she has taken another prize from the same publication, and written many stories for various high-class periodicals. Her first novel, "The Marble Horse," ran as a serial in the Detroit Free Press a few years ago, and "Kady," a Colorado character story, was recently published and met with many warm admirers. Mrs. Stapleton has the genius of the short-story writer, and for the pathetic, the truthful human touch, has not, in her best work, her equal among American writers. She is a blonde, young, handsome, stylish, with laughing blue eyes, witty in conversation, and possessed of charming manners. Although an Eastern-born woman, the romance of her life belongs to the West, and the incidents of the "The Runaway," and "A Colorado Cloud Burst," are significant of an experience. About six years ago she married Colonel William Stapleton, editor of the Denver Republican, and with occasional visits to New York, remains a satisfied resident of the beautiful city of the plains.—Current Literature.

NOTES.

It is said that the word "lord" is derived from the Saxon word "loafward," meaning guardian of the loaf. This quaint derivation may account for the fact that many of the "lords" are loafers—loafers in the broad as well as the narrow construction of the term.

That was a bright and thoughtful youth, who conceived the idea of trying some of his best girl's cooking before he broached the subject of marriage. He managed to get himself invited to a dinner of her cooking. Well, he has not been to see her since. It is not reported what became of him, whether the dinner killed him, or simply frightened him.

An English correspondent has the bad taste and lack of literary judgment to say, "Nobody cares about Byron now." Why, you idiot, Byron's fame grows with each year, and he stands as a giant in the realms of poetry. It might be truthfully said that no one reads or cares for Byron who enjoys slush and foolish bosh. Byron was a king of poets.

There is an old superstition that has a hold on the majority of mankind, that a silver or gold coin in one's pocket will keep the devil out of it and thus protect the possessor of such coin. It often happens, however, that the fellow who has too much coin in his pockets, finds the Evil One there to lead him to destruction. We would take the chances of the full pockets despite the influence of Satan.

It is said that the Czar has turned his attention to learning to play the American game of poker. The bursting of bombs, will be nothing to compare to the explosives which will come from having an ace full beaten in a big jackpot. We would like to deal him a hand, and one to himself, in a no limit game. Just while he is learning how to play. We would have Christmas funds after the deal.

The Italian Queen, Margherita, is a great admirer of pearls. Every year the King, her husband, gives her a new string of pearls to add to her necklace, which now extends from her neck to her waist. There is one string of very valuable pearls which were given her by her young son, who was too poor to pay for it all at once, so he arranged to pay the jeweler by installments. This particular row of pearls she prizes higher than all the rest. It is the boy's good wishes in making this present under the circumstances that places the value in his mother's eyes.

The old expression "milk in the cocoanut," has a practical application in the scientific world. It has been developed that an excellent and healthful quality of butter can be produced from the milk of the cocoanut. We have long been able to make first-class jewelry from old boots, and a fine article of sugar from old rags; and now butter, that indispensable table article, can be manufactured from the cocoanut. Oleomargarine will have to be retired with its germs of tuberculosis. All things being even, we believe in the good old cow butter, fresh from the churn.

Now comes a scientist with a theory that water does not make a safe element in extinguishing fire, because when combustion evolves a certain intense degree of heat, the water coming in contact with the flames emits a great volume of hydrogen gas which burns with frightful fury. Some years ago "Caxton" wrote a remarkable story founded upon the addition of a substance to water that made it combustible, and by means of which the ocean could be set on fire. "Caxton's" imagination may have been founded in science after all. Water is a dangerous thing, anyway. This is another excuse for drinking beer.

After the experience in the famous Cronin murder case at Chicago, it would seem that it is about time the police department, and all peace officers of that city should be looked to with great care. It is high time that these departments should be cleansed of all Clan-na-gael suspicions. From developments on the recent trial, it appears that justice was retarded, and very nearly defeated through the agency of the sworn officers of the law. Chicago is not the only city in this country which might profit by cleaning the Augean stables, relating, so to speak, with the police force. Sacramento could take a little lesson to herself, in matters of the suppression of crime and the duties of her peace officers.

The title "speak-easies" is given to all the saloons in Philadelphia where liquor is sold on Sundays against the provisions of the law. You "speak easy" to gain admittance, but the "speak loud" after taking a drop or two, was the means of exposing the little evasion of the law, and the police gave the culprits a chance to "speak easy" to the magistrate. The "speak easies" of Sacramento are devoted to the use of that class of would-be bloods, who boast of the number of young girls they can entice into these "speak easies" and then accomplish their ruin through the agency of vile liquors. The public should "speak loud" and at the same time with effect to suppress this vile system of destruction to the youth of both sexes.

We often hear the expression "discovered a mare's nest." Few understand its true meaning or derivation. The idea prevails that it means some great discovery, which develops into a trifle. What we call a nightmare was the old Saxon demon Mara, a kind of vampire which sat on the sleeper's chest and prompted the sleeping visions and oppressive feelings. This vampire had a place where they lived, and were called Mara's or Mare's nests, and where the Mara is supposed to keep guard over some hidden treasure. When any one supposes he has made a great discovery we ask if he has discovered a mare's nest, or a place where the vampire keeps guard over imaginary treasures. The Mayor's nest of this city is now sought for by a number of gentlemen. It is a nice, comfortable nest and the treasury is not of an imaginary character. The present occupant is desirous of holding his position of guardian of the nest. The vampires who are sucking the money out of our treasury, are not imaginary either—they exist in the character of hound-holders.

In the editorial columns this issue, we refer to an effort that is being made to remove the disabilities of a member of the famous Stevenson regiment, who was punished for an involuntary desertion in 1848. The company K of Stevenson's regiment referred to, was recruited in Chenango county, N. Y., by Kimball H. Dimmick, a lawyer of Norwich, of that State, who was subsequently elected Captain. On August 3, 1846, the company left Chenango county for the rendezvous of the regiment on Governor's Island, at which place they arrived the following morning. When the regiment embarked for California, this company was assigned to the transport "Loo Choo," arriving at San Francisco March 26, 1847. Upon its arrival in California the company was stationed at the Presidio, near San Francisco, at which port the company remained on duty until its discharge from the service, August 15, 1848. It will thus be seen that the apparent desertion for which Ruggles has been made to suffer, occurred but about a month before the disbanding of the company. His name appears on the roster of the regiment prepared and printed by one of the survivors, Francis D. Clark, of New York.

Eating Crow.

Regarding the origin of the expression "eating crow," an Eastern exchange says: Without being certain as to the real origin of the words "eating crow" (for it is difficult sometimes to trace such things authoritatively), we may give a story which we have seen used for the purpose. It appears that an old farmer somewhere on the banks of the Hudson below Albany, took summer boarders to help him eke out the profits from his farm. He sold the best of his farm products, however, and often palmed off on his boarders "store" articles bought at a lower price. To their murmurs he replied, "I kin eat anything. I kin eat a crow." This remark was repeated so often that one of the guests finally shot a crow and got the cook to prepare it for dinner. Fearful, however, that the farmer might have stomach for even such a dish, the bird was liberally seasoned, while cooking, with Scotch snuff. The farmer was rather taken back when the dish was placed before him, but had too much pluck to give in beaten without a trial, and attacked the bird with the remark, "I kin do it." At the second bite he repeated, "I kin eat crow," and as he suddenly suspended the operation of cutting the third mouthful, and began a retreat toward the door, he added, "but dang me if I hanker arter it!"

We have heard another version of the origin of this expression. It is that a sportsman of little discretion, when out gunning, killed the pet crow of a farmer. The owner of the bird, to punish the slayer, had the crow cooked, and held a gun at the sportsman, forcing him to eat of it. It was evident that the dish was not enjoyed, and the man with the gun relented before the bird was entirely consumed, and said: "Well, this punishment is too rough; I will not compel you to finish it." The sportsman watched his opportunity, and seizing the gun, pointed it at the owner of the late crow, and said: "Now, you will have to suffer. Finish up that crow or I will blow your brains out."

Letitia Aldrich, the niece of Senator Wm. M. Stewart, of Nevada, will produce her new comedy, Maid Marian, at the National Theater, Washington, January 9th. The comedy is said to be a fine one, and likely to receive public favor. The distinguished uncle of the fair artiste may add to the success of both comedy and actress.

SUTTER'S FORT.

Letter from General John Bidwell—His Estimate of the Descriptions of the Old Fort published in "Themis."

General John Bidwell, of Chico, was one of the first of the American companions of Captain Sutter after the establishment of the fort. The General occupied for some time a position of importance at the fort, and was, before 1848, and ever since has been, prominently identified with the history of the State. We deem the following letter from him of great importance, for, as there seems now a disposition to restore the fort as it was originally, and in any event to effect a partial restoration, any data that can be obtained should be preserved. There are few men living who are better able than General Bidwell to recall the scenes of those early years:

CHICO, Dec. 19, 1889.

It is nearly a month since the receipt of your letter, with a copy of THEMIS. You ask if I can throw any light on the killing of "The White Horse?" or "any other reminiscence mentioned therein?" Being in the mines on Feather river at the time, I can say nothing of my own knowledge. Of course, everybody heard of the fact that C. E. Pickett killed the man, and that he was tried and acquitted. I had, I think, known the man—think his name was Coryell. Of this, however, I cannot be positive, for in trying to recall the events alone from memory, I may confound the killing of a man by Coryell—McDowell, the gunsmith.

The birdseye view and ground plan of Sutter's fort are remarkably correct. The bastions, to my mind, should appear just a little higher—and they had not gable roofs, but hip roofs—that is, sloped equally from an apex. At least this was the shape of the roofs when first made.

Sutter's business office, where his accounts were kept and all his business transacted, was in the northeast corner of the second story of the building, marked "A." [Referring to the building now standing.—Eds.] His private office, however, is correctly marked "g." Said building "A" was made in 1841, and, when I saw it last of November of that year, had simply walls and roof—no doors, stairs, floors or windows. In comparison with the thatched huts which surrounded it, this was an imposing edifice at that date.

In one of the small buildings, I never knew which—Sutter had managed to distill brandy from the wild grapes that same year—1841—for he offered us brandy to drink, and told us he had made it from wild grapes. I did not taste it, but those of our party who did, pronounced it excellent. But I cannot recall the fact that any distillery was ever used at Sutter's fort from that date till the fall of 1845, when Sutter established one, and made whisky from barley, which was a great curse and caused more trouble than anything he ever did. Sutter may have had some of the brandy made in 1841, as he kept it mostly for his private use, and only offered it on rare occasions to visitors, when Fremont first arrived in 1844.

Yours, very truly,
JOHN BIDWELL.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The young couple, B. F. Shields and Katie Mantz, who figured in a sensation a day or two ago, have settled matters by getting married.

The Marguerite Free Kindergarten and Sacramento Kindergarten have each given interesting programmes for their respective patrons, including Christmas trees and literary entertainment.

Hon. P. W. Keyser, Superior Judge of Sutter and Yuba counties, is dangerously ill. Judge Keyser is one of the most courtly and polished gentlemen, as well as a learned Judge, in this State.

The Riggs Comedy Company's baggage was attached in this city for overdue salary. If there was any one in that fearful combination that is entitled to a salary, the public failed to observe it.

Next Friday evening the ladies of the First Baptist Church will give a Merchants' Carnival at Armory Hall. There will be fifty young ladies, representing a like number of business interests in the city, a series of tableaux, with musical and literary features. It will be well worth attending.

The storm did not deter a large number of the lovers of music from attending the musical, given under the direction of Arthur M. Strahl and Frederick G. Knell, the former was pianist and the latter violinist. Mrs. A. Bonheim assisted in the entertainment. The Museum Association proposes two more entertainments—one a lecture by Prof. J. G. Kennedy, on January 10th, on the subject, "Industrial Education," and on January 23d, another by Dr. W. E. Briggs, who will treat on "The Wonders of the Eye."

H. D. Gamble left this week on a visit to the East. He will there meet his wife, who preceded him, and will take in the attractions on the Atlantic side. When he reaches Washington, if we mistake not, he will, from his portly and dignified carriage, be mistaken for a United States Senator from one of the new States, and venture that if he happens into the Senate Chamber, the Doorkeeper will open the gate and ask him what State he represents?

Our College Pupils.

The Christian Brothers' College commenced its examinations last Monday, and has continued through the week. From the crucial tests applied to the students, it is evident that the course of instruction of this educational institution is complete. During all the course of examination, the exercises have been interspersed with choice musical gems and other literary entertainments.

The following is the standing and average percentage of the young gentlemen of the collegiate department for the term ending December 21, 1889: William P. Dwyer, 96 per cent, standing one; James P. Kelly, 95, two; William A. Callaghan, 96, three; John P. Keefe, 92, four; George F. Kiethly, 91, five; James V. Hughes, 90, six; A. B. Martin, 61, seven; Frank S. O'Brien, 58, eight; Jas. W. Butler, 95, one; Antoine C. Schnerr, 94, two; James C. Collins, 92, three; Joseph B. Kelly, 90, four; Frank J. O'Brien, 82, five; William J. Lanagan, 80, six; James W. Hanford, 78, seven; Michael J. Lavelle, 70, eight; The following named young gentlemen of the collegiate department are to receive testimonials of merit: William P. Dwyer, James P. Kelly, William A. Callaghan, Peter Lynn, Cornelius J. Lucey, John P. Keefe, George F. Kiethly, James V. Hughes, James N. Butler, Antoine V. Schnerr, James C. Collins, Joseph B. Kelly, Frank J. O'Brien, and Wm. J. Lanahan.

Twelve Million Machines
IN USE.

THE LIGHT RUNNING

DOMESTIC
Sewing Machine

Leads all others. Most Durable, Simplest, Best.

Every Agent claims the machines he sells the best, but talk is cheap. TIME is the only real test of genuine merit. During TWENTY-SIX YEARS of practical use the DOMESTIC has withstood this test. It stands to-day without a peer. Recommended by all White Goods Sewers, Dressmakers, Tailors and Manufacturers. Used by over 4,000 Families in Sacramento City. It is the only Sewing Machine with really Self-Setting Attachments. It costs you nothing to try it before you buy another. Sold on easy installments. Old machines taken in exchange.

Domestic Sewing Machine Co.

A. J. POMMER, Selling Agent,

Northwest corner Ninth and J streets, Sacramento.

Fine Table
Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Grand Hamdathay & Co.
Producers of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

FLASHES.

The elect of the day—electricity.
A striking affair—Wachhorst's clock.
Money can never pay the debt of the heart.
Heroes and lovers never work for money.
Enjoy what you have, hope for what you lack.
Love makes time pass—time makes love pass.
Bee line—the shortest route for news and coin.
Silence is a fool's wit, and a wise man's virtue.
Sharp featured people can easily cut acquaintances.
A business conducted on sound principles—telephone.
Most sermons of the present day are longer than they are broad.
A crossed electric wire is a dangerous thing. So is a crossed woman.
Those who receive "pinters" on stocks or races, usually need quarters thereafter.
Women take solid enjoyment at being martyrs—their "Tale of Woe" is a pleasure.
What is the sense of continuing the absurdity of making out the bill of fare at public, or other dinners, in inaccurate French? Not one in a hundred knows the least about it.

The Bodie Miner.

H. A. Weaver, the well-known printer, is now a partner in the business of the Miner Publishing Company, the principal place of business of which is at Bodie, Mono county, with a branch at Stockton, San Joaquin county. Mr. Weaver is of the old-school of printers of the coast, the contemporary, though younger, of E. G. Jefferis, Paul Morrill, Job Court, and very many others who are remembered as masters of their day. We can say the people of Bodie and Stockton can expect job work in taste in typography that will astonish them, for Weaver is one of the best men in that line on the coast. Harry is also a journalist of large experience.

She Wouldn't be Hugged.

The Truckee Republican speaks of an interesting episode that occurred at Sierraville the other day, where there was a case of amateur theatricals. When the love scene was reached the heroine got a notion that she wouldn't be hugged in public, and when the lover held out his arms she refused to fall into them. He tried to reach, but she eluded his grasp. He insisted on his privilege, and chased her all over the stage; while the audience shouted and yelled, and offered to help him catch her. Finally, he caught her and hugged her, which made her so mad that she wouldn't go on with her part, and the play stopped right there. The audience did not complain, they had got more than their money's worth. Sacramento amateurs are not afflicted that way. We remember, however, a few years ago, one of the editors of THEMIS was cast as the heroic lover in an amateur performance, and his modesty prevented him from making any advance demonstrations in the hugging scene. The young lady with all becoming modesty suggested in the succeeding acts, that a little more reality might improve the effect of the scene. After that there was no lack of hugging in the genuine manner. But our Sacramento girls are not like those of Sierraville.

The Bodie Miner, a sprightly paper published at Bodie, Mono county, has the following:

THEMIS, printed at Sacramento by A. J. Johnston & Co., is almost a year old, and is steadily growing in value as an advertising medium and as an able representative of the community it represents. Alfred J. Johnston is a thoroughly accomplished business man and printer, and has the ability to command the services of the best craftsmen in the State. Winfield J. Davis had the inestimable advantage in his early career as a journalist of being under the guidance of the lamented James Anthony, deceased. W. A. Anderson is a learned lawyer and a graceful writer, to whom the daily press of Sacramento is under many obligations. The paper is honest; higher praise is impossible.

There were interesting exercises at Atkinson's business college last night, on the occasion of the conferring of diplomas on the graduates. State Superintendent Hoyt delivered an address, followed by a musical programme, in which Miss Eva Griffiths and Mrs. Esther M. Needham took part. Appropriate addresses were delivered by Attorney-General G. A. Johnson and ex-Governor Geo. C. Perkins. The closing remarks were made by Prof. Atkinson. The exercises were opened with a blessing pronounced by Rev. A. C. Herrick. The quartet, composed of Messrs. Desmond, Miliken, Hansbrow and Shannon, rendered some excellent music on the occasion.

A glance at Moynihan's show window would at once inform the people that the holidays are upon us. There appears a magnificent dwelling-house, complete in all its compartments. Moynihan's never does things by halves. His store is a model in its line, for all the sweets of life are found there.

Monday is wash-day, and every woman who is not wealthy is afraid to stay at home that day lest her friends will think she is doing the washing. So she gets up before light, tackles a tub and a washboard, and at 9 o'clock gets dressed and comes down town. When she meets a friend she smiles languidly and says: "Oh, I just determined to stay out of the house to-day. Everything is upset and my servants are busy with the washing, and you know what that means." "I did the same thing," returns her friend, whose hands are withered under her kids from the warm water she has been scrubbing in, "and took this opportunity to run down and do a little shopping."

Curtis Hicks, an ossified man, who resides in Racine, Wis., has been attracting a great deal of attention. He has been visited by many doctors and others, who pronounce him a living wonder. At one time he was one of the most popular railroad engineers in the western country. A newspaper man called upon him, and found a man not over five feet high, lying upon a bed in an apparently lifeless condition. Hearing some one approach, he roused up and conversed in a clear voice and in an intelligent manner for over an hour. His feet, toes, ankles, legs, knee-joints, and even the hip-joints, are in a complete state of ossification. They were as hard as bone, and the skin was of a reddish color. The arms, hands, fingers, and all the joints of the same, were in like condition, and the man stated there was not a single joint in his body that was not ossified. His jaws are set, and only a cracker can be forced between his teeth. His body is in a perfectly healthy condition and his mind unclouded. Still, he is like a dead man, and has not been able to move or help himself for ten years.

The Weather.

The signal service reports show the rainfall for the past week to have been .86 of an inch, as against .32 of an inch during the same period last year. The total rainfall this month, to date, is 5.88 inches, and for the season 15.05 inches, as against 7.26 inches to a corresponding date last year. The highest temperature during the past week was 55° on Tuesday and Friday, and the lowest 38° on Monday. The highest and lowest for the same time last year was 63° and 38°. The barometer began falling again last night, and has fallen quite rapidly up to noon to-day, which is the cause of the present wind storm, the extreme velocity of which, up to 11:30 A. M., ranges between 20 and 30 miles per hour.

Kris Kringle Carnival

Is now being held at the Red House, J Street, between 7th and 8th, and all the fathers and mothers, as well as all of the children, should pay him a visit before the Christmas Holidays. It is perfectly wonderful the many articles he has collected for his exhibition this year—and then so many of them are not only ornamental, but useful as well.

The variety of Wagons for the little ones is endless, and they come in wooden and iron wheels, red, blue and oak beds—some with two and some with four wheels—some with poles and some with shafts; and then to think, they are so cheap, from 25 cents up.

In Rocking Horses, you can get them for the little one of four years to a full size horse, and they are so beautiful.

Then the Shoo-fly Rocker, which is something new this year, comes with elephant and horse sides, so the little one cannot fall out.

In Dolls the variety is endless: some small and some large; some dressed and some undressed; some in rubber, some in wax; some in China; and, in fact, every conceivable variety. Some that wink and some that cry—and they are so perfect that you would think they were flesh and blood.

Then just take a look at the endless variety of other toys, Tool Boxes, Drums, Shovels, Rakes, Wheelbarrows, Crystals, Hoops, Ten Pins, Tops, all kinds, Balls and Bats, and in fact, everything that the mind of man could think of to please the little ones. All of the above goods are now reduced in price for the rest of the season, for the rain has put the season so far back that the time is short and the goods must go. Try Department down stairs. If you want anything for your wife or sweetheart, you will find it in stock, as well as a present for Pa, or Dear John, just as you like. There are Dressing Cases, Manicure Sets, Glove Boxes, Handkerchief Cases, and, in fact, the variety is so great that you are sure to find what you want, and what will please the one you get it for.

In Foot-wear, you can get Ladies' French Kid hand-turned, button Shoes, made on common sense and opera lasts, for dress or dancing, widths B to E, size 2 to 7, price $3.50. Also, an extra quality for $5, cheap at $6.

In Slippers, we have a beautiful assortment of men's handsome silk plush embroidered, hand-sewed Slippers, from $1 to $3. Men's genuine Cordovans, French calf, hand-sewed lace and Congress Shoes, an exact counterpart of Hanau's last, every pair warranted, $6. The same shoe in French calf, hand-welt, the same style last, for $5.

In Handkerchiefs the variety is endless; silk ones from five cents up. Also beautiful Suspenders, silk faced, with silk ends, in all colors and at all prices. They make a fine present for a gentleman. Also, a fine line of Silk Mufflers, in all the latest shades. Neckwear in endless variety.

Then, just take a look through the Millinery Department, and you can find a hat or a bonnet that your wife will like, for the stock is so complete that no one can help getting what they want, and everything is so cheap that you will have something left after you have got what you want, to buy your Christmas turkey with.

Come early and get first choice. RED HOUSE, J Street, between Seventh and Eighth.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & AND MECHANICAL & DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

FRIEND & TERRY
LUMBER CO.

Wholesale and Retail Lumber Dealers. Also Shakes, Bolts, Ties, Doors, Windows, Blinds and Screens. Main Yard and Office, No. 1310 Second Street. Branch Yard, corner Twelfth and J Sts. P. O. Box 233. E. J. HOLT, Manager. Sacramento

R. W. PARKER,

Dealer in Choice Family

GROCERIES and PROVISIONS

Sold at the Lowest Cash Price.

Give him a call and be convinced.

Corner of Seventeenth and N Streets.

Also, Office of the Superintendent of the City Cemetery.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured

HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.

R. DAVIS,

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

—Gas and Steam Fitter.—

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN, Formerly of Agricultural Park.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice, SACRAMENTO.

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SOUR MASH BOURBON WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagele & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGELE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

GEM GALLERY, THE ONLY
Ferrottype Gallery

627 J STREET,

In the City.

Sixteen "Gems" for 50 cents. Card size proportionately low. Photographic Work in general.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done. Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

"THE PLAY,"

Adjoining Entrance to Metropolitan Theater,

K STREET, FOURTH AND FIFTH.

Best of Wines and Liquors.

FAWCETT & KELLY, Proprietors.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, ETC.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.

L. RADLOFF,

LADIES' TAILOR,

218 POST STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

BOWSER AGAIN.

Mr. Bowser has been that way ever since we were married, and I suppose he will keep it up to the end—just like all other husbands. When he brings home half a dozen collars I know that a circus is about to begin, and I prepare accordingly. After supper he goes upstairs to try them on, and I take a seat on the lower step, knowing full well the part I am to play. For a couple of minutes all is quiet. Then I hear the mutter of distant thunder, followed by an exclamation of:

"By the great horned spoon, but if I had that man here I'd murder him!"

About sixty seconds later his head appears over the banister and he shouts:

"Mrs. Bowser, come up here!"

"What's wanted?"

"Come up here! Look at those collars, will you?"

"What's the matter?"

"Matter! That infernal shirt-maker ought to be scalped! I told him No. 15, and he has made them all No. 20."

"Nonsense! Here's the stamp on them, and they are all right. Try one on."

He buttons one on and they fit splendidly. Indeed, he never had such a fit. He looks in the glass, however, grows red in the face, and shouts:

"Look at it! I'll kill that man before noon to-morrow! He has done it to spite me!"

"Mr. Bowser, that collar is all right. You never had one to set—"

"Right! Right! Look at it hunch up in the back! See how it sets in front! Observe how it is sawing away at my ears! You want me to look like a baboon, don't you? I'll walk in on that shirtmaker after breakfast to-morrow morning, and if I don't slam the buttons off'n him then I'm a liar!"

"But I can't see anything wrong with them."

"No, of course not! If they made me look like a baked owl you couldn't see anything out of the way! Mrs. Bowser I've got to have a long talk with you. There are some things which must be settled!"

And next morning he puts on one of the collars without a word and there is never any more fault-finding. They were a fit and all right, but he wouldn't be an average husband if he didn't growl and kick. It is when his new shirts come up that the whole menagerie is put on exhibition free gratis. They invariably come up of a Saturday night and he wants to put one on for Sunday wear. I know what is coming, and I take baby over to mother's and give the cook liberty to go out for the day. I am hardly ready for him when the magazine explodes.

"Mrs. Bowser!" he shouts over the banister. "Well!"

"Did Lynch bring home my shotgun last night?"

"What do you want of a shotgun?"

"To kill the infernal idiot who made these shirts! I'll have his life before the sun sets to-night! I'll murder him right before his wife and children!"

"Why, Mr. Bowser! What's the matter with the shirts?"

"Matter!" he yells, as he jumps up and down, holding one of the lot at arms length, "everything's the matter! My band is fifteen inches scant; and he has made these 4,000 rods long! Look at that bosom! Look at that yoke! I'll follow that man to the end of the earth but what I'll have his blood!"

"Why, they look all right to me. The band is stiff with starch, you know."

"I'll stiffen that idiot with something besides starch! People impose on me because I never kick, but the worm has turned at last. I suppose I'll be sent to State Prison for life, but that shan't stand in the way of my revenge."

"Put on another and I'll come up and see what the trouble is."

Ten minutes later he calls and I go up to find him red in the face and breathing hard.

I button the shirt in the back, pull it down and it fits him like a glove, but all of a sudden he gives a jump, waves his hand after the manner of Booth, and exclaims:

"Yea! I'll hunt him down and crush the life out of him!"

"Mr. Bowser, there's nothing wrong with that shirt. You never had one to fit you better."

"Nothing wrong! Why, it feels as if I had put on an old coffee-sack. Look at the way it bunches up in the neck. See how it binds on the shoulders. I wouldn't be found dead with this shirt on."

"Well, as I said before, I can't see anything wrong with it."

"Oh, you can't! Anything is good enough for me, I suppose. If some fool sent me up a sheet-iron shirt you'd think it was all right. You can go down stairs."

"But aren't we going to church?"

"Church! Don't say church to me! I'm going out and commit murder."

About dinner time he feels easier, and after supper his indignation has all passed away. Next morning he puts on one of his shirts, and it isn't a week before he is bragging of the perfect fit.

It is the same about any other garment he buys. A few weeks ago he wanted a coat.

He selected the goods, got measured by a leading tailor, and they made him try it on twice to be sure that it was a good fit. It came up in good time, and just as we were getting ready to go out to a card party. He at once decided to wear it, but had scarcely untied the bundle when he exclaimed:

"The sap-headed son of the goose, but I don't believe this is the goods I picked out."

"You said you got diagonal, and this is that sort of cloth," I replied, as I inspected it.

"But he's lined it with cambric!"

"Why, no, he hasn't. This is serge-lined. That's what is commonly used."

He put it on and the fit was absolutely perfect, but he hunched up one shoulder and then the other and growled:

"It's too short-waisted. I told him a dozen times over to look out for that."

"The waist is all right, my dear. You never had a nicer fit."

"But it's too short—six inches too short. The wall-eyed idiot, but doesn't he know enough to read figures on a tape-line!"

"Mr. Bowser, the length is all right. I tell you this coat can't be improved on."

"Isn't the collar too high?"

"No."

"Are these pockets in right?"

"Yes."

"How's the sleeve for length?"

"Just right."

"Do you like the buttons?"

"I do."

He was about to give in and be satisfied, when all at once he gave a start and gasped:

"Heavens! look at that sleeve!"

"What's the matter?"

"Wrinkles! Look at 'em!"

"But every coat-sleeve wrinkles. You've got to have play for your arms, haven't you?"

"Play! play! I'll buy a thousand tons of cannon-balls and fire every one of them at that tailor's head! It's a botch job from top to bottom, and I'll break him in two before noon to-morrow!"

"Well, let's be going."

"Never! Not one inch!"

"Aren't we going over to Mack's?"

"No, ma'am. My safety is in staying at home. I'd commit murder if I went out."

And we stayed home and turned that coat top to bottom, wrong side out and outside in, Mr. Bowser declaring at every breath that he'd have blood, but next day he slipped into it and has been wearing it ever since, without a word of complaint.—Detroit Free Press.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K.

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

STABLE TO LET

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

ROOTS AND SHOES made to order. Boots, $6 to $11. Shoes, $4 to $9. Ladies' Shoes, best quality French Kid, $5 to $7.

REPAIRING DONE at lowest prices.

NONE BUT BEST mechanics employed.

WE GUARANTEE to make perfect fitting to the worst of crooked and crippled feet.

COMPLETE WITH any shoes on the market.

216 J Street

—AND—

208 K Street,

SACRAMENTO.

A. CASELLI & COMPANY.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS.

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET.

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

American Eagle Hotel

Corner Twelfth and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO.

This house has been put in first-class condition, and also newly furnished—everything being new from office to kitchen.

Board and Room, per Week, - - $5.00 to $7.00

MEALS, 25 CENTS.

Terms made with families.

GEO. W. NEWBERT, Proprietor.

Bainbridge Business College

J. C. BAINBRIDGE, PRINCIPAL.

No. 1017 J Street, Sacramento.

A full Business Course, together with Short-hand, Telegraphy, Bookkeeping, Penmanship and all the branches usually taught in schools of this kind.

A full corps of Teachers of the first rank only employed.

MRS. BAINBRIDGE has charge of the Music Department.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEEPING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6. Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4.

Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

JAS. LONGSHORE,

SACRAMENTO TRUNK FACTORY,

530 K STREET.

Trunks, Valises & Bags Wholesale and Retail.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,

SACRAMENTO.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS,

Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Wm. Kuhlman, Peter Miller, Elizabeth Davis, Henry Greisel, Robt. Robinson, and B. F. White, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 12th day of October, 1889, in which action M. G. Dandried is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: That you, the defendants, and each of you, be required to set forth your several claims, or right, title or interest of, in and to Lots One to Eight, inclusive, in the Block bounded by J and K and Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California; and that said claims, or either of them, may be determined by a decree of this Court, and that they, or either of said claims, may be adjudged and declared invalid, and that the defendants, nor either of them, have no right, title or interest of, in, or to said land, and that plaintiff do have judgment against said defendants, decreeing plaintiff to have a good and valid title, and that the defendants be forever debarred from ever asserting any claim adverse to plaintiff, and for costs and for general relief, all of which will more fully appear from the complaint on file herein, to which reference is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified, that, unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief prayed for in his said complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n19-9t]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Charles Farley and J. W. Richmond, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 24th day of October, 1889, in which action Michael Huley is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To require you, defendants, to set forth the nature, character and extent of your claims to that certain real property in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California, known upon the official map of said Sacramento City as Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, in the Block between T and U, Ninth and Tenth streets; and to obtain a decree of Court adjudging that defendants, or either of them, have no estate, right, or title in said premises, or any part thereof; and that defendants be forever debarred and estopped from asserting or claiming any right, title, or interest to said premises, or any part thereof; and for such other and further relief as the Court may deem fit and proper in the premises; and for costs of suit. All of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

FRANK D. RYAN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Coc W. Bird-sall, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 1st day of November, 1889, in which action Emma Bird-sall is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the grounds of willful neglect and wilful desertion, all of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 1st day of November, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

ISAAC JOSEPH, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t]

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.—ESTATE OF JAMES MCENANEY, Deceased. Notice is hereby given by the undersigned administrator of the Estate of James McEnaney, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against said deceased to exhibit them with their necessary affidavits and vouchers within four months after the first publication of this notice, to him at the office of Frank D. Ryan, Attorney at Law, No. 504 J street, Sacramento City, Cal.

Dated Nov. 30th, 1889.

LAWRENCE MCENANEY, Administrator.

d30-5t.

TAXES.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 3748 OF THE Political Code, as amended March 16, 1889, State and County Taxes will be received at the office of the County Tax Collector, northwest corner of Seventh and I streets, in the City of Sacramento, on and after FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1889. Taxpayers will please take notice that on the last Monday in December (the 30th day), 1889, at 6 o'clock P. M. of that day, taxes will be delinquent, and unless paid prior thereto five per cent penalty will be added, as provided by law.

CEO. C. McMULLEN, Tax Collector of Sacramento County, Sacramento, Cal., November 5, 1889. n9-4t

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER, BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON, The Leading Merchant Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501 -- 507 K, cor. Fifth

Furniture

Bedding.

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

Klune & Floberg, WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS

Agents for Rockford Watch Co. NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR and COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

Wm. J. Hassett.

A. J. Johnston.

A. J. Johnston & Co. PRINTERS,

410 J Street,

Sacramento

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city. Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets, also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Excesses, etc., Positively Cured or no Pay. No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated. Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer. John Service, Auburn, lupus. Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer. Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed. N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer. J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer. John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer. Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed. Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer. I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular. Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

ANGLO-NEVADA ASSURANCE CORPORATION

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

FIRE.—Cash Capital, $2,000,000—MARINE.

Sacramento Branch:

No. 1018 SECOND STREET.

JOSEPH STEFFENS,

Manager.

HOWARD KIMBROUGH,

Local Agent.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J,

SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and

Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

[SACRAMENTO.

Fear is the mother of safety.—Taylor

Duties are ours; events are God's.—Cicero

Heaven gives its favorites early death.—Byron.

Folly loves the martyrdom of fame.—Byron.

Beholding Heaven and feeling hell.—Moore.

Fame is the perfume of heroic deeds.—Socrates.

Example is more forcible than precept.—Cecil.

Fools admire, but men of sense approve.—Pope.

Guilt fills the air with visionary terrors.—Junius.

They never fail who die in a great cause.—Byron.

The noblest mind the best contentment has.—Spencer.

Grief treads upon the heels of pleasure.—Congreve.

He makes no friends who never made a foe.—Tennyson.

The air is full of farewells to the dying.—Longfellow.

Discretion and valor are the twins of honor.—Beaumont.

Fain would I climb but I fear to fall.—Sir Walter Raleigh.

There's no glory like his who saves his country.—Tennyson.

Hypocrisy is the necessary burden of villainy.—Dr. Johnson.

A faithful friend is the true image of the Deity.—Napoleon I.

It is much easier to meet with error than to find truth.—Gatthe.

The Farmer's Parrot.

One beautiful spring a farmer, after working busily for several weeks, had sown one of his largest fields with corn. But the neighboring crows found their way to the farmer's corn field, and made sad havoc there. The farmer, not being willing that his future crop should be destroyed, determined to drive the bold marauders to their nests. Accordingly he loaded his trusty gun with the intention of giving them upon their next visit a warm reception.

Now the farmer had a parrot, as talkative and mischievous as those birds usually are; and, being very tame, it was allowed its freedom, to come and go at pleasure.

Strolling around some time after the farmer's declaration of war against birds in general and crows in particular, who should it see but a number of those black, bold robbers, busy in stealing the corn. "Pretty Poll," being a lover of company, without much caring whether good or bad, hopped into the midst of them, and was soon engaged in what I suppose was an interesting conversation of the many advantages of a country over a city life.

Their friendly talk might have been prolonged had not a passing wind wafted it to the ears of the farmer, who was smoking his pipe by the cosy fireside. Up started he, breaking in his hurry the "pipe of peace," and with his gun he sallied forth. Reaching his corn field at length, he saw at a glance (though he overlooked the parrot) the state of affairs. Leveling his gun he fired, and with the report was heard the death scream of three crows, and a shriek from poor Poll. As the farmer advanced to see what execution he had made, the unwounded crows arose in the air, loudly pleading their cause as they departed. On looking among the murdered crows, great was his surprise to see stretched upon the ground his mischievous parrot, with feathers sadly ruffled and a broken leg.

"You foolish bird!" cried the farmer; "this comes from keeping bad company."

The parrot did not reply, probably because it did not know exactly what to say; but it looked very solemn, which answered just as well.

On carrying it to the house, the children, seeing its wounded leg, exclaimed:

"What did it, father; what hurt our pretty Poll?"

"Bad company! bad company!" answered the parrot in a solemn voice.

"Ay, that it was," said the farmer. "Poll was with those crows when I fired, and received a shot intended for them. Remember the parrot's fate, children, and beware of bad company."

With these words the father turned round, and with the aid of his wife he bandaged the broken leg, and in a few weeks the parrot was as lively as ever. But it never forgot its adventure in the corn field, and if ever the farmer's children engaged in play with quarrelsome companions, it warned them with its cry, "Bad company! bad company!"

In France, if a patient under the influence of chloroform shows any signs of heart failure, he is held head downward till he is restored. It is said this method never fails, and many operating tables in France are now so constructed that the lower end can be elevated at a moment's notice.

The Lost Chord.

Seated one day at the organ,
I was weary and ill at ease,
And my fingers wandered idly
Over the ivory keys;
I know not what I was playing,
Or what I was dreaming then,
But I struck one chord of music,
Like the sound of a great Amen.

It flooded the crimson twilight,
Like the close of an Angel's Psalm,
And it lay on my fevered spirit
With a touch of infinite calm;
It quieted pain and sorrow,
Like love overcoming strife;
It seemed the harmonious echo
From our discordant life.

It linked all perplexed meanings
Into one perfect peace,
And trembled away into silence
As though it were loath to cease.
I have sought, but I seek it vainly,
That one lost chord divine
Which came from the soul of the organ,
And entered into mine.

It may be that death's bright angel
Will speak in that chord again;
It may be that only in Heaven
I shall hear that grand Amen.

—Adelaide Proctor.

Mark Twain's Boyhood.

"He was always a rascal," said R. E. Morris, the painter at 520 South Fourth street, speaking of Mark Twain. "I was born and raised in Hannibal, and know when Mrs. Clemens (Mark's mother) moved from Florida, Monroe county, to Hannibal. Mark was a dull, stupid, slow-going fellow, but he was full of pranks, and while he didn't do the meanness, he planned it and got other boys to do it. We went to school to Dr. Meredith, and Mark always sat near the foot of the class. He never took any interest in books, and I never saw him study his lessons. He left school and went to learn the printing business, and soon after that left Hannibal and went to steamboating. I stayed at school, got a good education, and am a painter, while Mark is a millionaire. It is a scandalous fact that, as a boy from 10 to 17 years of age, Mark was a dull, stupid fellow, and it was the wonder of the town as to what end would be his. He was pointed out by mothers as a boy that would never amount to nothin', if he did not actually come to some bad end. And he was the most homely lad in school, too. Pranks! I can think of a dozen of 'em, and his 'Huckleberry Finn' is full of Hannibal episodes worked over. I read that with as much interest as I would a diary of Hannibal kept during my school days. Mark is three years older than myself, but he was always in a class of boys two or three years younger than himself.—St. Joseph (Mo.) News.

His Whiskers are Important.

Everyone must have observed what are usually called the whiskers on a cat's upper lip. The use of these in a state of nature is very important. They are organs of touch. They are attached to a bed of close glands under the skin, and each of these long hairs is connected with the nerves of the lip.

The slightest contact of these whiskers with any surrounding object is thus felt most distinctly by the animal, although the hairs of themselves are insensible. They stand out on each side of the lion, as well as in the common cat; so that, from point to point, they are equal to the width of the animal's body. If we imagine, therefore, a lion stealing through a covert of wood in an imperfect light, we shall at once see the use of these long hairs. They indicate to him, through the nicest feeling, any obstacle which may present itself to the passage of his body. They prevent the rustling of boughs and leaves, which would give warning to his prey, if he should attempt to pass through too close a bush; and thus, in conjunction with the soft cushions of his feet, and the fur upon which he treads (the claws never coming in contact with the ground), they enable him to move toward his victim with a stillness even greater than that of the snake, which creeps along the grass and is not perceived until it is coiled round its prey.—Exchange.

There are ten commandments hung on the walls of the Hindoo Theological College in Madras. Homeward Mail reproduces them: "(1) Pray to God as soon as you rise from your bed—5-5:10 A. M. (2) Wash your body and keep your surroundings clean—5:10-5:30 A. M. (3) Prostrate yourself before your parents or guardians and take good exercise—5:30-6:30 A. M. (4) Prepare well your school lesson—6:30-9 A. M. (5) Attend school regularly and punctually and do the school work properly. (6) Obey and respect your teachers and the teachers of the other classes and other respectable persons. (7) Read till 8 P. M. at home. (8) Pray to God and go to bed—9 P. M. to 5 A. M. (9) Keep good company and avoid bad company. (10) Practice righteousness at all times."

H. WACHHORST Leading Jeweler of Sacramento

SIGN OF THE TOWN CLOCK,

No. 315 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihans

418 J Street.

LAST CHANCE. We are closing out the last of our immense stock of Bonbonieres and are positively SELLING AT COST. Baskets in endless variety. Full line of Holiday Vienna Ware—Satin and Silk Trimmings. Elegant line of BISQUE WARE for Holiday Presents. MAGGI'S HOT AND COLD BOUILLON.

ONLY FIRST-CLASS HOUSE IN THE CITY.

J. R. Wheat

DITTMAR & WHEAT,

A. Dittmar.

Sacramento Lounge & Mattress Factory.

No. 916 J STREET.

Simon Strumer, *WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,*No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

Announcement.

OUR STOCK IS CONSTANTLY BEING REPLENISHED WITH

—A FULL LINE OF—

HOLIDAY GOODS!

—CONSISTING OF THE—

Latest Designs and Novelties in the Jewelry Line

DIRECT FROM EASTERN MARKETS, WHICH WE OFFER AT LOWEST PRICES.

SAMUEL JELLY, JEWELER, 422 J Street.

Important and Worth Investigation

We are making Suits to order of the fine Huddersfield Worsteds for $25, which are worth $40. As the sales of these fine worsteds during the past three weeks have proved such a success in San Francisco, we have added a large line of Kersays and Meltons, for Overcoats, with fine silk-serge lining all through, made to order from $30 to $35, which would cost elsewhere from $40 to $60. We have also received, direct from the mill, over forty pieces of fine Trouserings, which we bought at an immense reduction, and are now prepared to give our customers and the public of Sacramento the benefit. These are fine all-wool goods, at prices never before known in Sacramento. Please call and examine goods and be convinced of the bargains now offered for the holidays by

JOE POHEIM, THE TAILOR,

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

419 K STREET.

FOR THE PUBLIC! Special attention to the largest assortment of PURE HOME-MADE CANDIES, Bon Bon and Bonniere boxes and French Glazed Fruit in the city. Also, other Fancy Goods.

JAS. G. DAVIS Furniture, Carpets and Wall Paper
411 AND 413 K STREET,
Branch, 315 K St. Send for Catalogue. Prices Lowest.

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.
Southern Pacific Company
PACIFIC SYSTEM.

Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.25 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3.40 A
7.05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6.45 P
7.25 P	Knights Landing	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6.25 P
12-01 A	Central Atlantic Express	6.00 A
3.00 P	Oroville	10-30 A
3.00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10.30 A
10.40 A	Redding via Willows	4.00 P
6.15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7.25 P
6.50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8.35 P
3.05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11.40 A
4.00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10.40 P
*10.00 A	San Francisco via Steamer	2.25 P
11.25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2.25 P
6.50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11.40 P
11.25 A	San Jose	2.25 P
7.05 P	Santa Barbara	9.55 A
6.50 A	Santa Rosa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Santa Rosa	7.25 P
9.00 A	Stockton and Galt	6.45 P
7.05 P	Stockton and Galt	9.55 A
8.00 P	Truckee and Reno	6.25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno	6.00 A
12.05 P	Colfax	10.20 A
6.50 A	Vallejo	11.40 A
3.05 P	Vallejo	10.35 P
*12.15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10.25 A
*7-15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2.40 P
*5-20 P	Folsom	*6.50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning, P for afternoon.
A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED K. COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers

and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

THE EMERALD

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1889.

No. 45.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors. EM
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

One more celestial revolution has occurred which marks an epoch in the world's history. We are about to enter upon a new year. Those upon whom fortune has smiled and who have enjoyed the pleasures of life, are happy in the thought that this may continue. The unfortunate look forward to better things in the coming year. Hope is the guiding impulse. Hope is there when all else has vanished. It is this Hope that gives life and zest to human action. When we lift with the magic wand of memory the curtain that now veils the departed year, we are admonished of the cold and cheerless, as well as the bright and joyous events, and invoke the genius of Hope to dispel the misfortunes and increase happiness and pleasure during the future. It is hard, indeed, for the poor and afflicted to look with cheerfulness into the cold and heartless world. The poverty-stricken genius can take no cheer, while those whom he holds dear are afflicted, aye, starving, at the place he calls home. To him the pleasures of life are a mockery, and it is little wonder that he curses Fate which seems so unjust in distributing the world's goods. But Hope may not prove a delusive phantom next year for him. To the unfortunate we say, the clouds may lower to-day, but there is a bright sun ready to break through, and its radiant beams will soon be cast upon them. It is best anyway to look on the bright side. Hope is the ark which will carry us over the ocean of adversity. We all hope for a happy New Year, and may those hopes be realized. The time-honored and pleasant custom of making New Year's calls is declining, in fact has almost disappeared. The reason for abandoning this social practice can be found in the ostentatious show made by wealth, and which had the effect to close the doors of the less fortunate. Another, and perhaps the true reason why promiscuous calling has declined, is the fact that the friend of a family not only called himself, but gathered up every person he could find to also make the rounds. Thus quiet homes were besieged with total strangers, and in many instances turned into drinking rooms, and the wife and daughters made barmaids. This style of making New Year's calls became virtually drunken orgies. There was nothing of the old-time social character about it. It became a question of rivalry with many as to who would have the most callers. Quality and standing did not enter into the proposition. The friendly call on New Year's day is something to be commended. True friends do not call for the purpose of loading their stomachs with wines, salads and cakes. Nor do they make social calls to inspect expensive spreads of costly wines and rich viands. The social custom is a good one, if not abused and overdone.

On Monday a bid for lighting the city was received from some gentlemen who are about to establish an electric light company here. The parties interested are L. L. Baker and Robert Hamilton, of the well-known firm of Baker & Hamilton; H. G. Smith, one of the principal owners in the Pioneer milling company; Joseph D. Redding, and C. F. Fargo. They are representative of wealth, and propose to establish in this city an electric lighting works which will cost upwards of $100,000. They have asked from the Board of Trustees a franchise that will enable them to do business here. We have been very much surprised that a proposition to expend that much capital in Sacramento, in an enterprise so manifestly in the interest of the public, should be combated publicly on any hand. The argument has been made that it is a matter of detriment to the city that enterprises of this character should be permitted a foothold among us, upon the ground that there is a possibility the new-comers may sell to the old corporation, and that the people may suffer. It is unprofitable to discuss such a proposition. That in the past there have a number of corporations organized to furnish public lights by gas and electricity, and that they have sold one to the other until, as now, there is but one corporation in that line of business, is no reason for the formation of the conclusion that better results cannot be obtained by permitting future competition.

The history of the lighting of this city can be very briefly stated. Early in 1854 a franchise was granted to William Glen, to establish and maintain a gas-works. He did not attempt to build his works, but sold his franchise to a joint stock company, which organized as the Sacramento Gas company August 18th, of that year. Work was commenced in the erection of the works October 20th following, and for the first time gas was introduced for lighting in Sacramento December 15, 1855. This company for years enjoyed a monopoly. At first its rates were $9 per thousand. Afterward they fell to $6, and so remained for many years. On March 21, 1871, the Citizens' Gas Light company was organized, but it did not materialize. January 18, 1872, the Citizens' Gaslight and Heat company was incorporated, established its works, and entered actively into business. Its directors were W. E. Brown, J. R. Watson, R. C. Terry, R. C. Clark, Albert Gallatin, W. E. Terry, H. C. Kirk, Chas. H. Cummings and James McClatchy. This company entered into contracts with consumers that it would furnish gas at a figure per thousand much less than had theretofore been paid in the city. However, on January 1, 1875, a consolidation was effected, and the new company absorbed the old one. The works of the latter were abandoned. It is a matter well recollected, that the new company did not in a measure fulfill the contracts with its patrons, though it could have been legally forced to do so. Under the consolidation the Capital Gas company was formed, and has since held a monopoly in this community, so far as lighting by gas is concerned. Its rate at present is $3 per one thousand feet, yet the quality of the gas furnished is open to merited adverse criticism. Later on two companies were organized to furnish electric lighting. Shortly afterward one of the systems sold to the other, and the whole matter was finally absorbed by the Capital Gas company; so that at present, in the matter of gas and electric lighting, the inhabitants of this community are at the mercy of a single corporation.

There can be no adverse criticism that the owners of this lighting company charge fancy prices for the service they render. Enjoying the position of vantage they do, it would hardly be expected they would not make hay in the hours of darkness. We have read with interest the communication from W. C. Clark, in explanation of the plan of action of the new electric lighting company. To our view, it means the dropping into this community of a very respectable amount of capital, and an assurance that the cost of lighting will be very materially decreased. Their proposition extends so far as to carry incandescent lights into stores and private dwellings, to take the place of gas, and may extend to the furnishing of electrical motive power. Aside from the matter of street lighting, we can see very material advantages to be gained by the inhabitants of Sacramento if permission be given to allow this new company to come in. We feel fully satisfied that the only element to oppose it will be the holders of gas stock; yet a consideration of the financial interests of a few should not sway the judgment of the Board of Trustees as against the welfare of the public. The policy of this paper has always been to invite the expenditure of capital in Sacramento, and, as far as possible, to procure for our people necessities and luxuries at the least possible cost. We understand that an objection has been made to the consideration of the bid of the new company—although their figures are manifestly lower than those of the existing corporation—upon the ground they have not yet incorporated; yet we venture, if the contract for street lighting be let to them, a sufficient bond will be executed to save the municipality from harm. We say let them come; the more dollars expended here the better it will be for us. So far as we are concerned, we offer nothing but encouragement to an influx of capital to our city. Other communities would be very hearty in their welcome to an enterprise such as is now contemplated here. As we look at it, the people have nothing to lose; everything to gain, and if we ever expect to progress, as we should, we must invite competition, particularly in matters that in this day and age have become necessities. We are not aware of the amount that is now paid for lighting the streets, stores and residences of this city. It is, however, a very considerable tax, and one which is appreciated by every householder on the first of each month. If there is any possibility of bringing about a reduction, steps should be taken in that direction, particularly when responsible individuals tender the capital, and simply ask the privilege of honorable competition.

As a matter of cold, solid law, a franchise granted to a person or a corporation is not transferable. It is granted to those who receive it. If the incorporators of this new company accept a franchise from the municipality, they will have no power to dispose of it, and in this connection we can say that the Attorney-General, were he to proceed, could vitiate any franchise that has been attempted to be transferred since its granting. A franchise goes to the individuals receiving it; the policy of the law that it cannot be made a matter of merchandise is founded on solid reason. If we mistake not, no valid franchise exists in any former electric light company.

The Placer Argus intimates that the Southern Pacific company has determined to build more feeder lines to its main roads, and expresses the hope that among its first branches built will be one to the Georgetown divide. We have no hesitation in saying that such a project would be wise and profitable. There is no part of the foothills of this portion of the State so rich in natural wealth as the Georgetown divide, that is without railroad facilities. A survey from Loomis, on the Central Pacific railroad, to Georgetown, via Salmon Falls, Cool, and Greenwood was recently made by W. S. Graham, civil engineer. The preliminary survey extended into the forests of almost inexhaustible timber beyond Georgetown. A desirable grade was found, and the estimate of the cost of constructing a railroad between those points was favorable. The quantity of freight and supplies hauled by teams from Auburn to the Georgetown divide, and the amount of lumber returned in the same manner is enormous. The kiln at Cool ships a car load of lime every day, employing an eight-horse team as the means of transportation to Auburn, where it is re-shipped by rail. A four-horse stage makes daily trips between Auburn and Georgetown, carrying passengers, Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express, and the mails. A great many of the quartz and placer mines of lower grade in El Dorado county are now unprofitable to work and practically valueless, because of the great cost of supplies occasioned by high freight rates. None of the immense slate quarries can be profitably worked, and the clay deposits will be useless until cheap and convenient transportation to market is had. One of the principal inducements, however, for building a railroad in that part of El Dorado county is the large lumber business that would necessarily come to the builders. With the development that a railroad would bring, in conjunction with the Georgetown and Loon Lake ditch, which flows the full length of the proposed route, there is no estimating the possibilities of the country lying between the two forks of the American river, known as the Georgetown divide. It would be directly tributary to Sacramento.

It is a fact observable to the reading public, that most of the broad-minded and highly intellectual ministers of the gospel of the present day, are not averse to the stage and the production of the drama. Only the little minds, whose religious views are as contracted as their creeds, berate the drama as the invention of Satan, and denounce the theater as coming from the devil, and the gift of Paganism. The great minds of the pulpit believe that the drama is the outcome of the intellectual energy of this as well as past ages. In all ages of the world the drama has been one of the greatest intellectual and educational factors. Such learned divines as the Reverends Haweis, Townsend, Peters and Rabbi Krauskopf, look upon the stage as an educator, and do not lose sight of the fact that it had its origin in religion. It was the preacher that first taught the actors in this art. If there are vacant seats in the church while the theater is crowded, it is the lack of dramatic power in the minister. David Garrick once said that the reason people avoided the church and visited the drama, was because the preacher tell truths as if they were fictions, while the actor tell fictions as if they were truths. Some plays may have a little touch of immorality, but the great plays are moral in their lessons—vice is held up in all its hideousness, and virtue is made triumphant. There is no scoffing of religion on the stage—but often the keen satirist brings the canting hypocrisy of the "more holy than thou" class into ridicule. This is not scoffing religion. Rev. Dille, if he ever witnessed the semblance of a drama, it must have been of the lower class, else his attacks on the stage are the promptings of bigotry alone. Some actors are immoral. So are some preachers. Is that a reason why a whole class should be condemned? At no period of the world's history has there been more attention given to the drama than at the present time. Every city of any considerable prominence has its theaters, and most of them have able and learned dramatic writers. Authors and journalists have become playwrights, to meet the inordinate demand for new dramas for the stage. The stage itself is elevated and has some of the brightest minds of the world among its votaries. Rev. H. B. Haweis, M. A., in the December number of Harper's Magazine, has an interesting article, which is in fact a defense of the drama, and wherein he calls for some inspired genius to enter the new realm of art and religion, by dramatizing the oratorio and consecrating the stage. The eminent divine holds that the sacred musical drama of the future is about to mark a new eclectic art epoch, foreshadowed by Wagner's Parsifal and Rubinstein's proposal to dramatize oratorically the Old Testament. The drama had its origin in the sanctuary. The old Roman Catholic Church had an eye to business, and did not ignore anything so fundamental as the dramatic instinct. She took poetry, painting, music and the drama to her heart, because man is a dramatic animal. Here are a few words the learned doctor uses in his essay: "In the twelfth century, miracle plays, mysteries and moralities at Beauvais and Sens brought the scenes of the Old and New Testament before the eyes of the people, on rough stages erected in cathedral aisles and chancels. Joseph and Mary passed across the platform on their way into Egypt. Abraham appeared to the shuddering throngs with the uplifted knife about to slay his son. The Twelve Apostles, led by St. Peter, figured with their characteristic emblems. God Almighty himself was occasionally impersonated sitting in the clouds, whilst the devil, always the most popular actor, tumbled and joked below, to the intense gratification of the people. Similar performances are recorded at Coventry and Leeds in 1264. But the new expressional art of music was already being elaborated in the cloister, under the teaching of Guy of Arezzo, 1020, and Franco of Cologne, 1200, and in 1370 we find music and miracle plays combined in the persons of the St. Paul's Cathedral choristers, who seemed to have been gorgeously fitted out with stage costumes and scenery by the Dean and Chapter."

There is a provision of our State Constitution, also a statutory enactment, relating to the pardoning power, which declares that neither the Governor nor the Legislature shall have power to grant pardons or commutations of sentence in any case where the convict has been twice convicted of felony, unless upon the written recommendation of a majority of the Judges of the Supreme Court. This limitation is certainly a queer blending of the three great departments of government. It is difficult to find a reason for vesting such a remarkable executive function in the Supreme Court. Certainly the judicial duties of this body are sufficient without investing the members of the Court with the powers of an independent branch of the government. If this requirement was only created by statute, it is clear that it would be void as an encroachment on the executive branch, but being a part of the Constitution itself, cannot be subject to such an objection. As this case stands, whenever a prisoner in the State's Prison, who has been previously convicted of felony, desires a pardon or commutation of sentence, he must go to the Supreme Judges and secure the recommendations of a majority of the bench. He must present his case and gain this executive favor before he can approach the Governor. Here is where the absurdity arises. This is not the exercise of any judicial function, and if it was, it would, in case the recommendation is made, amount in many cases to an actual setting aside or reversal of the solemn judgment of that Court. That is to say, most cases of convictions in nisi prius courts are appealed to the Supreme Court, and if the judgment is affirmed in those cases of prior conviction, when the convict applies for a pardon he has to obtain the recommendation of the same Judges who already passed on his case. We do not think this is a good provision, and such a duty does not belong to the Supreme bench. It is contrary to our form of government, and blends the executive with the judicial too closely. The Judges do not relish this duty.

Sardines in China.

I have read a curious little paragraph about the popularity of sardines in China—I fear this prefatory remark will remind some people of "Shakespeare and the musical glasses," but I cannot help it—where the little fish are highly appreciated. It appears that their introduction to Celestial palates was a matter of pure accident. It appears that the Chinese import from England a large quantity of the color called smalt, for painting blue figures on their pottery. At any rate, the London agent of a Chinese firm received an order for a large quantity of smalt; a very serious quantity, indeed, of some thousands of pounds sterling value. The word smalt was so badly written that the agent arrived at the conclusion that "smelts" were meant, and went about to consult fish dealers as to the best way to procure and cure these dainty little fish. Naturally, he was told that such a thing had never been attempted, and he was advised to try sardines, as the approximation to them. "Sardines are cheap just now," said one dealer, "and I'm sure they will meet the difficulty." So the bargain was struck, the sardines were bought, packed, and shipped off to China. On the arrival of the cargo, a dispute arose. John Chinaman avowed that he had ordered a blue pigment, not fish, whether smelts or sardines; and John Chinaman seemed to have the right of it in law, so he shrugged his shoulders and left the boxes of the oily little fish on the hands of the merchant. Some British residents at Shanghai purchased some as a slight alleviation of the trouble; but the consignment was a big one, and, with the kindest intentions in the world, they could not consume any appreciable quantity. At last the happy thought occurred to somebody, of presenting some to a Chinese epicure for his gracious opinion. He tasted them and pronounced them good, spread their fame among his friends, and very soon the lot went off apace. Now, sardines a l'huile are quite a popular Chinese institution.—Kathleen, in Leeds Mercury.

A Strange Duel.

A duel which occasioned a great sensation at the time of its occurrence, was one between Henri Delagrave and Alphonse Riviere, the cause being the success of the former in wooing a young lady to whom they were both attached. Riviere insulted his successful rival by slapping him on the cheek in a gaming saloon, and it was agreed that a duel should take place in which the life of one should be ended. The details were left to their seconds to arrange; and, until they faced one another upon the field, neither of the young men knew in what form they were to brave death. On the following morning four men met in a quiet wood. They were Riviere, with Monsieur Savalle, his second, and Delagrave, who was accompanied by a doctor named Rocquet. The latter informed the rivals that Monsieur Savalle and himself had arrived at the decision that, in order to secure a fatal result to one of the principals, it was best to leave out of the question swords or pistols, and to trust to the more sure action of a deadly poison. As he spoke, he drew from his pocket a little box in which lay four black pellets, all exactly identical in size and shape.

"In one of these," he said, "I have placed a sufficient quantity of prussic acid to cause the almost instantaneous death of any one who swallows it. Monsieur Savalle and I will decide by the toss of a coin which of you is to have first choice, and you shall alternately draw and swallow a pill until the poison shows its effects." While speaking the last words the doctor spun in the air a glittering gold piece, and, as it fell, Savalle cried "Tails!" It fell with the head uppermost, and Savalle said: "The first choice is yours, Monsieur Delagrave." The two whose fate was contained in those innocent-looking black balls had shown no sign of trepidation while the doctor explained the awful preparations that he had made for the death of one of them; and Delagrave's face was perfectly impassive as he selected and washed down with a glass of claret one of the globules. "And now Monsieur Riviere," said the doctor. Riviere extended his hand and took a pill, which he swallowed with as little appearance of concern as his opponent. A minute passed, two, three, and still the duelists stood motionless. "It is your choice again, Monsieur Delagrave," said the doctor; "but this time you must swallow the pill at the same instant that Monsieur Riviere swallows the one that you leave for him." Delagrave paused for a moment, looking at the two balls that lay before him. The closest scrutiny showed not the slightest difference between them; one was harmless, but in the other rested the pall of eternity—the silence and peace of that sleep which knows no awakening in this world. With a start he drew his eyes from the box, and putting his finger and thumb into it, drew forth one of the remaining pills. Riviere took the solitary one remaining, and both men simultaneously gulped down their fate. A few seconds passed without any perceptible movement on the part of either of them, and then Riviere threw up his hands and, without a sound, fell flat upon the grass. He turned half round, gave one convulsive shudder, and, as his rival bent over him, breathed his last. The fair cause of this awful tragedy was so horrified at it that she refused to see Delagrave again, and the memory of those few minutes weighed so heavily upon him that he followed Riviere to the grave in a few months' time.

Fifty Years' Progress.

Within this half century, the following inventions and discoveries have been made: Ocean steamships, street railways, elevated railways, telegraph lines, telephones, ocean cables, phonograph, photography, and a score of new methods of picture-making, kerosene oil, aniline colors, electric light, steam fire engines, chemical fire extinguishers, anesthetics and painless surgery, gun cotton, nitro-glycerine, dynamite, giant powder, aluminium, magnesium and other new metals; electro-plating, spectrum analysis and spectroscopy; audiphone, pneumatic tubes, electric motor, electric bells, typewriter, cheap postal system, steam heating, steam and hydraulic elevators, vestibule cars, cantilever bridges. A positive knowledge of the physical constitution of planetary and stellar worlds has been attained within this period.—Homiletic Review.

The Legend of St. Lucy.

How many people know that the 13th of December is St. Lucy's day, and how many know anything about the virgin and martyr it commemorates? Very few, probably; and yet, the story of her life is not without interest, something which cannot truthfully be said of all the saints in the calendar. She was a native of Syracuse, and a young nobleman of that city fell deeply in love with her. She had, however, determined to devote herself to a religious life, and persistently rejected the addresses of her suitor. It is related that when her lover complained that her beautiful eyes haunted him day and night, she cut them out of her head and sent them to him, begging him now to leave her to pursue her devotional aspirations. The legend adds that heaven, to recompense this heroic act of abnegation, restored her eyes, making them more beautiful than ever. What the lover did with the original pair is not stated. Lucy gave the whole of her large fortune to the poor; and this so exasperated the suitor, who had expected to share it with her, that he accused her of professing Christian doctrines, and the consequence was that on the 13th of December, 304, she suffered martyrdom. The legend about the eyes has led many persons afflicted with ophthalmic troubles to implore her intercession.

How an American Girl Vanquished the Russian Mistress of Etiquette.

The following is a narrative of an incident which occurred in St. Petersburg some years ago. The American lady concerned is the daughter of a prominent public benefactor, has for years been a social leader in Washington, is the wife of a leading Republican statesman, and would be recognized instantly if her name might be mentioned. The half-dozen initiates will remember the incident now published in the Washington Post:

A grand reception was in progress at the palace of a high Russian dignitary. Members of the cabinet, generals of the army, grand dukes, the nobility of the empire, and the diplomatic corps were present. It was a notable affair. Four young ladies—three Russian and one American—had gathered into a little nook screened in palms, and were discussing in French the dowdy appearance of a high court lady. Some eavesdropper caught their remarks, and bore them to the criticised lady. She, in turn, indignantly reported the conversation to a noble duchess, who held the peculiar office of "mistress of etiquette." She retired to a private room, and had the four culprits summoned before her. They appeared, the Russian girls in fear and trembling, the American calm and self-possessed.

"Young ladies," said she, "you have been commenting discourteously upon the personal appearance of Lady —. You have committed a grave breach of etiquette, and it is my duty as court mistress of etiquette to punish you. Olga, your slipper!"

The trembling Olga took off her slipper, and meekly received a sound punishment, of the sort confined in America exclusively to the nursery.

"Katia, it is your turn. Give me your slipper!" said the inexorable duchess, as the weeping Olga arose from her castigation. Katia took her gruel with audible lamentations, and Tania followed the suffering Katia.

All the while the American girl watched and waited. The indignities thrust upon her companions roused the Hail Columbia in her. Her eyes flashed, and her little fists clinched with excitement.

"It is your turn now," said the mistress of etiquette to the fair American, "your slipper, please."

Columbia's blood was up. There was fighting stock back of her for generations. She removed her slipper and drew near, but she held the slipper by the toe. At proper range, she swung the missile, and struck the old lady in the mouth a fearful clip. Then she sailed in. Lace, feathers and furbelows flew. Finger-nails fetched blood. Gray hair and the St. Petersburg fashions of 1863 filled the air. The screams of the thoroughly frightened mistress of etiquette brought a crowd. The door was battered down. The three Russian girls were screaming in their respective corners. The old lady was hors du combat, and a fiery-eyed goddess of liberty stood in the center of the room, waving a tuft of gray hair in one hand and a jeweled hair dagger, with which she had been trying to stab the Russian, in the other.

The mistress of etiquette fairly screamed with impotent rage, showered maledictions in broken French, German and Russian upon her conqueror, and demanded that the most condign punishment be meted out to her. The matter was carried to the Czar. Nicholas made a pretense of punishing the young lady by issuing some order against her appearing at any ball for a certain period, but the old liberator was immensely tickled. He showered the most embarrassing presents upon the American, beautiful slippers of every kind and description, silver slippers and gold slippers, and finally wound up by sending her a hair dagger set with diamonds.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

Verdi is spending the winter in a hotel at Milan, engaged in making notes for a new opera.

Vernona Jarbeau's new comedy, Strictly Confidential has been playing to large houses in the West.

The McNeill Club will give another of its splendid concerts on Monday, December 30th. The club will be assisted by Mrs. Marriner-Campbell, David O'Neill, J. H. Rosewald, Miss Jeanette Wilcox, and Miss Adolfin Kaibel. The management is under W. H. Kinross as before. The programme is one which should draw a full house.

Very few actresses wear corsets upon the stage. Fanny Davenport is guiltless of them, as one can easily discover when seeing her in Tosca. Modjeska wears an invention of her own—a sort of cuirass of buckskin—that comes up to the armpits and down over the hips. Cora Potter never wore a corset and Miss Eastlake told me she had never had one on. She wears instead a whaleboned waist. Jessie Millward wears a bandage below the belt. Bernhardt wears a flannel waist, not for support, but for comfort.

Gus Mortimer, the theatrical manager, relates this incident: He was standing in front of the theater one evening where Marie Wainwright was billed to play in Twelfth Night, when a countryman came along and looked long and admiringly at the lithographs of the star. "Aud that's a gal, is it?" asked the countryman. "Yes, that's a girl." "Purty, ain't she?" "Oh, yes; quite pretty." The countryman studied the name and the face awhile, and then said: "I wonder if that ain't the same gal I saw once in a play called Ten Nights in a Barroom?" "Same girl." "Wall, that was a mighty good play, stranger. If she was playin' that to-night it would catch me, sure." "Same girl and same play." The countryman spelled out the name on the bills a few times and asked: "Wall, now, if it's Ten Nights in a Barroom, what do they call it Twelfth Night for?" "I knew the countryman ought to see the play," said Mr. Mortimer, "and so I told him it was called Twelfth Night because this was two nights more." The countryman bought a ticket and went in.

Actor Richard Mansfield, however popular with the public, lacks popularity with the members of his company, who consider him exacting and tyrannical. At a recent rehearsal Richard III was even more hunchy-shouldered, bandy-legged, and malicious than usual. Things didn't and wouldn't, and couldn't go to suit him. Buckingham's head wouldn't come off at the right place and three kingdoms wouldn't fetch even a pony, let alone a horse. "My patience is taxed beyond endurance," said the tragedian, as he sank upon a convenient chair. He got up with more alacrity than usual. In fact, his alacrity carried him about four feet in the air, and when he came down he even forgot to hunch. Both hands were busily engaged in extricating long-meter carpet tacks in short meter time from that portion of his princely shape which hankered for the throne. Anguish filled his features and cuss-words filled the air. With one hand sweeping the zenith of the theater and the other rubbing the nadir of his anatomy, he yelled out: "Fifty dollyers r-reward for the name of the person who put these carpet-tacks in me chair!" At last accounts the reward was unclaimed.

It was after Macbeth, there is a quiet loafing place near the theater where penmen and men of the clean-shaven face gather. A dozen or two were there discussing things in general. "Speaking of Macbeth," said a newsmonger, "I never could understand why Locke's grand old music was superseded by Sir Arthur Sullivan's. Locke's, you know, was tragic—it was dark with rushing passions. Just take that movement in the murder scene where it goes tra-la-ladidytum-ti-tumdity tun." Before he got any further every actor in the room made a break for the doors, and the man who got out last shuddered. But they came back. "Look here," said the newspaper man in an injured sort of way, "what did you do that for?" "What was the matter with you, you gibbering idiot?" exclaimed the man who got out last; "haven't you any more sense than to hum Locke's music?" "Matter!" growled another; "I'd kill the best friend I have if he hoodooed me with Locke's Macbeth. Why? Because it's awfully. You know when Irving brought out Macbeth at the Lyceum in London, some of these crank musicians who think they know everything, wanted him to use Locke's music. Not he. Irving's no fly-flat! He knew there'd be a frost if he did, an', me boy, he didn't dare to use it. The music is good enough. People never care what sort of incidental noise the orchestra makes. But my word for it, bad luck goes with Locke's music. Something will happen before to-morrow," he added, grimly, "since a fresh idiot's started humming that Locke tune, I know! Some one or other'll lose his shop." The fresh idiot in question came to the thoughtful conclusion that sailors and school girls may be superstitious, but that they are not in it with actors. "Now, I'll tell you," a grizzled, blue-checked actor put in. "A few years ago I took out the 'fattest' piece—egad, every town would have broken out with spot cash as though it had the smallpox. Well, we were rehearsing and the boy had the 'tag,' and, if you'll believe me, she—little Tottie Few-clothes, was playing the part—she spoke it off like a book." "Of course it was a 'frost,'" "Conse—killed the play!" "Why?" asked the newsmonger. "Ever been at a rehearsal?" returned the actor. "Yes, many times; without the option of a fine." "Ever heard the tag?" "No; but why?" "Why? Because if the last few words of a piece are spoken before the first night, the play is hoodooed. Ah, I've seen many a good piece ruined that way. By fresh idiots," he added grimly. Then the newsmonger went out and sat down on a curbstone and tossed up a quarter with a hole in it to see whether he should go and hang himself or get married.—New York Mail and Express.

Book Chat.

The Marquis of Lorne has written a love story, which is soon to appear in an English magazine. It is a singular fact that novelists and poets always write on that subject of which they know the least.

Charles J. Bellamy, a brother of Edward, the author of "Looking Backward," has written a novel, which is to appear January 1st. It is entitled "An Experiment in Marriage." Bellamy has for the last ten years been the publisher and editor of the Daily News, Springfield, Mass., which he founded jointly with his brother Edward.

It is a curious coincidence that the late Robert Browning should have died on the day on which his last volume of poems was published in London. At the moment of his death a remark made by him showed that his thoughts were with his latest literary production. Wilkie Collins on his death-bed corrected the proofs of his story, "Blind Love," now running in The World. A man of letters loves the products of his imagination with a passion hard to measure.

The sale of S. L. M. Barlow's collection of books will occur at the American Art Galleries, New York, during the first week in February. This library is certainly the most remarkable collection of Americana ever made in this country. It includes the first printed copies of the letters which Columbus sent back to Italy detailing his discoveries, the first letters returned to the Court of Spain by Fernando Cortez, and the first editions of a number of the reports made by the pioneers in Virginia and New England. Of some of these books it is known that there are only four or five copies in existence, and these are in possession of the great libraries of the world. The market value of the Cortez letters is said to be about $3,000 each, and there are only twenty or twenty-five printed pages. The Columbus letters will bring, it is expected, $2,000 each. It is estimated that the 6,000 volumes in the library, which can all be comfortably placed in one small room, many of the books consisting simply of three or four pages, will realize $125,000. The British Museum, Baron Rothschild, and several of the leading libraries of Europe, will undoubtedly have representatives here to attend the sale.

Thomas Paine's famous work, entitled "The Rights of Man," was published in England in 1791-2, the first part appearing in March of 1791. It was intended to arouse the people to a sense of the defects of their system of government, and as a refutation of Edmund Burke's "Reflections on the Revolution in France." The work caused a sensation, and was eagerly read. When the government heard that the second part was in preparation, it resolved to suppress the book, if possible. The Ministry having learned the name of the printer to whom the work was to be intrusted, bribed him to offer Paine as high as 1,000 guineas for the copyright. This ruse was unsuccessful. Paine declared that he would never put it into the power of any printer to alter or suppress a work of his. The second part appeared in the early part of 1792, and in a very short time 100,000 copies had been sold. The Ministry used every effort to counteract the principles disseminated by means of the book, and filed an information against Paine, charging him with "false, scandalous and seditious libel." The trial took place at the Guild Hall, London, December 18, 1792, before Lord Kenyon, a cruel and vindictive Judge, and a packed jury. Lord Erskine defended Paine, but, as a matter of course, he was found guilty. He was at that time in Paris as a member of the National Convention, and consequently escaped punishment for his alleged crime in England.

Professional Chat.

That trite saying: "Even the Almighty does not know what a jury will do," is usually credited to Daniel Webster. The origin of the term is not known, and it is as ancient as the jury system. The adage is true, however. The process of reasoning of the ordinary juror is past finding out.

"Please give us your ideas of the Mouroe doctrine," said a bystander to a village candidate for office. "Oh, well, now," replied he, "when it comes to that, there is just as good doctors nowadays as ever there was. All this talk about Bright's disease and Mouroe's doctorin' is nonsense. Dr. Buck, standing thar, is just as good a doctor as any of 'em."

Justice Miller, of the Supreme Court of the United States, never had a collegiate education. He was educated for a physician. He was not admitted to the bar until he was thirty-one years of age. For twenty-seven years he has been a member of the greatest Court in the world, and has delivered more decisions on constitutional questions than any Judge since the organization of the Court. Collegiate training makes a bright man if he has brains, but a man with brains can accomplish great things without a college education.

Judge Harlan is delivering a very interesting series of lectures on the constitution and constitutional law before the Columbian Law School. Many people avail themselves of the opportunity to hear the distinguished jurist, and the lecture-room is crowded. The Judge may be a humorist in a sly way, but it doesn't often crop out. One interesting point was being discussed. "This matter," said he, "will come up before the Supreme Court next February, by which time Judge Brewer will undoubtedly be on the bench and the bench will be full." The class howled and the Judge blushed. Now, it is a question whether he was playing on Judge Brewer's name intentionally or not.—Washington Post.

Major Ben Colon Perley Poore was one of the best of the old-school correspondents. For him the White House had no terrors, the executive session no secrets. He had only to show his massive and rotund form, wave one pudgy hand and say, "Choog, choog," in its seductive way, and statesmen would break down the bars and trample each other under foot to tell him the news. One day he got into a bot-tailed car at the Capitol after adjournment. In the car were Senators Anthony, Hoar, Burnside, Chandler, Cameron, and half a dozen members. Ben Perley settled himself down, surveyed his companions, pulled a paper out of his pocket, and began to read. "Well, well," he exclaimed suddenly, "Schenck's dead!" "Who is dead?" asked Senator Burnside. "Schenck! Very sudden! Poor Schenck," muttered the Major. Here was food for comment. Senator Burnside told some of his army experience with General Schenck. Senator Anthony told how he used to play poker with him. Senator Hoar related some incidents of General Schenck's diplomatic career abroad, and the others chipped into the common fund of eulogy, reminiscence and regret. Major Ben said little, sat still, twiddled his thumbs, and soaked it in. By the time the car had reached the corner of Fifteenth street he had nearly three columns of good matter. "Let me see the paper a minute," said Senator Chandler. "It was handed over." "Where is this death notice?" "In the last column of the first page, near the bottom, said the Major, as he dropped off the rear step, in front of the Riggs. It was Pulmonary Syrup Schenck who had died.

NOTES.

Whistling contests among young ladies only, are the fad in some of the eastern cities, as accompaniments to church and charity fairs. They are said to be intensely amusing. It must be difficult to keep their faces puckered long enough to whistle.

Dr. Jacob Carr Findlay, the discoverer of natural gas in Ohio, died on Sunday. He had been working since 1836 to prosecute his theory that natural gas existed, but apparently had not attended the sessions of the State Legislatures, or of Congress. The existence of natural gas in unlimited quantities in this country was there demonstrated years ago, though possibly not of a paying quality.

In all the affairs of life, a man's conscience should be his judge and guide. If he is prompted by this honest influence, he need not care for that phantom called public opinion. He may be misunderstood, persecuted and consigned to temporary oblivion, but in the long run, he will come out triumphant. The great mistakes of life, are, "What will the neighbors, or the public say?" Follow conscience and let the public rant.

Under the Chinese laws, when a man beats his wife, and does not break any bones or maim her, the law does not concern itself about it. Should a wife beat her husband, however, she is liable to receive one hundred blows, and the husband may be divorced at once. The law also provides that he who from poverty sells his wife shall not be severely punished. In our glorious country, it is the unfortunate man that is often "sold" in the marital market. Of very late years, some of the alleged nobility have been purchased outright by the foolish worshippers of aristocratic titles.

A recent decision rendered by Judge Thayer, United States District Judge for Missouri, holds that it is unlawful to send a dunning postal card through the United States mails. The poor devil of a debtor is unfortunate enough in knowing the fact of his impunctuality without having the fact published by postal cards. We say published, because in all important postoffices there are women employed, and what a woman sees and knows is at once published. Judge Thayer is right. If a creditor wants to use the mails for dunning purposes, let him use sealed envelopes.

According to Ruskin, an educated man ought to know three things: First, where he is—that is to say, what sort of a world has he got into, how large it is, and what kind of creatures live in it, and how and what it is made of. Secondly, where he is going, what chances or reports are there of any other world besides this, and what seems to be the nature of that other world. Thirdly, what he had best do under the circumstances, what are the present state and wants of mankind, what is his place in society, and what are the readiest means in his power of attaining happiness and diffusing it. The man who knows these things, and who has his will so subdued in the learning of them that he is willing to do what he knows he ought, is an educated man.

Remarkable Even for California.

Within the past few years, attention has been paid in this State to the breeding of short-horn cattle, and the results so far demonstrate that California can hold her own, if not eclipse the world, in the breeding of this line of fine stock, as she has in the remarkable productions in the line of horses. Heretofore, and even at present, the raising of this breed of stock—short-horns—has been so expensive that single animals have, in instances, been sold at auction at $1,000 and upwards, and for that reason the general public had no opportunity to have their tables supplied with meats of such a grade of luxury. There is now on display at the city market on J, between Front and Second, the dressed carcass of what is probably the first thoroughbred yearling placed on the markets in this city. At the last State Fair considerable attention was attracted to the breeding of short-horn cattle, and a large revenue resulted to the State Agricultural Society from the exhibition in that line. The encouragement then held out was well merited, and the directors of the society are now able to see the benefit to the State that has flowed from their prudent action. We are prompted to call attention to this subject, in that, we, with our fellow citizens, are interested in the development of the fine stock interests of the State, and in this particular line it will result in supplying our tables with the choicest of meats, and from indications it may be judged that Sacramento will be favored in this respect in the very near future. On inquiry, the proprietor of the market, Mr. Heilborn, of the firm of A. Heilborn & Bro., informed us that the carcass of a thoroughbred short-horn that had been raised on their Wild Flower stock farm in Fresno county. The dressed carcass of this animal—and but a yearling—weighs 800 pounds.

A Recital.

A musical and elocutionary recital will be given by the pupils of Mrs. J. C. Bainbridge and Miss Mamie Bainbridge, at Castle Hall, Ninth and I streets, on Monday evening, December 30th, at 8 o'clock. Mr. C. A. Neale and Mr. George Franz will assist in the programme. The following young ladies and gentlemen will take part in the musical and literary exercises: Misses Lottie Neubourg, Ida Stauffer, Delia Krull, Lillie Stauffer, Ida Bates, Katherine Manlove, Anna Neubourg, Rose Jobson, May Quanchi, Mamie W. Bainbridge, and Misses Dierssen, Burt, Cornell and Ellsworth; also, Messrs. Greenlaw, Lohmeyer, Neale, Franz and Miller.

Hans, the Boatman.

Clay Greene's drama, Hans, the Boatman, was presented at the Metropolitan theater last night to a fair audience. It is not a great production, either as a work of art or literature, but it is a creation that pleases. There is mirth, humor, and pathos running all through the play. The natural and exuberant action of the little child, May Hanon, is a play and study of itself. There is none of the stuffed and parrot-like business of the Little Lord Fauntleroy style, but all is the outpouring of childish life and exuberance. Charles Arnold is a clever dialect artist. His songs are full of melody, and are taking. He possesses the power of changing from mirth to pathos, which marks the characteristics of a true artist. The company is fair to middling. Dot Fredericks is a vivacious little comedienne, and has the making of a good actress. The dog Lion is an important character in the play, and has his part to perfection. Hans, the Boatman, to-night.

Silver Wedding.

Joseph Steffens and Mrs. Steffens will be home January 15, 1890. This is the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. The card issued for this important event is a model for uniqueness. On the back we find this indorsement: "MARRIED: By the Rev. Chas. Wadsworth, D. D., in San Francisco, January 15, 1865, Mr. Joseph Steffens, formerly of Millidgeville, Illinois, to Miss E. Louisa Symes, recently of Hoboken, New Jersey." The face of the finely engraved card shows an arch composed of twenty-five blocks, representing the number of years of their marital life. The keystone is No. 1, on which is a steamer, held by three of the children of Eros, and which contains the monogram of the then young couple. The arch is elegantly designed, and the left pillar discloses a foundation, with the block "25," and on the right pillar of the arch, two little cupids are placing another block, marked "26," indicative of the commencement of the twenty-sixth year of married bliss. The marriage bell is hanging from the center, in the act of sounding the marriage chimes. Mr. and Mrs. Steffens are pictured as passing under the arch towards their elegant residence, which is also engraved upon the card. For genuine elegance and taste, we have rarely seen anything superior to this unique design, made by a young art student of the Sacramento School of Design, Wallace Sawyer. We tender our congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Steffens on their happy career through the quarter century of time.

No Money for Christmas.

In the month of December the pay-car of the Southern Pacific system did not reach Sacramento. It is the month of holidays, the month of all when custom has made it that gifts pass to those near to us. Again, it is the month when State and county taxes have to be paid. In this matter we are not disposed to blame the principal managers of the railroad company. We are satisfied that had this matter been anticipated and been brought to the notice of Senator Stanford or his colleagues, it would have been averted. There is, however, something radically wrong in the labor departments of the system. When a man toils for his money, he should get his pay within a reasonable time. A family man, when money is coming to him, should have its use to buy his wife and little ones Christmas presents. As we intimate, the ending of the year means the adding of a penalty on all unpaid State and county taxes. When men have not the coin, they cannot pay, and in this matter, we suggest that the authorities take the chances and not impose the penalty upon those who have earned moneys they reasonably could have expected to get. We respectfully call the attention of Senator Stanford and the railroad managers to this matter. As we say, we have no idea they know of it, and we feel if Messrs. Stanford or Crocker knew of the many little ones who missed their Christmas gifts because the working men at the shops were not paid off as they should have been, the matter would not have occurred. But one element has been benefited—the Shylocks. That they have received benefits at the expense of the railroad workmen, is a matter to be demonstrated when the powers to draw wages will be presented at the pay-car. A reference to facts that are easy of understanding is sufficient; the subject to which we refer somewhat demands humane attention.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

There will be Christmas praise service by the Unitarian Society at Pythian Hall tomorrow evening.

Rev. John F. Von Herrlich was suddenly prostrated by illness on Thursday night. He is out of danger now.

There will be a Christmas concert at the Congregational Church to-morrow evening. Elegant music is arranged for the occasion.

Steve Lang drew a pistol on Frank Rhoads yesterday, but was prevented from using it by bystanders. Liquor was the prompter of the act, so it is said.

The city is invested with tramps and beggars. On every corner the address, "Can you help me, sir?" coming from seedy and disconsolate-looking fellows, who await the approach of citizens.

The ladies of the First Baptist Church are holding "The Merchants' Carnival of Trades" at Armory Hall. Last night's entertainment was well attended and pleasing. The Carnival will continue to-night. There will be an interesting musical and literary programme carried out by a number of accomplished young ladies and gentlemen.

A Former Sacramentan Heard From.

Last week, at Denver, Col., Rev. J. Q. A. Henry delivered a powerful address at the First Baptist Church on "Seamstresses and Saleswomen." He dwelt pathetically upon the condition of working women, especially in the east, where thousands of them depend solely upon the needle for a livelihood, and labor from fourteen to sixteen hours a day, obtaining a bare living.

River Navigation.

Now, that it seems reasonable, the Federal government will pay some attention to the matter of the improvement of the Sacramento river and its tributaries, we hope the work will be well done. Time was, and within the memory of men now living, when to this city the Sacramento river was navigable for seagoing vessels. At the very lowest stages of water in the summer and fall of 1850, vessels came up the river drawing ten feet and a half of water. In that year the bark Undine came up in August drawing ten feet. The bark Ann Welch, of 390 tons, came up in October, likewise drawing ten feet. The bark Straford, afterward used as a prison ship, and drawing ten feet and seven inches of water, came up in September. In the year spoken of, ocean vessels landed at our levee and discharged their cargoes. At the very lowest point, the water in the river in front of the city was from two and a half to three fathoms deep, and there was ample room for the working of ships. In those days the levee for a mile along Front street, was lined with vessels, in some places, two deep. Most of these vessels had sailed from the Atlantic seaboard and around the Horn. Afterward such heavy draft steamers as the Senator plied between here and San Francisco. The work of man shoaled the river; it is now for engineering skill to restore it as it was primarily. We have no doubt it can be done. The lessons of the late freshet indicate that work must be done. Its successful accomplishment means the reclamation permanently of lands, the production of which in value has been demonstrated; it also means the restoration of the use of an important artery in this State for navigation. Let Congress act; let its appropriations be intelligently expended and we venture that in a few years the augmentation of the wealth of the Sacramento valley will much more than repay the outlay. With the Sacramento river as it was, we can load ships here and sail them to any point on the globe. The age of hydraulic mining has passed. The people and the Courts have come to realize that the amount of gold obtained by that method compensates, not for the damage it inflicts upon interests more permanent. The ethics of political economy have come into play and the people have been brought to understand that agricultural land is productive of wealth without an ending; that the unobstructed navigation of our water courses will be of benefit long after the generations of to-day shall have passed away. The mineral productions of this State have left little of wealth; our agricultural development is but in infancy. It will produce gold; it will build up cities; let us preserve an avenue for its output.

The Weather.

The rainfall for the past week, according to the signal service reports, amounted to 1.56 inches, as against 2.18 inches during the same time last year. The total rainfall for this month to date is 7.36 inches, as against 4.63 inches for the entire month of December of last year. The total precipitation for this season is 16.53 inches, as against 9.46 inches last season up to and including the 31st day of December. The highest and lowest temperature for the past week was 58° and 39.5°, while for the same time last year the highest and lowest was 60° and 38°.

Blaine in 1892.

The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat writes; "Mr. Blaine's position regarding 1892 was explained to-day by one of his friends. It does not involve anything which savors of disloyalty toward the President. The Secretary is doing all that he can to make Mr. Harrison's term satisfactory and successful. At the same time, he does not feel that he is bound to the fortunes of the President for a longer period than the single term. Mr. Blaine feels that he is entirely free to look forward to the campaign of 1892, and to plan for himself. His relations with President Harrison are very different from those he sustained to President Garfield. Then a second term was kept in view from the day of inauguration, and Mr. Blaine was committed to it. With Mr. Harrison, Mr. Blaine is Secretary of State for the time being, and nothing more. He does not lead. He does not drive. He moves along in the procession of this Administration. Nobody will say that he is not making an admirable Secretary of State. Nobody will say that the patronage of the State Department has been handled with any idea of influencing the situation. But Mr. Blaine is in the hands of his friends for nomination in 1892. He knows that they are quietly preparing for his nomination. He does not forbid it. He is willing, if his present good physical condition continues, to enter the contest, and he asks nothing better than that his old antagonist—ex-President Cleveland—shall be the Democratic nominee."

Twelve Million Machines

IN USE.

THE LIGHT RUNNING

DOMESTIC

Sewing Machine

Leads all others. Most Durable, Simplest, Best.

Every Agent claims the machines he sells the best, but talk is cheap. TIME is the only real test of genuine merit. During TWENTY-SIX YEARS of practical use the DOMESTIC has withstood this test. It stands to-day without a peer. Recommended by all White Goods Sewers, Dressmakers, Tailors and Manufacturers. Used by over 4,000 Families in Sacramento City. It is the only Sewing Machine with really Self-Setting Attachments. It costs you nothing to try it before you buy another. Sold on easy installments. Old machines taken in exchange.

Domestic Sewing Machine Co.

A. J. POMMER, Selling Agent,

Northwest corner Ninth and J streets, Sacramento.

Fine Table Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Produce of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

FLASHES.

Women who paint—all women.
Ignorance and the extreme of fashion are kindred.
Too much money is as bad for some people, as the lack of it is for others.
Some men give according to their means, others according to their meanness.
Remembering the poor is well enough, but it is better to give them something.
Nothing suits a cross man so well as to find a button off his shirt when his wife has no time to sew it on.
A nomination to office is often called an empty honor—it empties the pockets. The public treasury is often emptied.

Interesting Entertainment.

At K. of P. Castle, Ninth and I streets, on Sunday evening at 7:30 P. M., a praise service will be given by the Unitarian choir, composed of Miss Emma Felter, soprano; Miss Hattie Wheat, contralto; Mr. R. Cohn, tenor; Mr. G. Shannon, basso; Miss Gerish, organist. The following choice programme will be rendered: Quartet, "Nativity," H. R. Shelley; tenor solo, "Bethlehem," Gounod; quartet, "O, Holy Night," Adam; bass solo, with quartet, "See Now the Altar Garlanded with Flowers," Faure; soprano solo, "Father, Source of Help Divine," Schubert; quartet, "Christmas," H. R. Shelley. The choir will be assisted on this occasion by a select orchestra, composed of Mr. C. A. Neale, flutist; Mr. G. W. Franz, violinist; and Mr. G. Neale, cornetist.

Sutter's Fort.

The question of purchasing the site of Sutter's Fort in Sacramento, and of restoring it as far as possible, to represent its original appearance, has been the subject of a great deal of discussion lately. Such historic places, that were the scenes of many of the most important events in California's history are fast being obliterated. It would seem not only desirable, but a wise policy, to preserve these places that are associated with one of the most important epochs in our country's history. Saiborn & Co. have placed on exhibition in their window a large lithograph of Sutter's Fort, as it appeared in 1847. A comparison of this picture with a sketch in THEMIS, a Sacramento paper, made from information gathered from all available authentic sources, shows an almost perfect agreement in appearance, so that this lithograph may be accepted as a good representation of the original fort. It is to be hoped that the offer will be accepted that was made to the Sacramento authorities by the Crocker heirs, to restore the fort, providing it shall be kept for all time as a public park, and Sutter's Fort thus restored and preserved. —Benicia New Era.

On Christmas Day, near Folsom, at 2:10 in the afternoon, a Chinaman was buried in a shaft by the caving of the sides, and killed. This morning the Chinese who were digging for the body uncovered the legs thereof, when their superstitious fears overcame them and they suspended work.

Chinese Floating Gardens.

In the month of April a bamboo raft, ten to twelve feet long and about half as broad, is prepared. The poles are lashed together with interstices of an inch between each. Over this a layer of straw an inch thick is spread, and then a coating two inches thick of adhesive mud, taken from the bottom of a canal or pond, which receives the seed. The raft is moored to the bank of still water, and requires no further attention. The straw soon gives way and the soil also, the roots drawing support from the water alone. In about twenty days, the raft becomes covered with the creeper (ipomoea reptans), and its stems and roots are gathered for cooking. In Autumn its small white petals and yellow stamens, nestling among the round leaves, present a very pretty appearance. In some places marshy land is profitably cultivated in this manner.

Besides these floating vegetable gardens, there are also floating rice fields. Upon rafts constructed as above, weeds and adherent mud were placed as a flooring, and when the rice shoots were ready for transplanting they were placed in the floating soil, by which, being adhesive and held in place by weed roots, the plants were maintained in position throughout the season. The rice thus planted ripened in from sixty to seventy, in place of one hundred days. The rafts are cabled to the shore, floating on lakes, pools or sluggish streams. These floating fields served to avert famines, whether by drought or flood. When other fields were submerged and their crops sodden or rotten, these floated and flourished, and when a drought prevailed they subsided with the falling water, and while the soil around was arid, advanced to maturity. Agricultural treatises contain plates representing rows of extensive rice fields moored to sturdy trees on the banks of rivers or lakes which existed formerly in the lacustrine regions of the lower Yangtse and Yellow river. —China Review.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.
Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.
ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.
CHANGED HANDS.
SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,
(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)
1012 SEVENTH STREET.
Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars.
ROBERT ALLEN,
Formerly of Agricultural Park.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT
BILLY GROENVELD'S
Sutterville House
And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.
Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.
M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,
Next door to Postoffice, SACRAMENTO.

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled
SOUR MASH BOURBON WHISKY.
To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagele & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGELE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

THE ONLY
GEM GALLERY, Ferrottype Gallery
627 J STREET, In the City.

Sixteen "Gems" for 50 cents. Card size proportionately low. Photographic Work in general.

D. McDOUGALL,
Merchant Tailor,
617 K STREET,
Next to Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.
1130 J Street, near Twelfth
Repairing Neatly Done.
Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,
FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.
(Successors to L. Payen.)
No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.
Family Entrance on Fifth Street.
Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

"THE PLAY,"
Adjoining Entrance to Metropolitan Theater,
K STREET, FOURTH AND FIFTH.
Best of Wines and Liquors.
FAWCETT & KELLY, Proprietors.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,
PHARMACISTS,
S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.
CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.
Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.
Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.
L. RADLOFF,
LADIES' TAILOR,
218 POST STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.
Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

OSBORN & FOLGER
DEALERS IN
ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.
New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.
N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.
Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

R. W. PARKER,

Dealer in Choice Family

GROCERIES and PROVISIONS

Sold at the Lowest Cash Price.
Give him a call and be convinced.
Corner of Seventeenth and N Streets.
Also, Office of the Superintendent of the City Cemetery.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,
Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,
Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & AND & MECHANICAL & DENTIST
511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.
Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

FRIEND & TERRY
LUMBER CO.

Wholesale and Retail Lumber Dealers, Also Shakes, Bolts, Ties, Doors, Windows, Blinds and Screens.
Main Yard and Office, No. 1310 Second Street.
Branch Yard, corner Twelfth and J Sts.
P. O. Box 233. E. J. HOLT, Manager. Sacramento

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.

General Printers,

Lithographers, Electrotypers, Engravers, Book Binders, Blank Book Manufacturers.

BEST APPOINTED PRINTING OFFICE

NORTH OF SAN FRANCISCO,

Competing with that City in Quality of Work and Prices.

—410—

J STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured
HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.

R. DAVIS,
NOTARY PUBLIC,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

A. J. MUIR,
PLUMBER,
—Gas and Steam Fitter.—

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET, Telephone 226.
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Censure is the tax a man pays to the public for being eminent.—Swift.

If your new shoes are tight, dip a cloth in hot water and lay it on the right place and it will soon stretch.

There is no virtue that adds so noble a charm to the finest traits of beauty as that which exerts itself in watching over the tranquility of an aged parent.—Sir Julian.

Dissipation is absolutely a labor when the round of Vanity fair is once made, but fashion makes us think light of the toll, and we describe the circle as mechanically as a horse in a mill.—Zimmerman.

Despair makes a despicable figure, and descends from a mean original. 'Tis the offspring of fear, of laziness, and impatience. It argues a defect of spirit and resolution, and oftentimes of honesty, too.—Collier.

Caution in crediting, reserve in speaking, and revealing one's self to very few, are the best securities both of peace and a good understanding with the world and with the inward peace of our own minds.—Thomas A. Kempis.

Of all the vanities and fopperies, the vanity of high birth is the greatest. True nobility is derived from virtue, not from birth. Titles, indeed, may be purchased, but virtue is the only coin that makes the bargain valid.—Burton.

The pleasantest part of a man's life is generally that which is passed in courtship, provided his passion be sincere and the party beloved, kind, with discretion. Love, desire, hope, all the pleasing emotions of the soul rise in the pursuit.—Addison.

Acts Like a Chicken.

A remarkable case of madness, resulting from a wound inflicted by an angry animal, has recently appeared near here, off the plantation of Joseph Middleton, which lies about three miles from this town, writes a Brazoria (Texas) correspondent of the Philadelphia Times. A negro woman employed by him, while setting a hen to hatch a nest of eggs, wished to place more under her, and raised the fowl from the nest in order to do so. The hen turned on her and gave her a peck on the hand so severe as to break the skin, drawing at the same time a few drops of blood.

As the wound healed up without delay, nothing more was thought of the matter, the woman only mentioning the occurrence casually to some of the other negroes on the place.

Last week, some ten days after the hen had pecked, the woman began to exhibit strange freaks of demeanor, and, from a good-natured, obliging creature, has become so fractious and surly that all are afraid to approach her. She refuses all companionship, and wanders about the country all day from early morning, only coming to the house for her meals. If any attempt is made to confine her or lay hand on her, she becomes violently angry, and makes vicious darts and springs toward any one present.

For days now she had not spoken a word, but keeps up continually a low, clucking noise, most horribly like that of a hen, and sits by the hour scratching in the earth with her hands and feet. In eating, her resemblance to a fowl is displayed in a most remarkable and shocking manner, for her food is taken up by her pecking at it with all the motions of a chicken's head while feeding.

All who knew her before her madness say that her entire expression has undergone a change. This is probably true, for her features now wear a sharpened, eager aspect, and her eyes have a most unnaturally hard and bright look, with a bird-like way of glancing about her. At night she refuses to sleep under a roof, and is generally found hiding about sunset under some tree or brush, and will vigorously resent with an angry cackle all attempts to disturb her. She is visibly growing weaker, and physicians who have seen her say that her death is only a question of a few weeks at most.

The negroes about regard her as one bewitched or "hoodooed," and cannot be prevailed upon to approach her, even her husband and children having deserted her. People come from all over the country to see her, while she remains to appearances perfectly oblivious to her visitors, and quietly pursues her clucking and scratching as long as she is not interfered with.

It may not be as widely known as it deserves to be, that twenty grains of salicylic acid, given in liq. ammon. acet., three or four times a day, will so far control a common cold that the aching of the brow, eyelids, etc., and during movements of the eye, will cease in a few hours; while the sneezing and running from the nose will also abate, and will disappear in a few days; and, more fortunate still, the cold will pass off and not finish up, as is customary, with a cough. It may be that it is only in persons tainted with rheumatism where we find a chill followed by such a train of troubles, and certain it is that different persons suffer in different ways after a chill. But for a very great number of people of fair health who are liable to take a cold, it is highly desirable to avoid a cough, and the salicylic-acid treatment places this in our power.

How to Write a Novel.

A Canoe township correspondent wants to know how to write a short love story. Write it like all the rest of them are written. First, let your hero fall desperately in love with your heroine. Then manage to have him struck on the head by a pile-driver, or something of that sort; after which he will be carried in an insensible condition to the residence of her whom his soul loveth. In about three weeks he will open his eyes and exclaim: "Where am I?"

And the heroine, who has been nursing him all the while, will answer in sweet, soft tones: "You are here with me Charley, and I am so glad." Then he rapidly recovers and they get married. You can put in the variations to suit yourself, using either accident or typhoid fever with which to prostrate your hero. But you must down him somehow, that is imperative.

Women can be conquered but never convinced.

It is a poor dolt who cannot invent an excuse for his foolishness.

People who are temperate in all things are generally satisfied with none.

Successful business men have to relegate the luxury of being sick to their employes.

How uncomfortable a chronic kicker looks when he is accidentally right, and gets a majority on his side.

Why should custom ask a man to set up the cigars because his expenses are increased by the arrival of a baby?

While wealth receives respect, the man who possesses it is sometimes foolish enough to believe that it is to him the people bow.—Milwaukee Journal.

Miles.

The Irish mile is 2,240 yards.
The Swiss mile is 9,153 yards.
The Italian mile is 1,765 yards.
The Scotch mile is 1,984 yards.
The Tuscan mile is 1,808 yards.
The German mile is 8,106 yards.
The Arabian mile is 2,143 yards.
The Turkish mile is 1,826 yards.
The Flemish mile is 6,869 yards.
The Vienna post mile is 8,296 yards.
The Roman mile is 1,628, or 2,025 yards.
The West mile is 1,167, or 1,337 yards.
The Dutch and Prussian mile is 6,480 yards.
The Swedish and Danish mile is 7,341.5 yards.
The English and American mile is 1,760 yards.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Open Valve A, pull off the Hose, and water follows immediately.

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K.

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

STABLE TO LET

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

BOOTS AND SHOES made to order. Boots, $5 to $11. Shoes, $4 to $9. Ladies' Shoes, best quality French Kid, $5 to $7.

REPAIRING DONE at lowest prices.

NONE BUT BEST mechanics employed.

WE GUARANTEE to make perfect fitting to the worst of crooked and crippled feet.

COMPETE WITH any shoes on the market.

216 J Street

—AND—

208 K Street,

SACRAMENTO.

A. CASELLI

& COMPANY.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

American Eagle Hotel

Corner Twelfth and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO.

This house has been put in first-class condition, and also newly furnished—everything being new from office to kitchen.

Board and Room, per Week, - - $5.00 to $7.00

MEALS, 25 CENTS.

Terms made with families.

GEO. W. NEWBERT, Proprietor.

Bainbridge Business College

J. C. BAINBRIDGE, PRINCIPAL.

No. 1017 J Street, Sacramento.

A full Business Course, together with Short-hand, Telegraphy, Bookkeeping, Penmanship and all the branches usually taught in schools of this kind.

A full corps of Teachers of the first rank only employed.

MRS. BAINBRIDGE has charge of the Music Department.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEETING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6. Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4. Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

JAS. LONGSHORE,

SACRAMENTO TRUNK FACTORY,

530 K STREET.

Trunks, Valises & Bags Wholesale and Retail.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,

SACRAMENTO.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS,

Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Wm. Kuhlaw, Peter Miller, Elizabeth Davis, Henry Greisel, Robt. Robinson, and B. F. White, greeting.

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 12th day of October, 1889, in which action M. G. Pandried is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: That you, the defendants, and each of you, be required to set forth your several claims, or right, title or interest of, in and to Lots One to Eight, inclusive, in the Block bounded by J and K and Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California; and that said claims, or either of them, may be determined by a decree of this Court, and that they, or either of said claims, may be adjudged and declared invalid, and that the defendants, nor either of them, have no right, title or interest of, in, or to said land, and that plaintiff do have judgment against said defendants, decreeing plaintiff to have a good and valid title, and that the defendants be forever debarred from ever asserting any claim adverse to plaintiff, and for costs and for general relief, all of which will more fully appear from the complaint on file herein, to which reference is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified, that, unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief prayed for in his said complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court, in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Charles Farley and J. W. Richmond, greeting.

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 24th day of October, 1889, in which action Michael Haley is plaintiff, and you are defendants. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To require you, defendants, to set forth the nature, character and extent of your claims to that certain real property in the City of Sacramento, County of Sacramento, State of California, known upon the official map of said Sacramento City as Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, in the Block between T and U, Ninth and Tenth streets; and to obtain a decree of Court adjudging that defendants, or either of them, have no estate, right, or title in said premises, or any part thereof; and that defendants be forever debarred and estopped from asserting or claiming any right, title, or interest to said premises, or any part thereof; and for such other and further relief as the Court may deem fit and proper in the premises; and for costs of suit. All of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

FRANK D. RYAN, Attorney for Plaintiff. [n2-9t]

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California to Geo W. Bird-sall, greeting.

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 1st day of November, 1889, in which action Emma Birdsall is plaintiff, and you are defendant. That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the grounds of wilful neglect and wilful desertion, all of which is more fully set forth in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made. And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said County of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere. And you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 1st day of November, A. D. 1889. WM. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

ISAAC JOSEPH, Attorney for Plaintiff. n2-9t

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.—ESTATE OF JAMES MCENANEY, Deceased. Notice is hereby given by the undersigned administrator of the Estate of James McEnaney, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against said deceased to exhibit them with their necessary affidavits and vouchers within four months after the first publication of this notice, to him at the office of Frank D. Ryan, Attorney at Law, No. 504 J street, Sacramento City, Cal.

Dated Nov. 30th, 1889.

LAWRENCE MCENANEY, Administrator.

d30-5t.

TAXES.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 3748 OF THE Political Code, as amended March 16, 1889, State and County Taxes will be received at the office of the County Tax Collector, northwest corner of Seventh and I streets, in the City of Sacramento, on and after FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1889. Taxpayers will please take notice that on the last Monday in December (the 30th day), 1889, at 6 o'clock P. M. of that day, taxes will be delinquent, and unless paid prior thereto five per cent penalty will be added, as provided by law.

Tax Collector of Sacramento County. Sacramento, Cal., November 5, 1889. n9-4t

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201. SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER, BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON, The Leading Merchant Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501 -- 507 K, cor. Fifth

Furniture

Bedding.

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

Klune & Floberg, WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS

Agents for Rockford Watch Co.

NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Wm. J. Hassett.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR & COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

A. J. Johnston & Co: PRINTERS,

410 J Street,

Sacramento

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city. Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Excrecences, etc., Positively Cured or no Pay. No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated. Mrs. O. C. Neilson, Grass Valley, cancer. John Service, Auburn, lupus. Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer. Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed. N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer. J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer. John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer. Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed. Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer. I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular. Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

ANGLO-NEVADA ASSURANCE CORPORATION

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

FIRE.—Cash Capital, $2,000,000—MARINE.

Sacramento Branch:

No. 1018 SECOND STREET.

JOSEPH STEFFENS, Manager.

HOWARD KIMBROUGH, Local Agent.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J,

SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and

Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

[SACRAMENTO.]

Useful Suggestions.

Hot fat will dull the edge of the sharpest knife.

Smoked ceilings should be washed off with strong soda water.

Washing faded carpets in a strong solution of salt will restore the color.

Ammonia will frequently restore colors that have been spoiled by acid.

A red-hot iron passed over old putty will soften it so it is easily removed.

For children there is nothing better than saffron tea for teething and fever.

To keep lemons, cover them with cold water, changing every few days.

For burns use lime-water, olive oil and glycerine, equal parts, applied on lint.

Dry the dishcloth daily that no disease be justly charged to its noisome meshes.

Washing the hands in borax water before retiring tends to keep them soft and smooth.

Ink stains on silk or woollen fabrics can be removed by saturating in spirits of turpentine.

If it is desirable to freshen salt fish quickly, place in plenty of cold water, the flesh side down.

Folds of newspapers upon an earthen or tin plate make a satisfactory receptacle for the oil-can.

Rough flat-irons are vexatious. Their faces may be smoothed by rubbing them with a whetstone.

There is no bottom to these deep founts of wisdom, the newspapers which answer questions. A seeker after knowledge writes to know: "What causes the stars to twinkle, and why do not they all twinkle?" The wise man who solves poker problems, and tells what will cure chilblains, replies that the fixed stars twinkle because they shine by their own light. The proper answer would have been: Don't know what causes the stars to twinkle. Astronomers have puzzled their heads about it in vain. But then, it would not be the policy of a fount of wisdom to confess ignorance on any topic.

The story is an old one of the party of tired travelers who entered a house decorated by a peculiar sign, and demanded oysters.

"This is not a restaurant," said the courteous gentleman who met them. "I am an aurist."

"Isn't that an oyster hung outside the door?" asked one.

"No, gentlemen, it is an ear."

A body of sailors from an American vessel, stopping at Samoa, went to the German Consulate, and demanded dinner.

"This is not a hotel," said the offended domestic official who met them.

"Well, if it isn't a restaurant, what's that black fowl hung out for? Ain't it a sign?" inquired the spokesman.

The "sign" was the German eagle, the Consular coat of arms.

I never meet Howard Jansen, says a New York Star writer, without recalling a thrilling experience which he passed through years ago, while an officer on a steamer plying between San Francisco and Honolulu. Jansen told the story with that simple modesty which is ever characteristic of a brave and honest nature.

"On the morning on which we were billed to sail from Honolulu, there came aboard the steamer a party of three persons, evidently Hebrews. All were educated and refined. The party consisted of a bride and groom, and an elderly gentleman, whom we afterward learned was the bride's father. We soon became convinced, by the coolness with which the wife met the husband's overtures of affection, that the relations between them were strangely strained. At last, in a fit of desperation the poor woman told our sympathetic stewardess the secret of her trouble, and the stewardess in turn told the captain and myself. It was a simple, yet tragic story of a daughter's devotion. The father had become financially embarrassed. The rejected lover had bought up the old man's 'paper' and held it over his head, demanding his daughter's hand as the price of his salvation. The girl, with heroic self-sacrifice, abandoned the man she loved and married this villain to save her father. So things went on for a while. One moonlight night, about 12 o'clock, I was leaning against the rail when I saw a white figure glide noiselessly from the cabin to the side of the ship, hesitate for a moment, throw up her arms, and spring into the sea. For an instant I was transfixed with horror; then, giving a loud cry, I sprang after her. She sank before I could reach her. Several days from the time of the sad event the old gentleman was found in his berth with his throat cut; in his hand the deadly knife with which he had killed himself. Three years afterward I was at the mines. One evening my friend told me that a man who had murdered one of the 'boys' over a faro table would be hanged next morning, and asked me to go and see the condemned man in his cell. Imagine my astonishment at recognizing the young Hebrew husband whom I had seen on board the steamer. There was no hanging next day; he had severed a blood vessel with his teeth and gone in the night."

What is Good?
"What is the real good?"
I asked in musing mood.

Order, said the law court;
Knowledge, said the school;
Truth, said the wise man;
Pleasure, said the fool;
Love, said the maiden;
Beauty, said the page;
Freedom, said the dreamer;
Home, said the sage;
Fame, said the soldier;
Equity, the seer.

Spake my heart full sadly:
"The answer is not here."

Then within my bosom
Softly this I heard:
"Each heart holds the secret:
Kindness is the word."
—John Boyle O'Reilly.

The Secret of Beauty.

What has beauty to do with love?
Here is a question that is harder to answer than to ask. We all have known that there is some sort of connection between them, but it is hard to define. Poets have often tried to define it, but, like other mortals, have failed. John Keats comes as near it, perhaps, as any of them, when he says:

"Beauty is truth, truth beauty—that is all Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know."

That which we know to be true is more beautiful than that which we know or suspect of being false.

Haven't you known persons who seemed beautiful in your eyes until you discovered that they were not what they seemed? As long as they impressed you as being true, they were beautiful; but the first line of mistrust made them ugly.

You cannot love the false in nature. You may admire it, and you may be fascinated by it, but you cannot love it. A milliner-made, hand-painted woman may win your admiration, and she may fascinate you, but she can never win your true love. This is true, because nature has made it so. The true and the false go side by side, but never hand in hand.

The man who mistakes fascination for love is in great danger of being led into a path of misery. His affections will not be returned, neither will his kindness or gentleness be appreciated.

She alone is truly beautiful who is true. Her face may not be pretty, nor her form exactly sylph-like, yet she is beautiful in the eyes of him who believes in her.

May the fallow not use a little powder, or the pale cheeked indulge in a tinge of rouge? Certainly they may, because it is the duty of every woman to look well.

It is the duty of every girl, young lady, married woman and old maid to be just as handsome as she can.

To do this she need not resort to excessive padding, extensive dyeing or lavish painting. Indeed, she need not resort to padding at all, because fashion is so very liberal that the thin are allowed to wear loose, flowing gowns, while the stout may wear theirs as tight as the skin. Tan and sunburn are also fashionable, as that dark and even tawny complexions are not only allowable but quite the thing.

Beauty lies as much in manners as in features.

If our girls and young women keep this in mind, and strive to be well-mannered, they would not be so much inclined to paint, powder and dress in a fussy fashion.

It is the well-mannered lady who feels most at ease in public, and attracts the most respectful attention. She may not excite as much comment as her more flashy and highly-colored sister, but her chances for happiness and prosperity are much better.

Some ladies feel flattered to have gentlemen turn and look after them on the street, to gaze at them in public and make remarks about their shape. Could they hear the side remarks that are made, they might not feel as highly flattered.

Neatness in dress and quietness in manners are two things that never fail to win the honest admiration of respectable, virtuous men.

Many a woman has won the affection of a good man by the neatness and tidiness of her dress, and lost it by becoming negligent and slovenly after marriage.—Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

The great perfection to which the ancients carried the art of brick-making is probably due to the abundance of labor, plenty of time to devote to each stage of the work, their great patience and painstaking and the natural drying and preserving climate of the East. The dry, warm atmosphere of Egypt, Assyria and Babylonia, which countries were the nurseries of the ceramic art, have kept in a good state of preservation for more than three thousand years the sun-dried bricks so common in those countries. Many well-preserved adobes are also found in towns and walls of ancient India.

H. WACHHORST Leading Jeweler of Sacramento
SIGN OF THE TOWN CLOCK,
No. 315 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

J. A. MOYNIHAN. G. E. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihans
418 J Street.

LAST CHANCE. We are closing out the last of our immense stock of Bonbonieres and are positively SELLING AT COST. Baskets in endless variety. Full line of Holiday Vienna Ware—Satin and Silk Trimmings. Elegant line of BISQUE WARE for Holiday Presents. MAGGI'S HOT AND COLD BOUILLON.

ONLY FIRST-CLASS HOUSE IN THE CITY.

J. R. Wheat DITTMAR & WHEAT, A. Dittmar.
Sacramento Lounge & Mattress Factory

BEDDING.  FURNITURE

No. 916 J STREET.

Simon Strumer, WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,
No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

Announcement.

OUR STOCK IS CONSTANTLY BEING REPLENISHED WITH

—A FULL LINE OF—

HOLIDAY GOODS!

—CONSISTING OF THE—

Latest Designs and Novelties in the Jewelry Line

DIRECT FROM EASTERN MARKETS, WHICH WE OFFER AT LOWEST PRICES.

SAMUEL JELLY, JEWELER, 422 J Street.

Important and Worth Investigation

We are making Suits to order of the fine Huddersfield Worsteds for $25, which are worth $40. As the sales of these fine worsteds during the past three weeks have proved such a success in San Francisco, we have added a large line of Kerseys and Meltons, for Overcoats, with fine silk-serge lining all through, made to order from $30 to $35, which would cost elsewhere from $40 to $60. We have also received, direct from the mill, over forty pieces of fine Trouserings, which we bought at an immense reduction, and are now prepared to give our customers and the public of Sacramento the benefit. These are fine all-wool goods, at prices never before known in Sacramento. Please call and examine goods and be convinced of the bargains now offered for the holidays by

JOE POHEIM, THE TAILOR,
NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

Giesecke's

419 K STREET.

FOR THE PUBLIC! Special attention to the largest assortment of PURE HOME-MADE CANDIES, Bon Bon and Bonniere boxes and French Glazed Fruit in the city. Also, other Fancy Goods.

JAS. G. DAVIS Furniture, Carpets and Wall Paper
411 AND 413 K STREET,
Branch, 315 K St. Send for Catalogue. Prices Lowest.

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.
Southern Pacific Company
PACIFIC SYSTEM.
Nov. 17, 1889.
Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.25 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3.40 A
7.05 P	Denning, El Paso and East	6.45 P
7.25 P	Knight's Landing	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6.25 P
12-01 A	Central Atlantic Express
	Ogden and East	6.00 A
3-00 P	Oroville	10-30 A
3-00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10-30 A
10-40 A	Redding via Willows	4-00 P
6-15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7-25 P
6-50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8-35 P
3-05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11-40 A
4-00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10-40 P
*10-00 A	San Francisco via Steamers	26-00 A
11-25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2-25 P
6-50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11-40 P
11-25 A	San Jose	2-25 P
7-05 P	Santa Barbara	9-55 A
6-50 A	Santa Rosa	11-40 A
3-05 P	Santa Rosa	7-25 P
9-00 A	Stockton and Galt	6-45 P
7-05 P	Stockton and Galt	9-55 A
8-00 P	Truckee and Reno	6-25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno	6-00 A
12-05 P	Colfax	10-20 A
6-50 A	Vallejo	11-40 A
3-05 P	Vallejo	7-35 P
*12-15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10-25 A
*7-15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2-40 P
*5-20 P	Folsom	*6-50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning, P for afternoon.
A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank
DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.
Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities of the World.

OFFICERS:
PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED K COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:
C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's
FOR
FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.
Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF
CAPITAL NURSERIES,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.
ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE
AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.
Catalogues issued monthly.
No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

THEMIS

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 1890.

No. 46.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

The Board of Trustees on Monday, in the interest of the gas and tax payers of Sacramento city, very properly granted a franchise to permit a new electric lighting company to do business in this city, despite the very pronounced, yet selfish, opposition from those interested in the existing lighting monopoly. The citizens generally understand the motives that prompt the opposition; yet we are not disposed to condemn anyone who fights against that which will interfere with his pocket, and in this matter we state unqualifiedly, that the opposition comes largely from those interested in the stock of the Capital Gas Company. We cannot understand, however, the arguments that have been urged in opposition to this new enterprise, when we consider them in the light of reason; yet we can understand them better than we did the opposition from certain parties to the Central Street Railway Company. This journal has been the friend of every new enterprise that has sought a foothold among us, and we are but consistent in advocating that this new lighting company be permitted to do business here. Laying aside the personal interest which actuates those directly concerned as stockholders or employees of the existing lighting company, we have been somewhat surprised that some gentlemen who seem to want it understood they are public spirited, should have lent aid in opposition to this important enterprise. There seems to be a decided tendency here in some quarters to convince the outside world that the city of Sacramento will die from a nervous shock, if it is proposed to inaugurate enterprises that will result in the city keeping pace with other cities and towns. In common with our fellow citizens, we read with attention the despondent card signed by "A Citizen," and published in the Record-Union. He did not believe that new franchises should be granted, because a company might sell out, and expressed the fear that the new company might lose money. Our contemporary, the Record-Union, felt much the same way. And later on, the Bee, that has always boasted to be the friend of the citizens, viewed the matter with serious alarm. The arguments were founded in both journals upon the text of the unknown doleful citizen, that the new company might sell out, etc. Both of our contemporaries place great stress upon the fact that the Board of Trustees had granted the franchise with undue haste, yet it had been under consideration for several weeks. The argument is also made that the franchise was not properly restricted. We believe the same objections were urged as strenuously against the incoming of the Central railroad; and in that matter, one of our contemporaries in May last became very much alarmed, having been informed by "numerous citizens" that the chain-gang were cleaning between the tracks. We then took the trouble to find out exactly what it would cost the public to do this trifling work, and we reproduce what we then declared was, and what will be, the policy of this paper:

It was not possible that the cost to this big and enterprising city and county of cleaning off the space between the rails of the street railroad company, aside from cleaning the rest of the street, that is not objected to, could have exceeded $20 or $25. The total assessed valuation of the property of Sacramento county is upwards of $32,000,000; the appreciation of real estate values along the line of this road, when it will be operated, cannot now be estimated, but it will be very considerable. Yet some were alarmed that the public should nominally have to pay $25 for the benefit of some gentlemen who engaged in an enterprise that will be of more benefit to the people than to themselves. THEMIS takes a different view of local improvements; it believes that encouragement should be substantial. If we had twenty chain-gangs here, we would favor their employment for the assistance of those who will benefit the public; and if any man, company, or corporation, invests money to benefit and build up this city, whatever we can do through the columns of this paper to assist, we will gladly do.

The same motive actuates us now in offering encouragement—and this is the only paper in the city that does it—to an important local enterprise. These people proposed to establish new lighting works here, and to furnish the inhabitants lights at figures less than had been paid. We said let them come in; we say so yet.

To follow out the arguments of "A Citizen," and the "prominent citizen," there is but one conclusion to draw, and that is that no enterprise should be permitted to come into existence for fear it might sell out. Upon the same theory, it could as well be argued that no new railroad should be permitted to be built, because in the past new roads have sold out; that no new lines of steamers should be permitted to traverse our waters, because heretofore transfers have been made, and that in this city a new paper should not be encouraged, because the Union sold out to the Record, and the title of the paper we read in the morning indicates consolidation. In short, the whole idea is that there should be no progress, because things might happen that have occurred in the past. The argument reminds one of the story of the young lady who was engaged to be married, and was discovered by her lover weeping bitterly. He anxiously inquired what troubled her, and, between the sobs, she exclaimed: "Oh, John, I was thinking, after we are married, we might have a baby, and it might get into the fireplace some day, and burn to death. Oh, how terrible it would be!"

The opposition that was manifested to the Central street railway and the new lighting company, to our mind, was an exhibition of a spirit that must create a very unfavorable impression abroad of Sacramento's ideas of progression. The little town of Woodland, across the river, is far ahead of us in modern improvements, and if we are not careful, the only thing that will keep up our city will be the spendings of curious visitors, who will drop in to see the only city representative of the last century. There seems danger that time will come when a vigilance committee will be organized to mob any man who suggests that the world is moving, and that the city should keep up with the procession. It is, however, just to say to the outside world that the great mass of our people favor modern improvements, and that those who talk the most, in opposition, represent a very small contingent.

We have referred to the communication that was published anonymously in the Record-Union on Monday, signed, "A Citizen." This journal does not publish anonymous cards; with us a man who has not the courage to sign that which he addresses to his fellow-citizens, will have no hope for expression. We were somewhat surprised that the Record-Union should have permitted that publication, in view of the fact that it became violent less than a month ago over an anonymous card that was published in the Bee, commenting upon its changed political course. The Record-Union then said (Dec. 4, 1889):

The most contemptible coward on the face of the earth is he who sneaks into print and assails another under a nom de plume. Such men are always beneath notice, and no one is ever injured by their attacks.

The citizen whom the Record-Union permitted a week ago to lumber down its columns, evidently called into the office after the Board of Trustees had acted, in the capacity of "a prominent citizen and heavy tax-payer," and poured out his woes to the reporter. He saw nothing before us but disaster. The only progress he seemed to realize was that which had been made in the Board of Trustees, and the only consolation that it might be reconsidered Monday. Of course, because of the restricted policy of journalism, the people will never know who this outraged individual is. It would be unfair to accuse him of having written the Lamentations of Jeremiah because of the disparity of age. It is very evident, however, that, whoever he may be, his pockets were severely touched by the action of the Board in benefiting the people. If the Record-Union has any desire to be fair in this matter, it should publish this man's name, and permit the public to judge the motives that actuated him. The people certainly have a right to know who assumes the privilege of talking to them. That this Captain Nemo is so potential as to control the expression of both daily newspapers in Sacramento, at least, warrants that he be given publicity. Properly directed, he might be very useful to control journalistic policy, in the proper direction, on matters of grave importance to the public. He gravely winds up his interview with this: "The question with me is: What influence compelled Messrs. McLaughlin and Wolf to take the peculiar stand they did in both matters?" (referring to the granting of the franchise and the letting of the bid for street lighting to the new company). The import of this language cannot be misconstrued, and of it we have simply to say that an explanation should be made, as due to the people and the gentlemen referred to. If the "influence" hinted at was that of corruption, the Trustees named should be removed from office in disgrace; if the influence was directed by the best interests of the public, they should be commended. If the Record-Union has any disposition to be fair to these men, it should exhibit manliness enough to throw more light upon this subject. This journal does not cast aspersions; it has independence and courage enough to stand by what it prints, and anyone is privileged to find out the name of the individual who writes any line in its columns.

The matter can be sifted in a narrow compass: Men representative of capital ask to be permitted to enter into business here; they promise to the inhabitants lights at a much reduced rate than has been paid. They will be compelled to give an ample bond for the satisfactory performance of their street lighting contract. If they fail, they will be the losers. A consideration of the amount now paid for public and private lighting, ought to convince any reasonable man that the charges are extortionate for the service performed. The matter has been very practically demonstrated in this community. The railroad people have found it a matter of economy to establish a plant and supply their own electric lighting in this city; yet gentlemen connected with the company own a very considerable portion of the stock of the existing lighting company. If owners of the concern cannot afford to purchase their own commodity, it is very evident the public will not be injured if an element of opposition is introduced. In the extensive new brewery now being erected, a system of independent electrical lighting will be introduced as a matter of economy, and in other establishments in the city, private lighting works are in operation. In these matters of public interest, we esteem it but right that the press should in some measure be a reflex of public opinion. The sentiment of the gas taxed people, and of those who are public-spirited sustains the Trustees. Ample time has been afforded for reflection. We have neither space nor disposition to waste to reply to the absurd arguments that, at this late day, have found a place in the press. If its editors and card-writers were not aware, as the general public were weeks ago, that lighting opposition was in contemplation, they should have looked over their country exchanges for the city news, and not have surprised their readers by the alarming declaration that the franchise had been rushed through without proper consideration. We now say there is no doubt the motion to reconsider will be defeated in the Board. Let the new company furnish satisfactory service, at reasonable rates, and its patronage will be liberal. If it does not, let its bond be forfeited, and we will have a sum in the treasury that will materially assist to run the municipal government, and will be no worse off than we now are, as far as lights are concerned.

It has been demonstrated that our Federal Supreme Court is overrun with business, and with the present number of Judges cannot dispose of the vast volume of litigation that is brought before it. The average number of cases disposed of by the Court each year is four hundred to four hundred and fifty. Still, with this remarkably industry on the part of Judges, the cases are increasing, and actually banking up so fast that it is impossible to get them out of the way in anything with the proportion of the increase. In addition to the appellate jurisdiction, the Judges have to perform circuit duty and hold Court at stated periods in their respective circuits. Great delay in the trial and disposition of cases thus accumulating is in fact a practical denial of justice to the poorer litigants. This state of affairs gives the wealthy litigant a great advantage over his less fortunate adversary, and has, without the fault of the Court, through this great volume of business, given rise to the common expression that a poor man cannot get a hearing in the highest Court in the land, and that it is a rich man's Court. This is, of course, unjust, and these delays are occasioned by the vast accumulation of cases on the calendar. When the nation was poor, and the population had not reached such vast proportions, the Court could easily keep its calendar clear. But the great and diversified interests that are constantly arising, cause a corresponding increase of litigation, and the Federal jurisdiction is so broad that it admits of a vast amount of litigation. It is evident that no single national Court can dispose of this increased litigation, and that there is an absolute necessity for some relief. There is no question as to the ability and efficiency of the Court, as at present constituted, but it is beyond the Judges' power to satisfactorily dispose of the volume of business constantly coming before them. It is possible in some branches to restrict the Federal jurisdiction, but even this could not mend matters to an adequate extent. The number of Supreme Judges must be increased, or Congress must provide for independent appellate tribunals to dispose of the ordinary litigation which is accumulating so rapidly. There are hundreds of foreign insurance corporation cases, that clog the calendar, that might be restricted to the State Courts. The way these cases reach the Supreme Court is on the ground that they are now residents of the particular State where the litigation arises. There might be an enactment which would compel these corporations to litigate where they do business, and thus relieve the Federal Courts of much labor. The same rule might be invoked with regard to railroads, and restrict their litigation to the localities where these roads run, except upon clearly defined Federal questions involving some vested rights thereunder. Yet, with even such relief, the necessity for an increased Court exists. The Federal business for the Court from the forty-two States is simply formidable. Even in our State we have seven Supreme Judges and three Commissioners, and it is difficult to keep up with the business in this State. With nine Federal Judges, the thousands of cases arising in the forty-two States cannot be properly disposed of, and no matter how rapidly they work, the volume of cases will pile up, despite their labor. The rights of litigants demand that some relief be given.

A person is more likely to guess wrong than right. With gamblers who conduct banking games, this peculiarity is considered one of the chief percentage elements in favor of the banker. In all sporting events where the chances are equal, the sporting man will always give his adversary the choice of guessing, reserving to himself the percentage that he will guess wrong. While this proposition seems to be without any philosophy or sound reason, there is much truth in the saying, for the law of chances verifies the gamblers' axiom. The guesser is at a disadvantage. A little practical illustration of the law of chances has been demonstrated by us, in no less a way than through the medium of a common latch-key. The key is one of the small, flat make, and so nearly alike on both sides that the difference cannot be readily noticed. Now this key, when inserted in the lock, will only turn the lock when inserted in a particular manner. There are two ways of doing this. In opening our office door we have discovered that the doctrine of chances are against us; because, on an average, the key will be inserted wrong five times, as against twice in the right manner. We have indulged in some responsible explosives, when in haste, on account of this application of the sporting man's law of chance. Whenever the chances are exactly even on any general proposition, the person who has to do the guessing will lose oftener than he will win. The element of luck sometimes overcomes this law of chances, but in the long run, on the principle of ultimate results, the guesser is at a disadvantage.

Hypnotism has got before the Courts. At Helsingberg, Sweden, a young medical student instituted a suit against one of the prominent medical men of the town for injuries sustained by having been hypnotized by the physician a number of times against his will, whereby his nervous system was weakened and mind injured. The novel part of the proceedings arose when witnesses were produced into Court. All the witnesses seemed to be "rattled," and made the most extraordinary and astounding statements, which bewildered the Court. At this juncture another physician increased the astonishment by saying that all the witnesses had been hypnotized, and were at the will and mercy of the defendant physician. It has been suggested in the past, that hypnotism might be used in criminal cases to procure evidence; but in the light of the recent developments in the wonderful power, it would be too dangerous a class of testimony to admit in Court, where life, liberty or vast property interests are at stake. In a recent bank robbery case in one of the Western States, the defense offered to put a mind reader on the stand. It is certainly carrying expert testimony beyond the realms of reason and within the borders of the supernatural. The admission of hypnotic evidence is on all fours with the mind reading and mediumistic character of testimony. Such testimony would open the doors of Courts for fraud and deception beyond anything that has heretofore been known. In New York lately it was attempted to be established in an important trial for damages for libel, in denouncing the spiritual manifestations of certain alleged mediums, that these demonstrations were genuine, but the Court thought this was carrying the rule a little too far, and excluded the testimony, and in the same case would not excuse jurors from serving because they disbelieved in all these spiritualistic manifestations, known as the cabinet trick and other exhibitions of mediumistic influence. It won't do to allow as admissible testimony to this effect, that one man can look another man in the face, and by this look secure the combination of his safe, or read his innermost thoughts upon change. Hypnotism and mind reading are dangerous elements to admit into the adjudication of Courts of justice. There is yet too much mystery and uncertainty about this class of evidence to give it much faith in the adjudication of our Courts. There should be nothing of a doubtful character introduced in our system of jurisprudence; our tribunals must be secure from all obscurity or doubt; hence the mind reader, spiritual medium and hypnotized witness must be excluded.

We note with pleasure the payment by the Southern Pacific system, of over half a million of dollars this week, for State and county taxes. Under the decisions of the Courts, the collection of these taxes could not have been enforced. This payment can be regarded as voluntary. The history of the imposition of taxation on railway companies of late years has not generally been understood. It has happened that injustice has been done; that the companies contested, could reasonably be expected; that they litigated to establish a rule that would be fair to the people and themselves, has, to a great degree, been misconstrued. We should not forget that political conventions have passed resolutions of very considerable violence against carrying companies, and that prejudices were engendered that have, with calmer consideration, passed away. We should not forget that in 1883, a special legislative session was called to consider measures which, had they passed, would have paralyzed railroad building and operation in this State. The people are not disposed to be unjust; the troubles of the past have been very largely brought about by ambitious politicians. We feel that the time has passed when undue restraint will be put upon capital that employs labor and develops the country. With the voluntary payment of these taxes, there is a removal of a favorite political firebrand. The people and the railroad owners understand themselves better, and doubtless they will adjust what minor differences may hereafter arise, without the intervention of politicians, and upon the basis of common sense and justice.

The Bee has taken another lease on futurity. It commenced its sixty-seventh volume on January 2d. The Bee's successful career needs no comment. It was steered through the shoals and breakers by an old hand; and now that it is far out upon the sea of prosperity there are young and powerful hands at the helm. May our friend and neighbor continue to prosper. There is no better daily evening paper on the coast, if there is in the Union.

The Last Hours of Cardinal Wolsey.

Thomas Wolsey, the celebrated English cardinal, died November 29, 1530. The year before that he had incurred the enmity of his fickle master, Henry VIII, by opposing his divorce from Queen Catherine. He was first sent to Cawood, and afterward to the Earl of Shrewsbury's seat, at Sheffield Park. Thither royal messengers were finally sent to convey the disgraced cardinal to the tower of London. An old state manuscript shows that Sir William Kingston, captain of the guard, performed this unpleasant duty, at an expense of forty pounds. Wolsey was taken ill on the road, and at once perceived that he could not live. Discouraging learnedly on his ailment, dysentery, he said in eight days, if there were no change, would necessarily produce "excoriation of the entrails, delirium, or death." This was on the eighth day, when he confidently expected his death; and he expired after the clock had struck eight, according to his own prediction, "the very hour," says Shakespeare, "himself had foretold would be his last." He had reached Leicester three days previously. As he entered the gate of the monastery, he said: "Father Abbot, I am come to lay my bones among you;" and so the event proved. The monks carried him to his bed, on which he expired on the 29th of November, 1530. Shakespeare has little altered the words he used on his death-bed, though they were spoken to Kingston, the captain of the guard who arrested him, and not, as in the play, to Cromwell:

"But had I served my God with half the zeal
I served my king, He would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies."

In a Trance.

Walter Elliott, a young man living with his wife at 119 Berry street, Williamsburg, would have been buried yesterday had he really died, as his relatives supposed he did on Friday night, says a New York dispatch to the Chicago Herald. Elliott, however, is a very much alive man, and is highly indignant at the manner in which he has been treated. Elliott is about twenty-two years old. Two weeks ago he took to his bed with inflammation of the lungs of the most malignant type. During the early part of the week it was thought that his end was near. On Thursday he rallied somewhat, and there was outward signs that he would safely pass the crisis, but he failed all day Friday, and in the evening it was thought his demise was only a question of a few hours. Around his bedside were gathered his wife, several of her relatives and some of Elliott's brothers. Late in the evening the patient became unconscious, and finally gave several convulsive gasps and then was quiet. It was thought he was dead. Later in the evening an undertaker came, with several assistants and all the paraphernalia necessary to prepare the body for burial. When the ice box had been carried into the house and left in the hall until the mourners had left the rooms, the undertakers proceeded to do their work. The mouth, it is said, looked a little out of shape, on account of the suffering Elliott had undergone, and it was straightened. While the men were performing their usual services, Elliott suddenly opened his eyes and then raised his head. The undertaker and his assistants were thunderstruck. Just as one of the assistants was retreating towards the door, the revived patient stammered out:

"What are you going to do with me?"

"Nothing at all," exclaimed the alarmed undertaker, as he called the boys to help him carry the poor fellow to a bed.

Then they left him. With perspiration on his brow, the indignant undertaker sought Elliott's wife, and demanded to know why she had sent for him when her husband was not dead. In a moment the sorrow that had pervaded the house was turned into joy, and while the undertaker's assistants were gathering up the ice box and the white shrouds, Elliott was telling his wife and relatives that he must have been in a trance, when he suddenly awakened to find the undertaker preparing him for burial. He is getting along all right and will live.

Feeding Oysters.

The big oyster on the top of the barrel opened its jaws wearily and closed them with a snap, as if in response to a scarcely audible gurgle from the bottom of the keg.

"He's dry, and hungry, too, I guess," said the dealer, in explanation. "It's about time to give him and the other fellows some dinner," and he poured over the oysters a bucketful of salt and water.

"Do you call that dinner?" asked the Star reporter.

"More after the style of a lunch," was the reply.

"You see, sir, it isn't possible, for some unknown reason, to feed oysters in Washington as they do in the North. Up there a man will buy a barrel of lean oysters, without any flesh at all on their bones, as you might say, and feed them three square meals a day of corn meal and salt water, poured over them, and at the end of a month they will be as fat as butter. But oysters won't take hearty grub like that down here, and two weeks is as long as they can be kept alive and in good condition on salt and water plain. It's a funny thing that, if one hundred bushels of real salt oysters are put on top of one hundred bushels of fresh oysters for four or five days, so that the drainage from the salt oysters will drip down over the fresh ones; at the end of that time the fresh oysters—supposing them thin at the beginning—will be as plump as possible, and properly salt, while the salt oysters remain pretty much as before. Of course, salt water must have been thrown over the whole stack daily. But on the other hand, if the fresh oyster are put on top of the salt ones, everything else being as in the other case, both the salt oysters and the fresh oysters will lose, and become thin. When you see oysters on top of a pile opening their mouths, it is because they are thirsty, the water having drained off them. Oysters, by the way, will keep longer and better in a dry cellar than in a wet or damp one. They want an equable temperature, neither too high nor too low; an oyster that freezes is a dead oyster. Listen to those oysters in the barrel now, you can hear their jaws go as they eat."—Washington Star.

Victims of Thirst Madness.

The periodical desire for strong drink which sometimes besets individuals otherwise moral and exemplary, is a species of paroxysmal mania beyond the control of the patient. It is quite certain that there are thousands of cases of remittent drunkenness, which present the specific symptoms of disease.

The periodical drunkard is not a habitual dram drinker. But at particular times he appears to be attacked with a thirst madness, which deprives him of the power of volition, and hurries him into the most terrible excesses. During the interval, during the paroxysms, he may be a perfectly sober man. For many weeks, or even months, he may have steadily refused to taste a drop of liquor; may, indeed, have felt no inclination for it, but, on the contrary, regarded it with disgust. And yet, when the fit comes on, the raging thirst for alcohol utterly paralyzes his conscience and his will.

A man in this condition is a monomaniac, and should be treated as one, according to a writer in an English magazine. If put under proper restraint at the commencement of this furor, the dipsomaniac, in nine cases out of ten, might be tided over his difficulty in the course of a week, and a perseverance in the course at the recurrence of the hallucination would probably eventuate in a complete cure.

It is not easy to persuade the world that all drunkenness is not voluntary. The law does not recognize dipsomania. It treats all inebriates alike. This seems to be unjust, although it is hard to say where the line should be drawn between free-will excess and that which precedes from an uncontrollable mania.

Mistletoe Legend.

There is an interesting legend in the mythology of the north, regarding the mistletoe, which may be told in this connection. Balder, the god of poetry and eloquence, one day told his mother of a dream which he had had, intimating that he should die. Friga, to protect her son, invoked all the powers of nature, including plants, and made them swear not to injure Balder. The latter went out and took part in the combat of the gods, and fought without fear of injury. Loke, his enemy, determined to discover the source of his invulnerability, and, disguising himself as an old woman, went to Friga and complimented her on the valor of her son. As a natural result of this flattery, Balder's mother told the secret. She added that there was one plant which, because of its insignificance, she had not thought it worth her while to conjure, as it was impossible that it could inflict any hurt on her son. Loke inquired its name, and was told that the plant was a feeble little shoot, growing on the bark of the oak, without any soil to speak of. Then Loke ran and procured the mistletoe, and having entered the assembly of the gods, said to the blind Heda: "Why do you not contend with the arrows of Balder?" Heda replied: "I am blind, and have no arms." Loke gave him an arrow which he had made from the mistletoe, and said, "Balder is before thee." Heda shot, and Balder was slain.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

Emma Juch's opera company will not appear here until January 31, 1890.

On Tuesday evening next we will have the reappearance of the Duff English Opera company. The Queen's Male will be the attraction. The company is excellent, and the opera is one of the best modern creations.

Helen Blythe and her company did not score a success in any sense of the word. Her stage presence and unpleasant facial expression are most decidedly against her as an artiste. The company can scarcely be considered even median.

An army of young men who are merely tailors' plates, and young women who are but milliners' lay-figures, utter in soulless rotation what speeches they have learned, not conned, and move before weary audiences the actors of our day.

The duty of the dramatist is to write plays, not "novels, essays, or poems," and he achieves success when his plays are acted—not read. In other words, the farther he gets away from the style of the novel, the poem, or essay, the more closely does he approach the requirements of his art, and the greater his measure of success.

During the next season the McNeill Club will present three operas, with larger chorus and elegant costumes. The operas from which the club proposes to select are, Fatinitza, Bohemian Girl, Pirates of Penzance, Martha, Iolanthe, and the late production of Gilbert and Sullivan, The Gondoliers. The McNeill Club has plenty of talent at its command to place any of these operas on the stage in a first-class manner.

There are no reserved seats in some of the Mexican theaters; indeed, there are no seats at all. If you have an attendant you send him ahead with a chair of your own, to select a good position, and he will do all the pushing and crowding for you. If you have no servant or chair, you will find an old woman at the door with chairs, which she lets out for six cents each. This community is free, therefore, from the extra reserved seat charge.

According to Harper's Magazine, Edwin Booth remembers Thomas Ward dying in sight of the audience as the "Player King," and being dragged from the mimic stage by the heels, to enter immediately at another wing as "Polonius," with a cry of "Lights! lights! lights!" "Hamlet," in "a one-night town," swearing that he loved "Ophelia" better than forty thousand brothers, has watched "Ophelia" through her open grave, packing her trunk in the place beneath, while the "Ghost," her husband, waited to strap it up! There are more things in "Hamlet's" existence behind the scenes than are dreamed of in the philosophy of all his commentators and all his critics.

There is danger that the stage is breeding ladies and gentlemen, or frivolous mimics of gentility, to the neglect and discredit of those stern principles of patient devotion to responsible duty and exacting disciplinary drill of powers toward the art proficiency that in time past gave talent the halo of genius, and raised up mere ability to the plane of talent. Great actors are not making, nor are the conspicuously good ones numerous. Yet the material from which to create actors is better and more plentiful than ever before, could it but be quickened with a genuine enthusiasm. Were ambition of noble sort aroused to take the place of small vanities easily content, conditions are favorable to making the close of the nineteenth century the dawn of the drama's golden age.—Elwyn A. Barron.

Book Chat.

Marshall P. Wilder presented the Prince of Wales with a copy of his book, People I've Smiled With, which has since been bound in morocco, with the title and presentation engraved in silver. Mr. Wilder knew where to touch his royal highness in a tender spot.

Education is necessary for man in the position of a breadwinner, but woman is differently situated. We think that experience has pretty clearly demonstrated that woman makes and maintains her social position entirely independent from those considerations which affect man, and lack of a higher education will prove no bar to her success.

My Good Friend is a novel of modern French life at Monte Carlo and other popular watering places, from the pen of Adolphe Belot. There is always a fascination about the side of life shown at the haunts of fashionable gambling and adventure, and the author has portrayed it with unusual skill. The tale is full of incident, and has the usual French merit of being never tedious.

One of the most attractive of the new book is Daudet's Wives of Men of Genius. The delightful satire of the wit of French novelists is admirably translated by Edward Wakefield. Two friends, a poet and a painter, the latter happily married and discussing marriage. The painter, despite his own happy experience, warns the poet not to wed; and sustains his warning by a half score of charmingly told short stories, showing the misfortunes that attend the mis-mating of artists in general. A series of domestic scenes are depicted so gracefully, that the reader lays down the book with regret to part with so genial a raconteur. The narrator paints in moderate colors, too, and the reader cannot challenge his tales on the score of probability. But the impression above all is, of the delicacy and skill of the narrator, the simplicity of his frank, kindly satire.

The Key to Theosophy, by that prolific and erudite writer, Madame H. P. Blavatsky, covers all the fundamental teachings of theosophy, the most prominent of which are "Karma," "Reincarnation," and "Septenary Man." Madame Blavatsky is a Russian by birth, and a naturalized citizen of America, who, in 1875, in connection with Col. H. C. Olcott, founded the Theosophical Society, which has made considerable progress in all the countries on the globe, and a branch of which is located in this city. This book presents many ideas that are new to the western mind; and, while some of them are startling, there is no reason that we can see why they should not be good food for thought to all students of mysticism, and to those who dare to pull away from accepted beliefs. A careful perusal will convince any one that theosophy possesses merits, at least in an ethical way, inasmuch as it teaches that man is an independent and not a dependent creature on a cosmic, or intra-cosmic God; and that Karma is the ultimate law of the universe, and Reincarnation the result of a violation of that law. The teachings of the seven principles in man is more complicated, and requires an understanding of eastern systems of thought, with which the writer is not familiar. We, however, recommend this book to all thoughtful students, and to others to whom mysticism is a boon.

Professional Chat.

"Gentlemen," said an eminent Australian lawyer, recently, "the case for the crown is a mere skeleton—a mere skeleton, gentlemen; for, as I shall presently show, it has neither flesh, blood, nor bones in it." On another occasion he solemnly declared that a "verbal agreement is not worth the paper it is written on."

"What a lot of hypocrites we are," said Representative Belden the other day, as he wheeled around in his chair after the House had adjourned. "I really believe that nine-tenths of the Congressmen want to vote for the repeal of the Civil Service Reform Act, and are afraid to do it." Representative Belden, who has gained quite a reputation for leadership by his control of the New York delegation in the speakership contest, is, by the way, somewhat of a philosopher. "I never trouble myself," he says, "about anything in the papers concerning me. New members come to me almost every day terribly cut up because someone has made fun of them, or criticised them in the press. I tell them not to mind it. It doesn't pay to worry. If it is a lie it will die out, and if it is the truth it had better be left alone."

United States Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, delights in telling a story of his efforts at missionary work among the Afro-Americans in the vicinity of his home, says a Washington letter to the New York Tribune. He selected as a specimen test "Uncle Gabe," a former slave, who had learned to read in a very crude way, and to whom he offered $5 if he would read the Bible through to the end. Gabe accepted the offer, and took away with him a brand-new Bible, and began his wrestle with the scriptures. Two weeks later Gabe returned, Bible in hand. "Well, Gabe, how did you like the book?" Gabe hesitated to reply, and was pressed further. "Well, Marse Colquitt, I tells you how it is, I don't like the book nohow." "Explain yourself; I don't catch your meaning," said the Senator. "What part of the Bible did you read, Gabe?" "I reads, sah, until I gits to whar Abraham fergits Isaac, and Isaac fergits Jacob, and Jacob he fergits Joseph, and den I reads no moah. There is too much fergitting, sah, to snit me."

An odd sort of friendship, says the Chicago Herald, is that which has sprung up between Vice-President Morton and Representative Mason, of Chicago. It would be difficult to imagine two men more unlike. Morton is as quiet in his methods as a church mouse, and as smooth and oily as a jug of ancient whisky. He is fastidious in his dress, and slow, and measured and dignified in his speech. Mason is, in most of these particulars, precisely what Morton is not. Yet each of these men has a sincere liking for the other. Their acquaintance began up at Rhinebeck, or Yonkers, a year ago last fall. Mason was there, and made a speech for Harrison and Morton, and it is suspected that he had the shrewdness to make it largely Morton. At any rate, he was entertained by the rich banker, and since Morton came to Washington, he and Mason are together quite often in little luncheons at the Shoreham, or an occasional drive in the country.

When Mr. Blaine was Secretary of State under Garfield, one theory of his, and a not unpopular one, was in favor of limited tenures and rotation in office, says the Washington Post. If a consul had slumbered through three administrations at some far-away post, in a dolce far niente of lotus-eating and salary-drawing existence, the keen Secretary astounded him by inviting a return to the shores of America and the appointment of his successor. Mr. Blaine sat in his private office one day, discussing affairs of state with his immediate predecessor, ex-Secretary William Maxwell Evarts. "Now here," said he, "is a case in point. This man has been consul at Un Hong for twenty years. He went there during the war, and has remained there ever since. It is time he returned home, to be acquainted with his country before he grows a quene. If he stays there much longer he will have a Chinese bias in his sight. I shall remove him at once." "I wouldn't remove him, Mr. Secretary," replied Mr. Evarts. "Why not?" "I'm afraid it would be an unpleasant thing to do. To be vulgar, I fear it would make a stink." "My mind is made up," replied Mr. Blaine; "as soon as I can find a good, live man to take his place, I shall remove him." "But I think you will have a grave difficulty in finding a good live man who would be willing to take his place." "I anticipate no such difficulty. But will you explain to me, Mr. Evarts, why you think there will be any difficulty, and, I confess I fail to understand why it will, to use your expression, make a stink?" "Because this man has been dead and buried these six months, Mr. Secretary."

NOTES.

Kyrle Bellew is reported to have the grippe. Mrs. Potter is with him. It has long been known that Bellew had the grip on Mrs. Potter.

When a girl has rejected a fellow and remained single herself, reads an account of the marriage of the rejected suitor, she will say to herself: "Poor fellow, I am sorry for him, and hope he will be happy." But it is a safe wager that she is mentally kicking herself for letting her chance to nab him slip.

Two reasons are urged by a cynic why a man should never marry. If the girl is plain, she will soon form a disagreeable object by daily contact and comparison with her more favored sisters. If she is handsome, her attraction for other men will prove irresistible, and cause jealousy and pain. Ergo, never marry.

Married men whose wives have been at them to stop smoking after New Year's, will derive an awful pile of comfort from the news item about C. G. Conn., of Elkhart, Ind.; a gentleman whose mind took a stroll because he suddenly abstained from tobacco. Luckily, Mr. Conn's reason came back after getting him into a peck of trouble, but that might not always happen, don't you see? It is a valuable item and well worth clipping.

Ex-Emperor Dom Pedro built and maintained a lunatic asylum with the money received through the sale of titles of nobility. This asylum should have been filled with the purchasers of these titles. Certainly these people must have been idiots or endowed with chronic softening of the brain. The poor old Emperor is wandering about without an asylum of any kind for himself, although he endowed many. It is said of Bentivoglio, the writer of many comedies, that he was, in the days of his adversity, refused admission in a great public hospital he had in his palmy days endowed.

The State Supreme Court has just decided, in the case of White v. White, that a couple who have lived together as man and wife, although no formal solemnization of the marriage has been performed, are, nevertheless, man and wife, and can invoke the courts to dissolve that relation for good cause. It was shown in the case of White v. White, that in 1850 the parties began living together as man and wife, and that the man introduced the woman as his wife. Several children were born to them. The man on the trial claimed that there never had been any solemnization of the marriage; but the judge before whom the case was tried granted a divorce, holding that there was a marriage. The Supreme Court has affirmed the judgment. This is something of an innovation on former decisions of the court. It is a just judgment, however.

The ancients always looked upon the sneeze with awe and reverence. Among the Greeks, says Aristotle, a sneeze was considered a very solemn affair, and when it occurred, an invocation to the gods was made. The sneeze was thought by the Athenians to be one of the premonitory symptoms of the plague. From Plutarch we learn that the Romans feared the sneeze, and when afflicted therewith, endeavored to repel its evil power by prayer. Pope Gregory always said "God bless us" after a sneeze. To this day you will find among strict women Catholics an adherence to this custom of Pope Gregory, and when they sneeze, it is accompanied with "God bless us." From indications, we will have an abundance of sneezers when La Grippe arrives.

Our contemporary, the Record-Union, this morning renews its objections to the granting of the franchise in its present form to the new lighting company. We are only taking issue with our neighbors on the question of judgment; for none know better than the editors of this journal that the gentlemen connected with the Record-Union are acting in this matter from the best of motives, and that they sincerely believe their position to be correct, and for the most advantage to the public. We believe, however, their judgment is wrong. A franchise is a privilege granted to an individual, company, or corporation, to do certain things. It is restricted by statute law, and as well in the case of a privilege to transact a particular class of business, by the unwritten law that is constantly created by human progress. A franchise to operate a line of street cars, or to furnish lights, etc., is valuable only so far as the business will be patronized by the people; and, of course, those who invest their capital in such enterprises must entitle themselves to public patronage. In this matter, as in all privileges granted, the necessary—and only the necessary—use of the streets, etc., can be given, and the authorities retain control. The authorities can at any time grant franchises to other lighting companies, and all these matters of objection will be adjusted by business competition. It is reasonable to expect that improvements in the application of electricity will be constantly made, and that both companies will keep up with the times. The people will suit themselves as to which company they will patronize; and, reasonably, if these men place their money in a plant they will furnish, if possible, the best service to get business, which alone will render their franchise valuable. On the other hand, the existing company will make a like bid for popularity. How are the people to lose?

There was something wrong in arranging the time for the commencement of the New Year in midwinter. Ovid was right in his address to Janus. The spring is the more appropriate time, as all things are then renewed. Nature puts on an entire new dress. Here is an imperfect translation of a portion of Ovid's address to Janus:

Say, Janus, say, why begin the year in winter? Sure the spring is better far. All things are then renewed; a youthful dress Adorns the flowers and beautifies the trees; New swelling buds appear upon the vine, And apple blossoms round the orchard shine; Birds fill the air with harmonious lay, And lambskins in the meadows frisk and play; The swallow then forsakes her wintry nest, And in the chimney chattering makes her nest; The fields are then renewed, the ploughman's care; Mayn't this be called renewing of the year?

A SAD CASE.

An Interesting Subject for Physicians.—How Modern Improvements May Affect Mentality.

We became very much interested in a letter sent us from our sister town of Gougey, and as it refers to "a prominent citizen and heavy taxpayer of Sacramento," we feel disposed to refer to it for the benefit of our readers. It certainly exhibits a phase of phobia which will be interesting to the medical fraternity, if not to the general public, and is one which should be recorded in the books. Our Gougey correspondent writes: "A considerable sensation was created in our city when a party of duck hunters brought in from the tules a middle aged man whom they had found wandering irresponsibly. It was very evident the poor being was suffering from some sort of dementia. He persisted in blinding his eyes against any manner of light, and manifested a horror at anything in the way of light. Our local physician—and by the way, he is well read—took a deep interest in the case. From appearances, the patient is one who has not been compelled to toil for a living. The doctor recommended he be kept in a dark room. The sufferer stated when he became composed and able to assume a look of apparent intelligence, that he was from Sacramento, where he was well known and had many friends. We determined to take him to your city and place him in the keeping of his friends. We started with him in a wagon in the night and encountered no difficulty, until he saw the electric lights from the masts in Sacramento. He then became unmanageable, broke away and escaped. We found him, however, the next day and brought him back to Gougey. Our doctor diagnosed his case and pronounced it the first known of electrophobia. After confining him for a time in a dark room, he again became somewhat coherent, yet his ultimate recovery to mental balance is problematical. I feel it my duty to call your attention to this matter with the hope your journal will be able to establish the identity of the unfortunate and put his friends on his track. It is a matter of absolute charity."

We were much puzzled at the reception of this communication. It seemed impossible we should not have learned from the daily press if a prominent citizen and heavy taxpayer had become a hopeless crank and particularly upon a subject that had developed into a phobia hitherto unknown in medical science. However, the characteristic enterprise of our dailies has shed light upon the case and we feel justified in republishing an interesting interview had between a reporter and the subject of the mania, as it may be possible it may have escaped the eye of some of our readers. The reporter writes: "Having heard of the remarkable case of mania at Gougey, a reporter of the Daily — was dispatched to the scene. We found the object of our search in a log cabin on the outskirts of the town, not, however, before we had accustomed our eyes to the darkness of the room. Our readers will be surprised that we found, crouched in the darkest corner, Captain Nemo, well known in Sacramento as the most prominent citizen and heaviest tax-payer. We could hardly believe that one who had talked so much and who, within the week, had controlled the expression of the press of Sacramento on grave public matters, should be found in this situation. He seemed, however, not to recognize the reporter, and, when we placed our hand on his shoulder and addressed him familiarly, as all reporters do, 'Captain Nemo,' he started and looked at us almost fiercely. We paused until he had composed himself, for the outside world must know that an interview with a prominent citizen and a heavy tax-payer, is the hardest thing in the world to get. However, the reporter quieted the Captain and succeeded in extorting his ideas. Our readers can, of course, understand the difficulty of this undertaking and we had to proceed with the greatest of caution.

The reporter queried: "Captain, through the medium of the daily press, I have learned you have left Sacramento?"

"Do you mean to tell me," excitedly asked the Captain, "that the daily press has recorded my absence when I have been away only about a week? Is it not possible you are mistaken and have read this thing in some country weekly?"

The Captain looked fixedly at the reporter and we relieved ourselves by explaining that such a mistake could reasonably be made. The reporter, however, was not to be baffled, and, after a pause, he inquired:

"Well, Captain, what induced you to leave Sacramento?"

The Captain replied with animation and dignity, "I am a man of ideas. I fully realize I should have lived two hundred and fifty years ago. Young man," he said confidentially, "when you become as old as I am and have made the study I have of ancient history, you will understand, as I do, that the people of this day are carrying things with an awful high hand. Look at our presidents and statesmen of the past, why they got their education by reading from the light of the blazing pine cone. Will we ever have such statesmen again? No. The people of to-day want to burn oil and gas and these abominable electric lights. Why, in my grandfather's time we did not have railroads and a man could take a stage-coach when the walking was bad. You never heard of a man blowing himself up or running off the track as these railroads do. Just look at those good, old days when we did not have to elect a president or read newspapers. Why, if such a fellow as Edison had attempted his absurd notions, then they would have killed him, and we ought to kill such men now. Just take Sacramento. There is a historic city! We ought to preserve it, as we are talking of preserving Sutter's Fort—just as it was forty years ago. As you doubtless know, I have been a prominent citizen and heavy taxpayer in Sacramento, but young man, think of the advantages that Sacramento has had to preserve itself as it was forty years ago. Think how we have struggled to keep outsiders from coming in there. We made a heroic fight, but despite it the city does not look as it did when I first went there. The only thing that makes me feel at all at home is the mud in the streets. Could it ever have been imagined that street cars would run up J street, or that any set of men who brought into that community one hundred thousand dollars, could obtain a franchise to do business there? The Trustees rush these things through after a consideration of only about six weeks. Why, the old Knickerbockers would have debated a matter of that kind for probably six or seven years and then not come to a conclusion. Take China, the most densely populated nation in the world, as an example. They do not change, and a man can there see to-day what people a thousand years ago saw. You never saw a Chinaman wear a pling hat or operate one of those telephones. What drove me from Sacramento, if you want to know, was that last move of the Trustees. They are now proposing to allow a company to run electric lights in houses and to light up the streets, and they even go so far as to put in electric motors in every little manufactory. Where will the end come? If this thing keeps up Sacramento will be just like Los Angeles and those other places that are not fit for a man like me to live in."

"But," interrupted the reporter, "they say the people want this new electric company."

"The people be d—d," fiercely replied the Captain. "They are not fit to do their own thinking. If they had their own way, they would want everything cheap, and old-established organizations would have to cut down their forty-nine prices or quit. Why, right in this case, the Trustees advertised for bids, when only one company was there, and who would ever have expected that more than one bid would have been received? And you can't tell what might happen. Suppose they would sell out, their boiler should blow up, or the supply of carbon should run out? Young man, they are treading on dangerous ground. I view the situation with serious alarm. A few such moves will forever destroy Sacramento as a city of historical interest."

"I have observed," queried the reporter, "that THEMIS has rather favored what it is pleased to term modern improvements."

"It grieves me," said the Captain, solemnly, "that the people of Sacramento permits such a paper to be printed in their midst. Just think of it: That paper supported that infamous Central Street Railroad. It never misses an opportunity to wound the tenderest feelings of an old man like me. Just look at these gray hairs and feel the baldness of this head. I have spent the best portion of my life in preserving for all time Sacramento as it was forty years ago, and here are men who were educated in our own schools that turn right against us old fellows. You must pardon me, but I am overcome with emotion. Young man, hearken to the words of one who has been a prominent citizen and heavy tax payer of Sacramento as it was, and as I hoped it always would be. I expect to make my future home at Gougey. Think what I will see if I should go to Sacramento five years from now? You have read about Rip Van Winkle, haven't you? I heard Jefferson play it years ago, and the way he portrayed old Rip left an impression on my mind I will never forget. Just as sure as you live, if this thing is not stopped, I will be a second Rip Van Winkle. If these fellows of THEMIS had their own way, they would insist upon putting great big levees around the city, of getting up a system of drainage, of fixing the streets so that there would not be any mud, establishing a uniform grade of sidewalks, and any stranger that would come along that had coin, would be encouraged to invest it in competition with those that have been there all these years. I tell you, it is ruinous. As I said, I am very deeply moved. Permit me to endeavor to think."

Fine Table Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Producers of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

Twelve Million Machines

IN USE.

THE LIGHT RUNNING

DOMESTIC Sewing Machine

Leads all others. Most Durable, Simplest, Best.

Every Agent claims the machines he sells the best, but talk is cheap. TIME is the only real test of genuine merit. During TWENTY-SIX YEARS of practical use the DOMESTIC has withstood this test. It stands to-day without a peer. Recommended by all White Goods Sewers, Dressmakers, Tailors and Manufacturers. Used by over 4,000 Families in Sacramento City. It is the only Sewing Machine with really Self-Setting Attachments. It costs you nothing to try it before you buy another. Sold on easy installments. Old machines taken in exchange.

Domestic Sewing Machine Co.

A. J. POMMER, Selling Agent,

Northwest corner Ninth and J streets, Sacramento.

FLASHES.

Pope Pius IX left a fortune of several millions. It pays to be Pius.

Some of our rich men are so economical they could enjoy being poor.

A poor devil's debts will overtake him no matter how far he runs behind.

The Speaker of the House does no talking. He has to listen to others speak.

Nothing is ever expected from those who never have a good word for anybody.

It requires more than a polished shirt and big diamond studs to make a gentleman.

Sometimes a man's good reputation is made on what is not found out about him.

The fellow that is always looking for a soft snap, generally gets snapped in the end.

Grass is green, but if any one fancies that a grass-widow is green he is mightily fooled.

In the sanctuary all are equal. Not so, even here the clink of gold takes preference.

Some drink to make themselves insensible to pain. Then they drink again for joy that the pain has gone.

The cream and the scum in affairs of the world arise to the surface. In society matters the scum often predominates.

When a politician says he is in the hands of his friends, you can be assured that his friends' hands are in his pockets.

"How gracefully she sweeps the keys,"

The caller to the mother said,

As o'er the answering ivories

The daughter's nimble fingers sped.

"Ah, yes," the mother's voice replied,

And tremors in her accents creep;

Then to herself she sadly sighed:

"The keys are all she cares to sweep."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

The Young Men's Christian Association kept open house on New Year's Day. The ladies of the committees were there in force, to welcome guests and serve a light lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jackson were the recipients of a private entertainment at the hands of their friends at Florin on Wednesday evening. Dancing and feasting was the order for the evening.

On New Year's Day, Bert Kidder and Miss Salome Acocck were united in marriage. Both are well-known and popular young people of this city. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of friends of the young couple. Rev. A. C. Herrick performed the marriage rites.

The youthful friends of Mabel Johnson, daughter of Hon. Grove L. Johnson, were entertained by the young hostess Thursday evening. There was a continued round of festivities until "the morrow came." The masters and misses will have a lively remembrance of the hospitality of the little hostess. The following youngsters were present: Lulu Nichols, Edna Carroll, Ida Ing, Martha Ing, Edna Lewis, Mabelle Gilman, Ritta Colclough, Laura Turner, Effie Stanley, Lettie Alsip, Cora Mott, Nellie Mott, Maud Jones, Mollie Sheehan, Alices Sheehan, Grace Dixon, Cora Bell, Ella Hatch, Belle Clark, Pauline Foster, Cordelia Gilman, Laura Terry, Laura Cooper, Lucy Murray, Ada Keber, Clara Robinson, Mabel Johnson, Benjamin Welch, Julius Gregory, George Bassett, Jesse Anderson, Samuel Simmons, Frank Dray, Bruce Dray, William Matlock, Edgar Sheehan, Henry Kleinsorge, Frank Trainor, William Hendricks, Samuel Hendricks, Herbert Tozer, Walter Tozer, Hamilton Hawley, Arthur Williams, Charles Holl, Charles Pinkham, Charles Jones, Albert Martin, William Howe, Elmo Carey, Howard Carey, Carey Van Fleet, Paul Maslin, Fred Smith, David Wasserman.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

The wife of W. J. Florence died in New York yesterday.

Another dramatist, Louis Nathal, died from the effects of "la grippe."

Pope Leo XIII. has declared that he will never treat of Irish affairs with England. He will only act as arbiter when asked by both countries.

Julian Gayarre has fallen a victim to the new epidemic, "la grippe." He was a famous tenor, and died on Thursday at Madrid from the effects of this disease.

The Republicans have captured the two Senators from Montana. There is considerable confusion in political matters in that State, and it is an uncertainty what may be the outcome.

There has been a decrease in arrivals at Castle Garden during the present year over 1888 of 63,867. The arrivals in 1889 were 315,228. All nations are represented except China. A decrease of this large figure is something to be commended.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

County Collector Dolan gathered in $29,232.50 for the year 1889. Pretty well done. This is a record hard to beat.

Some vicious person threw a stone into a passenger car of the Stockton train on Thursday evening, and injured Peter Bohl.

Alf. Estell returned yesterday from an extended trip on the Atlantic side. He had charge of the fine horse, Czar, and the winnings are said to foot up $60,000.

Fine Penmanship.

We observed in the show window of Jos. Hahn & Co. a roll-call of Southern Pacific Company employes in Freight Department, executed by Col. Harry Carroll. This is a work of real art. At the top of the roll is a locomotive, with the word "Sunset" appearing in the smoke as it comes from the smoke-stack. Then the inscription, "Freight Department, Southern Pacific Company, Sacramento, California, 1890," which is done in colored inks and in a splendid manner. Below is a roof view of the freight depot, followed by this poetic effusion:

Farewell Old Year—on thee

A benediction we invoke.

Soon will thy waning spirit be

In the dim past's bosom yoked.

Again, farewell, as now we see

Thy spirit leave—so old and sere,

We bow our heads and turn from thee

To greet the glad New Year.

—Seymour.

On tin plates are the names of John H. Gill, Chief Clerk, and H. J. Kilgariff, Cashier. A scroll has the name of C. J. Ellis, Agent. A circle of cards finishes the picture, on which are inscribed these names, written individually: W. A. Brown, T. J. Ryan, C. P. Christie, E. T. Walker, J. S. Watson, Cynes Taylor, N. W. Heywood, Thos. W. Griffin, M. E. Gates, G. W. Taylor, J. F. Skelton, A. P. Booth, Chas. Fotheringham, James F. Doody, L. E. Hanchett, Mamie Chamberlain, James Shoemaker, Harry Franson, A. C. Scott, M. Beasley, H. G. Toll, E. C. Chapman, H. I. Seymour, N. H. Wilcox, R. M. Gay, S. J. Deuel, P. B. Johnson.

He Paid the Debt.

On the last day of the year 1888, a party met socially, and the banter was made that the one who at the ending of the succeeding year should relate the most notable event that happened in the interim, and an event that could be verified, should have the wine for the party at the expense of Gus Camp. Camp had taken all chances against him, and had carefully watched the progress of the world during the year. He felt fortified. The party met at Grubler's. It is unnecessary to mention the propositions which were unanimously declared lost, because of their present familiarity. When the turn of Deputy County Clerk Scott came, he recited what was at the time believed to be incredible; and, if true, is an event which has not been, yet should be, recorded in history. "You recollect about that Johnstown disaster, from the breaking of that big dam. There were very remarkable features connected with it, and in general they have become a portion of the history of the Union; but a friend of mine just returned from the East, told me of an incident that then happened that I did not at the time believe, yet it has since been verified and demonstrated that the ingenuity of man is able to endow metal with almost human intelligence. Why, when that flood came there was one of those ordinary gas meters carried away by the devastating waters. It lodged miles away, down in the valley in the debris, and was only discovered a short time ago by some workmen who were digging in the channel. The remarkable thing was, that that gas meter had not forgotten its business; and though it was miles away from any gas works, and had been buried for months in the bosom of the earth, it yet had registered with unerring fidelity the amount of gas that was supposed to have gone through it. Through the terrible troubles that had befallen the valley, that meter seemed not for a moment to have neglected the duty it was created to perform. That I believe to be the perfection of the art of man."

Camp was inclined to disbelieve this statement, and proposed that the veracity of the story should be submitted to the first man who came in. It was so agreed; and the first inquirer, District Attorney Bruner, was made the adjudicator. He admitted he had never been at Johnstown, but he said: "About that gas meter, that has been a theme of interesting scientific comment. I personally know know nothing of it, but a friend of mine who just came from the East, absolutely saw the hole from which it had been dug." Camp did not further dispute the matter, but ordered the wine.

Whence Come the Colors?

The cochineal insects furnish a great many of the very fine colors. Among them the gorgeous carmine, the crimson, scarlet carmine, and purple lake. The cuttlefish gives the sepia. It is the inky fluid which the fish discharges in order to render the water opaque when attacked. Indian yellow comes from the camel. Ivory chips produce the ivory black and bone black. The exquisite Prussian blue is made by fusing horses' hoofs and other refuse animal matter with impure potassium carbonate. This color was discovered accidentally. Various lakes are derived from roots, barks and gums. Blue black comes from the charcoal of the vine stalk. Lamp black is soot from certain resinous substances. Turkey red is made from the madder plant, which grows in Hindostan. The yellow sap of a tree in Siam produces gamboge; the natives catch the sap in cocoa nut shells. Raw sienna is the natural earth from the neighborhood of Sienna, Italy. Raw umbria is also an earth found near Umbria and burnt. India is made from burnt camphor. The Chinese are the only manufacturers of this ink, and they will not reveal the secret of its manufacture. Mastic is made from the gum of the mastic tree, which grows in the Grecian Archipelago. Bister is the soot of wood ashes. Very little real ultramarine is found in the market. It is obtained from the precious lapislazuli and commands a fabulous price. Chinese white is zinc, scarlet is iodide of mercury, and native vermilion is from the quicksilver ore called cinnabar.—American Druggist.

The Whole Day in a Pie.

You all know this rhyme, but have you ever read what it is meant for?

The four-and-twenty blackbirds represent the twenty-four hours. The bottom of the pie is the world, while the top crust is the sky that overarches it. The opening of the pie is day-dawn, when the birds begin to sing, and surely such a sight is fit for a king.

The king, who is represented as sitting in his parlor counting out his money, is the sun, while the gold pieces that slip through his fingers as he counts them, are the golden sunshine.

The queen, who sits in the dark kitchen, is the moon, and the honey, with which she regales herself, is the moonlight.

The industrious maid, who is in the garden at work before the king—the sun—has risen, is day-dawn, and the clothes she hangs out are the clouds, while the bird who so tragically ends the song by "nipping of her nose," is the hour of sunset.

So we have the whole day, if not in a nutshell, in a pie.

No Angels in Theirs.

Early last summer a New Englander moved out to a small town in Arizona and announced his intention of opening up a first-class grocery. He had a number of bills posted up, dwelling particularly on the fact that the business was to be square and above board. Just as he was getting ready to open shop, a deputation of citizens waited on him and asked the newcomer if the statements on the placards were made in good faith.

"You mought as well give us the hull truth about this thing," said the leader. "You mean to say there hain't goin' to be no water in the vinegar?"

"That's what I mean, sir!" replied the stranger, a little surprised. "Nor no saud in the sugar?"

"Ain't they goin' to be beans in the coffee?"

"Most decidedly not, sir."

"Nor chickory, nuther?"

"Never, gentlemen, I give you my word for it."

The crowd seemed nonplussed for a moment, and the leader held a short consultation, at the end of which he said:

"Say, stranger, we've concluded that you air a suspicious character. But first let me ask you if your cigars are goin' to be loaded—with cabbage, you know?"

"Not while I—"

"That's all we wanted to know. We gin you twenty-four hours to leave town, an' you better leave. When we're in need o' angels we'll drop you a postal card. Good-day, stranger," and the deputation filed out.

In the cemetery of one of the churches in an eastern city there is planted the lower limb of a prominent Grand Army man, who religiously visits the place on each holiday to feast on the burial place of his deceased member. After returning from the graveyard on Christmas day, he solemnly asked, as he carved the turkey, why he was like the poet Gray. He could get no satisfactory answer, and he explained it was "because he had an elegy in a church-yard."

It is always well to be instructed in matters of social etiquette, and the remark which Mrs. A., one of the leaders of Boston society, was overheard making to a young friend recently is admirably instructive. "Do you know Mr. S.?" somebody asked the young lady, speaking of a man just then the fashion of the moment. "Oh, yes," she replied, "I have known him for years." "My dear," Mrs. A. said, the moment she had an opportunity of speaking to the other side, "you must not say you have known Mr. S. for years. Nobody could have known him before last winter, for he wasn't taken up till then."

FRIEND & TERRY
LUMBER CO.

Wholesale and Retail Lumber Dealers, Also Shakes, Bolts, Ties, Doors, Windows, Blinds and Screens. Main Yard and Office, No. 1310 Second Street. Branch Yard, corner Twelfth and J Sts. P. O. Box 233. E. J. Holt, Manager. Sacramento

R. DAVIS,
NOTARY PUBLIC,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN, Formerly of Agricultural Park.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice, SACRAMENTO.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured

HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.

"PUT YOURSELF IN MY PLACE."

When persons have amassed a large portion of this world's goods, it frequently happens that they forget their former position in life, and can not sympathize with the poor in the troubles and disappointments which so often beset their path, unknown or unthought of by those who are accustomed to a life of ease. The following incidents are designed to illustrate this, and we hope that it will prove to be a lesson worthy of remembrance.

It was in a lawyer's office, and two men were engaged in conversation—Mr. Merton, a lawyer, and Mr. Bishop, a workingman, rather shabbily dressed.

"I cannot wait any longer. I must have my money, and if you cannot pay it I must foreclose the mortgage and sell the place," said Mr. Merton.

"In that case it will of course be sold at a great sacrifice, and after all the struggles I have made, my family will again be homeless. It is very hard. I only wish you had to earn your money as I do mine; you might then know something of the hard life of a poor man. If you could only, in imagination, put yourself in my place, I think you would have a little mercy on me," said Mr. Bishop.

"It is useless talking; I extended the time one year, and I can do so no longer," replied Mr. Merton, as he turned to his desk and continued his writing.

The poor man rose from his seat and walked sadly out of Mr. Merton's office, his last hope gone. He had just recovered from a long illness, which had swallowed up all the means with which he had intended to make the last payment upon his house. True, that gentleman had waited one year, when he failed to meet the demand, owing to illness in the family, and he had felt very much obliged to him for doing so. This year he had been laid up for several months, during which he could earn nothing, and all his savings were then needed for the support of himself and family. Again he had failed, and now he would again be homeless and have to begin the world anew. Had Heaven forsaken him and given him over to the tender mercies of the wicked?

After he had left the office Mr. Merton could not drive away from his thoughts that remark to which the poor man in his grief had given utterance: "I wish you had to earn your money as I do mine."

In the midst of a row of figures "Put yourself in my place" would intercept his tranquillity of mind. Once after it had crossed his mind he laid down his pen, saying: "Well, I think I should find it rather hard. I have a mind to drop in there this afternoon and see how it fares with the family. That man has aroused my curiosity."

About 5 o'clock he put on a gray wig and some old, worn, cast-off clothes walked to the residence of Mr. Bishop, and knocked at the door. Mrs. Bishop, a pale, weary-looking woman, opened it, and the poor old man requested permission to enter and rest a while, saying he was very tired with his long journey, for he had walked many miles that day.

Mrs. Bishop cordially invited him in, and gave him the best seat the room afforded. She then began to make preparations for tea. The old gentleman watched her attentively. He saw there was no elasticity in her step, no hope in her movements; and pity for her began to steal into his heart. When her husband entered her features relaxed into a smile and she forced a cheerfulness into her manner. The traveler noted it all; and he felt himself compelled to admire this woman who could assume a cheerfulness she did not feel for her husband's sake. After the table was prepared there was nothing upon it but bread and butter and tea. They invited the stranger to eat with them, saying:

"We have not much to offer you, but a cup of tea will be refreshing after your long journey."

He accepted their hospitality, and as they discussed the frugal meal, he fed them without seeming to do so, to talk of their affairs.

"I bought this piece of land," said Mr. Bishop, "at a very low price, and instead of waiting, as I ought to have done, until I had saved the money to build, I thought I would borrow $200. The interest on the money would not be nearly as much as the rent I was paying, and I should be saving something by doing it. I did not think there would be any difficulty in paying back the borrowed money; but the first year my wife and one of my children were ill, and the expenses left me without the means to pay the debt. Mr. Merton agreed to wait another year if I would pay the interest. I did that. This year I was ill for seven months, unable to work at my trade and earn anything; and of course, when pay day comes round, and that is very soon, I shall again be unable to meet the demand."

"But," said the stranger, "will not Mr. Merton wait another year, if you make all the circumstances known to him?"

"No sir," replied Mr. Bishop; "I saw him this morning, and he said he must have his money, and should be obliged to foreclose." "He must be very hard-hearted," replied the traveler.

"Not necessarily so," replied Mr. Bishop.

"The fact is, these rich men know nothing of the struggles of the poor. They are men, just like all the rest of mankind, and I am sure, if they had but the faintest idea of what the poor have to pass through, their hearts and their purses would be open. You know it has passed into a proverb, 'When a poor man needs assistance, he should apply to the poor.' The reason of this is obvious. The poor only know the curse of poverty. They know how heavily it falls, crushing the spirit out of the man; and, to use my favorite expression, they can at once put themselves in the unfortunate one's place and appreciate his difficulties, and are, therefore, always ready to render assistance as far as they are able, and if Mr. Merton had the least idea of what I and my family have to pass through, I think he would be willing to wait still longer for his money, rather than distress us."

With what emotion the stranger listened, may be imagined. A new world was being opened to him. He was passing through an experience that never had been his before. Shortly after the conclusion of the meal he rose to take his departure, thanking Mr. and Mrs. Bishop for their kind hospitality.

They invited him to stay all night, telling him he was welcome to such as they had. He thanked them and said: "I will trespass on your kindness no longer. I think I can reach the next village before dark, and be so much further on my journey."

Mr. Merton slept but very little that night. He lay awake thinking. He had received a new revelation. The poor had always been associated in his mind with stupidity and ignorance, and the first poor family he had visited he had found far in advance, in intelligent sympathy and real politeness, of the exquisitely and fashionable butterflies of the day.

The next day a boy called at the cottage and left a package in a large blue envelope addressed to Mr. Bishop.

Mrs. Bishop was very much alarmed when she took it, for large blue envelopes were associated in her mind with law and lawyers, and thought that it boded no good. She had a faint idea that it was a foreclosure of the mortgage upon their little home, but she put it away until her husband came home from his work, when she handed it to him.

He opened it in silence, read its contents and said reverently:

"Thank heaven!"

"What is it, John?" inquired his anxious wife.

"Good news, wife," replied her husband; "such news as I never hoped for, or even dreamed of."

"What is it? What is it? Tell me quick. I want to hear it if it's anything good."

"Mr. Merton has cancelled the mortgage, released me from debt, both interest and principal, and says any time I need any further assistance if I will let him know I shall have it."

"I'm so glad," said the now happy wife; "it puts new life in me."

"But what could have come over Mr. Merton?"

"I do not know. It seems strange, after the way he talked to me yesterday morning. I will go right over to his office and tell him how happy he has made us."

He found Mr. Merton in, and expressed his gratitude in glowing terms. "What could have induced you to show us so much kindness?" he asked.

"I followed your suggestion, and put myself in your place," replied Mr. Merton. "I expect it would surprise you very much to learn the strange traveler to whom you showed so much kindness yesterday was myself."

"Indeed!" exclaimed Mr. Bishop; "can that be true? How did you disguise yourself so well?"

"I was not so much disguised after all; but you could not very readily associate Mr. Merton, the lawyer, with a poor way-faring man—ha! ha! ha!" he laughed.

"Well, it's a good joke," said Mr. Bishop; "good in more senses than one. It has terminated very pleasantly for me."

"I was surprised," said Mr. Merton, "at the broad and liberal view you expressed of men and their actions generally. I suppose I had greatly the advantage over you in means, education and culture; yet how cramped and narrow-minded have been my views beside yours! That wife of yours is an estimable woman, and that boy of yours would be an honor to any man. I tell you, John," said the lawyer, becoming animated, "you are rich—rich beyond what money could make you. You have treasures that gold will not buy. I tell you you owe me no thanks. Somehow I seem to have lived years since yesterday morning. I have got into a new world. What I learned at your home is worth more than you owe me, and I am your debtor yet. Hereafter I shall take as my motto, 'Put yourself in his place,' and try to regulate my actions by it."

Thus two homes were made happy—one by its generosity, the other in its gratitude toward its benefactor.

There is a great deal of poetry about poverty, no doubt, but it takes the poor man's well-to-do neighbor to discover it.—Somerville Journal.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutler Building, cor. 5th and J.

ANGLO-NEVADA ASSURANCE CORPORATION

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

FIRE.—Cash Capital, $2,000,000—MARINE.

Sacramento Branch:

No. 1018 SECOND STREET.

JOSEPH STEFFENS,
Manager.

HOWARD KIMBROUGH,
Local Agent.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J,

SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

Sau Francisco Office, 313 Davis St.

SACRAMENTO.

American Eagle Hotel

Corner Twelfth and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO.

This house has been put in first-class condition, and also newly furnished—everything being new from office to kitchen.

Board and Room, per Week, - - $5.00 to $7.00

MEALS, 25 CENTS.

Terms made with families.

GEO. W. NEWBERT, Proprietor.

Bainbridge

Business

J. C. BAINBRIDGE, }
PRINCIPAL.

College

No. 1017 J Street, Sacramento.

A full Business Course, together with Short-hand, Telegraphy, Bookkeeping, Penmanship and all the branches usually taught in schools of this kind.

A full corps of Teachers of the first rank only employed.

MRS. BAINBRIDGE has charge of the Music Department.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEEPING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6. Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4. Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

JAS. LONGSHORE,

SACRAMENTO TRUNK FACTORY,

530 K STREET.

Trunks, Valises & Bags Wholesale and Retail.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,

SACRAMENTO.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS,

Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

Sau Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street,

Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & AND & MECHANICAL & DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

—Gas and Steam Fitter.—

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SOUR MASH BOURBON WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagele & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGELE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

D. McDougall,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel,

Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.

Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.

L. RADLOFF,

LADIES' TAILOR,

218 POST STREET,

SAN FRANCISCO.

Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201. SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.
BOHEMIA PILSENER,
BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON, The Leading Merchant Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501--507 K, cor. Fifth

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

Klune & Floberg, WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS

Agents for Rockford Watch Co.

NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.

General Printers,

Lithographers, Electrotypers, Engravers, Book Binders, Blank Book Manufacturers.

—THE—

BEST APPOINTED PRINTING OFFICE

NORTH OF SAN FRANCISCO,

Competing with that City in Quality of Work and Prices.

—410—

J STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Some Things to Avoid.

Imitation furs and jewels.
Women who paint their eyes.
People who push.
Men who are effeminate.
Girls who are masculine.
Bodices that wrinkle.
Ill-cooked dinners.
Hospitality that is grudging.
A temper that is not controlled.
Lips that are painted.
Tongues on which there are no bridges.
Envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitable-ness. From all of these ugly things, good Lord, deliver us.

A Kentucky journal having boldly declared that "the woman is just as much entitled to the pocket-book as the man," we may look out for great things in winter bonnets this year. But who is to pay the bar bill?

In Chicago the women kicked for a long time because the street car companies did not provide a special car for smokers. Finally such a car was provided on some of the lines, but the women are kicking more vigorously than ever. In spite of the conductors' explanations, they insist on entering the smoking car, even when the other cars are empty (in Chicago three or four cars are run together, you know), and then berate the conductor because he does not put the smokers off. Truly, this is getting to be a hard world for women.

"I take it for granted, Miss Laura," said young Doctor Smidgley, "that you condemn, as all sensible young women do, the unwholesome and barbarous practice of tight lacing." "On the contrary, Mr. Smidgley," returned Miss Laura, with a wistful, yearning look in her glorious dark eyes, "I think a compression of the waist to a reasonable extent is not only harmless, but at times positively exhilarating." And that dense, stupid, wooden-headed youth sat there for an hour and argued with the young lady on the evils of tight lacing.

The confusion of the average female mind in regard to passing political events, was recently well illustrated at the expense of Murat Halstead. While taking a late luncheon at the St. Nicholas, opposite the Gazette office, his distinguished appearance attracted the attention of some ladies in the restaurant. One of them asked a gentleman in the party who the handsome guest was. On being told that it was Mr. Halstead, the fair one exclaimed: "Oh, my! What a pity such a handsome man should stuff ballot-boxes."—St. Louis Republic.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

The Dangers of Manhood.

Youth! whose ingenious spirit, just and kind,
Looks from that gentle eye, that open brow,
Wilt thou be ever thus in heart and mind,
As guileless and as merciful as now?

Behold this streamlet, whose sweet waters wind
Among green knolls unbroken by the plow,
Where wild flowers woo the bee, and wild birds find
Safe nests and secret in the cedar bough.

This stream must reach the sea, and then no
more

Its purity and peaceful mood will keep,
But change to bitter brine, and madly roar
Among the breakers there, and toss and leap,
And dash the helpless bark against the shore,
And whelm the drowning seamen in the deep.

—William Cullen Bryant.

A Remarkable Astronomical Fact.

Two persons were born at the same place, at the same moment of time. After fifty years had rolled by they both died, almost at the same instant, yet one had lived one hundred days more than the other. How was this possible? Not to keep our friends in suspense, we will give the solution, which turns on a curious, but, with a little reflection, a very obvious point in circumnavigation.
A person going around the world towards the west loses a day and towards the east he gains one. Supposing, then, that these two persons were born at the same instant in St. Louis, from whence a voyage around the world may be easily performed once a year; if one of these persons constantly goes towards the west in fifty years he will be fifty days behind the stationary inhabitants; if the other sails equally fast towards the east he will be fifty days ahead of them. One, therefore, will have seen one hundred days more than the other, though they were born and died in the same place, and at the same moment, and even lived continually in the same latitude and reckoned time by the same calendar.

Editor—You! want to run right down into the press-room and get caught in a belt. It will be an easy death compared with the one you will have otherwise. Proof-reader—
Why, what's up? Editor—What's up?
Why, in this account of the Comeoffs ball,
in the description of Miss Teteatete's dress, the copy she gave me read, "trimmed with a jabot of pale aeraphane," and you let it go "trimmed with a job lot of pale aer-aphane." Go on down stairs and commit suicide—I'll write up a good account of your death.

STABLE TO LET

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

B. Ruhl Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and
Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR
only. Linen polished in the neatest manner.
We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city.

Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J
street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE
Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also,
Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night.
EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Excreescences, etc.,
Positively Cured or no Pay.
No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names
of a few of the many cured. By addressing them
they will give any information required—and it pays
to investigate before being treated.

Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihans

418 J Street.

LAST CHANCE. We are closing out the last of our immense stock of Bonbonieres and are positively SELLING AT COST. Baskets in endless variety. Full line of Holiday Vienna Ware—Satin and Silk Trimmings. Elegant line of BISQUE WARE for Holiday Presents. MAGG'S HOT AND COLD BOUILLON.

ONLY FIRST-CLASS HOUSE IN THE CITY.

J. R. Wheat

DITTMAR & WHEAT,

A. Dittmar.

Sacramento Lounge & Mattress Factory

No. 916 J STREET.

Simon Strumer,

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,
No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

Announcement.

OUR STOCK IS CONSTANTLY BEING REPLENISHED WITH

—A FULL LINE OF—

HOLIDAY GOODS!

—CONSISTING OF THE—

Latest Designs and Novelties in the Jewelry Line

DIRECT FROM EASTERN MARKETS, WHICH WE OFFER AT LOWEST PRICES.

SAMUEL JELLY, JEWELER, 422 J Street.

Important and Worth Investigation

We are making Snits to order of the fine Huddersfield Worsteds for $25, which are worth $40. As the sales of these fine worsteds during the past three weeks have proved such a success in San Francisco, we have added a large line of Kerseys and Meltons, for Overcoats, with fine silk-serge lining all through, made to order from $30 to $35, which would cost elsewhere from $40 to $50. We have also received, direct from the mill, over forty pieces of fine Trouserings, which we bought at an immense reduction, and are now prepared to give our customers and the public of Sacramento the benefit. These are fine all-wool goods, at prices never before known in Sacramento. Please call and examine goods and be convinced of the bargains now offered for the holidays by

JOE POHEIM, THE TAILOR,

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South
Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

419 K STREET.

FOR THE PUBLIC! Special attention to the largest assortment of PURE HOME-MADE CANDIES, Bon Bon and Bonniere boxes and French Glazed Fruit in the city. Also, other Fancy Goods.

JAS. G. DAVIS

Furniture, Carpets and Wall Paper
411 AND 413 K STREET,
Branch, 315 K St. Send for Catalogue. Prices Lowest.

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.

Southern Pacific Company

PACIFIC SYSTEM.

Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at
SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.25 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3.40 A
7.05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6.45 P
7.25 P	Knights Landing	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6.25 P
12-01 A	{ Central Atlantic Express } { Ogden and East }	6.00 A
3-00 P	Oroville	10-30 A
3-00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10-30 A
10-40 A	Redding via Willows	4-00 P
6-15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7-25 P
6-50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8-35 P
3-05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11-40 A
4-00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10-40 P
*10-00 A	San Francisco via Steamers	26-00 A
11-25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2-25 P
6-50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11-40 P
11-25 A	San Jose	2-25 P
7-05 P	Santa Barbara	9-55 A
6-50 A	Santa Rosa	11-40 A
3-05 P	Santa Rosa	7-25 P
9-00 A	Stockton and Galt	6-45 P
7-05 P	Stockton and Galt	9-55 A
8-00 P	Truckee and Reno	6-25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno	6-00 A
12-05 P	Colfax	10-20 A
6-50 A	Vallejo	11-40 A
3-05 P	Vallejo	7-35 P
*12-15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10-25 A
*7-15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2-40 P
*5-20 P	Folsom	*6-50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning. P for afternoon.
A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities
of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED'K COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento
that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers

and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

THEMIS

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, JANUARY 11, 1890.

No. 47.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

The controversy that has occupied the attention of the people of this city for many weeks past, whether the inhabitants should be permitted to purchase improved and modernized lights at rates below what have been charged for the productions of systems now fast becoming obsolete, has taken a new phase since our last issue. On Monday the Trustees very properly declined to reconsider their former action, that permitted the new lighting company to do business here, and the next morning the wisdom of the position was very practically demonstrated by an assurance that the people would not lose. The Capital Gas Company suddenly discovered, and so announced by advertisement, that within a few weeks it would be prepared to furnish lights of any description and of the best quality, and that its "prices will be made low and will be decreased from time to time to meet competition." This is an official acknowledgment by that corporation of the correctness of the position of THEMIS, that heretofore the quality of the lights has been inferior and the charges exorbitant. The new company proceeded to business promptly, and obtained contracts for the lighting of very many business houses and residences. Some of the contracts are with those who had been disposed to prevent them from doing business here. The fight against the new company seems yet not to have ended, though now it is managed, not through the medium of anonymous interviews and unsigned cards. It comes up in the shape of a legal complaint for an injunction instituted by the President of the Capital Gas Company, against the directors of the new company and the Trustees of the city. Mr. Steinman is very much opposed, it seems, to the new company coming in, and is afraid they will so construct their works as to endanger life and property. He seems to forget the fact that the old company is the owner of three franchises consolidated into one, and reasonably life and property would be three times as much jeopardized with them as with the new company. The nervous taxpayer construes the underbidding by the new company as some sort of a bribe to the Board of Trustees, but seems to forget that the consolidated corporations on Monday, when they found the Trustees were disposed to respect the interests of the people, made a proposition to furnish the public lighting at a still reduced rate. If the bid of the new company meant a bribe, what can be said of the later bid of the old companies? It is a rule in the history of the world that in every generation some will distinguish themselves. The plaintiff is distinguished as the only citizen of Sacramento who wants it publicly known that his interests are so severely affected by the incoming of the new enterprise that he is willing to put up money to make a fight in the courts to cripple it. The fact, however, that he is the President of the Capital Gas Company sufficiently explains the matter, and demonstrates also that the consideration is that of private business interest, and not the public welfare. It is improper before a decision to discuss the legal aspects of the case. It is sufficient to say that the rules of law are those of common sense. In cases of injunction, the rule has been usually that the moving party is impelled by motives of public interest, and not private gain. In this matter we look upon it as an unfortunate move for the old companies. They are bidding for public patronage, and no one will reasonably presume they would ever have improved their facilities or brought down their prices to anything like a reasonable scale had it not been for the fact of competition, and it comes with bad grace for them to advertise in the press at this time that they will do what everybody knows is not their voluntary act, and at the same time, through their President, attempt in the courts to crush out the new corporation that has brought about these beneficial results. It strikes us, as we view it from the standpoint of the people, it would be in better taste to convince the public that their consolidated corporations can withstand honorable competition. There is certainly room enough in this city for two companies in this line of business. As it has been, the gas bills of our people have amounted to about what State and county taxes have, and because of the excessive rates coal oil again came into very general use. With cheaper modern lighting its volume of consumption will be, as a matter of course, much enlarged. We do not, of course, desire to blame Mr. Steinman for fighting for his private interests, when they are countered by those of the public. It is no secret in political circles that Steinman is a candidate for Mayor in the spring, though from his past political affiliations it is impossible at this early day to announce definitely whether he will seek his nomination at the hands of the Democratic or Republican convention. If he should be elected, however, it is not at all likely that the people will be bothered by such trifling matters as the introduction of new lighting companies. However, the matter of his election concerns the people not now. We can calmly await the decision of the courts on the question now before them, and in the meantime we have no doubt that the opposing companies will secure all the contracts they can. We care not which secures the largest patronage. The people will judge of that.

An effort is now being made to secure the erection in this city of a new building by the Board of Trade. It is but another of the movements in the line of commendable public enterprise. The building contemplated will be one large and handsome, on our main business street, and will add to the attractions of the city. This, with the California State Bank building now approaching completion, the new Postoffice, and the prospective building of Weinstock, Lubin & Co., will do very much to change the unsightly appearance of our business center. Time is ripe when there should be a pressing of the inauguration of the new era; buildings creditable to our state of advancement with other cities should adorn our principal streets, and structures that exist only as reminders of the primitive days should pass away. Sacramento has every condition that nature can furnish to facilitate solid and permanent growth; it only needs what man can do to make the capital of California an attractive and flourishing city and great business center. Experience of the very near past has demonstrated that investments in modern buildings here are profitable. We will instance the new California State Bank building. We are assured it will yield a handsome percentage upon the capital invested; we have no doubt of it. The gentlemen who have expended their money to erect that building are recognized in the State as among the ablest of financiers. The rule is here, as in other cities, that the erection of buildings of mark inspires like enterprise with other property holders, and it has been demonstrated that creditable structures lack not for desirable tenants. We doubt not that at the moment of completion of the new bank building, every apartment for rent will be taken, and at rentals satisfactory alike to its owners and tenants.

In the matter of the size and character of the building contemplated by the Board of Trade, it must depend upon the amount of money that will be raised. The project contemplates a building that will be creditable to the city, and it is desirable that our citizens who wish the advancement of Sacramento will exhibit some liberality in an enterprise so manifestly for the city's good. As we understand it, it has been suggested that the Board of Trade incorporate with a capital stock of $200,000, represented by 2,000 shares of $100 each, these shares to be payable at the rate of one dollar per month each. Upon that basis, every citizen interested in the welfare of Sacramento, be he rich or poor, can do something to further the object, and if not able to subscribe for a large number of shares, can at least take two, the minimum allowed, which will entail an expense of but two dollars per month. The fund will be placed in the hands of our most enterprising and reliable business men, and the management of affairs will be conducted on the same general plan as that of building and loan associations. The rent of this building will afford sufficient income to pay a good rate of interest on the investment, so that the enterprise will no doubt prove a source of private profit as well as public benefit. There is a dearth of desirable office buildings in Sacramento at the present time, and nicely furnished offices located in a large and commodious edifice in the business center would be readily rented at good prices. The ground floor would probably be leased for use as mercantile establishments, and would certainly command a good figure. There is every reason why our people should lend all possible financial aid to this important measure, the success of which cannot fail to contribute largely to the prosperity and well being of the community. Let us profit from the neglected opportunities of the past, and bestow a liberal patronage upon this enterprising project that is calculated to improve our city.

As we have stated, the tendency of property owners is largely that of emulation. The erection of a handsome building inspires others to build in like manner. This has been demonstrated here in the last few years; and what has been accomplished has, in a great measure, raised Sacramento from the category of primitive California villages. There is, however, a vast field for improvement in the way of buildings, particularly on our business streets, and an effort in that direction cannot but result in general good. We oftentimes feel ashamed when a stranger friend remarks the appearance of antiquity of many of the buildings in the business center; when we can only tender the flimsy excuse that the situation is not as bad as it used to be, and that if we have a little more time we will make a better showing. At this season of the year every prudent Sacramentan entertains his visiting friends down town, for very prudential reasons: The wading in the mud in the residence portion is not particularly good, and the appearance of the streets generally not attractive. The people here would find they would make more money if they would simply make Sacramento look like a city—put up finer business buildings, establish a modern system of drainage, and fix the streets.

Our remarks in past issues upon subjects of this character may have been deemed harsh by some of our citizens, yet we shall continue to represent this city as it is, with the hope that very shortly we will be able to write of it as it will and ought to be. We take little stock in the bouquets of oratorical flowers that are displayed so lavishly at public banquets and gatherings. We are tired of listening to the responses to the toast, "Sacramento," and hearing the glowing descriptions of our beautiful city and of its unsurpassed advantages, when we know that people from abroad would perhaps suggest the most profitable enterprise to establish here would be an adobe factory. We have never yet heard of a city being built with wind; though we are not disposed to dispute that the long blast with trumpets caused the walls of Jericho to fall down flat, and brought about the destruction of that city. In that case, Joshua did not permit any shouting or trumpet blasts until the command was given. That was a very marked example of what shouting can accomplish when directed from the outside against the walls of a city. Should we not apprehend danger that the walls of Sacramento may fall outward, if the shouting within them is not in some measure subdued?

The following letter from Francis D. Clark, President of the Society of the Survivors of the Veterans of First N. Y. Vol. (Col. Stevenson's regiment), Mexican war, was prompted by a recent editorial in this paper concerning the injustice done John Ruggles, a member of that regiment. Mr. Clark suggests that our Senators be called upon to secure the passage of an Act of Congress to remove the disabilities resting upon a number of the veterans of this famous regiment. It seems to us that the provisions of Section 6, of the Act of Congress, entitled "An Act for the relief of certain volunteer and regular soldiers of the late war, and the war with Mexico, passed March 2, 1889, goes a great way towards authorizing the removal of disabilities; although it should be declared that all Mexican war veterans who answered roll call on the 1st day of May, 1848, should be deemed to have fulfilled their term of enlistment. Section 6 of the above named Act, provides: "That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to amend the military record of any soldier who enlisted for the war with Mexico, upon proper application, where the rolls and records of the Adjutant General's office show the charge of desertion against him, when such rolls and records show the facts set out in the following cases: First—That said soldier served faithfully for six months or more, and until the fourth day of July, A. D. 1848, left his command without having a discharge. Second—That such soldier, after said charge of desertion was entered on the rolls, voluntarily returned to his command within a reasonable time, and served faithfully until discharged." It is possible that an additional Act of Congress will have to be passed in order to render substantial justice to a number of these old veterans, as the date fixed in the Act of Congress above mentioned, which will enable the Secretary of War to act upon an application, is that the soldier must have answered to roll call up to July 4, 1848. Now, it is a matter of history that the gold excitement prevailed in this State in May and June, 1848, and it is during this period that the "absence without leave" occurred in most instances. The date should be made May 1, 1848, which was nearly three months after the termination of the war, and was ample time to forward the news to the Pacific Department.

NEW YORK, December 30, 1889.

EDITORS THEMIS: In your issue of the 21st inst., I notice your editorial upon the case of Comrade John Ruggles, of Company K, Stevenson's regiment, and am in hearty sympathy in all you say. The terms of the enlistment were: "To serve during the war unless sooner discharged," and every member of the regiment who answered to his name on the 1st day of May, 1848, had faithfully fulfilled his contract with the Government, as the war closed in the month of February, 1848. Now, the record of Company K shows that Comrade Ruggles deserted on the 27th of May, 1848, and on the 16th day of June following was (so reads the record) apprehended; and when the company (K) was discharged, on the 15th of August, he was dishonorably discharged. Notwithstanding all these facts, he (Comrade Ruggles) had filled out the full term of his enlistment. This view of the case is not only held by myself, but by many of the officers of the regiment, among the number being the surgeon of the regiment, Dr. Alexander Perry, a wealthy physician of this city. He has repeatedly asserted that the Government has done an injustice to these members of the regiment who absented themselves without leave after the war had terminated, they having served the full term of the war, by not restoring their names to the rolls as honorably discharged. Doctor Perry maintains that the neglect of the Government to promptly notify the military authorities in California early in 1848 that the war had ceased, was no fault upon the part of the men of the regiment, who were thereby deprived of their lawful discharge, which they were entitled to as early as May, 1848. In my own case, the company (D) of which I was a member was not discharged until October 24, 1848, nearly six months after many of the volunteers upon the Atlantic side had been mustered out of the service. Companies A, B, and D did not leave Lower California until September 6, 1848, and were engaged in a campaign in Lower California several months after peace had been declared. Others of the command are under the same disability as that of Comrade Ruggles, and an effort should be made to have Congress remove the stain left upon an otherwise honorable record; and any member of the regiment present with his command on the 15th day of May, 1848, should be entitled to all the benefits that accrue to the other members of the regiment. Senators Stanford and Hearst should be placed in possession of these facts, and asked to introduce a bill that would afford the relief needed. Our pay proper was $7 per month, with an allowance of $3.50 for clothing, yet many of us paid as high as $7 for a pair of native made shoes while we were in the service.

Respectfully,

FRANCIS D. CLARK, President
Society of the Survivors 1st Regt. N. Y. Vol.,
Mexican War, 1846.

That eminently practical and scholastic gentleman, Rabbi Krauskopf, delivered a lecture in Philadelphia December 22d, wherein he asks the pertinent question: "Are we better than the heathen?" There is no under-aiming by that gentleman. The gatling that he uses is always aimed high, and every shot hits the center. We speak of the heathen generally in the light of ignorance, vice, and stupidity; but when we unveil the past, we find a pure, solemn, and philosophical religion among the ancient Persians. The ancient Greeks were of the highest culture; and yet, under our modern idea of religion, they were heathens. Heathen morality teaches us lessons in the true virtue of religion. Should we quote from the philosophy of the Hindoos, Chinese, Parsee, Greek, Roman, or Norse literature, we find precepts as deep and noble as can be found in our scriptures. Here are a few culled sentiments from the heathen philosophy: "To bear with those who revile us, is the first of virtues." "Bear even when you can retaliate—to forget is still better." "To neglect hospitality is poverty of poverty; to bear with the ignorant is might of might." "No pious abstinence equals the abstinence of those who overcome by patience." "The edge of the sword is less penetrating than gentleness." "Chain anger, lest it chain thee." "Of what use is wealth to him who neither gives nor enjoys it?" "What is strength to him who subdues not himself?" "Where women are honored, there the deities are pleased; but where they are dishonored, there all religious acts become fruitless." "To a man contaminated with sensuality, neither the Vedas, nor liberality, nor sacrifice, nor observances, nor pious austerities will procure felicity." All these, and books upon books of moral sentiments, are found in the literature of the heathen. The philosophy of Buddha and Confucius is replete with the richest moral sentiment, and yet, they are heathen. If we are not better than the heathen, we should recall our troops of missionaries from heathen lands, and employ them where they are more needed—at home. The brilliant Rabbi contends that the enthusiast is the legitimate product of nature, the world needs such men. Life would be a void without the men who deal in exaggeration and superlative—who look at things through powerful magnifying glasses. In other words, we need the men of superlative impulses, whose enthusiastic natures override logicians' rules and philosophers' authority. While the world owes much to the cold, calculating thinker, it owes more to the enthusiast. It is the enthusiast in science, in war, in religion, that accomplishes the great things of this world. It is a dangerous ammunition, and only a few can handle it; but it is the material that gives us our great inventions and wonderful discoveries. A careful reading of the Rabbi's lectures will disclose that he is an enthusiast, but knows how to handle the ammunition.

Though you may have known clever men who were indolent, you never knew a great man who was so.—Ruskin.

Dreams.

Speaking in a low, monotonous tone close to the ear of a sleeper will almost invariably cause him to dream of terrible adventures on water, such as shipwrecks and drowning. Singing or playing on musical instruments induces dreams of dead friends, funerals and other lonesome and gruesome things, often causing the sleeper to moan or even cry outright in his seeming agony.

It seems that sleep soon after meals does not cause worse dreams than the simple and very prevalent habit of seeking to court the sleepy god with arms against the headboard. The worry which may not be caused by the habit of laying with the arms resting above the head, according to this experimenter, could not be induced by an after-dinner nap after freely partaking of sauerkraut and pickles. Mr. Lewis also seeks to explode the old theory that somnambulism is caused by weighty trouble on the mind of the sleeper, and he combats the idea that any great proportion of dreams are the results of trouble, worry or excitement. His theory that "the dreams we dream" are but the results of waves of thought across the brain, he thus aptly illustrates from an experiment:

"While one watched the sleepers and the other the clock, the third loudly slammed the door about ten feet away; the effect was almost instantaneous. The man sprang up at the sound, looked around in alarm, and then exclaimed: 'Thank God that it was only a dream.' It seems that he had dreamed of being on a crowded street in front of a building which the people about him pronounced unsafe, but that he still lingered near the toppling wreck. Then he tried to elbow his way through the crowd to a place of safety, but the people jeered and laughed and held him fast. He begged, coaxed, threatened and entreated, still they held him, until the building fell and the shock broke the spell. He must have dreamed the entire dream in a second, yet it seemed to him that he was in danger as long as half an hour before the final awakening scene was enacted. To put the thought flash theory beyond dispute many experiments were indulged in. Sometimes a weight was let drop, a chair struck or the blinds slammed. In every instance the sleeper had dreamed of some startling adventure.

The Feminine Wrap.

One of the most curious incidents of hereditary misunderstanding is that which has existed from time immemorial between man and a woman's wrap. Man, in his relation to the female wrap, passes through three periods—that of courageous ignorance, in which he fearlessly attacks the garment without the least suspicion that it is a conundrum; the period of apprehension, in which he realizes the difficulty of the situation, but is incapable of coping with them; and the period of despair, at which he does not arrive until after he is married—sometimes not even then. The seal cloak is so simple in construction, so much like a coat, that it is comparatively easy to manage; and the long opera cloak, though formidable in appearance, yields readily to resolute treatment; but the fancy wrap, the dolman in all its varieties, not to mention the garment with multiple capes—in each, any and all of these a man meets at once his retreat from Moscow, his Vittoria and his Waterloo.

A woman usually on taking off one of these inscrutable garments, rolls it into a hard knot and tucks it down behind her on the seat; or she hangs it over the orchestra rail or on the back of her chair in such a way that when her escort picks it up it will be upside down. If he is a novice, when the time comes to assist her into it, he grabs it heedlessly by the middle, holds it out at arm's length, and is surprised to find that it is an utterly shapeless thing, without form and void, and that it bears not the slightest resemblance to anything he has ever seen before. He revolves it slowly and with increasing confusion, but without getting any nearer to the solution of the problem, until the woman, who is by this time tired of waiting, turns, grasps it at its salient point, and it instantly falls into shape. He examines it intently, when he gets it on, thinking he will remember how it looks and be able to handle it next time, but he finds when the next time comes that it is a different girl and a different cloak, and he has made no progress whatever.

If a man has passed his novitiate and entered the period of apprehension, he begins to get uneasy as the play nears the end, but he is in no haste to grapple with the garment when at last the time has come. He stands looking down at where it lies in a limp wad, and seems to be wondering why every woman he meets springs a new combination on him. At last he realizes that she is waiting, makes a desperate lunge at the shapeless roll, holds it out, and it takes the form of a string. He instantly grabs it at another point; it takes a new shape, but one that is equally mysterious; he takes it in both hands and shakes it viciously, and then spread out it becomes a trackless waste in which he vainly searches for some bottom, loop or other sign that will indicate the position of the collar. When he has been striving for five minutes to get it on wrong side up, she turns serenely and places it in proper position. When a man has reached the period of despair the thing is much simpler. He picks up the exasperating trifle with a "Here, how does this thing go?" and a considerable amount of time is saved.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Two Remarkable Inventions.

Some of the monasteries of Italy and France sent curious inventions to the Paris Exposition. One, from a friar in Florence, was a watch but the fourth of an inch in diameter, having three hands, minute, hour, and second, besides an indicator which points out the days of the week, month, and year. A monastery in Brittany, France, contributed a plain-looking mahogany table, with an inlaid chess board on its surface. The inventor, or any one who desires, sets the pieces for a game, and sits alone on one side of the board. He plays cautiously, and the opposite pieces move automatically, and quite frequently comes out the victor, no odds how scientifically the player plays. There is no mechanism apparent beneath the table-top, which seems to be a solid mahogany board.

Long Heads and Round Heads.

Long heads are usually associated with great intellectual strength and mental capacity, but not before have they been regarded as indicative of any physical peculiarity. Herr D. Ammon, however, has been making observations on five thousand soldiers at Baden; and the result of these, which was communicated to the recent congress of German men of science at Heidelberg, shows that the proportions of the body almost invariably conform to the size of the skull. Tall men, Herr Ammon found, had generally long skulls, or skulls of medium length; whereas the short men had round heads. Most of the round-headed men came from the Black Forest; those with long heads usually belonged to the Rhine valley, and were especially numerous in towns and in the neighborhood of castles of ancient families. From this fact, Herr Ammon concluded that the round-headed men had been the inhabitants of the Rhine valley; that they had been driven from it by long-headed invaders, and that the latter had established themselves near their victorious leaders. Not only does the German anthropologist find a certain relation between the height of the figure and the shape of the skull, but his observations show that no fewer than 30 per cent of the men examined who had blue eyes had fair hair, and that physical growth is generally quicker in case of the brown eyed than that of the blue-eyed type.—Globe-Democrat.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

Soft music is a very appropriate accompaniment for the melo-drama.

Low Dockstader has been engaged by Hermann for his Transatlantic Vaudeville, and his black-face specialties will hereafter constitute an important part of the programme of that combination.

Frederick Warde, assisted by Mrs. D. P. Bowers, will produce next season Shakespeare's great historical tragedy, Henry VIII. Mr. Warde will play "Cardinal Wolsey" and Mrs. Bowers, the injured "Queen Catherine." The play will be magnificently mounted and great attention given to historical detail.

The fellows that insist on applauding at the wrong times should either be given their cues before the play begins, or excluded from the theater. The rapturous applauder, who in the midst of a pathetic scene, gives vent to his enthusiasm, is a nuisance. We have a surfeit of these friends of the play in this city.

The candy woman who munches candy at the theater, until one would think there is an old fashioned corn husker at work, ought to be poisoned or something worse. To sit near a couple of girls who indulge in chatter and candy munching, during the performance of a drama, is enough to make the best tempered man in the world swear.

Nat Goodwin tells a very good story about a newly appointed Irish policeman who arrested him in New York some years ago, says the New York Star. Nat was strolling through Madison Square, when the Irish policeman seized him and said: "Cum, me good mon, come wid me thish minute." "Why do you arrest me?" asked Nat. "Nun o' yur bwack talk to me, d'ye moind now. Oi'll foind a rayson bechune here an' the stashun house."

The Queen's Mate was produced on Tuesday night at the Metropolitan, by the Duff Opera Company, to a large audience. There was considerable disappointment in the careless manner in which the opera was presented. The scenery for the piece was not set, and the prima donna did not appear. Opera companies, of the standing of that of Mr. Duff, cannot afford to slight the public.

Christian, the veteran comedian of the Paris Variétés, whose death occurred recently, was the most prolific and inveterate punster on the French stage. His "gags" were so successful that they were nearly always adopted by the playwrights in the printed editions of their works. His dramatic career, though obscure in its beginning, eventually brought him to the front rank. His greatest creation was probably the role of "Jupiter," in Offenbach's Orphée aux Enfers.

A professor of vocal music solemnly says: "In order to sing without effort, breathe through the base of the lungs. Stand before a mirror, throw out the chest and practise deep breathing." This seems to be a simple method of acquiring the joyous accomplishment of singing without an effort, but we know of several men who have tried it without success. Perhaps they did not throw out enough chest, or the fault may have been caused by defects in the mirror. At all events, they will die with all their music in them.

A theatrical manager recently, in speaking of how particular some stars are regarding the receipts, said: "Lawrence Barrett is the most knowing fellow in the business. He asks to know how many passes are issued to the local papers and the correspondents. Then when he is on the stage at night he counts the house. He doesn't do like most people—count the people. He counts the empty seats. You will observe in a death scene he always falls with his face to the audience. Then he opens one eye and counts. I knew Tom Davy used to have constant rows with him over the slips of the night's receipts. I remember once Davy handed him the slip. 'You're wrong by twelve dollars, or twelve seats,' Davy said he wasn't. Barrett said he was, and they started in for a quarrel. They went to the office together and put the question to the manager of the house. Barrett was right. The local manager had a right by contract to twelve seats, and they had not been put on the slip. Barrett can tell within fifty cents of what's in the house any time—all he is thinking of when not on the stage."

The late Mr. Martin Parquhar Tupper once aspired to distinction as a dramatist. His Washington, a Drama in Five Acts, of which a privately printed copy is now before us, was written in 1875, as a note by the author records, "for the Centenary of American Independence," and was "intended for representation in the United States." Mr. Tupper was bitterly disappointed at his failure to induce any manager of a leading theater in America to produce his piece. It is in blank verse, and introduces Washington and his wife, Benedict Arnold and his sister Mary, Patrick Henry, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, the Marquis de Lafayette and Major Andre. The "General" is rather more addicted in the play to long rhetorical speeches than history would warrant us in expecting, and the drama suffers from a general excess of dialogue over action. Stirring business, however, is provided in the fourth act, Mr. Tupper, who quietly drops poor "Honora Sneyd," supposes "Andre" and "Mary Arnold" to be betrothed; and he represents his heroine as stealing upon the privacy of Washington when the latter is lying sick in the camp at Valley Forge, and making a desperate attempt to stab him after the later fashion of Charlotte Corday. This is in revenge for his obdurate determination that "Andre" shall be executed as a spy. The "General," however, having been saved by the timely interposition of "Mrs. Washington," who appears to be campaigning with her husband, the latter generously condones the treacherous act; for the author, who, like Mr. Puff, had a fancy for complexity in the sentimental relations of his personages, has imagined "Mary" to be no other than the "unknown lowland beauty," the "earliest love" of "Washington," who, recognizing her, addresses her gallantly as "My unknown passion flower of hot sixteen!" On the whole, it seems a pity that American playgoers were balked of the entertainment which they undoubtedly might have derived from Mr. Tupper's bold method of handling his historical materials.—London News.

Book Chat.

The Harlequin of Dreams.

Swift through some trap mine eyes have never found,
Dim-pannelled in the painted scene of sleep,
Thou, giant Harlequin of Dreams, dost leap
Upon my spirit's stage. Then sight and sound,
Then space and time, then language, mete and bound,
And all familiar forms that firmly keep Man's reason in the road, change faces, peep
Betwixt the legs, and mock the daily round.
Yet thou canst more than mock; sometimes my tears
At midnight break through bounden lids—a sign
Thou hast a heart, and oft thy little leaven
Of dream-taught wisdom works me bettered years.
In one night witch, saint, trickster, fool divine,
I think thou'rt Jester at the Court of Heaven!

It has been said that Edgar A. Poe seldom smiled. In a certain sense he smiled too often.

Mark Twain's income is about $80,000 per annum, yet he occasionally bows to an old acquaintance.

An eccentric bibliomaniac who died recently in England, leaving a highly valuable library, refused to allow a book in it over a certain size, and absolutely excluded anything written either by a clergyman or a woman. They had no business with literature, in his opinion, and were incapable of achieving success in it.

An interesting newspaper woman is the Countess Ella Norvaikow. She is an English woman, the wife of a Russian count who spent seven cruel years in Siberia. At last through court influence he was liberated, and now, a confirmed invalid from the sufferings and privations of his exile, he dictates to his devoted wife his Siberian experiences. Some of her work, A Night with the Nihilists, Escaped from Siberia, etc., has attracted much attention. Kennan is quite interested in her work. The Countess of Norvaikow is a lady of pleasing address, with large, dark eyes and an Englishwoman's fresh coloring.

What does the world care for dead folks? George Eliot's grave in Highgate cemetery, near London, is shamefully neglected—overgrown with weeds and grass. General Grant's tomb in New York city would disgrace a back country cemetery, it is so poor and meanly surrounded. Great people ought to make their wills in favor of cremation, and so avoid the danger of lying in neglected graves. It has just been discovered that Mirabeau reposes under one of the foundation stones of a new building in Paris, but the city did not think it worth while to pull up the foundations, now nearly completed, to discover beneath which stone the mighty orator's coffin of lead is stowed away.

Professor Richard T. Ely, of the John Hopkins University, in his "Introduction to Political Economy," has given us a work that is especially to be praised for its method. It begins with descriptive and historical discussion of "the characteristics of industrial society and the nature of political economy," to which discussion almost half of the book is assigned. The relation of that phase of social life which has to do with the ways and means of material livelihood to other phases of life, is clearly shown. The historical developments and changes of that phase of life are traced, and the whole subject is written about in a frank, intelligent way that appeals to the general reader and that has the incomparable merit of informing him what "political economy" means.

We have received the first number of the National Stenographer, a monthly magazine published at Chicago, and devoted to shorthand. Its editor is Isaac S. Dement, and among the eleven associate editors, are the well-known Pacific coast stenographers, George W. Smith of San Francisco, and R. S. Gray, of Oakland. From the standpoint of the official reporter of this county for over fifteen years we endorse the new publication as containing very much that is practical. Largely shorthand publications are produced by theorists, and it is refreshing for a practical reporter to run across a journal of his profession that contains matter written by persons who evidently have a knowledge of that of which they write. On pages 2 and 3 of this magazine are facsimiles of shorthand notes written, very evidently, "as shorthand is when somebody is talking"—in short examples of practical shorthand. This journal is valuable not only to the shorthand student, but to the professional reporter.

Emile Zola gives the following as his ideas of the literature of the future: The literature of the future will be materialist, toned by symbolism—that is, it will not explain all by the influence of surroundings or heredity, as do the naturalists, nor by thought alone, as do the symbolists. A literary period corresponds to a social evolution. Now, at this present moment, I see no sign of a new art, but as romanticism succeeded bourgeois literature, so must naturalism be succeeded by—perhaps by the literature of symbols. For, when I formulated naturalism, or rather, baptized the literary movement manifested in France since Balzac and Stendhal, I had not the slightest intention of establishing a permanent school of French literature, not the slightest intention of preventing its march forward. I simply noted the literary formula of the end of our century. The literature of the seventeenth century is that of Descartes; that of the eighteenth, Voltaire and Rousseau, and that of the nineteenth—well, naturalism is the child of positive and material philosophy.

Professional Chat.

"You Honor," exclaimed the lawyer in his indignation, "if that decision is law I will burn every book in my library." "Better read them," was the laconic comment.

One of the best of old time stories relates to a lawyer in whose hands was placed a claim for collection. He agreed to undertake the work on a contingent fee—viz: a retention of half the amount he would succeed in collecting. He promised to act vigorously, but weeks passed and the client heard nothing. He finally wrote to inquire what had been done in the matter. By the return mail he received this reply: "I have already got my half of the claim. If you will wait a few months I may be able to secure your half."

Justice's Court is the place for training country practitioners. They there sometimes meet very shrewd and able "pettifoggers" who are not even members of the Bar. On one occasion, counsel was engaged to defend an old school teacher, who prided himself on his useful command of language. He wrote a letter to counsel stating the facts of the case at great length, and closed with these words: "And now, my dear sir, I desire you to come to the place appointed, on the day appointed, prepared with all the appliances known to the law wherewith to circumvent the exasperated cuss."

Tim Murphy commenced an action against a railroad company to recover for injuries received through the negligence of one of its drivers. His position at the time of the occurrence his counsel was desirous that he should describe accurately, but found great difficulty in accomplishing that object. At last, with desperate energy, he said: "Now, Murphy, I want you to tell this jury where your feet were when this accident occurred?" "Me feet is it, sur?" "Yes, your feet!" "Well, sur, they were in me boots!" It seems strange that any incident of humor should mark the progress of a prosecution for murder, but it does sometimes. A juror, called in such a procedure before me, was undergoing an examination as to his fitness to act, and expressed his unwillingness to do so because he did not want to be one of the prisoner's "executors."

A young man visits the office of an attorney and gives him a claim of $106 to collect. "Your name?" asks the disciple of Blackstone. "Elijah Simpson," is the reply. "Not the son of my old friend Lige Simpson? Yes? Well, you don't know how glad I am to meet my old friend's son. Give me your hand," and he wrings the young man's hand with the utmost effusion, adding, "I hope you will come in and see me often. It will be a treat for me, I assure you, to have an opportunity of conversing with you about your father." A week later young Elijah calls again. The lawyer rushes forward to greet him, seizes both his hands and shakes them, repeating his good wishes over and over, and expressing his great pleasure at having had it in his power to serve Lige's son. "Then you have the money for me?" suggests Simpson. "Certainly, certainly. Here it is," and he hands an envelope carefully sealed to the young fellow, who tears it open and finds five $5 bills. "Where's the rest?" asks Elijah. "Oh, my fee is $81," is the reply. As Simpson edges towards the door, he says to his father's friend: "I guess I'm lucky to get $25. I'm awfully glad you didn't know my grandfather."

Senator Voorhees, according to a Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, recently told of a Justice of the Peace in Indiana who had frequently before him a certain lawyer, Smith by name, who afterwards rose to some prominence in State politics, but who is now dead. Between the "Squire" and Smith no friendship was lost. For some reason or other they hated each other most cordially. At the close of one hot afternoon the "Squire" was walking home from the Court-house to his residence, when he encountered Smith in the public square of the town. "You look weary and tired, Judge," said Smith, "what have you been doing this hot afternoon?" "Look weary and tired, do I?" replied the "Squire," ill-naturedly. "Well, I think I should, for I am; and you would be, too, if you had been shut up in that hot, stuffy little Court-room from 1 o'clock till 5:30 listening to a long, dull argument." "From 1 to 5:30! That was a long time. Who made the argument?" "Oh, old Jones." "Well, what was Jones trying to prove?" "As nearly as I could get at it that I was an old ignoramus and didn't know anything about the law," blurted out the "Squire." "Did you commit him?" sympathetically inquired Smith. "No; commit him for what?" "For being so long about it."

NOTES.

Senator Stanford, it is said, enjoys his lunches on calves' liver, bacon, and beer. Why he is rich enough to have even a Swiss cheese sandwich with his beer. It is only the wealthy that can enjoy such.

It is urged against the Grand Old Man, Gladstone, by his enemies, that over forty-five years ago he advocated the revival of the confessional. What if he did? Is anybody harmed by that fact, if fact it is?

The Bee donned a new dress of type on Monday. It is tasty and rather metropolitan in appearance. It bespeaks prosperity. We are gratified that our contemporary is progressing—its enterprise merits the success it is meeting with.

A Yale College student is likely to be expelled for giving champagne to a bear. It is not ascertained whether it is for the waste of the sparkling beverage, or otherwise, that caused the action of the faculty. By the way, we have often seen champagne given to bears, of the human species, and have always thought it was a prodigious waste of the fine article.

In all our classical literature, as well as works of art, Love is painted and portrayed as being blind. This may do in art and literature; but if you want to learn the fact that Love is not blind, just devote yourself to some other woman, and the woman who loves you will see it, even when you think you are securely hidden. Oh, no; Love is not blind.

When large steamers like the Thoroughfare will stick in the mud in the San Francisco Bay, it is certainly time that our neighbors of the Bay City realized the fact that this filling up of the great thoroughfare is not occasioned by the "rain wash following the plow." It was high time the Sacramento river should be saved from being a dump for hydraulic mining.

The last number of the Newcastle News is a splendid paper, and is devoted to the interests of the northern citrus belt. Its columns are filled with choice matter relating to the fruit, grape, cereal and quarry industries. The citizens of Placer county should feel a just pride in the enterprise displayed by her newspapers, all of which have shown a deep interest in Placer's welfare.

The hen-pecked Benedict who may desire occasionally to sit in a quiet game until the morning breaks, or take a night off upon any other reasonable pretext, will welcome the pocket suspenders as a helpful ally. The tooth brush, button hook, and the little roll of carefully secreted bills may be, with proper diplomacy, put beyond the pale of discovery and suspicion. The pockets are attached to each strap of the braces, just above the buckle.

There exists among a great many American workmen a prejudice against the establishment of training schools, and apprentices. This is all wrong, and not in accord with the spirit of progress. It is a reflection of old-time prejudice, which should be discarded by the earnest and zealous wage worker. Give the rising generation a chance to learn a trade, and at the same time earn sufficient to aid them in acquiring proficiency in their callings.

In these days of advanced ideas, and notions of great local improvement, while propositions are rife to beautify the city, it might not be out of place to suggest a decided improvement in the names of our streets. Here we have the commonplace, alphabetical and numerical system of designating the different streets. This is not in accord with greatness in any sense of the word. The alphabet and numbers answered very well in our infancy, but with maturity there should be something of a more dignified and imposing nature adopted. The City Fathers are prone to exercise arbitrary and liberal powers in other matters, now let this municipal legislature rename our streets so as to give us metropolitan airs. For the stale name of "M" street let "Capitol avenue" be substituted. "J" street should have some title suggestive of importance, say, "Granite"; "K" street might give place to "Sutter" and "Third" to "Union." The streets might be named after prominent early pioneers, or early California historical nomenclature. Anything would be better and more desirable than the stupid letters and figures. Third street might appropriately be called "Newspaper Row." The names of such distinguished citizens—who founded the city and the State—as Fremont, Kit Carson, Morrill, McClatchy, Redding, Anthony, Bigler, Upson, McKune, Stanford, Crocker, Catlin, Cadwalader, Knox and dozens of others could be agreeably used in naming our streets. By all means do something, gentlemen of the Board of Trustees, to relieve us of these monotonous letters now fastened upon our streets.

A young lady broke off her engagement with a suitor, when a wealthier lover appeared upon the scene. She wrote to her old lover, requesting him to return her photograph. Here was a chance for revenge, which he took by sending her the following note: "I would gladly comply with your request, but if I do it will spoil my eclair deck. I have a collection of photographs which I use for playing cards, and I do not want to break it by giving away the queen of diamonds."

A young lady enthusiast on the drama, the daughter of the medical advisor of the Prince of Wales, has made a provision in her will bequeathing the income of £3,000, as a fund to provide genuine champagne for use of actors and actresses, in scenes where wine is represented as a part of the performance. This munificent bequest will inspire playwrights to create parts where wine is a necessary accompaniment to the drama. There will be at least the virtue of reality in these scenes. The young philanthropist has done a wonderfully clever thing for the drama. This will be quite a change from colored water and the fiction practiced in the wine acts on the stage.

Let the People Take Warning.

Unless the people and the authorities of Sacramento act with promptness and determination the city will again be disgraced by startling election frauds—frauds that will eclipse any that have heretofore occurred here. The parties who are active in making preparations for this circus in the spring make no secret of their methods. They are among the most degraded of those who make politics a matter of merchandise. The Great Register is being loaded down with dummies, and the lowest of beasts are being heralded into the Clerk's office for registration. The authorities are not justified in passing over this matter, and we venture if proper investigation be made, there will be not a few convictions for illegal registration, and a very little well directed effort may involve some of the men who are the captains. We speak of this matter long in advance, and plainly say to the people that the vicious element is organizing for the Republican primary and city election in the spring. It will be useless to cry over spilled milk after the wrong has been done; let the people and the officers act now, and prepare to punish any assault on the purity of the ballot box. We have plenty of laws to reach any case of wrongdoing, and juries that will convict if anything like a case is made out. We suggest that an organization be effected of responsible citizens, irrespective of party, to look after our primaries and elections, and assist the officers in the enforcement of the laws and the punishment of criminals. First of all the registrations recently made should be looked into, and if any violations of law are developed, they can now be easily located, being of so recent a date. In this matter it should not be assumed that the County Clerk is to blame. We personally know that that office has sought advice as to the power of the Clerk to examine with more minuteness applicants for registration. The Clerk must register those who swear to their affidavits, unless there is prima facie evidence of fraud.

"Spider and Fly."

The Metropolitan was crowded last night to witness the burlesque of the Spider and the Fly. As far as the name is concerned, it might have been called Babes in the Woods, Lion and Lamb, or any other title foreign to the subject matter. The costumes were pleasing, and the scenery fine. The dramatic merit was not involved, because it was not claimed that this is a play to portray art, other than the art of make-up. We were reminded of the Old Ravens, and Martinelli's, by the presentation of this pretty burlesque and spectacle. The clowns could not be excluded. The best display of the performance was the horizontal bar feats. The policemen "caught on" on the strength of "McGinty." The chorus was pretty and young. A full house will undoubtedly greet the company to-night to witness this funny spectacle.

Popular Music at Popular Prices.

Popular music at 10 cents per copy; prices elsewhere range from 35 cents to 75 cents. Catalogues furnished on application. Hammer's music store, No. 820 J street. Sole agency Chickering & Son's pianos.

The king of all encyclopedias is without any question the Britannica. By reason of the newest method of photo-printing and an absence of any international copyright law, this work is reproduced word for word, page for page, map for map, and plate for plate, from the original, and sold for one-third the price. Sample sets of the ninth edition, which just came from the press in December last, are on exhibition in the window of Joseph Hahn's drug store, and people who have heretofore been obliged to deny themselves this cyclopaedia on account of cost, are now giving in their orders, as the prices and terms bring them within the reach of all.

FLASHES.

A big hat is no indication of large brains. Mince pie or a guilty conscience will keep a person awake.

The cold wave has taken the grip on a majority of our citizens.

There is one class of our citizens that always have the grip—drummers.

Love is like soup—the first helping is always too hot, and the last too cold.

The reason the way of the transgressor is hard, is because it is traveled so much.

These is one thing that is always mist when it is here, and never mist when gone—fog.

"The same" is the most popular drink—but it is often disastrous on a fellow's underpinning.

The man who never needs the newspapers, and makes a blow about the fact, is usually one who, if he can read at all, is incapable of understanding what he reads.

The weary brain will plot and plan Some way of duty shirking.

It's queer how hard a lazy man

Will work to keep from working.

Business Notice.

M. R. Beard will hereafter have the business management of THEMIS. It is hardly necessary that Mr. Beard be introduced to the public, as he is among our best known citizens.

The Board of Supervisors yesterday appointed the following delegates to the River Convention, to be held in this city next Friday: F. F. Tebbets, E. B. Willis, Wm. Johnston, C. K. McClatchy and Elwood Bruner.

We are pleased to note that J. H. Quatman has returned to Sacramento, where he is well and favorably known. He is associated in business with O. W. Nordwell, 520 J street. When in need of a good suit of clothes, give him a call.

PUBLIC MEETING.

All citizens of this city are requested to attend a meeting to be held at the Court-house on MONDAY EVENING, JAN. 13th, 1890, at 7½ o'clock.

The meeting is called to devise some means to improve the streets of this city at a reasonable expense.

C. A. LUHRS, President
Sacramento City and County Improvement Association.
C. W. BAKER, Secretary.

Lavenson's

THE LARGEST AND

MOST RELIABLE HOUSE IN SACRAMENTO.

O. W. Nordwell

MERCHANT TAILOR AND DRAPER,

520 J Street.

My new invoice includes the very LATEST STYLES and inspection is invited as to quality of GOODS, the FIT, and PRICE.

J. H. QUATMAN, Manager and Cutter

TUFTS'

Yerbine COUGH Balsam

WILL

CURE YOUR COUGH, COLD, OR INFLUENZA, sure, or money refunded.

A. C. Tufts, Druggist, 10th and J Sts.

Fine Table Wines
From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.
Grand Humbly & Co.
Produce of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

Short-Hand ECLECTIC!

The system taught by all the leading Colleges on the Coast, viz: Heald's and the Pacific, of San Francisco; Woodbury's, of Los Angeles; DePue's, of Oakland; Garden City, of San Jose; Stockton College, of Stockton, and

Bainbridge College of Sacramento

Why? Because it can be learned in one-half the time required for the old moss-covered systems.

Gattmann & Wilson,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

Fancy and Staple DRY GOODS

601 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Pacific Optical Institute

D. M. BISHOPP, Proprietor,

Has REMOVED TO 806 J STREET.

D. H. QUINN HATTER,

401 J Street, corner of Fourth.

HATS MADE TO ORDER. Old Hats Renovated to Equal New.

H. A. PETRALLI,

DEALER IN

Stoves, Metals and Tinware

716 K STREET.

PLUMBING, GASFITTING, AND ROOFING.
Jobbing a Specialty.

GARZOLI & GENIS,

FRUIT AND PRODUCE,

BUTTER, CHEESE, EGGS, ETC.

POULTRY, FISH AND OYSTERS.

CALIFORNIA MARKET,

Telephone 158.

712 K Street.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA—COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman, doing business under the firm name of Wm. M. Lyon & Co., insolvent debtors.

Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman having filed in this Court their petition, schedule and inventory in insolvency, from which it appears that they are insolvent debtors, the said Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman are hereby declared to be insolvent. The Sheriff of the county of Sacramento is hereby directed to take possession of all the estate, real and personal, of the said insolvent debtors, except such as may be by law exempt from execution, and of all their deeds, vouchers, books of account, and papers, and to keep the same safely until the appointment of an assignee of their estate. All persons are forbidden to pay any debts to the said insolvents or to deliver any property, belonging to such insolvents, to them or to any person, firm, corporation or association, for their use; and the said debtors are hereby forbidden to transfer or deliver any property, until the further order of this Court, except as herein ordered.

It is further ordered, that all the creditors of said debtors be and appear before the Hon. John W. Armstrong, Judge of the Superior Court of the county of Sacramento, in open Court, at the Court room of said Court, in the city and County of Sacramento, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock P. M., of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estate of said debtors.

It is further ordered, that the order be published in the THEMIS, a newspaper of general circulation, published in the city and county of Sacramento, as often as the said paper is published, before the day set for the meeting of creditors.

And it is further ordered, that in the meantime all proceedings against the said insolvents be stayed.

JOHN W. ARMSTRONG,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Insolvents.
Dated, January 10, 1890.

j11-w5

LA GRIPPE.

Interesting New York Letter from Miss Leila J. Lindley.—Holiday Season in a Great City.—Pleasure and Politics.

Why this coughing and this sneezing?
Why this blowing and this wheezing?
Why that tone and manner freezing?
Papa's got the Grippe.

Back and head and eyes are aching,
Brain feels heavy, knees are shaking,
Don't the children get a raking!
Mamma's got the Grippe.

What a squirming and a kicking,
Just as if a pin were sticking
In his tender flesh and pricking;
Baby's got the Grippe,

O, for some relief effective
From this cursed Grippe;
O, for some new fierce invective
To describe the Grippe.

When you've taken six or seven
Quinine pills, and need eleven
More; it makes you sigh for heaven,
Where there is no Grippe.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1890.

I hope it isn't too late to say Happy New Year, and if I am a little tardy, just lay it to the Russian invasion. Did you ever hear of anything like it? Have you got it in the Golden West? Perhaps not as yet, but never mind, it has gotten to the Rocky Mountains and you'll surely have it unless that high chair should stop this monstrous epidemic in its wild career. It has fallen share and share alike upon the just and the unjust—the good, bad and indifferent—all have fallen victims, upon the theory perhaps that none shall escape. The epidemic is no respecter of persons. Christmas day this Russian influenza was out in full force. Not much had been heard of it till then; but when Christmas trees were abandoned and Christmas dinners given up, then we were sure some epidemic was paying us a most unwelcome visit and adding an unsavory gift to our Christmas portion. And not only are we sufferers here in Gotham, but everywhere. Canada, too, is having a fearful dose, and isn't it

SOMETHING DREADFUL IN EUROPE?

Winter is such a bad time for colds, and people as a rule are careless. Thusly bright careers are ended in the twinkling of an eye as it were.

The N. Y. Times, a Democratic paper, is responsible for the following story: In the days of Tippecanoe and Tyler, too, William Henry Harrison died from the effects of an influenza cold, and Tyler took the Presidential chair. Being unpopular with his party, the prevailing epidemic was termed the "Tyler Grip." The wily Times suggests that the present unpopular invasion be called

THE HARRISON GRIP,

As it is a similar complaint to that which prevailed in early days when Harrison senior gave up the ghost. We doubt if the wearer of grandfather's hat would relish the idea.

In spite of the influenza, the world wags on, and the holiday season has not been otherwise than usual. The old year went out noisily and the new year came in jubilantly. It is a great thing in New York to go on New Year's Eve to old Trinity Church, way down on Broadway near Wall street, and hear the chimes ring out the old and ring in the new year. The effect in the cold night air is very fine, but the discordant shrieks of steamers, and whistles of ferry boats, tugs and elevated trains did not add to the beauty of the chimes. Unless you intended spending the night in the street it was just as well to make up your mind to listen to the music from a distance. The crowd was something fearful, and the small boy made night hideous with his tin horn. At dusk the crowd begins to gather at the old historical structure, and by midnight there is a

SURGING MASS OF PEOPLE

For squares around the old church. The din and clatter was something terrific, and we stood apart and listened to "The Blue Bells of Scotland," "Swanee River," "Yankee Doodle," "Home, Sweet Home," and half a dozen other melodies as they chimed out on the midnight air; and O, it was lovely. There is something so inspiring about the chiming of bells in the dead of night. About midway of the programme they played the tune, "Happy New Year," and we knew that eighteen hundred and eighty-nine had vanished and a new year was ushered in. We heard chiming and singing to our hearts' content, and it was all very beautiful. It has never before been my experience to hear the new year ushered in so noisily; but never before have I been in a great city like New York when New Year came around.

"And the night shall be filled with music,
And the cares that infest the day
Shall fold their tents like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away."

And so it was. All was calm and beautiful, and the bells chimed merrily; and truly it sounded rich and just to say

"HAPPY NEW YEAR."

How different things appear by comparison. Last New Year I spent in the national capital. The day was beautiful, and thousands thronged the streets on their way to the executive mansion. How thoroughly exhilarating was the scene. Music everywhere; national airs floating hither and thither, and a feeling of patriotism involuntarily took possession of you. There is no place in America on New Year's day like Washington. The splendor and brilliancy at the White House is wonderfully fascinating, and except that there is no dancing it seems like a grand ball. The bright costumes of the army and navy, and the national dress of the various countries, gives a peculiar charm to the scene; and we gaze and admire, and fully understand the fascination Washington has for the politician, and likewise for others as well. I went out here on New Year, and the place was more dead than alive. I wondered where the people all were. Never on Sunday have I seen it so quiet as it was here on Wednesday. How lonely it looked on Broadway, where usually humanity swarms. Fifth avenue, that is daily crowded with equipages, was quiet as the grave. Tall brown stone fronts, that on the outside look like gloom itself; except in the few parks, not a blade of grass to be seen; and to add to the desolation, Jupiter Pluvius opened his tear glands and wept copiously. Though outside, gloom and quiet reigned supreme, there was much brightness indoors.

AMONG THE FOUR HUNDRED

There was joy and mirth in anticipation of the grand ball that took place last night in the Metropolitan Opera House. Ward McAllister quite outdid himself, and the New Year's ball was a great success. Experience is a good teacher, and profiting by the results of the Centennial ball, the society leader made a greater success of his New Year's undertaking. The costumes of the attachés and flunkies are described as something grandiloquent, surpassing anything of previous occasions. Having seen the "400" in their boxes at the opera, I can well imagine what a brilliant scene it was at the opera house last night. The jewels gleaming and sparkling, and the bright toilets of the ladies, must have been a kaleidoscopic scene worth seeing. The morning papers are full of illustrations, and I have no doubt but that many a belle is put out to-day because of a poor picture in the paper. With all due respect to the journals, I am forced to remark that some of the attempted photos of people are perfect libels. It is one of the sights of New York to go to the opera house—we go, and are not disappointed. There is much to see; we see it, and are satisfied. New Year's day brought disaster afresh to the

ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANIES.

And now comes the question: if Edison can not quell the cause of the disturbance, who can? To-night eighteen thousand lamps will not burn. Gas once more lights the parks and streets, and while this great Gotham is not in darkness, there is not the brilliant illumination and bright effect that gladdened the eye before the wires went down. And now Edison says they are more dangerous under than above ground. The agitating question of the hour: shall Bedloe's Island and the Statue of Liberty belong to New York or New Jersey? The statue is usually shrouded in a dense fog, and to a casual observer, it would seem of very little consequence who owns it, for it is so often invisible.

This is the age of progression, and New York must have something new, so some one is responsible for a

NEW DANCE CALLED LA RÈVE,

A conglomeration made up of the polka, esmeralda, waltz and a dozen others, more or less, combined. There is scarcely anything new at the theaters. We have had our tickets for the "Gondoliers" over a week, and Tuesday night will be the initial performance. The Shakesperian performances draw crowded houses. Marie Wainright, Ada Rehan and Richard Mansfield all have worshippers. The former has made a decided hit as Viola in "Twelfth Night." Her sweet voice, beautiful figure and graceful, winning ways have won deserved applause, and pretty Marie Wainright has the hearts of capricious New Yorkers. Monday the "Brigands" returns to the Casino, and the present "Erminie" company go to Boston for a prolonged stay. Florence St. John is the latest attraction at the Broadway. Miss St. John has just come from Europe, and insists upon having her name pronounced Sinjun. Did you ever hear anything so absurdly ridiculous? So much for a fad. Agnes Booth, who has been a victim to la grippe, is once more out and has resumed her part of Aunt Jack at the Madison Square. Maud Harrison played the title role during Miss Booth's absence. The "Brass Monkey" gives way to the "Tin Soldier" at the Bijou on Monday night, and the "Wild Man from Borneo" will go into the interior to tax the memory and mystify others than New Yorkers. The D'Albert-Sarasate concerts have ended, though D'Albert will give piano recitals. Sarasate still lingers in Gotham, and seems satisfied with life at the Victoria Hotel. The German Opera Company are singing Wagner's operas, and having a hard time of it, too, for all the artists have suffered more or less from the influenza. Just now the "ciao" swarms with politicians. On Monday they will disappear, and wend their ways toward Albany. The snow has gone, and the

SPRING-LIKE WEATHER

Does not illustrate the stories of Eastern cold that we have heard of. But it will come. I have still a very distinct recollection of paying a penny to cross the frozen Hudson at Albany last February. What a time politicians are having here and everywhere. David B. Hill and Grover Cleveland are blissfully pursuing the even tenor of their respective ways, and the newspapers are having beautiful (?) times wrangling. Nellie Bly will be here before long, and somebody will win the ticket to Europe offered by the World for the one guessing the nearest to the number of days, hours and minutes the fair globe-trotter shall have consumed in her long journey.

If la grippe hasn't wandered westward, I hope you may be spared the infliction, but should the burden fall to your lot, take a generous dose of quinine and an antipyrine powder, and bide your time. We've all had it, and if you get it, our sympathies will be with you. Hoping this unwelcome Russian guest will be unable to climb the Rocky Mountains,

Very truly, LEILA J. LINDLEY.

Statistical Correspondent.

Several months ago John E. Butler, of Natoma Township of this county, was appointed by Secretary J. M. Rusk, of the Agricultural Department at Washington, as Statistical Correspondent to gather information relating to agricultural productions, increase of the growth of cattle, horses, sheep and other farm animals. In instructions of December 16, 1889, are asked estimates of the number and value of farm animals, and of flocks and herds of the range region. An estimate is asked of the number of acres required for the pasturage of 1,000 head of cattle or sheep; also the progress of agriculture and productions of the soil and profits of production. The object of this is general information, and it is expected that at an early date a thorough agricultural and statistical survey of this part of the country will be made for publication. In addition to the information required, the interest in fibres among farmers and others has led to an investigation of the fibre producing plants indigenous or introduced. The list of fibrous plants given upon which questions are asked, are: Ramie, or China grass, Indian jute, Indian mallow, okra, swamp rose mallow, bear grass, American alve, "pita," sisal hemp, "henequin," Spanish bayonet, Adam's needle, etc., Gucca species, and any other fibrous plant that may be known in this section. Mr. Butler has been engaged in making the required investigation for about a month, and has forwarded to Washington a report of a portion of his labor. Hon. William Johnston, of Richland, Thomas McConnell, of Elk Grove, and S. B. Moore, of Cosumnes, has been selected by Mr. Butler to assist in these statistical researches. To show how minute the investigation is, it is required to ascertain the percentage of sheep killed by coyotes.

From the partial report of John E. Butler, Statistical Correspondent, we glean the following facts relating to increase and price of horses, cattle, sheep and mules in this county, as contrasted with last year: Increase of horses, 105 per cent; average price per head under 1 year old, $20; average price of 2 year old, $30; average price of 2 to 3 year old, $40; average for 3 year old, $75. Mules increase over last year, 100 per cent; average price of 1 year old, $20; 1 to 2 year old, $25; 2 to 3 year old, $40; over 3 year old, $70. Milch cows, percentage of increase, 120; average price per head, $25. Oxen and other cattle, percentage of increase, 110; average price per head under one year old, $10; 1 to 2 year old, $15; 2 to 3 year old, $27.50; over 3 years old, $30. Sheep, percentage of increase, 110; average price per head under 1 year old, $1.75; over 1 year old, $2.50. About 2 per cent. of the sheep has been killed by dogs. Hogs, percentage of increase, 120; average price, $3 per head under 1 year old; over 1 year, $6 per head.

Course of Lectures.

Mrs. Florence Williams, who gave the entertaining lecture on the "Battle of Adrianople" last Monday evening, will give a course of six lectures, at Castle Hall, under the auspices of the Froebel Society. The first lecture of the course will be given next Monday evening; subject, "Looking Backward." Tickets for the course, three dollars.

The rainfall during the past week, according to Signal Service measurements, amounted to .26 of an inch, making 1.22 inches for this month and 18.21 inches for the season, as against 9.50 inches to an equal date last year.

The highest and lowest temperature for the past week was 45° and 29°; the lowest occurring on Wednesday morning, which was the coldest day since the 18th of January, 1888, when it was 25°. There were several heavy frosts the past week, and ice one-twentieth of an inch thick. The highest and lowest temperature for the same time last year was 61° and 36°.

It has snowed well down in the valleys. Sacramento has not yet been visited by the white cap.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Sheriff George C. McMullen is reported better this morning. The fears of danger have passed.

Governor Waterman has formulated a long report of the McComb prison investigation, exonerating the Warden.

John S. Barrett, an old time Sacramentan, died at San Francisco yesterday. He occupied several places of public trust in this city.

A woman named Mrs. Smith has been apprehended in a pretty wholesale system of forgery. She failed to realize anything upon her enterprise.

The citizens of Sacramento are called upon by the Improvement Association to meet at the Court-house on Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock, for the purpose of consultation on the question of street improvement. All public-spirited citizens should not fail to be present, and aid in devising ways and means to improve our streets.

On January 15th, at 10 o'clock, W. H. Sherburne auctioneer, will sell at the residence of Mrs. R. J. Burns, 610½ J street, Sacramento, an elegant lot of household furniture, consisting of parlor set, walnut marble top chamber set, marble top ash set, spring beds, clock, ornaments, etc.

Last Wednesday evening the Sacramento Stamm, U. O. R. M., held an election and installation of officers. A sumptuous banquet was partaken of, and the hours rolled pleasantly away. The following are the newly elected officers: First Chief, G. Boething; Second Chief, A. Bauer; Third Chief, G. Hunsiker. Priest, J. Gruhler; Recording Secretary, Charles Schuerley; Financial Secretary, D. Wilkins; Inside Sentinel, A. Neuer; Outside Sentinel, H. Schneider.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN, Formerly of Agricultural Park.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice, SACRAMENTO.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured

HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.

THE BOWSERS.

"Now for an evening of solid comfort!" said Mr. Bowser the other evening, as he fell into an easy chair and cut the pages of a magazine. "Mrs. Bowser, do you ever realize how blessed we are?"

"Yes, indeed."

"While others fall by the wayside, we are spared."

"While others quarrel and bicker, and seek the divorce courts, we love the stronger every day."

"Yes."

He got up and came over and kissed me, and upon returning to his chair seemed lost in reflection for a moment, then he continued:

"How curious life is! Do you remember the first day I saw you?"

"I shall never forget it!"

"I was on horseback, you remember, and you stood on the veranda of your father's house."

"You are a trifle mistaken, dear. The horse had thrown you off into a mud-hole, and I shall never forget the picture you presented as you approached the house. At first I took you for—"

"What! A horse threw me off?" he interrupted.

"Certainly. Don't you remember how father—"

"Mrs. Bowser, are you crazy? I was never thrown from a horse in my life. I'd like to see the horse which could throw me off! You must be thinking of some one else."

"Why, dear, you lost your watch in the mud, and father fished it out. Don't you remember how our negro Tom scraped the mud off of you?"

"No, not by a long shot! No nigger ever scraped me down. You must be thinking of that yellow-haired dude you used to go with."

We were both silent for a time, and I hoped it was the last of it. My experience, although dating back over a few years only, has satisfied me that nothing aggravates a husband more than to bring up the silly things he said and did during his courtship. It seems to be a raw spot with the majority of them after the honeymoon is over. But Mr. Bowser was not satisfied. After four or five minutes he broke out with:

"It's curious what a dunce a man can make out of himself with his eyes wide open."

"Yes."

"The idea that I should ever fall in love with you!"

"Or I with you!"

He glared at me over the top of his book, and there was another painful silence, broken at last by his saying:

"Well, I'll admit that I was in love; but I flatter myself that I didn't exhibit any school boy nonsense."

"You were just like any other young man in love, Mr. Bowser. They have always been that way, and always will be, and its no discredit to them."

"Do you mean to say I 'mooned' around like a calf?" he demanded.

"I don't know how calves 'moon,' as you term it, but you wanted to hold my hand, put your arm around me, and—"

"Hold your hand—never!"

"But you did!"

"Never—never!"

"Mr. Bowser, I have one of my old diaries. Wait until I get it."

"Not much! You can't produce no old diaries nor forged documents on me! I anticipated an evening of solid comfort, and you can see how it has turned out. Is it any wonder that so many husbands seek the saloons and gambling houses of an evening?"

At this moment the cook called me out to ask what she should prepare for breakfast, and a quarter of an hour later, when I returned to the back parlor, Mr. Bowser seemed deeply interested in his reading. I was glad of this, for I felt a bit conscience-stricken, but I scarcely got seated when he asked:

"Was Emma Davis here to-day?"

"Yes."

"How was she looking?"

"Very well. I wanted her to stay until you came home, but she had to go at four o'clock. She asked me to be remembered to you."

"Yes. I hope she has fully forgiven me."

"What for, Mr. Bowser?"

"You know."

"I haven't the least idea."

"Ha! ha! ha! What dissemblers women are. It was always a sore spot with you, though you would never admit it. How you do blush! Ha! ha! ha!"

"Mr. Bowser, what do you refer to?"

"Why, there's no doubt that the dear girl once fondly expected to be Mrs. Bowser."

"Nonsense!"

"What!"

"Nonsense!"

"You say that simply for revenge, but I know better. We were as good as engaged when I met you."

"Trash, sir! She was engaged to Jack Smith long before you ever saw her, and they are to be married as soon as his time is out in the navy. Don't flatter yourself that she has anything laid up against you."

"Mrs. Bowser," he began, as he got up and crossed his hands under his coat-tails, "do you know who you are talking to?"

"I do."

"You are talking to a man who could have been Emma Davis' husband two years ago."

"I will prove to the contrary."

"How?"

"By one of my old diaries."

"Diaries again! Always holding something over me. Now produce. I want to see one of those diaries you talk about."

I ran upstairs and got them out of Mr. Bowser's old boots, in which I kept them for safety. There were two of them, each for a separate year, and as I came down with them he looked puzzled, and stammered:

"Why—why, I—I—thought—I—"

"Yes, you thought you had burned them, but you were mistaken. The books you got hold of the other Sunday, when I was at church, were two old receipt books of no particular value. I found everything turned topsy-turvy, and I knew what you had been up to."

"Mrs. Bowser, I—"

"Wait! Let us look up the Emma Davis matter. Here it is. Under date of the 10th of July I write: 'Dear Emma was over today to congratulate me on my engagement, though she added that if Bowser was the last man on earth she would not have married him. She says that his hair reminds her of pumpkins, and that his legs seem to be badly warped. The dear girl also—'"

"Stop!" shouted Mr. Bowser, his face as white as death.

"Yes, dear, but you made a certain assertion. I want to disprove it. I—"

"Mrs. Bowser, I planned for an evening of solid comfort. You have made it an evening of torture and regret. If I never spend another evening at home, you alone will be to blame for it."

"But you—"

"Stop right here! This is the limit. The work is turned. To-morrow morning I go."

But he is with me yet, and I have no fear but that we shall live out our lives together. Detroit Free Press.

Twelve Million Machines

IN USE.

THE LIGHT RUNNING

DOMESTIC

Sewing Machine

Leads all others. Most Durable, Simplest, Best.

Every Agent claims the machines he sells the best, but talk is cheap. TIME is the only real test of genuine merit. During TWENTY-SIX YEARS of practical use the DOMESTIC has withstood this test. It stands to-day without a peer. Recommended by all White Goods Sewers, Dressmakers, Tailors and Manufacturers. Used by over 4,000 Families in Sacramento City. It is the only Sewing Machine with really Self-Setting Attachments. It costs you nothing to try it before you buy another. Sold on easy installments. Old machines taken in exchange.

Domestic Sewing Machine Co.

A. J. POMMER, Selling Agent,

Northwest corner Ninth and J streets, Sacramento.

R. DAVIS,

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

ANGLO-NEVADA ASSURANCE CORPORATION

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

FIRE.—Cash Capital, $2,000,000—MARINE.

Sacramento Branch.

No. 1018 SECOND STREET.

JOSEPH STEFFENS,

Manager.

HOWARD KIMBROUGH,

Local Agent.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J, SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS.

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

American Eagle Hotel

Corner Twelfth and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO.

This house has been put in first-class condition, and also newly furnished—everything being new from office to kitchen.

Board and Room, per Week, - - $5.00 to $7.00

MEALS, 25 CENTS.

Terms made with families.

GEO. W. NEWBERT, Proprietor.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEEPING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6. Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4. Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,

SACRAMENTO.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS.

Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street,

Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & AND & MECHANICAL & DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

—Gas and Steam Fitter.—

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SOUR MASH BOTTLED WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagle & Svensson, sole agents. Finest lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGLE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

D. McDUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.

Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.

L. RADLOFF,

LADIES' TAILOR,

218 POST STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER, BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.

General Printers,

Lithographers, Electrotypers, Engravers, Book

Binders, Blank Book Manufacturers.

—THE—

BEST APPOINTED PRINTING OFFICE

NORTH OF SAN FRANCISCO,

Competing with that City in Quality of Work and Prices.

—410—

J STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

STABLE TO LET.

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

B. Ruhl Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city. Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,
609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Excesses, etc.,
Positively Cured or No Pay.
No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated.
Mrs. O. C. Neilson, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

FOR SALE.

B L O C K

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

Friday.

Lee surrendered on Friday.
Moscow was burned on Friday.
Washington was born on Friday.
Shakespeare was born on Friday.
America was discovered on Friday.
Richmond was evacuated on Friday.
The Bastille was destroyed on Friday.
The Mayflower was landed on Friday.
Queen Victoria was married on Friday.
King Charles I. was beheaded on Friday.
Fort Sumter was bombarded on Friday.
Napoleon Bonaparte was born on Friday.
Julius Caesar was assassinated on Friday.
The battle of Marengo was fought on Friday.
The battle of Waterloo was fought on Friday.
The battle of Bunker Hill was fought on Friday.
Joan of Arc was burned at the stake on Friday.
The battle of New Orleans was fought on Friday.
The Declaration of Independence was signed on Friday.

A Connecticut "Kicker."

The Norwich Weekly People's Gazette, Gordon Wilcox, publisher and editor, is perhaps the most unique newspaper in New England. Its field is society and ethics, and for two years or more it has treated local questions practically with the same candor that distinguishes the Arizona Kicker theoretically. Its motto is: "Get there, Eli!" At the head is the publisher's notice:

THE PEOPLE'S WEEKLY GAZETTE
Is a Fifty-cent Reformed Newspaper

With pious tendencies—published at
No. 111 Water street, Norwich, by Wilcox, the Reformer,
And printed by Wilcox, the Printer.

The Gazette is published ostensibly for the public good, but in reality for the good of the publisher, and is conducted strictly on the European plan. If you don't see what you want, ask for it. If you don't get what you ask for, go without it. It recognizes no fixed orbit, but wanders along the milky way and among the fixed stars—and if any of the stars need fixing, they will be repaired at short notice, on reasonable terms, and guaranteed for one year. We claim the proud distinction of being the only pious journal in North America which is published solely "for revenue only," have no platform, pre-ambles, or by-laws, simply this trade-mark, and nothing more:

The Under Dog:—
May he ever be Right!
But Right or Wrong,
We shall always be with The Under Dog in the Fight!

Mr. Wilcox is one of the best job printers and designers in New England; he is a veteran of the civil war, and until recently was a member of the Central Baptist Church. The pastor of that church, the Rev. D. H. Taylor, recently resigned his pastorate thereof, and last Sunday he joined the Park Congregational Church. The latest issue of the Gazette criticizes Mr. Taylor's act in this original way:

"We think the Baptist Elder made a bad break when he made his last flop and landed in the Congregational Church. Of course we are willing to admit that he had a darned hard gang to deal with, but it came so sudden like—this throwing up of a good paying job just as the revival season was likely to strike on. Now, if for several months past he has been preaching one thing and believing another, why couldn't he have held out a few months longer, and broken the news to us gently? Was it the mistake of the Almighty or the Baptist Elder that he had been fooling away the last fifteen years of his life in the Baptist fold? Besides, it is liable to be twelve or fifteen years before the next congregation will have full confidence that he won't take another flop and land in the Episcopal or Catholic Church. And only to think that it was but a few weeks since that he was lying awake nights devising ways to build a $40,000 church for this same bogus denomination."

In a similar pleasant way Mr. Wilcox has been maintaining the freedom of the press for the last two years, and still his amicable relations with his fellow-men, like the quality of mercy, are not strained much.

An Ode to a Dog.

In Folsom a pet dog received a Christmas present of a new collar of silk, by mail, with the following poem accompanying:

"A DOGREL."

"Oh, doggy! doggy! since thou must Return to dust;
Before thou dost depart, depart,
My heart
Dost send thee this wee silken band
To make thee stand
On thy hind legs with joy.
Oh! boy.
Oh! doggy, dog, what will our grief assuage
When thou, some day, art made into sausage?
Oh! Dotty Dot!
When thou art in the pot,
We'll drop a nicker in the slot,
And try to draw another.

There is no Death.

There is no death; the common end
Of life and growth we comprehend
Is not of forms that cease, but mend;
It is not death, but change.

When wastes the seeds the sower sows,
Beneath the clog of winter snows,
The autumn harvest plainly shows
It is not death, but change.

When Science weighs and counts the strands
In economic Nature's hands,
She recollects them with her hands;
She shows no loss from change.

They do not die, our darling ones;
From falling leaves to burning suns,
Through worlds on worlds the legend runs
That death is not, but change.

When stills the heart and dims the eye,
And round our couch friends wonder why
The signs have ceased they knew us by—
It is not death, but change.—Butler.

Teddy O'Toole's Six "Bulls."

A merry evening party in an English country town were bantering poor Teddy O'Toole, the Irishman, about his countrymen being so famous for "bulls."

"By my faith," says Teddy, "you needn't talk about the same in this place; you're as fond of bulls as any people in the world, so you are."

"Nonsense," some of the party replied. "How do you make that out?"

"Why, sure, it's very aisy, it is; for in this paltry bit of a town you've got more public houses nor ever I seen wid the sign of the bull over the doors, so you have," said Teddy.

"Nay, Teddy, very few of these. But there's some of em, you know, in every town."

"Yes," said Teddy, obstinately sticking to his text, for he had laid a trap for his friends; "but you've no more nor your share, barrin' that you're so fond of bulls, as I say. I'm sure I can count half a dozen of 'em."

"Pooh, nonsense!" cried the party, "that'll never do. What'll you bet on that, Teddy? You're out there, my boy, depend upon it; we know the town as well as you, and what will you bet?"

"Indeed, my brave boys, I'll not bet at all. I'm no betthor, I assure. I should be worse if I wur."

This sally tickled his companions, and he proceeded: "But I'll be bound to count and name the six."

"Well, do, do," said several voices.

"Now, let me see—there's the Black Bull."

"Yes, that's one."

"Then, there's the Red Bull."

"That's two."

"And the White Bull."

"Come, that's three."

"And the Pied Bull."

"So there is; you'll not go much further."

"And then—there's—there's the Golden Bull in—what's-it street?"

"Well done, Teddy! There's five sure enough. But you're short yet."

"Aye," said the little letter carrier, who sat snirking in the corner, "and he will be short, for there isn't one more I know."

"And thin remember," continued Teddy, carefully pursuing his enumeration, "there's the dun cow."

At this a burst of laughter fairly shook the room, and busy hands kept the tables and glasses rattling, amidst boisterous cries of "A bull!"

Looking seriously at all around, Teddy deliberately asked:

"Do you call that a bull?"

"To be sure it's a bull!" exclaimed several voices at once.

"Then," said Teddy, "that's the sixth."

A Model Young Man.

Fussy old gentleman to a chance travelling companion:

"Have you any children, madam?"

"Yes, sir; a son."

"Ah, indeed! Does he smoke?"

"No, sir; he has never as much as touched a cigarette."

"So much the better, madame. The use of tobacco is a poisonous habit. Does he frequent the clubs?"

"He has never put his foot in one."

"Allow me to congratulate you. Does he come home late?"

"Never. He goes to bed directly after dinner."

"A model young man, madam—a model young man. How old is he?"

"Two months."

A few evenings ago, says the Washington Post, a Japanese student knocked all the old toppers about a prominent down-town hotel bar silly by drinking two glasses of beer, a bottle of ginger ale, a half pint of whiskey and a long pull of blackberry brandy at one sitting of about five minutes' duration. The Jap smacked his lips and looked as wistfully over his change as if he would like to repeat the dose, and finally left the bar. The bar-keeper said that was the second or third time he had performed that feat and that he thought it was not for effect on the occupants of the bar-room so much as it was for the effect on his stomach.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihans

418 J Street.

LAST CHANCE. We are closing out the last of our immense stock of Bonbonieres and are positively SELLING AT COST. Baskets in endless variety. Full line of Holiday Vienna Ware—Satin and Silk Trimmings. Elegant line of BISQUE WARE for Holiday Presents. MAGGIE'S HOT AND COLD BOUILLON.

ONLY FIRST-CLASS HOUSE IN THE CITY.

Simon Sturmer,

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,
No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR ^d COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

Joe Poheim the TAILOR

HAS NOW A

GENUINE CLEARANCE SALE.

Suits Made to Order from $20.

Pants Made to Order from $5.

Other Garments in Proportion.

This Sale is to CONTINUE FOR SIXTY DAYS ONLY. ~~NO~~ PERFECT FIT AND BEST OF WORK-MANSHIP GUARANTEED, OR NO SALE.

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South
Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

Klune & Floberg,

WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS
Agents for Rockford Watch Co.
NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON, The # Leading # Merchant # Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501 -- 507 K, cor. Fifth

Furniture

Bedding.

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING! LOW PRICES!

JAS. G. DAVIS

Furniture, Carpets and Wall Paper
411 AND 413 K STREET,
Branch, 315 K St. Send for Catalogue. Prices Lowest

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.

Southern Pacific Company

PACIFIC SYSTEM.
Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at
SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.25 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3.40 A
7.05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6.45 P
7.25 P	Knights Landing	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6.15 P
12-01 A	Central Atlantic Express Ogden and East	6.00 A
3-00 P	Oroville	10-30 A
3-00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10-30 A
10-40 A	Redding via Willows	4-00 P
6-15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7-25 P
6-50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8-35 P
3-05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11-40 A
4-00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10-40 P
*10-00 A	San Francisco via Steamer	26-00 A
11-25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2-25 P
6-50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11-40 P
7-05 P	San Jose	2-25 P
7-05 P	Santa Barbara	9-55 A
6-50 A	Santa Rosa	11-40 A
3-05 P	Santa Rosa	7-25 P
9-00 A	Stockton and Galt	6-45 P
7-05 P	Stockton and Galt	9-55 A
8-00 P	Truckee and Reno	6-25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno	6-00 A
12-05 P	Colfax	11-40 A
6-50 A	Vallejo	10-20 A
3-05 P	Vallejo	8-35 P
*12-15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10-25 A
*7-15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2-40 P
*5-20 P	Folsom	*6-50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning, P for afternoon.
A. S. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities
of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED K. COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento
that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers

and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

THEMIS

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, JANUARY 18, 1890.

No. 48.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

With all our endowment of reason and philosophy, with our advanced ideas and learning, there are few who do not, with all this, harbor the lurking influence and power of some inscrutable and invisible superstition. There is something within us that prompts a disregard of the teachings of philosophy, and brings us within the realms of phantoms. No matter how much we may try to persuade ourselves against the belief in the supernatural, we somehow find the insidious belief creeping upon us despite the power of reason. Some of the master minds of the world, both past and present, deemed, and deem it akin to infidelity—to atheism—to deny the existence of that indescribable influence that is constantly exercised upon and over the human mind. Lord Bacon pronounced three declinations from religion to be heresies, idolatry, and witchcraft. Shakespeare was a firm believer in the occult and supernatural. John Wesley said: "It is true, likewise, that the English in general, and, indeed, most of the men of learning in Europe, have given up all accounts of witches and apparitions as mere old wives' fables. I am sorry for it, and I willingly take this opportunity of entering my solemn protest against this violent compliment, which so many that believe the Bible pay to those who do not believe it. I owe them no such service. I take knowledge that these are at the bottom of the outcry which has been raised, and with such insolence spread throughout the land, in direct opposition, not only to the Bible, but to the sufferings of the wisest and best of men in all ages and nations. They all know, whether Christians know it or not, that the giving up of witchcraft is, in effect, giving up the Bible." Men laugh at the idea of their business or happiness being influenced by seeing the new moon over the left shoulder. Yet, where is our philosophy when these same alleged skeptics will always endeavor to court the invisible power that is said to accompany this act, by carefully glancing at his moonship in the favored position. There is a degree of belief in fate in our compositions, no matter how hard we may contend against it. There are periods of our existence which we call lucky, and then there are other times we designate as unlucky; in this we admit a superstition, even against our reason.

The religions of the world recognize an order of spiritual beings. Not, perhaps, in the light of our modern spiritualistic believers, but with regard to man's destiny, that destiny which we say shapes our ends. It is a pleasant thought to recur to the ancient beliefs, that each mortal has a guardian spirit that watches over that destiny. The so-called spirit manifestations of the present day are simply a mockery of the grand idea of that guardian genius that is thought presides over us, and which ultimately controls our destiny. How often does mankind commit his entire being and existence to fate, which is only another form of expressing the idea of the supernatural. Men have become great and powerful, with scarcely a knowledge of the power that has elevated them. A dozen, aye a thousand, men endowed with indomitable will and enterprise will fail; while another, less gifted, will, through some remarkable and inscrutable influence, become rich or great, or both. Is this fate? Is this the power developed by some friendly genius that aids his favorite? Possibly some of us are under the influence of an evil genius, which accounts for the failure to prosper, and are thus made subject to ill fate. The ancients, and many of the Oriental nations of the present day, believe that all diseases and pains which overtake the human body are ascribed to some unseen being or person wounding or gnawing within. Some of the savage tribes conclude that sickness and disease, and pain, emanates from some departed spirit, which returns to punish those whom they disliked in life. The Tasmanian ascribes a gnawing disease to his having unwittingly mentioned the name of a dead man, who, thus summoned, crept into his body and is consuming his liver. The Samoan thinks that the ancestral souls, who on occasions reveal themselves by talking through the voices of living members of the family, are the same beings who will take up their abode in the heads or stomachs of living men, and cause their illness and death. Are not many of our methods of treating disease, by administering noxious drugs, something on the order of the ancient and Oriental custom of exorcism. Sometimes mankind is prompted to this thought by the horribly bitter character of medicine given by doctors. The fury of madness is also thought to be a visitation by some demoniacal departed spirit, which seizes upon the mind of the living

A learned Jesuit, Delrio, wrote in the last century, that men may be dumb, epileptic or lunatic without being obsessed; but what the demons do is that, finding the disposition of epileptics suitable, they insinuate themselves into them; also, they attack lunatics, especially at full moon, when their brains are full of humors; or they introduce disease by stirring up black bile, sending blacks into the brain and cells of the nerves, and settling obstructions in the ears and eyes, to cause deafness and blindness. It is not only in heathen countries that this idea of good and evil spirits prevails, but in Europe, and, indeed, in America. Sir Walter Scott wrote a book on witchcraft. In Sweden, at stated periods each year, the people have a general purging of the land from evil spirits, and the welcoming of the good. In many parts of Germany, unseen witches are driven out on Walpurgis night with crack of whip and blast of horn. The statute of James I, of England, enacted that all persons invoking any evil spirit, or consulting, covenanting with, entertaining, employing, feeding, or rewarding any evil spirit, should be guilty of felony, and suffer death. This enactment was afterwards repealed; but it discloses that the idea of invisible powers existed among our ancestors. During the middle ages, the devil was believed to be everywhere. Sometimes we think there is still room for this belief, judging from the amount of devilment that is going on.

The streets of our city are in wretched condition, consequent on the protracted rain storms, and our citizens suffer the consequences. Trade from the country is stopped or greatly embarrassed. Farmers having hay or grain to haul to the city, necessarily stay at home, awaiting better roads. Outside the paved streets of our city, heavy loads cannot be hauled and empty wagons are moved with difficulty. The tracks of the street railroads in many places are so far above the grade that teams cannot cross them, and the earth on each side constitute beds of mud. The natural soil of the streets, though good for road beds in dry weather, is unfit for wet, and the shallow coating of gravel over the streets recently graded is insufficient to maintain the streets in good condition. The methods adopted by our city authorities in the recent grading done, might, it seems to us, be amended. The streets are plowed and rounded up in the middle, with soft earth and the thin coating of gravel laid on. When the winter rains come, and heavy hauling over such grade, in the soaked condition of the earth occurs, the earth spreads out, the street becomes flat, the gutters are filled, the ground is broken up, and the heavy outlays in thus grading the street comes to naught or its benefits amount to a minimum. The City Engineer and certain favored contractors get rich and our citizens find themselves poorer by the cost of the grading, and yet the streets are impassable, when the grading should be of some service. We have read with some interest the various suggestions for a remedy, none of which is without some points of weakness. Our city is unlike Washington or San Francisco. It is a dead level, and the natural earth cannot be used on the surface, nor can it be relied on as a support for a coating of gravel of say eight inches deep. In times of long rains it will become soaked and yielding, and whilst the action of Boss Shepherd can be noted by our citizens with profit, his system will need some changes to fit our conditions. THEMIS will on all subjects have opinions and make suggestions which, if found on consideration to be sound, may furnish a solution of the problem in question. Acting on this principle, we suggest:

First—That no top-dressing of gravel, intended for permanent road-bed, be placed on recently graded or plowed earth.

Second—That some material be placed on a graded street, of considerable thickness, sufficiently hard to form a good foundation for a final grade of gravel or macadam, and the street be so used for at least one year before the final coating be put on.

Third—That our city authorities enter into negotiations with the Southern Pacific Company, and if possible secure a right to run a train of cars from the State Prison ground, at Folsom, to the intersection of Sixth and H streets, on time to be prescribed by the train dispatcher; or trains might be brought into the city from the R street track, or the unused track on the northeast levee, without going through the railroad yards.

Fourth—Construct a train of ten dirt cars, and buy or hire an engine to haul the train, and perform the labor of loading and unloading by convict labor.

Fifth—Lay down temporary tracks, as becomes necessary, on the streets to be graded, hauling the cars to the place of unloading by horse-power.

Sixth—Place a proper amount of granite chips from the State Prison on the streets selected for grading, and use the street in that condition one or more years; and when the road-bed has become sufficiently stable, raise the streets to grade by the same material, to be finally dressed by a coating of asphaltum on certain streets to be selected by the city authorities.

The railroad company, we believe, if applied to for that purpose, will, on some equitable terms, allow a train, owned by the city and at its expense, to ply between the State Prison grounds and Sacramento. The wear of the rails would be the only expense to the company, and the yard work at the city might be done by the company at an agreed price. We do not profess to have perfected such plan in detail, but intend this as suggestion merely.

It is well the age of dueling has passed; its code was cruel, yet in some ways just. That it afforded a man an opportunity to resent an injury for which the law furnished no redress, was, perhaps, right. Abuses, however, occurred. This was exemplified in a reference made by a friend of ours in conversation, a few days ago, to a duel which occurred in 1854, in which a young man of talent was shot down and perished for the cause of another. The records on the mortality books of this city show that on March 10, 1854, Dr. J. P. Dickson died here, aged 30 years, from a gunshot wound. The facts were these: Philip W. Thomas, then District Attorney of Placer county, had used some language disrespectful to a Mr. Rutland, who at that time occupied a position in the State Treasurer's office. Out of that Rutland challenged Thomas to fight a duel, through Dr. Dickson, who at that time, though so young, occupied a prominent position in San Francisco. Thomas refused the challenge upon the ground that Rutland was not a gentleman, and under the barbarous code of honor that then existed, the innocent bearer of the message had to take up the fight. The result was that some seventy-five persons left Sacramento on the afternoon of March 9, 1854, and two men stood against each other in mortal combat—men who had, perhaps, never before met except once. The spot chosen for this duel was a beautiful grove about two miles from the city, across the American river, and everything was conducted in accordance with the strictest rules of the duello. While the preliminaries were being arranged, an officer rode up and commanded a cessation of hostilities. As a newspaper of that day said: "In order that the affair might be proceeded with, a trick was played off upon the officer, by two of the seconding parties assuming the position of principals, which led to the arrest of one of them, who was immediately taken to town." The duel then proceeded. Dickson's second won the choice of ground and the giving of the word. The distance was thirteen paces, and the weapons the same pistols that had been used a few months before in the duel in Yolo county between Carter and DeCoursey. At the word fire both weapons were discharged almost simultaneously, yet Thomas had slightly the advantage. His bullet struck Dickson just under the armpit, on the right side of the body, and passed almost through. The wounded man fell as if he had been stricken with a sledge. His bullet struck the earth within a few inches of his adversary's feet. The encounter ending, Thomas was taken by his friends into Placer county and Dickson to Sacramento, to die. On the 11th the dead man was buried, and of the matter the State Journal said: "The last testimony of respect to the departed was paid the remains of the unfortunate and lamented Dr. Dickson yesterday afternoon. His funeral took place from Jones' Hotel, on J street, at 4 o'clock. A very large number of persons attended, including the Masonic fraternity, members of the Senate and Assembly, several State officers, and many personal friends. The funeral procession was accompanied by a band of music, and Honorables J. W. Coffroth, C. A. Leake, C. S. Fairfax, B. F. Myres, A. C. Bradford and Captain Nye acted as pallbearers. The remains were buried in the old graveyard near Sutterville."

Thomas, a prominent actor in this tragedy and at that time, as has been stated, District Attorney of Placer county, was a member of the State Senate in 1861 and 1862. He was a lawyer of unquestionable ability, but there is no doubt the unfortunate affair, which brought about the death of Dickson in 1854, weighed upon him and hastened his own death. We instance this, in that the parties concerned have, so far as we know, passed away, and as a matter that might be said to concern the history of this State. While, as we have said, the code of honor was designed to redress wrongs that could not be reached through the ordinary tribunals, there have been cases where resort to it has been little less than murder. From the standpoint of one living in 1890 it cannot be understood why Dickson should have gone to his grave that he was a friend of Rutland, and that both he and Thomas should have been destroyed. This is not the only case of this character, though possibly the most extreme. In the duel between Broderick and Terry the challenging party was Perley. He was lost sight of in the fatal encounter. Broderick died; years later Terry fell from the piercing of a leaden pellet—what became of Perley we know not. The code of honor was misused. As we view it, it resulted in the sacrifice of lives that might have been useful, and those on whose account the fatal encounters were brought about escaped.

Austin Abbott, formerly the editor of the New York Daily Register, gives expression to the following splendid sentiment relating to the law and its interpretation:

"The time has gone by when the law can be learned like a matter of ancient history. The records of the past, whether ancient, mediæval, or modern, and whether in text-books, or annals, or reports, can show nothing more than the roots of the law. The law is not in the books. The book gives us what this judge or writer thinks about the law, or did think about it when he wrote. But the law is in the air—it is in the life and force of the community about us, as regulated by the ever-developing judgments of judicial power. The books give us approximate statements. But the original thought and first observation of the reader, must incessantly verify the test what has been written, and cannot help modifying these records of the past in their application to the controversies of the day."

SOME UNWRITTEN HISTORY.

Sacramento in Embryo—How Government was Established from Chaos.

PART VIII.

The United States acquired California by conquest and by treaty with the government of Mexico, dated at Guadalupe Hidalgo, February 2, 1848, ratified by our government May 16, 1848, and exchanged between the two governments (Ambrose H. Sevier and Nathan Clifford acting as commissioners for the United States, and Señor Don Luis de la Rosa, Minister of Relations, for Mexico) May 30, 1848, and proclaimed by the President of the United States July 4, 1848. Commodore Sloat raised the American flag at Monterey July 7, 1846, and formally took possession of California in the name of the United States. The subsequent struggle resulted in displacing Mexican rule throughout the Territory; and thus, by the law of nations, as well as by municipal law, it became a part of the United States as of that date. But, by the same law, the municipal regulations of Mexico, with certain modifications incident to the constitution of the conquering government, remained in force until superseded by political action of our government. From July 7, 1846, to July 4, 1848, chaos reigned supreme in Upper California. Pio Pico, as Mexican Governor, had no power he could enforce. The Territory was occupied by the military forces of the United States. The civil officers established under Mexican rule still assumed jurisdiction, but the administration of the law was irregular. Everybody was in doubt where the jurisdiction was to redress private or public wrongs. Under Mexican law, local officers were the departmental junta, prefects, sub-prefects, alcaldes, ajuntamientos, and justices of the peace. But in the Department of the North (Sutter's), dominated by persons of birth foreign to California, these offices were not filled, and Sutter assumed all jurisdiction, legislative, executive, and judicial; and exercised them, at first, with the consent of Governors Alvarado and Micheltorren, and in spite of Castro, Pico, and Vallejo, when they held political power in the Territory.

During the occupation of California by the military power of the United States, there was no telegraphic communication with Washington, and no express had been established. Near two months must elapse before an answer could come from the East to a letter. The revenue laws of the United States had not been by law extended to California; but the military Governor of California, with the tacit consent of the President, and of the Secretary of the Treasury, collected duties on imports, to the great dissatisfaction of business men.

On the 31st day of May, 1847, Richard B. Mason, Colonel in the United States army, was appointed military (and ex-officio civil) Governor of the Department of Upper California. He held his office until the 13th day of April, 1849, when he was superseded by B. Riley, Brevet Brigadier-General United States army; and he remained Governor until the 20th day of December, 1849, when he surrendered his civil functions to Peter H. Burnett, who had been elected Governor of California under its first constitution.

As early as April, 1848, it had become generally known that gold had been discovered in paying quantities on the American river and its tributaries. All industry other than gold seeking was at once paralyzed. The sailors deserted their ships in our harbors, the farmer his plow, the professional man his office, the mechanic his shop and tools, and even the politician, for the time being, gave up his hope for future preferment under the new empire of the Pacific, to secure a share of the precious metal. The furore was not confined to California, men from all parts of the civilized world caught the infection, and hastened towards the land which promised sudden immense wealth from brief effort. Sutter's fort being the point on the navigable waters of the Territory nearest the gold mines, necessarily at once became a place of importance. Sutter's contract with the Russian-American company required him to furnish, annually, a certain amount of wheat (see Part III of this series, THEMIS, June 23, 1889). In the winter of 1847-8 he had planted the usual quantity of wheat, with fair prospects of a crop. But Sutter's employes left him. The advance guard of immigrants, caring for nothing but gold seeking, found the fields unprotected. Their cattle strayed into them and destroyed the wheat; no harvesters could be found to gather any remaining, and the crop was a total loss. The fences were never repaired, the fields were never again cultivated, and the character of the settlement of New Helvetia was thenceforward changed. The fort itself was no longer a fortress. It became the headquarters for gold-seekers, and merchants dealing with them.

This altered condition of things was not suited to the character of Captain Sutter. Other men, skilled in affairs, came to the front, and the owner of the New Helvetia grant found himself unable to handle his large landed possessions, and he necessarily put his business in the hands of others, who did business according to common law method. It will be remembered that in the agreement made by Sutter with the Russian-American company December 12, 1841 (see Part III of this series, June 23, 1889), provided for the payment to that company of wheat, peas, beans, soap, lard, and tallow of the value of $20,000, and for $10,000 in cash the fourth year after the date, all overdue December 13, 1845. Sutter had failed in the payment of the produce in part, and the cash payment had been overdue three years on December 13, 1848. The influx of immigrants in 1848 gave the rancho New Helvetia a prospective value beyond the wildest hopes of its owner. His agreement with the Russian American company contained a provision that "although the Russian-American company are fully convinced of the punctual payment on the part of Sutter, nevertheless, to guard against unforeseen circumstances, and to insure the payment of the sum mentioned, his establishment on the Sacramento river, called New Helvetia, located with the consent and by the lawful acts of the government of California, with all goods, movable and immovable, shall be considered as a guarantee." The Russian-American company were pressing for payment. Sutter had not delivered all the produce as he agreed, and he was in default in the whole $10,000 cash payment and interest; and under advice of business agents and his attorneys, on October 14, 1848, he conveyed all his landed estate to his son, John A. Sutter, Jr., to prevent law proceedings which might result in transferring them to a foreign company. At the same time, and as a part of the same arrangement, John A. Sutter, Jr., made Peter H. Burnett his business agent, and authorized him to make sales of the land in Sacramento city, including the fort; and when sufficient money was raised, to settle with the Russian-American company, and pay such balance as should be found due. At the same time it was determined that a city should be laid out, and the lots placed on the market for sale. John A. Sutter, Jr., had become the proprietor, and he and Samuel Brannan were the principal projectors, with Peter H. Burnett as legal adviser and general agent. They employed Captain Wm. H. Warner, United States army, civil engineer, and Gen. W. T. Sherman as consulting engineer, to plan and survey the city; and they completed the plan and made such survey of lots as seemed necessary, completing the survey early in 1849. They took the left bank of the Sacramento river from I to R as a base, and numbering the street at the river one, they extended it to 31st—each street eighty feet wide. Streets at right angles to the streets noted by number, were laid out and designated by letters from A to Y. Course, N. 18° 45' E.—each eighty feet wide, except M street, which is one hundred feet wide. The blocks bounded by these streets were laid out 320 feet from east to west, and 340 feet from north to south, 20 feet of which was laid out for an alley. The lots were numbered, commencing at the northwest corner, numbering east along the streets designated by letters, 1, 2, 3, 4, on north side of alleys, then numbering west on south side of alley, 5, 6, 7 and 8; each lot 80x160. Two exceptions are to be noted. 1st, the blocks between Front and Second streets commence at the northwest corner of the blocks and number south, on the west side of the blocks, 1, 2, 3, 4, then number north on Second street 1, 2, 3, 4. The alleys laid out between those lots extend from north to south, 20 feet wide; each lot 85x150 feet. 2d, the blocks laid out between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets each contain ten lots. The practical survey of lots in 1848 included those in the vicinity of the fort and at the embarcadero, at the foot of I street, with connections as far south as M street. Samuel Brannan furnished the money to make these surveys, and on January 4, 1849, the proprietors of the city published a notice in the Alla California, that a public auction of town lots in the new town of Sacramento, would take place at Sutter's fort, in said town, on Monday, the 8th day of January 1849: "The advantages this sale now offers to merchants or mechanics wishing a residence near the mines, are too evident for comment. The sale also includes lots lying at Sutter's embarcadero, which is included in the map of the new town." It stated that the map could be seen at Major P. B. Reading's office, at San Francisco, or at the office of the proprietors, in Sutter's fort. The projectors had no idea yet of the importance of the place, and they still called it a town. The sale advertised took place, a large number of lots were sold, and book one of the Schoolcraft records contains copies of the deeds. From this point the city of Sacramento can be seen, and its prosperity or adversity noted, though for some time the political action of its inhabitants was inextricably mixed with other sections, in a mutual effort at self government.

A Beautiful Legend.

It is said that on one of the weary nights when the Virgin Mother and her Holy Son were flying with St. Joseph into a strange land, shivering with fatigue and cold, Mary could go no further, but sank down upon the sand of the desert, with the Divine Child still clasped in her arms. At last St. Joseph discerned a cleft between two large rocks, which would be some shelter from the cold night wind; and having laid a mantle upon the ground, he placed the Virgin and Jesus there to rest. At the foot of the rock a little flower was blooming—a lowly, humble thing, that scarce a traveler would have heeded—a flower of a bright red hue. But that night, during the silence and stillness, when the only watchers were the gleaming stars in heaven above, Mary rose to give nourishment to Jesus, and as she nursed Him, singing a low, sweet hymn to soothe Him to sleep, one drop of her milk fell on the lowly little flower which bloomed at her feet. From that moment its hue fled forever, but it was fairer and lovelier by far, for the little thistle had grown white as snow; and has so remained to this very hour, in remembrance of the night when Mary and the infant Jesus rested so very near it.—Notes and Queries.

Cocaine Hallucinations.

MM. Magnan and Saurey report three cases of hallucination due to the cocaine habit. One patient was always scraping his tongue, and thought he was extracting from it little black worms; and the other made his skin raw in the endeavor to draw out cholera microbes; and a third, a physician, is perpetually looking for cocaine crystals under his skin. Two patients suffered from epileptic attacks, and a third from cramps. It is important to notice that two of these patients were persons who had resorted to cocaine in the hope of being able to cure themselves thereby of the morphine habit, an expectation which had been disappointed. For more than a year they had injected from one to two grains of cocaine under the skin; without, however, giving up the morphine injections, which were only reduced in quantity. The possibility of substituting cocaine in the endeavor to cure morphomania is a danger, therefore, which must be carefully held in view.—British Medical Journal.

St. Paul's Ungallant Beaux.

Last winter, so the story is whispered around the circles of upper-tendom, a reception was held at the home of one of society's queens. When gentlemen in clothes of steel-pen cut, and ladies clad in fashion's triumphs, were courtesying and bowing to the well-marked measures of a quadrille, lo, a garter was seen lying upon the floor among the feet of the light-hearted dancers. Of course, some Chevalier Bayard of the ball-room stooped and picked up the dainty circlet, to keep until claimed by its fair owner; remembering how a king bent down to regain the countess of Salisbury's garter, and made it the badge of England highest order. But no, they politely stared, while ladies blushed, until the hostess, discovering the cause, sent a domestic, who removed the shocking article upon a dustpan. Ye gods, such is the nineteenth century that the young men would hold themselves polluted by the touch of a silken circlet. Once men went forth to battle, trusting in the the talisman of a little ribbon, or fragment of a maiden's samite dress.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

The "Water American."

Benjamin Franklin, who was born January 6, 1706, was a frugal and temperate man. That he had no use for beer, to say nothing of stronger liquor, was apparent from his practice in a London printing office where he was employed. "I drank only water," he says somewhere in his writings; "the other workmen, nearly fifty in number, were great drinkers of beer. On one occasion I carried up and down stairs a large form of types in each hand, when others carried but one in both hands. They wondered to see that the 'Water American,' as they called me, was stronger than themselves, who drank strong beer. We had an ale-house boy, who always attended in the house to supply the workmen. My companion at the press drank every day a pint before breakfast, a pint at breakfast with his bread and cheese, a pint between breakfast and dinner, a pint in the afternoon about 6 o'clock, and another when he had done with his day's work. I thought it a detestable custom; but it was necessary, he supposed, to drink strong beer that he might be strong to labor. I endeavored to convince him that the bodily strength afforded could only be in proportion to the grain or flour of the barley dissolved in the water of which it was made; that there was more flour in a pennyworth of bread, and, therefore, if he could eat that with a pint of water it would give him more strength than a quart of beer. He drank on, however, and had four or five shilling to pay out of his wages every Saturday night for the vile liquor, an expense I was free from. And thus these poor devils always kept themselves under.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

A ludicrous parody on Down Went McGinty has been written by Gus Williams, entitled Up Went Guggenheimer.

Lawrence Barrett is recovering his health. He goes to Europe shortly for a lengthened vacation, and will return to this country in time for next season's work.

Guonod is now in Paris, devoting himself to the composition of sacred music. His "Mirella" is to be revived there with certain improvements by the master.

The scenery for The Prince and the Pauper dramatization of Mark Twain's story is being prepared by Matt Morgan, Homer G. Emens, Maeder, King and Schaeffer. The first presentation of the piece will occur at the Broadway Theater, January 20th.

Probably the largest order ever given for photographs was that of Miss Lillian Lewis, who ordered one million carte de visites recently. They represent her in various characters, and are used as an advertisement, and as souvenirs at matinee performances.

There is one theatrical affliction we have been spared during the management of Mr. Hall, and that is the benefit nuisance. There has not been a benefit under his management, and for this the public ought to feel duly grateful. An occasional testimonial is all right, but these wholesale benefits are a nuisance.

Stuart Robson says that in all his traveling experiences, the most diffident and pessimistic dramatic writers he has found to be in small towns. He said that in conversation with him, one of them would say, "Yes, Mr. Robson, The Henrietta has its strong points, and may be all right for Chicago or New York; but, you see, Dubuque is peculiar." Another class of embryo Nym Crinkles would say that The Henrietta was a good play, but it hardly came up in interest to Across the Continent, and others of that ilk.

Think of it! Steele Mackaye, although yet a young man, less than forty-five, has written and produced twenty different plays, nearly every one of which has run from fifty to a hundred nights in one locality. Besides this vast amount of work he has built three theaters and opened them with his own productions. Yet not more than one theatergoer in a thousand who will look at his wonderful play of Paul Kaurav, and his still more remarkable one of An Arrant Knave, which he recently wrote for Stuart Robson, can recall three plays from this remarkable man's pen.

Eduard Strauss and his Vienna orchestra are coming to America. The arrangement has finally been consummated since Mr. Wolff's arrival in this country, although it has been pending for some time. Mr. Blakely, who is to be the American manager of the orchestra, visited Vienna several times for the purpose of bringing about the engagement. The orchestra will arrive in May and make a tour of the entire country, probably including California. The popular music of the Strausses (father and sons), which has been danced for generations in nearly every civilized family on the globe, will receive a new color and glow as interpreted by handsome Eddy.

There are two most abominable habits of our theatre-goers. The first is in coming in late, so that the curtain does not go up until fifteen or twenty minutes after eight o'clock, sometimes later. There is no possible excuse for this delay. Another reprehensible practice is in making a commotion in leaving the theater before the play is concluded. When the play draws near the close, there are many people who start for the door with a rush, thus depriving the balance of the audience from witnessing a proper conclusion of the act. This custom shows ill-breeding on the part of the audience which starts the stampede. We might add another nuisance in this: Between acts many of those who want to see a man outside loiter until the curtain goes up and then come stamping in, to the annoyance of most of the audience. This should also be stopped.

Ibsen, the Norwegian dramatist, does not live at Gossensass, on the Brenner, as Boston would fain have the world believe. He spends his summers there, but his winter home is Munich, and a Munich correspondent says that he takes his breakfast daily at the Café Maximilian, and studies the journals through the meal. So orderly are his habits that he can neither feed nor read if he finds any stranger occupying his customary corner. The great dramatist's rights as a "stammingast" of the house are recognized by the oberkellner, who generally contrives to keep Ibsen's seat and table vacant until he appears. If he chances to be late, he looks in at the door to see whether his place is free. When any intruder has taken possession of it, the poet marches up and down in front of the café, pausing every now and then to peep through the window, and gesticulating fiercely at the innocent invader. Anybody who has seen Ibsen, or even a good photograph of the man, can imagine the grim ferocity which he can impart to his countenance. This piece of stage-play is nearly always successful. The intruder asks the waiter who the remarkable old gentleman is, and why he patrols before the café and keeps looking in. "That is the poet, Ibsen," is the usual reply; "he is accustomed to sit here, and is waiting until the place is vacant." This explanation, upon which Ibsen reckons, almost invariably ends in a courteous and respectful movement of the innocent usurper to some other seat.

Book Chat.

The voice of nature loudly cries—
And many a message from the skies—
That something in us never dies;
That on this frail, uncertain state,
Hang matters of eternal weight;
That future life, in worlds unknown,
Must take its hue from this alone;
Whether as heavenly glory bright,
Or dark as misery's woeful night.
Since then, my honored, first of friends,
On this poor being all depends,
Let us the moment now employ,
And live as those who never die.

We are in receipt of the New York Clipper Annual for 1890. This little volume contains the theatrical, musical and sporting chronologies for the year last past. There is a list of American and foreign deaths in the amusement professions. A general view of aquatic and athletic performances, together with records of the fastest time on the track, are given. In fact, it is a full report of all the sporting events of the year. It is valuable for a book of reference in theatrical and sporting events.

The Vatican library at Rome, celebrated for its thousands of valuable books, has a copy of the Hebrew Bible, for which Pope Pius Julius, in 1512, refused $125,000. The world-be purchasers were a syndicate of rich Jews. They did not exactly offer Julius $125,000 for his biblical treasure; they simply told him they would give its weight in gold. As the book weighs 325 pounds, the offer they made is equivalent to the figures given.

A bibliognoste is one learned in title pages and colophons, and in editions; when and where printed, the presses where printed, and all the minutiae of a book. A bibliographe is a describer of books and other literary arrangements. A bibliomane is an indiscriminate accumulator, who blunders faster than he buys. A bibliophile, the lover of books, is the only one in the class who appears to read them for his own pleasure. A bibliotaphic buries his books by burying them under lock and keys, or framing them in glass cases.

The early conductors of the press were in the habit of affixing to the end of the volumes they printed some device, or couplet, concerning the book, with the names of the printer and proof reader added. The following example is from Bocard's edition of the "Pragmatic Sanction," Paris, 1507:

"May this volume continue in motion,
And its pages each day be unfurled,
Till an ant to the dregs drinks the ocean,
Or a tortoise has crawled 'round the world."

Professional Chat.

Old lawyer—I cannot take your case. Circumstantial evidence is so strong against you that it will be impossible to prove your innocence. Prisoner—But I am not innocent. I am guilty. Old lawyer—Oh! Then I may clear you.

Speaking before a meeting of the Methodist ministers, Bishop Fowler told of a new heathen temple in the northern part of Japan. It is of enormous size, and the timbers were hauled to and placed in their present position by ropes made from the hair of the women of the province. An edict went forth calling for the long hair of the women, and enough was obtained to make two monster ropes—one 17 inches in circumference and 1,400 feet long, and the other to 11 inches around and 2,000 feet long.

There never was a cleverer play upon words than that made by the famous English barrister, Erskine, before he sat upon the bench with the title of Lord Erskine. He was associated with the noted lawyer Garrow in the trial of a case. A gayly bedecked vixen of the Flora McFlimsey stripe was on the witness stand, and the point Garrow was trying to bring out was that a proposition had been made to settle the difficulty on a financial basis. The witness would not admit this, and the lawyer put question after question to her without avail. Erskine wrote out these few lines on a slip of paper, which he passed to his associate:

Garrow, forbear, that tough old jade
Can never prove a tender made.

Some clients when they retain an attorney imagine that he must do their bidding and defend them in all things, whether pertinent to the case or not. This reminds us of the eminent Irish barrister Thomas O'Meara, who was employed by a somewhat parsimonious client, who was a candidate for a member of the House of Commons. An opposing candidate called his client "a renegade in religion, a dishonest politician, and disloyal to his country as to his creed." "My God, Mr. O'Meara! do you hear that?" asked the would-be member, quivering with rage. "Every word of it," replied O'Meara. "Sure I'm not stone deaf." "And don't you mean to take notice of it?" "Most certainly not. Your fee, sir, was not a fighting fee." That is the way with most clients; they expect an attorney to do the fighting without a fighting fee. Occasionally we have attorneys who think their employment goes to the extent of doing the fighting.

There is an old story afloat in Washington of two Senators from a new State who decided the Senatorial terms by a wager as to who could drink the most wine at a dinner party. The Senator who was first laid on the table, or under it, was to get the short term. In another case the two new Senators drew straws, the one getting the longest straw taking the longest term. In two instances they are known to have tossed half-dollars, the heads winner, the tails loser. The usual practice is to throw dice—just as the boys sometimes do for the drinks. This is regarded as the most dignified method, and consequently better adapted to Senatorial customs. A more recent innovation requires the allotment to be done under the supervision of the Clerk of the Senate and the presence of that dignified body. Another rule is to defer the allotment of terms to a late period in the session, in order to put more important business out of the way, and at the same time keep the new Senators in a good humor during a busy part of the session. It was several months after taking their seats before Minnesota's Senators knew who was to get the long term. Senator Rice was indifferent about it, while Senator Shields evinced a great deal of anxiety to have it. But the prize is not always for the eager, and so it was in this instance.

Are We Correct?

While on this subject of streets of the city, we desire to call attention to the additional cost of grading our streets, by reason of excessive charges of the Engineer. Our city fathers have allowed the Engineer to fix his own compensation for his work, and property-owners have allowed such claims to go unchallenged, because it was easier to pay than resist payment. Chapter XIX. of Ordinance No. 17, fixing the compensation of the City Engineer, provides (Sec. 3) that "he (City Surveyor) shall receive as compensation for his services the sum of six dollars per day when actually and necessarily employed in the service of the city."

The Vrooman Act (Sec. 3, Stats. 1885, p. 149) provides that the City Engineer shall furnish plans and specifications. Section 6 provides that the Superintendent of the Streets shall have control of the work and supervise the same, and the same shall be done to his satisfaction. Subdivision 1 of Sec. 7 provides that the expenses shall be assessed upon the lots and lands fronting on the improvements. The better opinion seems to be that the Engineer is under employment of the city in making his plans and specifications and in superintending the work. In this he is deemed to assist the Street Commissioner. As to his compensation, he stands in the same situation as the Street Commissioner. The word "expenses" in the Act means such costs as are or may be let to a contractor—not the payment of a city officer whose action is controlled by the City Trustees, and whose compensation is fixed by a city ordinance. If our views are correct as to the law, then it follows that our City Trustees have heretofore allowed our City Engineer to levy on the lot owners a very heavy tax, which should be refunded to them either by the Surveyor himself or by the city. The above was prompted by some questions propounded to us by several leading tax-payers in the matter of street improvements, and we give it as the result of an investigation of the subject matter.

NOTES.

In Department Four of the Superior Court of San Francisco, Judge Hoge presiding, we notice cases of Bacon and Brown. Now, bacon browned a little is certainly a very appropriate subject matter, if not an issue in a court presided over by Hoge.

When a woman succeeds in acquiring the true art of giving a good dinner, she becomes the queen of the art of keeping her husband at home. There is nothing that comes nearer making man a woman's slave than a good dinner provided under her own hands. Suppose some of our young, and old too, married ladies try the experiment.

There are many of our citizens going around with very red noses, who charge them to the account of the prevailing epidemic. This is a very handy excuse. Mark Twain once wrote, while crossing the ocean, that a fellow could get as drunk as he pleased and pass it off as sea-sickness. We think our friends are using the grip as an excuse.

Portugal would be a good place for some of our surplus doctors. After King Luis died, a short time ago, one physician was paid $30,000 for eighteen consultations, another $15,000 for ten visits, and a third $18,000 for eighteen visits. It is not reported how much the undertaker received. We should not now ever complain of our doctors' bills.

The great literary event in preparing a new novel will devolve upon Sacramento. The people here allow the imagination to wander and paint the glowing progress made and being made in this city, until it is time to put the fiction in book form, and call it the Great Western, or Pacific Coast Novel. At meetings and with strangers we paint ourselves in rainbows, only to culminate in a less radiant spectacle. Vide our streets and business thoroughfares.

An Indiana new light preacher has been quite ill. At times he is delirious, and when in this condition it takes four men to hold him. He imagines that he is the great prize-fighter Sullivan, and at the approach of a stranger, bounces out of bed to engage in an encounter. His friends tie a towel around his waist and tell him it is the prize belt, in order to quiet him. This must be muscular Christianity in real earnest. Well, are not preachers ex-pounders, even when not in delirium?

A Chicago baseball umpire sang "McGinty" and died. If all who attempted to either sing it, or perpetrate the senseless joke compiled with the name, would die, the world would be the gainer.

If it is due to the prevalence of la grippe that the recent resentments in this city and San Francisco of unwarrantable attacks by newspapers on citizens, we must welcome la grippe. It is to be hoped time will come when men who follow the profession of journalism will understand that the people generally have little sympathy with the journalist who is thrashed because he assumes the privilege to abuse other people—a privilege not claimed by ordinary mortals.

In an eastern city the learned medical fraternity had a case of membranous croup which they pronounced fatal, and gave up the patient. A lot of old women gathered about the child after the medics left, wrapped him up in flannels, and rubbed his head and throat with goose-grease, and forced down his throat a dose of goose-grease, mixed with vinegar. In a few moments he threw up a large portion of the mucus and broke up the clogging matter in the throat. The child went to sleep, and the next day was playing upon the street with his mates.

The presence of the young sea lion in China slough is at last explained. Wm. Davis, who has been trying to unravel the mysteries of local politics, when apprised of the presence of the lion, excitedly remarked: "It's but another of the schemes to carry the first ward. The chances are they have colonized the animal, and intend to vote him at the primary down town. If this thing is not stopped, the first thing you know they will be putting cots under the Third street bridge to colonize the bums. I do not blame the lion so much as I do the men who are at the bottom of this thing."

There are some of the most intolerable bigots among the so-called ministers of the gospel. On Thursday last came a telegram from Montreal, that one Rev. Dr. Douglass, President of the Wesleyan Methodist College, had denounced the drama and the literature of Swinburne, Ouida, and Braddon. His invective was directed particularly to Camille, which he declared indecent and immoral. Now, this narrow-minded individual lost sight of the Bible, Shakespeare, Swift, Fielding, Goldsmith, and, in fact, all the great writers and dramatists of the world, when he proclaims that the reading of the pictures of the dark side of human life are at war with virtue. It must be the class of virtue with which this reverend gentleman is endowed that can be influenced by reading the descriptions of the true pictures of life. He might as well condemn the daily papers for giving accounts of the events of each day, which in many instances might seem revolting, but such historical facts cannot corrupt good morals. It is only the depraved that can see and fear anything of corrupting influence in facts. When such men denounce the drama and current literature, because the true inwardness of life is portrayed, either upon the stage or in the novel or poem, we are impressed with the idea that there must be some lurking inward depravity at the source of the demonstration.

Political.

As we intimated in our last issue, the Republican primary and municipal election in the spring will be characterized by unusual life. The fight will be concentrated in the first ward particularly, and will be shown more prominently at the primary. It will be between the two elements of the party—the down and the up-town—and will have bearing particularly on the question which will be able to elect central committeemen, a matter of very little interest to citizens generally. What the people care about is the composition of the ticket. The leaders of these factions fully realize that their only hope for success will be in nominating for delegates to the convention, gentlemen of character. The result will be that some of our business men, who have not heretofore had political honors thrust upon them, will find themselves the unanimous choice of one or the other caucus for delegate to the municipal convention, and the matter of their election will be the subject of a very vigorous fight. The situation will have its ridiculous features; it will, however, result in good, for it means that the convention will be composed, in any event, of delegates who will be unpledged. As the people are fully aware, a considerable amount of dirty political work has been done, and can reasonably be expected. The police authorities will be in a position, if anything approaching common sense will be exercised, in view of the knowledge they now must have, to do some pretty good work; and a few discreet arrests will, we venture, result in salutary convictions. It is to be hoped that throughout the city, the rigid election laws of this State will be enforced with the utmost strictness, and that there will be no repetition of the disgraceful acts that have characterized our primaries and elections in the last few years. The events that have occurred in the criminal courts very plainly evidence that our penal laws have something of potency when brought to bear in cases of frauds upon the franchise. It is much better for the authorities and the people to make advance preparation, than to wait until the crime has been committed. In our last number we called attention to the fact that questionable registrations were being made. It is a matter of some little significance that, since then, parties who had engaged in that line of business have found it more to their advantage to engage in more legitimate enterprises.

River Convention.

The River Convention called by the Board of Trade of this city, looking to the improvement of our rivers, and securing Congressional action to that end, met here yesterday P. E. Platt was chosen President, and W. G. Ellis, Jr., Secretary. A committee on resolutions was appointed, composed of Elwood Bruner, E. K. Alsip, John H. Jewett, George Ohlleyer, W. Stairley, A. H. Rose, C. H. Porter, W. T. V. Schenck, H. J. Corcoran, James Miller, and G. M. Dixon. Resolutions were reported and adopted, very fully covering the grounds. An executive committee was appointed, consisting of Dr. G. M. Dixon, Mayor E. J. Gregory, Will S. Green, H. J. Corcoran, A. R. Briggs, P. E. Platt, and Marsden Manson. The convention then adjourned, to meet at the call of the President. The executive committee is expected to formulate a memorial to Congress, to be immediately forwarded.

A Report Contradicted.

A report was in circulation yesterday that the sea lion had made his way from China slough to the Sacramento river through the Toughey pipe that was laid by the city authorities to connect those two grand bodies of water. It is but due to our citizens that such a report be denied. While we are willing to recognize in this particular seal an unusual degree of intelligence, and to commend him for being the first to create any attraction for China slough, we cannot admit him to be able to discover anything useful as resulting from the ordinary contract made by the city, when our own citizens, of years of residence and observation here, have never yet been able to grasp it. As a matter of fact, the seal did escape, but to be captured. Last night he wandered in the railroad yard, was captured, and now occupies a secure box at the market of his owner.

General Vallejo.

The dispatches this morning announce the death of General Mariano G. Vallejo at his home in Sonoma. The General is a native of Monterey, this State, and under Mexican rule held many important civil and military positions. In 1846, he was commandant of the fortress at Sonoma, and was captured by the Bear Flag party, carried to Sutter's fort and there for a time kept prisoner. The General, however, was always a warm friend of the United States, was a member of the first constitutional convention and of the first State Senate.

Sad Indeed.

It is with sincere regret that we chronicle the death of Mrs. Joseph W. Hughes (nee Georgie Griswold), which occurred yesterday. But two months ago we announced her marriage. She was a young lady who had been reared in Sacramento, and was highly esteemed. We extend to the husband and relatives our sympathy for this stroke, and, with other friends, recognize it as one of extreme severity.

Love and Murder.

For many months last past Oliver Santiago Garcia has been infatuated with a young tamale girl named Virginia Vasquez. From friends of the parties we learn that Garcia has pressed his suit very ardently, and has been repulsed so often that he had become desperate. This morning at an early hour Garcia met the girl, and being again refused, he deliberately shot her in the neck, making an ugly but not dangerous wound. He then inflicted upon himself a mortal wound. At this writing he is still alive, but no possible chance for his recovery. Garcia is a young man, not over 22 or 23 years of age, and has been employed by Antone Mendez, but so great has been his infatuation of the tamale girl that he has neglected his business, and was in consequence discharged. Virginia Vasquez is a beautiful young woman and has many admirers, which, perhaps, accounts for her indifference to Garcia's suit. She is a Mexican by birth, and about 21 years of age. Garcia is a native Californian, of Chilean parentage.

Fine Table Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Producers of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

Short-Hand ECLECTIC!

The system taught by all the leading Colleges on the Coast, viz: Herald's and the Pacific, of San Francisco; Woodbury's, of Los Angeles; DePue's, of Oakland; Garden City, of San Jose; Stockton College, of Stockton, and

Bainbridge College of Sacramento

Why? Because it can be learned in one-half the time required for the old moss-covered systems.

Gattmann & Wilson,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

Fancy and Staple DRY GOODS

601 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Pacific Optical Institute

D. M. BISHOPP, Proprietor,

Has REMOVED TO 806 J STREET.

D. H. QUINN HATTER,

401 J Street, corner of Fourth.

HATS MADE TO ORDER. Old Hats Renovated to Equal New.

H. A. PETRALLI,

DEALER IN

Stoves, Metals and Tinware

716 K STREET.

PLUMBING, GASFITTING, AND ROOFING.
Jobbing a Specialty.

GARZOLI & GENIS,

FRUIT AND PRODUCE,
BUTTER, CHEESE, EGGS, Etc.
POULTRY, FISH AND OYSTERS,
CALIFORNIA MARKET,
Telephone 188. 712 K Street.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA—COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman, doing business under the firm name of Wm. M. Lyon & Co., insolvent debtors.

Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman having filed in this Court their petition, schedule and inventory in insolvency, from which it appears that they are insolvent debtors, the said Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman are hereby declared to be insolvent. The Sheriff of the county of Sacramento is hereby directed to take possession of all the estate, real and personal, of the said insolvent debtors, except such as may be by law exempt from execution, and of all their deeds, vouchers, books of account, and papers, and to keep the same safely until the appointment of an assignee of their estate. All persons are forbidden to pay any debts to the said insolvents or to deliver any property, belonging to such insolvents, to them or to any person, firm, corporation or association, for their use; and the said debtors are hereby forbidden to transfer or deliver any property, until the further order of this Court, except as herein ordered.

It is further ordered, that all the creditors of said debtors be and appear before the Hon. John W. Armstrong, Judge of the Superior Court of the county of Sacramento, in open Court, at the Court-room of said Court, in the city and County of Sacramento, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock P. M., of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estate of said debtors.

It is further ordered, that the order be published in the THEMIS, a newspaper of general circulation, published in the city and county of Sacramento, as often as the said paper is published, before the day set for the meeting of creditors.

And it is further ordered, that in the meantime all proceedings against the said insolvents be stayed.

JOHN W. ARMSTRONG,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Insolvents.

Dated, January 10, 1890.

j11-w5

Sharp Trader.

Some months ago a prominent liquor merchant was the owner of a fine-appearing roadster. He was very particular in the care of his steed, and allowed no one to drive him but himself. On the Riverside road it was observed that he would speed the animal with other roadsters for a short distance, say a quarter of a mile, and usually far outstripped his competitors. This gave rise to the idea among horsemen that the animal in question was a wonder as a fast stepper. The horse was stabled at a down-town stable, the proprietor of which was very anxious to ascertain the speed and bottom of the horse, having in view his purchase. The merchant, however, would not permit any one to use the horse, and insisted on a large price. The stableman, who is one of the sharpest traders in horseflesh in the country, was equally determined to capture the coveted animal, but did not wish to pay the price without better proof of his speed and endurance. It was a case of sharp tactics between the merchant and the stableman. Finally, the merchant announced to the stableman that he proposed making a commercial trip through the mountains, and ordered his favorite horse to be got ready for the trip. The stableman suggested that the horse was too fine and delicate an animal to undergo the hardships of such a journey in the hills. To this the merchant replied: "Oh, my horse has the bottom for anything." This was, of course, thrown out as a bait for the astute stable-keeper, who bit ravenously at the hook. The merchant started with his fine horse, and when he arrived at Folsom he placed his horse in a stable, with instructions to care for him in the best manner, and not allow anyone to see or use him, at the same time hiring another bronco to serve him on his trip. At the end of about six weeks he returned, took his own horse, which was perfectly fresh, down to the city and to the stable, where he, as was intended, met the stableman, who expressed great surprise at the splendid condition of the horse after such a long and hard journey. The merchant, in an indifferent manner, remarked that such stock as his horse could not be seriously affected by a little hard work. This act for reply took the stableman completely off his guard, and he was impelled at once to close the bargain for the purchase before anyone else should have the opportunity to secure such a wonder. The bargain was closed at the merchant's exorbitant figure, and the stableman became the owner of the modern wonder. A few days after he took the horse out for a trial of speed, and after going a distance of a quarter of a mile, he could scarcely whip the wind-broken brute out of a walk. In other words, he made the discovery that he, as well as the horse, had been beautifully sold. Inquiry disclosed the facts above mentioned. The stableman is "laying for" that merchant, and declares that whisky will have a tumble some day in his favor.

The New Orleans Mardi Gras.

New Orleans is the only city in the United States that keeps up annual Mardi Gras festivities. It has, in fact, monopolized this time-honored entertainment. The entertainments in that city have always attracted a large attendance from all portions of the Union, and from preparations now being made, the event this year will be characterized by a display unusually elaborate. To afford an opportunity for the people of this coast to be present, the Southern Pacific Company have determined to send through a special excursion train, composed of Pullman sleeping cars and dining car. This fast train will leave San Francisco February 12th, at 5 P. M., and will consume but three and three-quarter days in its run from that city to New Orleans and but three days from Los Angeles. Parties desiring to join it from Sacramento can leave here February 12th, at 3:05 P. M., and can secure in advance tickets and sleeping car berth reservations at the general ticket office of the company, 613 Market street, San Francisco, or from any ticket office of the company. This will afford an opportunity to make a trip of great interest, and doubtless one that will be availed of by many.

The king of all encyclopædias is without any question the Britannica. By reason of the newest method of photo-printing and an absence of any international copyright law, this work is reproduced word for word, page for page, map for map, and plate for plate, from the original, and sold for one-third the price. Sample sets of the ninth edition, which just came from the press in December last, are on exhibition in the window of Joseph Hahn's drug store, and people who have heretofore been obliged to deny themselves this cyclopædia on account of cost, are now giving in their orders, as the prices and terms bring them within the reach of all. *

FLASHES.

Champagne is unlike a bashful lover—it pops.

Physicians and lawyers are not mechanics. Many of them ought to be.

Resolutions are like very many people thus far in the new year—broke.

If you want your ears pierced just listen to some of the H street girls singing.

The fellow that is carried away by enthusiasm generally has to walk back.

The greatest guns among poets and scientists are often of the smallest calibre and yet the greatest bores.

Always walk around the corner before you laugh at a fellow who has mashed his thumb with a hammer—it is safest.

There is little difference between a good dinner without an appetite and a good appetite without a dinner. Both are undesirable.

Alex. Anderson visited the art gallery, and was asked by one of the young lady artists: "Do you ever draw?" Alex. (absently): "Yes, when I have a good pair to draw to."

Popular Music at Popular Prices.

Popular music at 10 cents per copy; prices elsewhere range from 35 cents to 75 cents. Catalogues furnished on application. Hammer's music store, No. 820 J street. Sole agency Chickering & Son's pianos. *

Course of Lectures.

Mrs. Florence Williams will continue her course of six lectures on Monday evening at Castle Hall, for the benefit of the Froebel Society's Kindergarten. The subject of this lecture is "Marcus Aurelius." The lady is an interesting speaker, the subject entertaining, and the object most praiseworthy. A large audience should greet the lecturer.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Uncle Tom's Cabin will be revived for Wednesday evening next.

John S. Miller, the gauger, returned from Alta yesterday, being his first trip since his sickness.

Prof. J. G. Kennedy will lecture to-night at the Art Gallery. This will be the first of the present course.

Locke Richardson, an accomplished elocutionist, entertained a fine audience at the Congregational church last night.

Vernona Jarbeau, with her Starlight company, will hold the boards of the Metropolitan next Friday and Saturday night.

Learning of the attempt to domicile the sea lion in the first ward, the third warders became jealous, captured the new recruit and moved him to the third ward.

P. A. Humbert has tendered his resignation to Governor Waterman, as a member of the commission for examining rivers and harbors in this State. Business affairs prevent him from serving, so he says.

Congressman McKenna is devoting himself earnestly in the interest of Sacramento. He has advocated before the committee at Washington the appropriation of $750,000 for a public building in this city. May his endeavors succeed.

On the 16th, at the Riverside road, the wife of C. A. Fisk, gave birth to a daughter. There will be an increase of night alarms in consequence of this addition to the Fisk force. There will be no fear that the Superintendent will fall into a state of "innocuous desuetude."

The snow blockade has assumed serious proportions and threatens to cause great delay and damage to the traveling public as well as the railroad company. At no time in the history of this coast has there been such a great fall and banking up of snow. The railroad people are doing splendid work in battling the elements.

The Golden West suggests that the Native Sons, in selecting names for parlors, have neglected the name of Commodore Sloat, who was one of the important factors in securing California to the union of States, and hoisted the stars and stripes at Monterey July 7, 1846, proclaiming that this fair land thenceforth became a part of the American republic.

Harbor Lights was presented at the Metropolitan last night to a good audience, despite the storm which prevailed. Manager Hall has his heating furnaces in full operation, which adds greatly to the comfort of the patrons of the theater. Harbor Lights is a melo-drama of the pronounced order, and requires hard and particular dramatic work. The company is a strong one and has among its members such sterling artists as E. J. Henley, Clyde Harron, Miss Hampton, Idaleue Cottou and H. M. Armsrout. A good house should greet the company to-night.

An Expert Blind Man.

It is almost incredible that Simon Collins, of Marietta, who has been blind for twenty-seven years, is an expert carpet weaver, makes and prints paper flour sacks in colors, doing the printing on a Washington hand press, and with a perfect register, but the Marietta Times vouches for that. I have known him for seven or eight years, and have seen him frequently on the streets of his town, cane in hand, walking rapidly, making all the ins and outs, going down into a basement or up-stairs to a business office, never making a mistake and never being hurt. A year ago he made a canoe from his own design, and the same boat won a race in the regatta upon the Susquehanna at Columbia. He is the patentee of a brush handle, makes fishing nets and cane-seated chairs. His latest triumph is the mastery of the type writer. He bought one some months ago, and is now able to operate it quickly and correctly. He is said to be an expert euchre player, but I cannot vouch for that, though it is scarcely more notable than many things already mentioned which I have known him to do.—Philadelphia Times.

Why Women are Fascinating.

The power of fascination inherent in women may, moreover, be directed into two kinds. We all, says the Brooklyn Eagle, have seen the old lady, generally white-haired, with kindly, pleasant features, on which time has set no unfriendly mark, who still retains all her attractiveness. Note how the boys and girls adore her; they will go to her and confide their sorrows, their hopes, their ambition, and when they would not breathe a word to their mothers. The kindly, loving interest evinced in a lad's affairs by such a one has time and again first implanted the impulses in the heart which eventually led him on to an honorable career.

Quickly, almost by stealth, the good is done by such, and the good seed sown which will ripen in after time into a rich and abundant crop. On the other hand, we have most of us seen, perhaps in real life, certainly on the stage, the fascinating adventuress who, by her enthralling beaute de diable, enslaves men's souls and leads them (on the stage) to dare all for her sake. Such is directly opposed to the sweet old lady in her old-fashioned chair, and these two form the opposite poles between which the women who fascinate vary.

Types differ, and any one you may select has some position between these two opposites. Take, for instance, a pretty and may be witty woman, who, hardly of her own free will, makes every man fall in love with her to a greater or less degree. She may be innocent of any evil intention, but her position on the scale is not vastly removed from that of the melodramatic sorceress. Or, again, take the instance of the pretty young matron who, while devoted to home, husband and children, yet has many intimate friends of the male persuasion. But her influence is all for good. Her fascination is exerted in a worthy cause, and she has found out a great truth—that there is no friendship so lasting, so true and so pleasant as one between persons of opposite sexes, where a true feeling of bonde camaraderie exists and there is no pretense to love-making. Such a woman, if she lives long enough, bids fair to develop into a snow-haired old lady on whose friendship the children will rely.

C. H. Stephenson,
DENTIST,

CORNER SEVENTH AND J STREETS, OVER LYON'S DRY GOODS STORE.

O. W. Nordwell

MERCHANT TAILOR AND DRAPER,

520 J Street.

My new invoice includes the very LATEST STYLES and inspection is invited as to quality of GOODS, the FIT, and PRICE.

J. H. QUATMAN, Manager and Cutter

TUFTS'

Yerbine COUGH Balsam

WILL

CURE YOUR COUGH, COLD, OR INFLUENZA, sure, or money refunded.

A. C. Tufts, Druggist, 10th and J Sts.

Lavenson's

THE LARGEST AND

MOST RELIABLE HOUSE IN SACRAMENTO.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN, Formerly of Agricultural Park.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice,

SACRAMENTO.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured

HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.

R. DAVIS,

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

THE BOWSERS.

Well, the long agony is over and I have got my Christmas present. Naturally enough, I hoped and expected, but for reasons to be hereafter explained, I could not certainly count on anything until it was handed out to me. No one must get the idea that Mr. Bowser and I quarrel. We simply have our peculiarities, same as the average husband and wife. On the 27th of last December, two days after Christmas, Mr. Bowser wanted to put up a bracket in the sitting-room, and he called to me to bring him the corkscrew.

"Have you lost your head?" he demanded, as I handed it to him.

"No, sir."

"Didn't you hear me say gimlet?"

"You said corkscrew."

"Never."

"Yes, you did, Mr. Bowser," said the cook, who had luckily overheard him.

"Don't I know the difference between a corkscrew and a screw-driver?"

"A minute ago you said gimlet, Mr. Bowser. What is it you really want—a corkscrew, gimlet, screw-driver, pincers, whetstone, brush-broom, brace and bit, or what?"

"I want to inform you," he replied, as he flung the bracket under the lounge—"I want to inform you in letters six feet high that I'll be infernally smashed to squash if I get you a Christmas present next year!"

"Mr. Bowser!"

"I won't, even if you do get down on your knees to me!"

And about the 10th of January, one evening after supper, he brought in the oil jug from the barn, and of course I inquired what he was going to do.

"Mrs. Bowser," he began in the lofty way of a husband who is prepared to make his wife take a back seat, "you have, I presume, heard of leather?"

"Leather, as you probably do not know, and would never find out but from me, is the hide off the back of a certain animal—an ox, a cow, a steer, etc. The hide of a horse is called horse-hide."

"I thought it was called deer-skin," I replied, willing to be crushed.

"Ah! No doubt you did. All women probably do. The hide of a calf is called calf-skin."

"How wonderful, Mr. Bowser! Do they take it off while he is alive? Calves don't shed their hides in the fall, do they? Oh, how I wish I had your knowledge!"

"Your head could never contain it, Mrs. Bowser," he answered, tickled almost to death over the ignorance I pretended. "But to resume. Leather is the hide of an animal, put through a process called tanning. Even after being tanned it is full of pores."

"Is it possible?"

"These pores, minute as they are, admit water. That's how you get your feet damp."

"Is that the reason?"

"It is; and now I am going to beat nature by filling those pores with oil, and thus keep out the water."

"With linseed oil?"

"Certainly."

"But father and Tom used to use castor oil. They said the other oils prevented their shoes from taking a shine afterward, and made the leather sticky."

"Oh! they did? Well, what your father and Tom don't know about leather would make a big book."

He rubbed on the oil, dried it in, rubbed on some more, and spent an hour over his shoes. Next morning, when he tried to put on a shine, it was no go. He rubbed his necktie almost over the back of his head, but steam power couldn't have done it. He quit brushing and called to me.

"I was afraid of it," I replied as he held up one foot.

"Then why didn't you say so?"

"I did."

"Never! You have gone and spoiled these $6 shoes!"

"Mr. Bowser, I told you that linseed oil would render them sticky and—"

"And I want to tell you right here and now that you won't get no Christmas present next year—not even a candy cat!" he interrupted, as he banged his hat on his head to take a walk around the block.

In February I ordered cut-loaf sugar and he ordered pulverized, and when I proved by the cook that he was mistaken, he turned away with:

"Oh! well, if you can afford this sort of thing, I can. I'd rather have peace, of course; but next Christmas eve will make everything all right. You'll be looking for a present, but you'll look in vain."

In April we were having a two-handed game of euchre one night, and I took his king of spades with the ace.

"That's cool!" he remarked. "What sort of a game do you call this?"

"Euchre."

"Well, you hand that trick over here!"

"What for? I took it."

"Not much! The ace don't take no king in this game!"

"Of course it does. The ace is next to the left bower."

"It is, eh? Who told you that?"

"Everybody knows it."

"Then everybody is a fool! The king is above the ace, of course. That's why the card is called a king—because a king is a high personage."

"Mr. Bowser, you are wrong."

"I am right. You are getting left, and so you want to raise a row and break up the game. That's just like you."

"But I am three games ahead."

"What! This ends it. We play no more. And now, when Christmas comes again, don't blame me, Mrs. Bowser, if you get nothing."

In July, when we were down town one day, I lost my parasol. He made a great ado about it, but the lost article was sent home from a store while he was yet talking. The very next day he lost his wallet and $80, and I felt it my duty to repeat his words:

"Mr. Bowser, you are the most careless man I ever saw."

"I am, eh?"

"You might have known you would have lost it if you carried it down town. In future you had better tie a piece of clothes-line to it."

"What! You talk like that to me?"

"It's just what you said to me."

"But the circumstances were entirely different. I had intended to use that $80 to buy you a Christmas present, but as you have had so much to say, you'll get nothing at all now."

It was the same in October and November, and even on the 23d December, Mr. Bowser came home in the evening to observe:

"I had a $200 horse offered me to-day for $75."

"Did you? Well, we don't want any more horses around us."

"Why not?"

"Because they prove to be bad bargains. Neither of us know enough to drive one."

"Mrs. Bowser, do you mean to say that I can't drive a horse?" he demanded.

"Weren't you afraid of the last one?"

"Not much!"

"But he ran away with us, and you jumped out and left me to stop him."

"What! I jumped out!"

"Certainly. It was in the papers."

"That ends you, Mrs. Bowser! I did intend to get you something nice for Christmas, but now you get nothing—not even a hair-pin."

But I got a diamond ring, and am awfully proud of it.

Twelve Million Machines

IN USE.

THE LIGHT RUNNING

DOMESTIC Sewing Machine

Leads all others. Most Durable, Simplest, Best.

Every Agent claims the machines he sells the best, but talk is cheap. TIME is the only real test of genuine merit. During TWENTY-SIX YEARS of practical use the DOMESTIC has withstood this test. It stands to-day without a peer. Recommended by all White Goods Sewers, Dressmakers, Tailors and Manufacturers. Used by over 1,000 Families in Sacramento City. It is the only Sewing Machine with really Self-Setting Attachments. It costs you nothing to try it before you buy another. Sold on easy installments. Old machines taken in exchange.

Domestic Sewing Machine Co.

A. J. POMMER, Selling Agent,

Northwest corner Ninth and J streets, Sacramento.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

ANGLO-NEVADA ASSURANCE CORPORATION

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

FIRE.—Cash Capital, $2,000,000—MARINE. Sacramento Branch.

No. 1018 SECOND STREET.

JOSEPH STEFFENS, Manager.

HOWARD KIMBROUGH, Local Agent.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J,

SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St.

SACRAMENTO.

American Eagle Hotel

Corner Twelfth and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO.

This house has been put in first-class condition, and also newly furnished—everything being new from office to kitchen.

Board and Room, per Week, - - $5.00 to $7.00

MEALS, 25 CENTS.

Terms made with families.

GEO. W. NEWBERT, Proprietor.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEEPING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6.
Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4.
Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,

SACRAMENTO.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS,

Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street,

Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & AND & MECHANICAL & DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

Gas and Steam Fitter.

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SOFT MASH BOURBON WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagele & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGELE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel,

Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Ropes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.

Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payeu.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty.

Telephone 228.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

Samples and Instructions for Self-measurement sent by mail on application.

L. RADLOFF,

LADIES' TAILOR.

218 POST STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Tailor Made Suits a Specialty.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' 114 Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH

BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER,

BAVARIA HERBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLE, Prop'r.

FRUIT AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AND PLANTS.

1,000,000

Trees and Nursery Stock for sale at LOW PRICES, of Best Varieties Deciduous Trees.

Also, ORANGE, LEMON, OLIVE, FIG, AND NUT-BEARING TREES, of most approved varieties.

Nurseries: Near Acampo Station, San Joaquin. Principal Depot: No. 813 Second Street, near Passenger Depot, Sacramento.

Send for Catalogue. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Address: REED & VAN GELDER, Nurserymen, Sacramento, Cal.

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.

General Printers,

—THE—

BEST APPOINTED PRINTING OFFICE

NORTH OF SAN FRANCISCO,

—410—

J STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

STABLE TO LET.

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city. Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Uleers, Wens, Lumps, Excesses, etc., Positively Cured or no Pay. No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated.

Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Open Valve A, pull off the Hose, and water follows immediately.

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

Blaine Put Him in a Hole.

A Washington gentleman has recently returned from an extensive tour of Europe. During his absence he wandered from the beaten paths of travel, and explored new and undiscovered lands. In one of these side excursions he landed in an obscure German town, and to his surprise met an old friend of whom he had lost track these eight years. After exchanging greetings and taking in the melancholy and dejected air of the exiled one, the traveler asked:

"What are you doing here?"

"I am the American consul at this con-founded place, and have been for the last eight years."

"How is that; didn't the Democrats fire you out?"

"They would hardly do that," said the consul, with a sickly smile; the pay is only $120 a year. Beer and rye bread are cheap, however, and I can live on about that figure."

"But tell me how you came to get here?"

"It was this way. I had a friend who had an influential friend who knew Secretary Blaine intimately. Through this channel I made application for a place, and was brought in contact with the Secretary. This was in the early days of the Garfield administration. Mr. Blaine gave me a cordial grasp of the hand, and beamed one of those warming, magnetic smiles at me.

"Ah, yes; Mr. L—. You are one of the L—'s of Ohio, are you not? Yes, I knew your father very well, sir, in my younger days. You would like a consulship, perhaps?"

"Visions of gold lace and diplomatic receptions appeared before my eyes. I managed to say that that was in line of my ambitions. Then Mr. Blaine smiled again.

"Well, Mr. L—, there are plenty of pegs and not many holes; but I think we will have to find a hole for you."

"He found a hole and put me in it, signed the commission, and I have been in a hole ever since."—Washington Post.

The Earth is Growing.

The earth, traveling in its orbit around the sun, and onward with the entire solar system around some unknown and still greater center of attraction, is constantly traversing new regions of space, which it depletes of meteoric dust and meteorites, thus steadily—no matter how slowly—increasing in diameter. Now, let this growth continue till the earth has just twice the attractive power which it now possesses; we would then have twice the number of meteorites, and double the quantity of dust falling annually upon it than now.

Fortunately for our heads, the earth has not as yet attained very formidable dimensions; but we may look upon it as an established fact that it constantly gains in weight, and that in proportion to such gain its attractive power steadily increases. The attractive force of the sun is so enormous that a perpetual hail of meteorites and a torrent of dust particles must rush upon it from all directions; and some of the foremost observers are now of opinion that these falling bodies are the sole cause of the sun's heat.

In the light of this theory, our earth is a young and growing, not an old and dying planet; a planet with a future, which ought to be cheerful news to all of us, although we shall not live to reap the benefit of it. And the sun, far from being on its last legs as an expiring luminary, is steadily gaining in heat and lighting capacity.—American Geologist.

A Great Mind.

"Mr. Clugston," exclaimed the foreman, coming into the sanctum hastily, "I'm sorry for the accident, but that half-column piece of reprint about the Behring sea troubles was skewjawked in taking the sidestick out of the galley, and it will take longer to straighten it up than to set the whole article up again."

"Haven't you anything to take its place?" inquired the editor of the Doodleville Yelper, passing his hand wearily over his pale brow.

"No, sir; and I ought to have gone to press an hour ago."

"Slide the matter into the form just as it is," said Mr. Clugston, in a firm, ringing tone. "Put the head 'Choice Religious Miscellany' over it, and nobody will ever look at it."

Over 300,000,000 Tons of Rain in Eleven Months.

Weather Observer Dechant, of Reading, Pa., states that from Jan. 1, to Dec. 2, 1889, only 71 days were without rain or snow. With the exception of the years 1872 and 1873, more rain has fallen thus far during the present than in any of the past twenty years. The rainfall for the eleven months is eleven inches above the normal rate, the total being forty and a quarter inches. During the twenty years the highest rainfall was fifty-five and a quarter inches in 1873, and the lowest thirty and a quarter, in 1881. Of the 334 days of this year just passed, rain has fallen on 170—more than half. Allowing 112 tons in weight to each inch of rainfall per acre, the weight of water that has thus far fallen this year equals 372,170,480 tons, or 90,234,777.577 gallons of rain.—Reading Telegram.

Tricks Which Seem Improbable, but Can Easily be Accomplished.

It has always been a wonder to the uninitiated how the many sleight-of-hand tricks which are performed nightly by the different magicians in this town are accomplished. To the inexperienced the tricks seem hard, but anybody can do many of them provided they have the necessary paraphernalia. For instance, the trick of moving a red handkerchief from one bottle to another, a neat and ingenious illusion, can be accomplished by the aid of threads and holes in the bottles, one being pulled out as the other is pulled in.

The trick of changing water in a bottle to ink and the ink to water can be done by a twelve-year-old boy.

This is how it is done: The globe which appears to be full of ink is in reality full of water, but it is double. The outer globe is part of the stand, which is hollow, while the inner globe is fitted with a cap of black silk, ready to be pulled down through the hollow center of the table at a given signal, exposing what is apparently only a large glass globe of water, but which is in reality two. The change from water to ink is effected by picking up between fingers a little diamond (drab) wrapped up in a paper which is punctured with holes, and quietly dropping it in the globe while quietly throwing the handkerchief over it. Those who do not understand tricks would not appreciate the importance of a little thing you can do when down among the audience. In wrapping up the bottle with the handkerchief you can give it a shake. The shake is the explanation of the trick—it scatters the dye in the water and makes it appear as ink.

It has always been a mystery, even to those who understand how the mirror tricks are accomplished, as to how magicians could tell persons in the audience on what day of the week they were born. Before telling this they always ask their questioners to write down the year of their birth, with the day of the month. In each case he can always give the correct days. This can be accomplished as easy as falling off a log, and this is just exactly how it is done. Without going into an elaborate explanation, here is a table:

Leap Year	Leap Year
January.....3 2	July.....3 3
February.....6 5	August.....6 6
March.....6 5	September.....2 2
April.....2 2	October.....4 4
May.....4 4	November.....6 6
June.....0 0	December.....1 1

Now we wish, we'll say, to find the day of the week on which any certain date fell. We take the figure of the month given above, the last two figures of the date of the year, one-quarter of the same, omitting the remainder if it does not divide evenly by four, and the date of the month. Add all four sums together, divide by seven, and the remainder will tell the day of the week, counting Sunday as 1, Monday as 2, and so on till we reach Friday as 6 and Saturday 0. Here is an illustration of it. To-day is the 5th of January, 1890—Sunday:

Date of year (last two figures).....	90
Quarter of same (ignoring remainder)....	22
Day of the month.....	05
Ratio of month (as given above).....	03

Total.....120
Divide this by 7, we get 17, with a remainder of 1, which is Sunday, as given in the table.—N. Y. Star.

Work of Vidal, One of the Foremost Sculptors of Europe.

Vidal, the blind sculptor is one of the wonders of the French capital. He has been blind since his twenty-first year. We can quite easily understand how a blind farmer could cultivate the ground with a plow, spade and hoe; how he would feel around the tender plants and gently loosen the dirt from the roots, or how the blind Birmingham (Ala.) miner tells, with the sense of touch alone, the direction and to what depth to drill his holes before putting in a blast; but the work of Vidal stands out in bold relief, unique, wonderful and incomparable. To be a sculptor it is generally supposed that one must have the "mechanic's eye" and the artist's taste and perspicuity. The latter's faculties Vidal has to an exceptional degree—even more acute, he believed, than if the former were not lost to him forever. By slowly passing his hands over an object, he notes its external proportions, and imitates them in clay in a manner which strikes the beholder dumb with surprise. A dog, horse, human face, or anything alive or dead, he models with as much ease as any of the dozens of Parisian sculptors who still retain the faculty of sight. From 1855 to 1875 Vidal received more medals than any other exhibitor. Many of his works, made in the solitude of his perpetual midnight, are now on the shelves at the great exposition, where the blind wonder contended in friendly rivalry with his less unfortunate brother artists. He never complains, is always genial and festive among his friends, who always speak of and to him as though he could see, and well may they do so, for he is one of the best art critics in all Paris.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

TO BE HAD ONLY AT

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihan's

418 J Street.

MAGGI'S HOT BOUILLON!

Just Out: Maroon Marmalade

Simon Sturmer,

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,
No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIRING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR and COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

Joe Poheim the TAILOR

HAS NOW A

GENUINE CLEARANCE SALE.

Suits Made to Order from $20.

Pants Made to Order from $5.

Other Garments in Proportion.

This Sale is to CONTINUE FOR SIXTY DAYS ONLY. #1—PERFECT FIT AND BEST OF WORKMANSHIP GUARANTEED, OR NO SALE.

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

Klune & Floberg,

WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS
Agents for Rockford Watch Co.
No. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON,

The † Leading † Merchant † Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501 --- 507 K, cor. Fifth

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.

Southern Pacific Company

PACIFIC SYSTEM.

Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.25 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3.40 A
7.05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6.45 P
7.25 P	Knight's Landing	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6.25 P
12-01 A	Central Atlantic Express	6.00 A
3-00 P	Oroville	10-30 A
3-00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10-30 A
10-40 A	Redding via Willows	4-00 P
6-15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7-25 P
6-50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8-35 P
3-05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11-40 A
4-00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10-40 P
*10-00 A	San Francisco via Steamer	8-00 A
11-25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2.25 P
6-50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11-40 P
11-25 A	San Jose	2.25 P
7-05 P	Santa Barbara	9.55 A
6-50 A	Santa Rosa	11-40 A
3-05 P	Santa Rosa	7.25 P
9-00 A	Stockton and Galt	6-45 P
7-05 P	Stockton and Galt	9-55 A
8-00 P	Truckee and Reno	6.25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno	6.00 A
12-05 P	Colfax	10.20 A
6-50 A	Vallejo	11.40 A
3-05 P	Vallejo	11.40 P
*12.15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10.25 A
*7-15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2.40 P
*5.20 P	Folsom	*6.50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning, P for afternoon.

A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.

T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED K. COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

THEMIS

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, JANUARY 25, 1890.

No. 49.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

The unprecedented snowfall in the mountains this season and the continued rainstorms in the valley have had a very serious effect upon the business interests of this coast, and particularly of this city. This blocking of a great overland road and its feeder lines against all the energy and ingenuity of man, is a matter of no slight consequence. It has resulted in an expense possibly never before preceded in the history of railroad operation, and the Southern Pacific Company is entitled justly to credit for its warfare against the elements in the Sierras and through the Shasta range. Time was, and not long since, as human life is spanned, when it would have been regarded as foolhardy to attempt to cross either of the mountain ranges in winters much more favorable than the present, and the history of this State, as instanced by the fate of the Donner party, contains mournful evidences of the battles of puny man against the rigorous elements. Since the carrying of the railroad over the mountains there has been almost each winter season a warfare with the snows, and it became that the elements were about defied. In view of the conditions that happened this season it would almost seem reasonable that the discouragements would crush out hope. The company, made a desperate fight and, though costly, practically won. We regard this as an achievement in railroading that is without parallel, and it should be remembered when the clouds roll by and the sun again shines, and the smaller politicians of the State will be seeking to make capital by antagonism of railroads. In the valley counties, notwithstanding the high waters, there has been no obstruction of railroad communication, though such conditions have happened in years gone by. In some of the localities where the greatest expense is incurred to keep roads in operation it seems they are most fought. We have read, and with something of surprise, the continued attacks of a portion of the press of the Sierra snow belt on the railroad and its management, and in the very counties in which these papers are published the cost of the maintenance and operation of roads has been a very serious tax, and one that must be borne from the general earnings of the entire system. While it is true that the through business of a transcontinental road contributes much to its maintenance, it yet depends largely on the local traffic. The people of Sacramento feel with something of severity, the stoppage of through trains, yet they feel with greater severity their inability to reach points within the radius of their trade. So also it is that the people of Nevada and Placer counties now appreciate the inconvenience of not being able to have speedy railroad communication with the marts from which they are accustomed to purchase their goods. They should feel some little of appreciation, and much more than is felt here, for the protracted fight that is being made to keep open the roads through their counties. The expense in that direction will not end with the falling of the snow. When the time of melting comes, the slides and washouts will demand serious attention, and will entail an expense that cannot yet be conjectured. It is to be hoped that these reverses, so generally felt on this coast, will be offsetted later in the year, and that when the storms have passed, there will be a renewal of California's phenomenal prosperity.

The extreme snowfall in the mountains can be regarded as a source of very severe apprehension by the people in the valleys. If in the spring months the melting should be rapid and occasion a rise in the Sacramento and its tributaries simultaneously, there is no telling the height the water will reach in the valley, particularly if the rainfall should be anything like extreme, so that the rivers will continue to run full. It has been pretty well established that before the American occupation of the country a flood occurred greater than any experienced since the white settlement. In the Gold Run case testimony was received of Indian traditions, narrations by early trappers, and statements of physical evidences—such testimony being admissible, as it related to events that had happened more than thirty years before. It was then proved that in 1805 a flood occurred which forms an epoch in Indian history, and from which they still reckon subsequent events. In 1825-6 there was another flood of very extreme height, and still another is said to have occurred in the '30's. In 1846-7 the valley was an immense lake, and it is stated that a party went in a boat directly from Sutter's fort to the Hock farm near Marysville. An early settler informed the writer a number of years ago that about 1848 he observed a tree on an island in China slough that had flood debris lodged in its branches. The sides of elevated lands also evidence a very extreme water mark. The history of the subsequent floods is familiar, and of them, of course, authentic data is obtainable.

We commend the Trustees for the work they are doing to strengthen the levee defenses, and for their determination to render them secure, regardless of expense. There is no doubt the citizens will stand by the authorities in whatever they will do in that line. The last freshet indexed the points of insecurity, but it must be considered that the softening of the earth has since very much weakened them.

Anything that unlawfully obstructs the free passage or use, in the customary manner, of any public park, square, street, or highway, is a public nuisance. Ordinance No. 17, Chapter X, Section 3, prohibits the obstruction of any sidewalk. Section 3494 of the Civil Code provides that a public nuisance may be abated by any public body or officer authorized thereto by law. We refer to these enactments for the purpose of information to the constituted authorities of this city. It has been demonstrated that the public sidewalks are being unlawfully obstructed, and that juries will not convict for these plain infractions of both the Penal Code and the ordinance. The secret of this defeat of justice and the law, lies in the fact that it is a difficult matter to get a jury that will agree; because it is more than likely some one is retained as a juror who is either a violator of the ordinances himself, or under some personal obligation to some other person who does not obey the ordinances relating to street and sidewalk obstructions. Again, other jurors will palliate the offense of obstructing the sidewalks, because some one else has done so, or is doing so. This state of affairs existing, it is a very difficult matter to make successful prosecutions before juries. Thus, our streets and sidewalks are used by people who conduct a regular business thereon, to the annoyance of the public, as well as individual property owners and business men. These obstructions have become so numerous that some of our taxpayers and business men importuned the authorities to abate the nuisances. But in place of the Trustees, through the power in them vested, doing this, they impose the duty of public prosecutors on individuals, which is wrong, and which results as we have before mentioned. It is certain that if any person should construct a house or other structure in the middle of any of our public streets, the authorities would not resort to any criminal prosecution to abate it. On the contrary, the obstruction would be at once removed by the officers of the law. Now, in case of the willful and unlawful obstruction of the sidewalk—which is a part of the street—the Trustees should order the obstructions removed within a given time, and if not done, then by virtue of Section 3494 of the Civil Code, proceed at once to abate it. This would insure the proper observance of the ordinances, and there would be no chance for juries to cause a miscarriage of justice. There is no other city in the world where there is such a total disregard to the ordinances relating to street obstructions and sanitary affairs. Laws and ordinances were enacted for the good of the public, and should be enforced. Bad laws and bad ordinances should be repealed; but so long as any law or ordinance remains upon the statute book, it should be enforced. It is never an excuse for one violator of the laws, to seek to shield himself behind the fact that some one else has been guilty of an infraction thereof.

It is most gratifying that the Supreme Court has rendered its recent decisions in favor of the city in the noted bonded debt cases. For years attacks have been systematically made by the creditors upon the city authorities and the treasury. The first suits were those instituted by E. D. Kennedy, a former resident of this city, but later of Philadelphia, who commenced the same in the United States Circuit Court. In those cases, the court decided that under the Act of 1858, creating the debt, the city could not be sued. Then followed suit and proceeding after suit and proceeding, involving all possible questions of law. The first backset to the city, however, occurred when the Supreme Court declared that some $400,000 past-due coupons were not barred by the statute of limitations; which, in our opinion, was squarely against the decisions of the United States Supreme Court on the same question. This afforded the creditors with sinews of war, which were utilized with disastrous effect against the city. Then followed another very disastrous decision against the city, which declared that 55 per cent of the gross water rates should go into the sinking and interest fund. This blow was felt, and it looked for a time very black for the city. After some skirmishing along the line, the creditors, notably Sam Davis and George E. Bates, directed through the ablest counsel in the State, an assault upon the city and city treasury, whereby they demanded interest on over-due coupons. There were two forms of action instituted: one against the city direct, and the other by mandamus against the Treasurer, to compel the payment of interest on interest, which in most instances actually exceeded the principal. In the suit against the city direct, the points raised against the city were of a very serious and dangerous character, and had to be met and contested by all the ability and ingenuity of counsel. The amount involved was very great, and had the city lost, would have been almost a paralyzing blow. But the able decision of Judge Hunt was followed, and the city is relieved of this immense danger. Under the decision, the bonds which fell due in 1888 have not borne collectable interest for two years, and will not again bear any interest. This class of over-due bonds cannot be paid for fifteen or twenty years; and, hence, are not worth in the market to exceed forty cents on the dollar. The same can be said of the bonds which will fall due in 1893. In fact, we are in a splendid condition, and can dictate our own terms. The bond creditors, particularly Sam Davis, who is the owner of $225,000 of over-due coupons alone, do not propose to rest, however; and while they are now powerless as against the city, and have exhausted every known remedy, still, it was intimated during the course of the late litigation, that the next move would be somewhat startling in its character and nature, and that it would be against the Funded Debt Commission. It is altogether probable that this board may be made a defendant in an action, whereby the creditors will demand the return to the sinking and interest fund all the money now in the possession of the commission, and all money collected as interest on bonds purchased by the city, on the ground that all such payments amounted to a fraud against the creditors, and that the sinking and interest fund should never have been depleted by the city itself in the manner done by the commission. Of course, these are new points, and we hope that there is no danger from that quarter. If there was any likelihood of the creditors securing the $110,000 under the control of the commission, it might be a good scheme to utilize the amount by the Trustees for strengthening our levees and putting our streets in good order. Any way, Sacramento can afford to take on some independent airs, in consequence of these great victories.

While it is conceded on all sides that there is a necessity for a new charter and a more available form of local government, still it became self-evident that a majority of the people have not been educated up to that necessity, and that there are some legal obstructions occasioned by recent decisions of the Supreme Court. It was deemed advisable to wait for another year to prepare a new form of government. Even with the legal objections a good charter could have been legally adopted, but perhaps not so broad and beneficial as might be formed under a more liberal constitutional provision. Before the year passes the opponents of a new organic law may be brought to realize the necessity for a better form of local self-government. It was the better plan to defer action until a more favorable public sentiment could be enlisted.

The death of General Vallejo, announced in our last issue, removed one of the men most prominently identified with the history of California. The General was born in Monterey, July 7, 1808. His father in 1774 joined Rivera's party of exploration of Upper California, and took part in the founding of some of the early missions. At the age of 16, General Vallejo was a cadet in the army, and from 1829 to 1834 had command of the presidio of San Francisco. In the latter year he was placed in charge of a company of colonists in Sonoma county, and a year later was appointed Comandante General of the frontier. He was early a friend of the American government; and in April, 1846, in a junta at Monterey, delivered a speech boldly favoring the annexation of the department of Upper California to the United States. The Bear Flag party two months later captured Sonoma, of which he was the comandante, and confined him with others, prisoners of war, in Sutter's fort. On the establishment of the State government the General filled important offices. We have thus very briefly sketched the life of a very remarkable man. His death blots out much of what should have been perpetuated of the early history of this State. At the last session of the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons, provision was made for the appointment of historical committees by the various subordinate parlors and the Grand Parlor. This journal then pointed out the urgent necessity for such action, and called attention to the fact that the leading actors of the pioneer days of this State were fast passing away, and that much valuable material will be beyond reach in a very few years. We are not aware of what has been accomplished in this direction elsewhere in the State. At least it should have been that a minute narrative of General Vallejo's life and observations should have been preserved. The conductors of this journal have lent all aid possible, and we feel some little pride that we have been able to present the first accurate view, plat, and description of Sutter's fort, as it was in 1848, that was ever published. The series of articles now being published on "Unwritten History," contain, in addition, very much that will be of permanent historical value. In these matters, C. E. Grunsky, representing the Native Sons, rendered valuable assistance; though at the time of the publication of the articles concerning Sutter's fort, it was deemed advisable that his connection with that order should be kept in the background, lest the selling price of the fort property might be enhanced if it were known to the owner that prominent Native Sons were interested in its preservation. We are satisfied the parlors of this city will submit a very creditable report on California history to the next Grand Parlor, and suggest that the parlors elsewhere bestir themselves, and make a like showing.

Hon. H. M. La Rue corrects, in some particulars, our statement published last week relative to the Thomas-Dickson duel. It was fought on the place then resided on by Mr. La Rue (a portion of the Norris grant), about five miles from the city, on the old road leading from Norris' ferry to Auburn, about three-fourths of a mile northeast from the present American river railroad bridge. The first intimation Mr. La Rue had of the duel was on meeting the officer coming into the city. La Rue was on his way home from the city, and had just crossed the ferry. The officer said, "There came pretty near being a duel on your place. But I prevented it; I arrested one of the parties, and stopped it." When Mr. La Rue arrived at the scene of the duel, Dr. Dickson was lying where he had fallen. He was conscious, but suffering very much. The fatal bullet was about an ounce ball, and the wound of exit in the back was large enough to insert the thumb. A freight wagon came along, and the wagon canvass sheet was fastened across the tops of the sides to afford as comfortable a conveyance as possible for the wounded man to Sacramento. A colored man in the employ of Mr. La Rue attended the wounded man on his trip into the city. Col. Ned McGowan, the "ubiquitous," was the second for Dickson.

SOME UNWRITTEN HISTORY.

Sacramento in Embryo—How Government was Established from Chaos.

PART IX.

In Part VIII of this series (January 18, 1890) we inadvertently described the east half of the blocks of the city between Front and Second streets as numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4. The figures should have been 5, 6, 7 and 8.

At the beginning of 1849 most of the business was done at Sutter's Fort. Here Sam Brannan had his store—a general line of goods direct from Valparaiso, per the Undine, including a very extensive assortment of dry goods for the mining country; he also received gold dust on deposit for safe keeping; and here C. E. Pickett had his store of general merchandise, with a branch at Coloma saw-mill, under charge of his agent, F. Hampton. P. B. Reading, Samuel J. Hensley and Jacob R. Snyder also had their headquarters at the fort doing an extensive business as merchants. In the latter part of 1848 the east gate of the fort was permanently thrown open, so that Brannan's store had free communication with it, and the soldier usually found at the south gate until 1848 was withdrawn, and everybody had free access to all parts of the fort for business purposes.

At the embarcadero (boat landing), at the foot of I street, there were two log cabins, one kept as a drinking saloon, the other the residence of Mark Stewart with his family. One of his daughters, a Mrs. Cooper, is now a resident of this city. The sale of city lots went forward under the direction of Peter H. Burnett. The prices were graded to suit the localities. At the beginning of 1849 lots at and near the fort were held higher than at Front street. The lots were not sold to speculators at prices lower than graded. The sales were generally for part cash and part on time, the deeds to be given when the balance was paid. Late in January, 1849, business began to change to the embarcadero.

Early in January a meeting was held to consider the best methods of adapting the business consequent on a change of Mexican to American methods. Prior to that time, deeds had been acknowledged before Frank Bates, first alcalde, and it was determined at that meeting, as there was no notary public nor recorder, that a receiver should be established for Sacramento, and Henry A. Schoolcraft was elected as recorder, and authorized to take the acknowledgments of deeds and to record instruments. All the deeds of record in the Schoolcraft books acknowledged before March 17, 1849, were acknowledged before Frank Bates, first alcalde. After March 17th they were acknowledged before H. A. Schoolcraft, as first magistrate, an office improvised at the meeting which elected him. He accepted the position, entered upon the duties of his office, procured books for records, and thereafter, until California became a State, continued to act as recorder. Two books and a part of a third book contain what is now known as the "Schoolcraft Records" in our County Recorder's office. These probably had no legal status at the time, but they have since been legalized by acts of the Legislature, and no man can now make out a title to lots in Sacramento city without using those books of record. In establishing the city of Sacramento where it is and securing to it the business of the surrounding country, the projectors had sharp competition.

On the 10th day of August, 1843, John A. Sutter sold to Eleah Grimes, Hiram Grimes and John Sinclair a tract of land bounded on the south by the American river, west by the Sacramento river, north by a line running east from the mouth of the Feather river, and east by the eastern boundary of Sutter's grant. Early in 1849 Hiram Grimes employed one John Hall to lay out a town on the north side of the American river, and east of the Sacramento, which he called Boston. This he advertised with a glowing account of its advantages; that it was opposite Sutter city (not yet fully known as Sacramento); that it had been surveyed by a competent engineer, and was adjacent to and in easy connection with the mines.

Sutter had in 1845 also sold a tract of land one-half mile on the Sacramento river, running back one mile, at a place now known as Sutterville, to one Lanford W. Hastings. It occupied the point of high land reaching nearly to the Sacramento river. The high waters of the Sacramento and American rivers did not overflow that land, except a narrow strip along the river. It was no doubt the right place for a city, as it needed no or but little protection from overflow. Sacramento city, on the contrary, had much low land, and none of it free from overflow in high floods. Sacramento also had this further disadvantage to encounter: To protect the city it was necessary to construct a levee sufficient in height and strength to turn the high floods of the American river north, and Sacramento city must occupy much land over which such floods usually flowed. The whole volume must find its way to the Sacramento north of the city.

Hastings, assisted by George McDougal & Co., early in 1849, advertised for sale town lots in the "Town of Sutter" (late Sutterville), stating therein that the town had just been resurveyed and laid out by J. W. Davidson, U. S. A. The lots were for sale by George McDougal & Co. In urging the purchase of these lots to establish his town, all the advantages of the situation were set out, and for a time success seemed trembling in the balance between that town and the one laid out by Sutter, Brannan & Co., and the town of Boston was also a candidate for public favors.

The winter of 1848-9 was dry, no high floods occurring. Few knew of the extent of the floods in winters of severe rains, and purchasers could not with the lights they then had make a just comparison of the merits of the several towns. In this situation the proprietors of Sacramento city were equal to the emergency. Peter H. Burnett was their agent. He had been at the mines and knew the wants of the miners. Ships were on their way from all parts of the world, laden with miners and their supplies, and some of them were expected early in April. Burnett, furnished with the necessary statistics and means, was sent to San Francisco to meet passengers and owners of ships as they should arrive, and persuade them to land their ships at Sutter's embarcadero, and to make Sutter's fort their headquarters for operations at the mines. Mr. Burnett arrived at San Francisco in March, and shortly thereafter ships arrived, laden with gold seekers and goods for their use. He took his stand on Kearney street, near Portsmouth square, in front of Naglee's bank, and for days and weeks interviewed all new arrivals, especially the owners and supercargoes of vessels, with all consignees. He talked of Sutter's embarcadero as the only place suitable to unload supplies for the mines, and showed plainly that Sacramento was the best place from which to reach the auriferous deposits. Sutterville and Boston were not so represented. Their proprietors looked for purchasers to come to them, and the consequence was that miners and miners' supplies all left San Francisco destined for Sutter's embarcadero, and there they disembarked and the goods were there unloaded. Miners must come for their supplies where they were, and so the whole volume of commerce projected in 1848 came to be landed at the levee in Sacramento, and Boston and Sutter from that time were numbered among the things that might have been but were not. Buildings here went up as if by magic on lots bought for permanent investment, and before the heavy rains occurred in the winter of 1849-50 Front street was all occupied, J street was built up as far as Eleventh, I street to Sixth, K to Tenth, M to Tenth, and Sacramento was so thoroughly established that fires and floods, however disastrous, could never drive business to any other place, however favored by nature.

In the latter part of 1848, the people of the Territory began to move in the formation of a provisional government for California. It first took shape in a public meeting held at San José, and San Francisco immediately followed, and Sacramento was ripe for any action promising stability in the government of the Territory. The scope of this series of articles does not include a full account of that movement. THEMIS will, in a separate article, give an account of it. Sacramento was in full sympathy, and took a leading part in it. Looking towards the formation of that provisional government, a meeting was held at Sacramento city on the 6th day of January, 1849, at which Peter H. Burnett presided, Frank Bates and M. D. Winship were Vice-Presidents, and Jeremiah Sherwood and George McKinstry were Secretaries, Samuel Brannan, John S. Fowler, John Sinclair, P. B. Reading, and Barton Lee were appointed a committee on resolutions. These resolutions favored a convention of delegates from all parts of the Territory, to form a government for the Territory, to form a temporary political code of laws. But as these resolutions will be more appropriate in an article on that subject, we omit them. One resolution of the utmost importance, offered by Sam'l Brannan, was unanimously adopted by the meeting. At that time slavery was unknown here as a local institution. The Territory had been recently acquired to the United States, and emigrants from the slave States insisted on their right to bring their slave property into California, and there find protection. The question whether California was to be a free State, or whether it should be added to those recognizing slavery, was to be fought out here and in Congress. The emigrants from the slave States were fewer in number, but they were more active. They had better knowledge of politics than those from the free States; and if they did not have the active support of the government at Washington, they were not hindered by it. This rendered it uncertain whether California would be continued as free territory. At the meeting we describe, this question came up for discussion. The provisional government they were about to establish would have that question to solve. The resolution offered by Mr. Brannan was:

"Resolved, That our delegates be, and they are, hereby instructed to oppose slavery in every shape and form in the Territory of California."

This was the first gun fired at the institution of slavery in California; and it was aimed and fired by one of the founders of Sacramento city.

A Few Words About Henry Clay.

Henry Clay was of the sanguineous temperament. "His nature," as he said of himself, "was warm, his temper ardent, his disposition enthusiastic." He was of a light complexion with light hair. His eyes were blue, and when he was excited were singularly brilliant and attractive. His forehead was high and full of promise of intelligence. In stature he was over six feet. Spare and long-limbed, he stood erect as if full of vigor and vitality, and ever ready to command. His countenance expressed perpetual wakefulness and activity. His voice was music itself, and yet penetrating and far-reaching, enchanting the listener; his words flowed rapidly, without sing-song or mannerism, in a clear and steady stream. Neither in public nor in private did he know how to be dull. His nature was quickly sensitive; his emotions, like his thoughts, moved swiftly, and were not always under his control. He was sometimes like a sportsman who takes pleasure in pursuing his game; and sometimes could chide with petulance. I was present once when in the Senate he was provoked by what he thought the tedious opposition of a Senator of advanced old age, and in his anger he applied to him the two lines of Pope:

"Old politicians chew on wisdom past,
And totter on in business to the last."

But if he was not master of the art of self-restraint and self-government, he never took home with him a feeling of resentment; never stored up in memory grievances or enmities; never harbored an approach to malice or a hidden discontent or dislike.

As a party leader he was impatient of reserve or resistance, and ever ready to crack the whip over any one that should show a disposition to hang back, sparing not even men of as much ability as himself.

When he first became distinguished before the nation, he astonished by his seemingly inexhaustible physical strength; and the public mind made up its opinion, half fabulous, and yet in substance true, that he knew nothing of fatigue; that after a long day's service as Speaker of the House of Representatives, or as leading debater when the House was in committee and the session continued into the night, he would at the adjournment come forth, as if watching and long and close attention to business had refreshed him and left him only more eager for the gay society of his friends. But years flew over him, and this man of a heroic mold, of mental activity that could not be worn out, of physical forces that defied fatigue, in his seventy-fifth year could not hide from himself the symptoms of decline.

Philadelphia, seemingly by some divine right of succession, has always a constellation of men, adepts in the science of life, and alike skillful and successful in practice. At that time Samuel Jackson, one of the great physicians of his day, was in the zenith of his fame, and was well known for his genial kindness of nature as well as for consummate skill in his profession.

When Henry Clay was debating in his mind the nature of his disease, and as yet had not quite renounced the hope of a renewal of his days of action, he sought counsel of Samuel Jackson. He was greatly in earnest and wanted to know the truth, the exact and whole truth. His question was, if the evident decline in his strength was so far beyond relief that he must surely die soon. He required an explicit answer, without color or reserve, however unpleasant it might be for the physician to announce an unfavorable result. Dr. Jackson made a careful examination of his condition, found the case to be a clear one, and had the courage to make to the hero of a hundred parliamentary battles a faithful report. The great statesman received the communication that for him life was near its close, not without concern, but yet with the fortitude of resignation. He declared that he had no dread of death, but he was still troubled by one fear, which was probably suggested to him by the recollection of the magnificent constitution with which he had started in life. That fear was not of death, but of the mode of dying; he had a terrible apprehension that his last hours would be hours of anguish in a long agonizing struggle between life and death; and this only, he said, was the thought that now lay heavily on his mind. Dr. Jackson explained to him the nature of his malady and the smooth and tranquil channel in which it was to run, and assured him with a sagacity that did not admit of question, that in his last hour he would die as quietly as an infant falls asleep in its cradle. "You give me infinite relief," answered Clay. The chief terror which death had for him vanished.

Clay left not an enemy behind him. John Caldwell Calhoun began his national career as a member of the twelfth House of Representatives. He took his seat in Congress in November, 1811, just two days too late to give his vote for Clay as Speaker. Calhoun was immediately drawn into the closest relations with Clay, alike from admiration of his talents and agreement with his mode of treating the great questions of that day.

Twelve years later, the two became estranged from each other, and the parts which they severally took corresponded to the differences in their character. Clay was a man by the character of his mind inclined to compromises; Calhoun was in his logic unyielding, and ever ready to push the principle which he supported to its extreme results.

The political antagonism between Clay and Calhoun never ceased; their relations of personal amity were broken off, and remained so for about a quarter of a century. But not very long before the death of Calhoun, Clay took pains to let his own strong desire for an interview of reconciliation be made known to his old friend and hearty associate in the time of our second war for independence. The invitation was readily accepted. In the interview between the two statesmen, at which Andrew Pickens Butler, Senator from South Carolina, was present, Clay showed genial self-possession and charm of manner that was remarked upon at the time and remembered; while the manner of Calhoun bore something of embarrassment and constraint.

In the character of Clay, that which will commend him most to posterity is his love of the Union; or, to take a more comprehensive form of expression, his patriotism, his love for his country, his love for his whole country. He repeatedly declares in his letters that on crossing the ocean to serve in a foreign land, every tie of party was forgotten, and that he knew himself only as an American. At home he could be impetuous, swift in decision, unflinching, of an imperative will; and yet in his action as a guiding statesman, whenever measures came up that threatened to rend the continent in twain, he was inflexible in his resolve to uphold the Constitution and the Union.

—George Bancroft in the Century.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

Queen Victoria is very fond of music, and is a very good musician. She studied music with Mendelssohn and singing with Lablache. As a consequence of this teaching, she prefers the old Italian music to any other, but at the same time she can appreciate anything that is good in the modern music. She is particularly fond of "Robin Adair" and such simple and old-fashioned ballads.

Tomaso Salvini, the great actor, has a luxurious town house in Florence, and a country villa on a high hill a few miles from the city, from which there are glorious views of the valley of the Arno and the Apennines. When in town he is very hospitable, and gives fine dinners to his male friends, and when in the country he leads a patriarchal life among his children and grandchildren. He is passionately fond of music, and is a good singer, while his strength and athletic skill are proverbial.

We will have a rare treat at the Metropolitan Theater on Feb. 1st. The Emma Juch Grand English Opera Troupe will be the attraction. It is a very large combination, and includes some of the finest operatic talent in the profession. While a Sacramento public is averse to extra charges for many of the companies that exact them, there can be no complaint in this instance. The Juch company is exceedingly large, and the most expensive troupe in the country. The capacity of the theater at ordinary prices would scarcely meet the expenses of the company, which numbers about one hundred people, a number of whom are under heavy salaries. The prices, under such circumstances are not out of proportion. Emma Juch is a popular favorite, and holds a high place in the operatic world, as well as a prominent social position. Her support consists of Charles Hedmont, a tenor of fame, Signor Tayliapeta, Frank Baxter, Laura Bellini, Marie Frubert, Lizzie Macruhof, Susie Leonhardt, Fanny Gonzales, Franz Vetta, William Bolt, and T. S. Guise. The scenery and wardrobes are new.

Book Chat.

The Marquis of Lorne's Canadian Story is said by critics to be a very stupid piece of literary work. He might have spiced it up by shoveling in a few interviews with American bank cashiers now sojourning in Montreal.

Mrs. A. F. Raffensperger, known to hundreds of readers as the author of a charming story of modern American life, Patience Preston, M. D., has just written a new novel for the help and interest of all young girls who desire to become self-supporting. Those Raeburn Girls make the experiment and succeed.

John G. Whittier said recently: "I have never been robust. From both my parents I inherited a sensitive, nervous temperament, and one of my earliest recollections is of a pain in the head, from which I have suffered all my life. Lately I have not been able to write for more than half an hour at a time—often not so long. But in many ways I feel that I have been blessed far beyond my deserving. I am grateful to the divine providence, and I tranquilly await the close of a life which has been longer and, on the whole, happier than I had reason to expect."

When I kissed her that night in the hallway
'Twas so dark that nothing was plain;
And not being sure but I'd miss her,
Why, 'twas right I should kiss her again.

There was darkness on everything round us,
I was reaching in vain for the door,
And the while I was seeking an exit
It so happened I kissed her some more.

And I wasn't quite sure as I left her,
As to whether she liked it or not;
But I know that I sighed to be back there
The farther away that I got.

And the next time I called it so happened
That we stood in that hallway once more.
And the gaslight fell over and round us
As I quietly moved to the door.

But her red cheeks so roguishly dimpled,
And her eyes shone so wickedly bright,
That I guessed where her thoughts were a straying,
And I reached up and turned out the light.

Professional Chat.

A big lawyer and little one had a heated argument in Court which led to some personal remarks, when the big fellow angrily said, contemptuously: "Why, I could pick you up and put you in my pocket." "In that event," said the little man, "you would have more law in your pocket than you ever had in your head."

A foppish lawyer in one of our large cities had a colored valet by the name of Pompey. The young gentleman was so fond of admiration that he would even solicit it from his servants. One day, having clothed himself to his own satisfaction, he turns to Pompey and says: "How do I look, Pompey?" "Look, massa, why you look jest like a lion." The master was gratified by the observation, but asked Pompey: "Where did you ever see a lion?" "Oh, massa," says Pompey, "I see one the other day, bringing dat load of furniture to de house." "Why, Pompey," says the master, "that was not a lion; that was a donkey." "Can't help it, massa, can't help it; you look jest like 'im."

"You can't teach an old dog new tricks," said old Judge Dewey of Yellow Mound City, when his wife begged him for the third time to remember to eat with his fork at her approaching dinner party. "I'll try not to forget, my dear, but I wasn't brought up to it. Folks ought to do what they're brought up to." He did not remember at the dinner party. His knife went to his mouth a dozen times. Next day, when the family was dining alone, the old Judge detected his youngest son, Frank, with his knife at his lips. "Eating with your knife, sir? Leave the table," thundered the Judge. "You'll eat bread and milk till further orders." "Really, papa, I think you are too hard on poor Frankie," said Mrs. Dewey, as the little fellow left the table. The faces of the elder boys and grown up daughters showed that they agreed with their mother. "He ate with his knife," growled the old man. "So did you at the dinner," retorted Mrs. Dewey severely. "Don't I know it!" retorted the Judge. "Don't I know it! I eat with my knife because I was brought up to it, but that boy wasn't brought up to it. None of my children were brought up to it, and if I catch one of 'em doing it, as sure as I live, I'll lock 'em up on spoon-victuals till they learn the use of a fork."

"Every man," said a learned writer, who had studied the operations of mind upon mind, "however humble in station or feeble in power, exercises some influence on those who are about him, for good or for evil." If I were to read the opinion of two or three well-known, eminent lawyers, who concurred in a case submitted to them for their opinion, I could not resist an impression, amounting to conviction, that the opinion was right. Mind acts and reacts on mind, and judges are not exempt from such impressions in cases where opinions have been pronounced by one or more of their associates on the bench. Such opinions furnish the first impressions of the case under review, and operate secretly and unconsciously to influence its decision, though unknown and unsuspected by the subjects of them, who would indignantly resent as an affront an intimation that they could be so influenced. Yet the fact exists, and their influences are rather underrated than overrated. Again, to expose the errors of their associates sitting beside them, their false reasoning, misapplication of legal principles, resulting in erroneous conclusions, demands a courage and independence that many judges do not possess. To these may be added the deference that is accorded to the opinion of an honest judge by his associates from a refined sentiment of respect or a reluctance to deal critically with his errors.

NOTES.

Tone, culture and refinement are the offspring of good books. We often hear the expression, "He is a born gentleman." But gentleness is acquired by thought and thought is produced by reading. The best heads that ever existed, said Emerson—Pericles, Plato, Julius Cæsar, Shakespeare, Goethe, Milton—were well read, universally educated men. We all like men who read books.

Women are the element and kingdom of illusion. They fascinate, because they are fascinating. They received at birth the fatal gift of fascination and have controlled the destiny of man and the world ever since their creation. We said they form the element of illusion, because they are uncertain—illusive. It is a literal truth, that no matter what misfortune may befall man, the proverb, "There's a woman at the bottom of it," applies.

The Prince of Battenburg has a grievance against his mother-in-law, Queen Victoria, and revolts at her interference in his domestic and personal affairs. It seems that the Prince wants to have a "latch key" and stay out with the boys, but the old lady is equally set upon having her son-in-law stay at home with his wife, and not go out after dusk. The Prince is thinking over his hard lot on his yacht out on the Mediterranean, and declines to hold any converse with his wife.

We like people who erect castles in the air; who picture bright things for their future. It is better for them, than gloomy dungeons. There is, at least, happiness in bright thoughts, even though they take on the fabric of a vision. Imaginary disasters are more to be dreaded than the real.

"Some of your griefs you have cured,
And the sharpest you still have survived;
But what torments of pain you endured
From evils that never arrived!"

The drama was first introduced by the clergy. Now it is said that whiskey was invented by an Irish monk very many years ago. He was a man of great learning—could read the stars and foretell eclipses and storms. He knew every herb and flower that grew and could concoct powerful cordials and medicines, and could heal diseases. The people feared him, however, and would not have any intercourse with him. But when they got the smell of his new invention—whiskey—he soon had hosts of friends and callers.

We understand that American artists are not averse to the liberal importation of foreign works of art, and have asked for the removal of the duty imposed on such works. There is no necessity to levy tribute on these articles because our revenue is sufficient already, and even though these articles might be considered luxuries, they are of a character that have an educational value. Their influence is civilizing and refining. There is no good reason why pictures and fine works of art should not be imported without extra duty.

The impediment of travel has been a severe blow to merchants; it has been more severe to editors. The exchanges do not arrive, the scissors are idle, and the weary editors are compelled to exercise their own brain power to furnish matter for the printers. This season is indeed hard. Strangely the newspapers lay their dullness to the prevalence of la grippe among the compositors. The printer is a convenient institution about a well regulated newspaper office. This silent worker is responsible for all errors that creep into papers. We venture he will recover from la grippe when the trains again run.

The race around the world between Nellie Bly and Lizzie Bisland is attracting what little of public attention here that is not absorbed in the great snow battle in the mountains. While it seems impossible that Miss Bisland will win, she has the sympathy of the public. The race has demonstrated the uncivility of the French in not extending to her a reasonable courtesy, and it was not her fault she missed the "La Champagne." There was quite a difference in the case of Miss Bly when the "Oceanic" entered the harbor of San Francisco. At any event, the record of Phineas Fogg will be materially lowered. We have never, however, been able to reconcile our prevailing ideas of the geography hereabouts with the description of Fogg's trip as narrated by the veracious Jules Verne. He describes the railroad from San Francisco to Sacramento as running "directly to the northeast, along the American river, which empties into San Pablo bay," and expresses regret at having passed through Sacramento at midnight, in this language: "They saw nothing of that large city, the seat of the State government of California, nor its fine wharves, its broad streets, its splendid hotels, its squares nor its churches." Another singular thing is, that an hour after leaving Oakland "a fine snow commenced to fall, which fortunately could not delay the progress of the train."

We met a friend the other day on the street, who for years has been afflicted in the most aggravated manner with rheumatism. Noticing his erect form and elastic step, we were curious to know how he got rid of the troublesome and painful disease, and asked him what remedy he used. With a laugh, he said, "Now, don't think I am a superstitious fool. The fact is I have not had a twinge of rheumatism for two years, and the remedy I used is so simple that you would scarcely believe me. Why," said he, "I was told that by keeping a small raw potato in my pocket, all traces of the rheumatism would vanish. Suffering as I had and was then, although thinking it foolish, I tried it, and here I am well and sound," and taking from his pocket a small raw potato, he said, "This is my charm. You may laugh, but it is the gospel truth." The gentlemen then informed us that he had witnessed the effect of this simple remedy upon a number of other persons, who all were freed from the torturing pains of the ailment.

The Bee is to be commended for its enterprise; condemned for ringing into its important reports the small growl of its reporters. The public read with interest its reports of the snow blockade, but have little interest if the proprietor of some wayside eating-house overcharged a reporter, or did not give him the head of the table. The public would infer from the Bee of Thursday that one of the most important incidents of the blockade was the reception of its reporter at "the alleged eating-house at Colfax," as it was the subject of a prominent illustration and of a quarter of a column of denunciation. In the course of a mass of words, occupying space that could have been profitably used, the versatile "Blockade Correspondents" write: "Our artist has sketched one of them (an eating-house) at Colfax, not with any intention of sending it echoing down the corridors of Time on the cable cars of Fame, but the rather as a habitation for the slow, unmovable finger of Scorn to point at." We assume that neither the public nor the proprietor of the hash-house care how long old Scorn allows his slow, unmovable finger to be exposed to the rigors of the Sierra winters. The people want the news.

Let the City Charter be Amended.

EDITORS THEMIS:—In common with other citizens interested in the city's welfare, I have read with care the opinions of the lawyers who have considered the question of a new charter, and its effect upon the Funded Debt Commission and its operations. I have been struck by their omission to refer in any manner to the able decision of Judge Armstrong, rendered last summer, in the case of Farrell vs. the city. This case, your readers will remember, was brought by the policemen to enforce the payment of their salaries under the terms of the Act of March 14, 1889. By that act the present city charter was amended, and power was conferred on the board of Police Commissioners to appoint thirty policemen instead of fifteen, as formerly. The city resisted the enforcement of the law on the ground that it was a special Act, and was, therefore, unconstitutional. Judge Armstrong, in an elaborate opinion, sustained the constitutionality of the Act. The case has been appealed to the Supreme Court, where it is now pending, undetermined. Messrs. A. P. Catlin and George A. Blanchard appeared in that case for the policemen and argued, with force and effect, and success, that the Act was constitutional, and that our present city charter, having been adopted before the new constitution took effect, could be amended by a law of that kind, even though special. It would seem, from their published opinions on the charter question, that their views have undergone a change, as both apparently now consider that such an Act (referring specially to the Act enlarging the powers of the Funded Debt Commission, which was passed at the same session), would be unconstitutional.

If Judge Armstrong's decision is right, and until reversed by the Supreme Court it must be assumed to be right, then all the difficulties suggested by Judge Beatty and by Mr. Devlin will at once be obviated. Then no election of freeholders is required; and it is not necessary for the people to frame a new organic law as proposed. If that decision be law, then all that our people need to do is to prepare, between now and the time when the next Legislature will convene, a draft of such amendments as they may desire to our present city charter, and submit the same in the form of an Act to the Legislature for passage. When the Act embodying such amendments should be finally passed by that body and approved by the Governor, we would have our new charter, without the enormous expense required if we go ahead under the present method; and, what is of far more importance, without in any manner interfering with the Funded Debt Commission, or impairing its capacity for good. In this view of the case it would seem advisable that all steps looking towards the framing of a new charter in the manner now proposed by the Trustees, be deferred until the Supreme Court shall have passed upon Judge Armstrong's decision; for, if it be affirmed, then clearly we have an easy way out of our difficulties. Judge Armstrong has given the matter as much thought and attention as any lawyer who has thus far expressed himself, and certainly his opinion is entitled to great weight. Yours, respectfully,

ALBERT M. JOHNSON.
Sacramento, January 23, 1890.

How High Was the Fence.

A suit was tried in the Superior Court this week of William Harris against Dr. G. L. Simmons in which the plaintiff claimed that the defendant had erected a building which encroached some inches on his land. The evidence showed that a tight board fence had been constructed, and the exact location of that and the two prior fences became a matter of minute inquiry. Dr. Simmons was on the stand and testified as to the condition of things as he had observed them in years past and to the present. The attorney for the plaintiff, Judge Catlin, inquired, "Now, doctor, what is the height of that tight board fence?" The doctor replied, "Well, I should judge it was about four feet high." "But," said Catlin, "the testimony in this case is that that fence is six feet high?" The doctor replied with some animation, "I am talking about my side. I do not know what it is on yours. But I say it is only about four feet high." "You say," queried the attorney, "that that fence is six feet high on one side and four feet high on the other?" "I do," replied the doctor with decision. "It is about four feet high on my side." "Well," said Catlin, "I wish you would explain, doctor, how it is possible for a fence to be six feet high on one side and only four feet on the other." "That is easily explained. The plaintiff here does not improve his property, and I have filled in my lot about two feet, and consequently the fence is that much lower on my side."

True Philanthropical Views.

A large hearted young matron has made some most excellent suggestions, which are embodied in the following summary, and which should prompt some of our philanthropical citizens to take action in accordance with the views so forcibly presented. The young mother grew eloquent as she expressed her ideas, gathered from the experience announced in her article:

One morning, a few days since, a young boy rapped at my door and asked for something to eat. He looked benumbed with the cold. I asked him in, and gave him a seat by the kitchen fire. The way in which he huddled up to the stove, and all but crawled into the oven, showed plainly how much he was in need of a little warmth.

While preparing his breakfast, I asked him a number of questions about himself, among others, where he had spent the previous night. He said he had slept all night in a chair, in a saloon.

The boy was a poor, ignorant lad, not over 17 years of age, who had never been taught any trade; and the only work that he knew how to do was kitchen work, such as the washing of dishes and other little chores about a house.

Now, we rail at and punish our criminal classes, but only the saloon furnishes a place of refuge for a poor, friendless boy, who finds himself penniless and alone in our city.

What remains for such as this one but the avenue of crime?

In this dreary winter weather, when we are all glad to snuggle up close to a good, warm fire, might it not be well for us to turn our thoughts to the poor unfortunates who have no warming influence for either mind or body.

It seems to me that at least a room, furnished with a few comforts, might be provided at small expense; and so arranged that those deserving of credit might be found out, and the willing ones provided with work whenever there is work to do. In this room, let there be a good stove, with attachments for heating water, to connect with a bathtub and a wash-room with stationary tubs—thus enabling a man to be clean and self-respecting as well as warm. A number of bunks could be arranged along the sides of the room, like the bunks on a steamer, and cots of straw could be provided at small expense. Then with a table, a few chairs and benches, and some reading matter, it seems to me a great measure of comfort could be put in the way of many a suffering wayfarer. A register could be kept, in which a man's name, his age, nativity, and any other statistics that might be deemed necessary, could be recorded. The men should be required to take care of the place and keep it in order, and personal cleanliness should be expected of every man.

A place of this kind would, of course, need some supervision. It could be made a part of the work of our policemen; or, if that should not be considered feasible, it would probably be an easy matter to find some man among the unemployed who would be glad, for a small salary, to attend to registering, and the general overseeing that would be necessary. Cards of recommendation could be issued to men who showed a willingness to work, and these should entitle a man to some consideration from people having it in their power to assist him. When the work on our present wretched roads can be commenced, there will be plenty of employment for some time for men who have a desire to earn an honest livelihood. If the body can be kept healthy and warm, the man is in condition to work, and it can then be known who is the willing one and who is not.

Desperate men are not going to be rendered less a menace to the community by being cold and exhausted. We often hear of men committing crime, so as to be arrested and put in jail, for the sake of getting a place to sleep; and if we must provide for them in any case, it seems to me it would be better to do it without being obliged to first brand them as felons.

Give Us More Drainage.

The continued rainstorm of the last few days has had the effect to flood very many of the streets and crossings in the residence portion of the city, particularly in the lower parts. This result could naturally be expected, when it is considered that the avenues of escape of water from the city are so contracted. All of the water that is precipitated in the city north of R street by the rains, or pumped in at the waterworks, must find its way out through a small opening in the R street levee; and, with the additional water between R and Y streets, must pass through a like opening in the Y street levee. It is very apparent that these outlets do not afford sufficient drainage facilities. On Y street, between Seventh and Eighth, the city has a drainage pump, which in former years, in conjunction with the Sixth street opening, has been able in a very short time to carry off the water into Caulfield lake; and we believe this is the first season when there has been such an accumulation of water in the city, that the pump has not been used. The people in the lower part of the town whose property is being injured, as they think unnecessarily, are disposed to enlarge the opening in the levee. But the better way would be for the city authorities to immediately start up the steam pump. In a few days the streets would be comparatively without water. As it is now, very many of the street crossings and, in places, the sidewalks are so submerged as to render foot-passage impossible. Along H street, very many of the crossings do not admit of access to the street cars. The Trustees this afternoon should start the pump to work.

Human Nature Sticking Out.

It is regarded that a roughing trip in the mountains is the best way possible to bring out the peculiarities of the members of the party, but on a larger scale we are inclined to think the snow hounding of a train of passengers will beat the camping party in that regard. So far as reports go the passengers on the blockaded trains took in the situation with intelligent philosophy, and so far as we know, the only one who availed himself of this opportunity to advertise himself as a swine was a Chicago drummer, who has been kindly afforded by the press an opportunity to waste much valuable space. This man found the coffee bad and the cups dirty. "But," he said, "the worst part of it was they did not give us any milk. Some of the shovellers and train men seemed to eat the stuff with a relish, but you know that one who is used to different and better things can scarcely force down that kind of food." The chances are ten to one that this fellow was raised on fodder no more luxurious than what he got here, for observation demonstrates that a high bred man always adjusts good naturedly to circumstances, while the boor always wants it understood that he has a delicate stomach.

The Business Situation.

The snow blockade is a very severe damper on the business interests of this city, and doubtless San Francisco. Very many of our wholesale houses have their agents snow or mud-bound in the mountains, and the interruption of travel has made it impossible to ship even such goods as might be ordered by wire. The fact, however, remains that the supplies in very many of the mountain towns are much depleted, and as soon as the roads are open heavy consignments will be sent out that will, in a great measure, offset the present stagnation. The dullness consequent on the existing situation is not alone confined to the wholesale trade, but retailers suffer because of the impassable condition of the roads in the surrounding country, and the streets in the city. Practically, so far as the city is concerned, the ladies cannot get out, as they are not as good waders as men.

The Golden West has commenced its sixth volume. It starts out in its sixth year with a bright prospect. There is no reason why the Native Sons should not make this a valuable literary journal.

Prevailing Sickness.

Whether it be la grippe or not, it is certain that there is a great deal of sickness in this State. In this city very many of the leading lawyers were not able to appear yesterday, though they had business in the Superior Court, on the law calendar. A few days of sunshine will doubtless work a change. Sacramento, however, is not alone; deaths are occurring with unusual frequency in other localities.

Miss Mildred E. Kercheval, well known in Sacramento, died at Napa city Wednesday morning, and her funeral took place here yesterday from the residence of George W. Lorenz. Miss Kercheval had been a sufferer for several years. She was a young lady who had endeared herself to a wide circle of acquaintances, and her death is much regretted.

Death of John Francis Talbot.

John Francis, son of John Talbot, died at the residence of his father this morning of consumption. He was aged about 25, and a native of Sacramento. The young man was a member of Sunset Parlor, N. S. G. W., and had a large circle of acquaintances.

Death of Chas. G. Cogswell.

Deputy Sheriff Chas. G. Cogswell died Thursday. He had been sick, but presumed himself recovered, and actively engaged in his official duties. His death was unexpected. Mr. Cogswell was born in New York State, March 18, 1853, and resided in Galt, in this county, for many years, and there filled the position of Constable and Deputy Sheriff. On the election of Sheriff McMullen he was appointed a Deputy Sheriff. His death is regretted by his fellow-officers at the Court-house. He was an officer faithful to his duties, and since his connection with the county government, earned the respect of those with whom he was thrown in contact. He was a son-in-law of John Brewster, of Galt.

Death of John Cogan.

John Cogan, the telegraph operator, who died at Cascade, a brother of Charles M. Cogan, was a young man well known in this city. He was aged 29 years, and a native of Canada. He arrived in Sacramento when about 14 years of age. He learned telegraphy in this city, and was for some time operator at Courtland. Afterwards he filled various positions in the State of Nevada and on the Oregon division in the service of the railroad company. For a time he was employed in a surveying party of the State Engineer's department. He had been located at Cascade about a year and a half, and after the news of his sickness was received here every facility was afforded to afford him relief. His remains will be brought to Sacramento for interment at the earliest possible moment. He was the youngest of a family of eight children, and the first to die, yet had it not been that the snows ward off aid that otherwise could have been obtained, in all probability he would have survived.

An Old Time Rock.

Dave Scannell, who knows more about handling big fires than any man on the coast, has been the subject of very many funny anecdotes. One time in San Francisco, he in company with Matt Brady, and Lightning Riley, his two able assistants, were returning home after a hard battle with a disastrous conflagration about 6 A. M., they felt as though something invigorating would do them good, so they stopped at Barry and Patton's famous first-class resort, where liquid refreshments were twenty-five cents per drink, and ordered cocktails for three, life size and strong, to take the chill off. John Whitehead, the genial barkeeper, was behind the bar, and knew what the trio wanted. He set to work to fill the orders, taking a large punch glass to mix the drinks in, the proper ingredients were put in, and then the glass filled with the best whiskey in the bar, it being his purpose to mix all three drinks at once. When the proper mixture was made he was in the act of removing the spoon preparatory to dividing the decoction into three equal parts, when Chief Engineer Scannell quietly reached out, took the glass and contents raised it to his lips and with "Here's looking at you, boys," drained it to the bottom. Placing the empty glass on the bar, he turned to his companions with the remark, "Well, boys, order yours." The astonished barkeeper, was still more astonished when Brady and Riley gave directions to mix theirs in the same manner and quality of that just partaken of by the chief. Whitehead, seeing the little joke, took it in good part and mixed up a duplicate and triplicate for the chief's assistants. After that when Scannell or his lieutenants called for cocktails after a big fire, he took care to mix them in separate glasses.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

It is reported that R. S. Carey's farm in Yolo is likely to be inundated, and his large band of fine stock destroyed.

The promised lecture by Mrs. Florence Williams, in aid of the Froebel Kindergarten Society, has been postponed on account of the storm.

The Knight's Landing passenger train met with an accident last night, by running into a washout, and killing Engineer Cox and wounding Fireman Neal.

The Bee and Record-Union have active and fearless reporters at the front in this unprecedented snow blockade. The reports are interesting and instructive.

The Howard Athenium company is snowed in at Shady Run. The members of the company are making the best of the unfortunate situation, which means a very great loss to the management.

There will be a benefit for St. Paul's Church at the Metropolitan Theatre on Wednesday evening, January 29th. Miss Jessie Couthout, assisted by Prof. Hugo Mansfeldt, Professor Stewart and others will appear.

Burt Kidder's room, at the Lull House, was burglarized last night, and a quantity of valuables appropriated. Burt has just committed matrimony, and now burglary has been committed against him. This is a bad beginning.

On February 5th the Exempt Firemen's Association will hold their regular annual banquet. These old-timers are gradually but surely thinning out, and it will not be many years before their numbers can be counted on the fingers.

The Sacramento Athletic Club gave an interesting as well as artistic exhibition for their friends on Thursday evening. The athletic sports were followed by a dance. This club is one of the deservedly favored institutions of this city.

The Bee has unearthed and exposed another swindling scheme. The American Building and Loan Association, according to the Bee's exposé, is a gigantic swindle. Some of our leading business and professional men have fallen victims to the smoothness of an oily-tongued fellow named W. J. Tyler. Every scheme of this character has been ultimately exposed by the relentless war of the Bee.

Popular Music at Popular Prices.

Popular music at 10 cents per copy; prices elsewhere range from 35 cents to 75 cents. Catalogues furnished on application. Hammer's music store, No. 820 J street. * agency Chickering & Son's pianos.

Scottish Lads.

The Caledonians celebrated the birth of "Bobbie" Burns last night at Armory Hall. These Highland fellows know how to entertain and can take more solid enjoyment in the same length of time than any other people. We have been with them on many occasions and can vouch for the truth of the statement. The bagpipes were manipulated by Norman Beaton and R. A. Renwick. An interesting musical programme was carried out. The officers of the club for this year are: Chief, Tom Scott; First Chieftain, John Morrison; Second Chieftain, J. Stewart; Third Chieftain, H. W. Ogg; Fourth Chieftain, J. W. Warrack.

The Weather.

The total rainfall for the past week and up to 9 o'clock this morning, amounts to 3.30 inches, making for this month 6.54 inches, and for the season 23.53 inches, as against 9.61 inches to an equal date last year. This season has been exceeded but twice in the past forty years, and these years show the amount up to February 1st, of each season, and were as follows: 1861-62, to February 1st, 25.85 inches; 1885-86, to February 1st, 25.07 inches. There need be but two and one-half inches between now and next Saturday morning, which will give this season to that date an excess of all others since records began. There is scarcely a prospect of that much rainfall in the next week, although the prevailing prognostications prevents accuracy in anything regarding weather and its changeable features.

The highest and lowest temperature during the week was 52 and 34, as against 59 and 31 last year during the same period. The rainfall last night was exceedingly heavy throughout northern California, being greatest along the coast. During the 24 hours ending at 5 o'clock this morning there was 1.60 inches at Red Bluff, 1.40 inches in this city and 2.08 inches in San Francisco; these are the Signal Service stations. The barometer is now slowly rising (ordinarily a good sign), wind southwest, and light to gentle in velocity, with the clouds elevating themselves higher above the earth and showing rifts to the westward, through which a glimpse of the beautiful blue sky can be discerned.

FLASHES.

A turnup nose is no direct sign of a cabbage head.

When a singer's throat is raw her song cannot be well done.

The fellow that growls at this world is not likely to go to a better one.

Chance even enters into the church—the choristers get money by chants.

Nearly every person is penitent if getting on his sneeze is any indication.

When we impute to ourselves a fault, we generally expect a compliment in return.

A two-legged horse is on exhibition at a museum. Two-legged jackasses are more common.

We are inclined to think that la grippe is a disease largely imaginative. Our observation of the sufferers here is that the "grip" has been taken out of them.

It is strange that the French steamship managers would not stop their "champagne" a couple of hours to give Miss Bisland, our American world-trotter, a chance.

The doctor grabs the sick man's gold, And adds it to his pelf; 'Tis thus he heeds the warning old: Physician, heal thyself.

Fine Table Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Producers of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

O. W. Nordwell

MERCHANT TAILOR AND DRAPER,

218 Bush St.,

SAN FRANCISCO.

My new invoice includes the very LATEST STYLES and inspection is invited as to quality of GOODS, the FIT, and PRICE.

Short-Hand ECLECTIC!

The system taught by all the leading Colleges on the Coast, viz: Heald's and the Pacific, of San Francisco; Woodbury's, of Los Angeles; DePue's, of Oakland; Garden City, of San Jose; Stockton College, of Stockton, and

Bainbridge College of Sacramento

Why? Because it can be learned in one-half the time required for the old moss-covered systems.

Gattmann & Wilson,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

Fancy and Staple DRY GOODS

601 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Pacific Optical Institute

D. M. BISHOPP, Proprietor,

Has REMOVED TO 806 J STREET.

D. H. QUINN HATTER,

401 J Street, corner of Fourth.

HATS MADE TO ORDER. Old Hats Renovated to Equal New.

Lavenson's

THE LARGEST AND MOST RELIABLE HOUSE IN SACRAMENTO.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN, Formerly of Agricultural Park.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice, SACRAMENTO.

H. A. PETRALLI,

DEALER IN

Stoves, Metals and Tinware

716 K STREET.

PLUMBING, GASFITTING, AND ROOFING. Jobbing a Specialty.

GARZOLI & GENIS,

FRUIT AND PRODUCE,

BUTTER, CHEESE, EGGS, ETC.

POULTRY, FISH AND OYSTERS,

CALIFORNIA MARKET,

Telephone 188.

712 K Street.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

R. DAVIS, NOTARY PUBLIC, Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said County.

In the matter of A. M. Auburtus, an insolvent debtor.

A. M. Auburtus, an insolvent debtor, having applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, it is hereby ordered that the Clerk of this Court give notice to all creditors who have proved their debts, to appear before this Court, at the Court-room thereof, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at the hour of 1:30 o'clock P. M., and show cause, if any they have, why the said A. M. Auburtus should not be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

It is further ordered, that notice of said application be given to the creditors by mail, and by publication once a week for four weeks, in the THEMIS, a newspaper published in said county.

Dated, January 24, 1890. W. C. VAN FLEET, Judge. C. W. BAKER, Attorney for Petitioner. j25w4

"THE OLD BACHELOR."

Old Leras, the faithful bookkeeper of a commercial house in Paris, came slowly out of the establishment one evening, and was quite dazzled by the rays of the setting sun. He had worked all day in the yellow gas-light of the office in the rear part of the store, dark as a well and almost as narrow. This little room, where for forty years he had passed his days was so obscure that gas was required at all times, except from 3 to 5 o'clock in summer.

It was always cold, always dark there. The only window opened into a dirty court, with a ditch always exhaling an odor of sewer gas.

M. Leras had for forty years entered this little prison every morning promptly at 8 o'clock, and had remained there till 7 at night, doubled up over the books of the firm with the diligence of a good employé.

He received 3,000 francs a year. He had remained a bachelor, his narrow means not permitting him to take a wife. Moreover, having never known much enjoyment, his desires were very limited. Only occasionally, overcome by the thought of the dead monotony of his life, he gave vent to a wish quite harmless and platonic: "Sacristi! if I had 5,000 francs a year I would have a good time."

He had never had a good time in his life. His life had passed without events, without emotions, without hopes. Even the faculty of day dreaming, common to all, seemed to be in him undeveloped, so absolutely was he without ambition or aspiration.

At the age of twenty he had entered the house of Messrs. Labuze & Co., and had never left them.

In 1856 he had lost his mother, and in 1859 his father died; and once, in 1868, he changed his lodgings. Such was his record.

Every morning at 6 his alarm clock, with its prolonged and frightful racket, made him leap from his bed.

Twice, however, once in 1886 and once in 1874, the mechanism had failed to work. Of this he had never discovered the cause.

His habit was to rise, wash, dress, make his bed, sweep his chamber, arrange his commode, and dust his furniture; all this occupying an hour and a half.

Then he would go out, buy a penny roll, and take his way to the store, eating as he went along.

Thus days, weeks, months, years had passed. Formerly when he looked in the glass he had observed that his mustache was blonde, his hair curly; now he saw last evening a white mustache and a bald forehead in that same glass. Forty years had run their sands—long, yet rapid forty years; empty, barren, without a souvenir, without even a misfortune, if we except the death of his parents—nothing.

Dazzled by the setting sun on this lovely afternoon in spring, M. Leras decided to take before dinner a long promenade. In this luxury he indulged himself four or five times a year.

It was the first warm evening of the season; soft, balmy. How it intoxicates one with the joy of living.

He passed the boulevards; he reached the Champs-Élysée. The Arc de Triomphe cut its black man sharply out of the luminous horizon. When the old bookkeeper reached this, the top of the hill near this great monument, he felt himself hungry, and resolved to dine at one of the wine-sellers' stands near. He was served on the sidewalk in the usual French style, with a fried de mouton-poulette, asparagus, and salad. He washed down his Brie cheese with half a bottle of wine. Such a dinner he had not had in a long time. He recklessly added a demi-tasse of coffee, and finished with a little glass of fine champagne.

Gay as a lark the old man felt after he had paid and started to go his way. "Voilà une bonne soirée!" he said to himself. "I will continue my promenade to as far as the Bois de Boulogne, it will do me good."

The words of an old song came to him, and remained obstinately in his mind:

When the woods I see,
My lover says to me:
"Come rest, my belle,
In this shady dell."

He hummed it, and kept humming it, no sooner ending than beginning anew in spite of himself.

Night descended on Paris; warm, no wind, very warm. Old Leras reached the verge of the wood and saw the carriages pass him in an endless stream. They were brilliant. Fair women was there, all smiles, love, happiness. The men were in black, the women in white, or light colors. It seemed to him that every carriage contained a loving couple. He imagined he detected their tender glances, their caresses, their hidden embraces. Had the champagne turned the poor man's brain that he should have this hallucination of an interminable procession of lovers breathing their vows on the warm spring air, under the light of the stars?

He sat down on the end of one of the benches. A vagabond girl shortly came up and seated herself on the other.

"Good day, little man," she said.

He answered not a word.

"Don't you think I'm pretty?"

Slowly he responded: "You are mistaken in the person, madam."

He walked on, an oppressed feeling at his heart.

A hundred steps further he was accosted by another unfortunate.

"Why are you here?" he asked her. "Why do you do this?"

"Because I must live; because I can't help it," she answered; and she left him with a wicked laugh.

Others passed. Still the procession of carriages continued. Woman, woman, woman!

The old man began to tremble. Something dark and sinister seemed to rise in his brain.

"I was sorry to come here," he said; "this is no place for me."

His thoughts turned on love—love; animal, spiritual, passionate, mercenary, conjugal, illicit.

Love! What had he known of that sweet, tender emotion? Nothing; and he pondered on the life he had led, so different from that of others, so sombre, sad, lonely, empty.

Suddenly, as if by the lifting of a veil, he saw, like a revelation, the utter wretchedness of his condition, the brute monotony of all the misery of his forlorn existence.

A wretched past, a wretched present, a wretched future.

Still on sweeps the carriages with their couples, still wander the girls seeking their lovers.

It seemed as if all humanity passed before his eyes; and in and through it all he saw but this one thing, the union of two hearts, or two people. And he—was alone! standing as one apart and regarding them. Alone! He would be alone to-morrow, alone next year, alone always. Alone—like no one else in the world. He sat down exhausted. The picture rose before him of his lonely room—dark, cheerless, solitary: no echo of human voice there.

He thought of happy families, and the contrast appalled him. He was struck with a great dread of going back again to that solitary chamber, of retiring alone to that couch.

The noise of the great city came to him as a confused murmur. He wandered off deep into the wood.

A bright spring morning! The sun is high up over the Bois de Boulogne, vehicles are beginning to circulate, pedestrians arrive, gayly chatting.

A couple stray into a secluded by-path. All at once the young woman, lifting her eyes, sees some strange and dreadful sight.

"What is it?"

She screams and swoons. The police arrive. An old man is found swinging in mid-air, dead. He has hanged himself by means of his suspenders. The usual formalities ensued. It was proved that the deceased had been seen to go to the Bois the evening before. Papers found upon him established his identity as bookkeeper in the house of Messrs. Fabuze & Co., and by name Leras.

The deceased came to his death by suicide, the cause of which was unknown, possibly while in a fit of temporary insanity.

Though not expressly so stated by its author, yet that the story conveys a moral is evident.—N. Y. World.

C. H. Stephenson, DENTIST,

CORNER SEVENTH AND J STREETS, OVER
LYON'S DRY GOODS STORE.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA—COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman, doing business under the firm name of Wm. M. Lyon & Co., insolvent debtors.

Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman having filed in this Court their petition, schedule and inventory in insolvency, from which it appears that they are insolvent debtors, the said Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman are hereby declared to be insolvent. The Sheriff of the county of Sacramento is hereby directed to take possession of all the estate, real and personal, of the said insolvent debtors, except such as may be by law exempt from execution, and of all their deeds, vouchers, books of account, and papers, and to keep the same safely until the appointment of an assignee of their estate. All persons are forbidden to pay any debts to the said insolvents or to deliver any property, belonging to such insolvents, to them or to any person, firm, corporation or association, for their use; and the said debtors are hereby forbidden to transfer or deliver any property, until the further order of this Court, except as herein ordered.

It is further ordered, that all the creditors of said debtors be and appear before the Hon. John W. Armstrong, Judge of the Superior Court of the county of Sacramento, in open Court, at the Court-room of said Court, in the city and County of Sacramento, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock P. M., of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estate of said debtors.

It is further ordered, that the order be published in the THEMIS, a newspaper of general circulation, published in the city and county of Sacramento, as often as the said paper is published, before the day set for the meeting of creditors.

And it is further ordered, that in the meantime all proceedings against the said insolvents be stayed.

JOHN W. ARMSTRONG,
Judge of the Superior Court.

ED. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Insolvents.
Dated, January 10, 1890.

j11-w5

TUFTS'

Verbine COUGH Balsam

WILL

CURE YOUR COUGH, COLD, OR INFLUENZA, sure, or money refunded.

A. C. Tufts, Druggist, 10th and J Sts.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J, SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

American Eagle Hotel

Corner Twelfth and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO.

This house has been put in first-class condition, and also newly furnished—everything being new from office to kitchen.

Board and Room, per Week, - - $5.00 to $7.00

MEALS, 25 CENTS.

Terms made with families.

GEO. W. NEWBERT, Proprietor.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEEEPING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6. Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4. Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,

SACRAMENTO.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS,

Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & AND & MECHANICAL & DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

Gas and Steam Fitter.

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SOUR MASH BOURBON WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagele & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGLE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Goldeu Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.

Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 225.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH

BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

ELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER,

BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

FRUIT AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AND PLANTS.

1,000,000

Trees and Nursery Stock for sale at LOW PRICES, of Best Varieties Deciduous Trees.Also, ORANGE, LEMON, OLIVE, FIG, AND NUT-BEARING TREES, of most approved varieties.Nurseries: Near Acampo Station, San Joaquin. Principal Depot: No. 813
Second Street, near Passenger Depot, Sacramento.

Send for Catalogue. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Address: REED & VAN GELDER, Nurserymen, Sacramento, Cal.

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.

General Printers,

—THE—

BEST APPOINTED PRINTING OFFICE

NORTH OF SAN FRANCISCO,

—410—

J STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

STABLE TO LET.

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

B. Ruhl Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and
Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

POST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city.
Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exerescences, etc.,
Positively Cured or No Pay.
No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated.

Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.

John Service, Auburn, lupus.

Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.

Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.

N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.

J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.

John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.

Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.

Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.

I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.

Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

-Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Open Valve A, pull off the hose, and water follows immediately.

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

The Task.

Devise a little song of love,
And set thee like a picture, there?
Thou givest me a task above
What any mortal hand may dare!So tender and so true of heart;
Se meekly great, so wisely good;
I could not paint thee as thou art,
And would not, darling, if I could.Though fond the task, I must forbear,
Or painting, do thee grievous wrong;
Else darling, all men everywhere
Will know thee, when they read my song.But were this not—could words portray
Our love—the sweetest ever chose,
What can the dull, cold shadow say
About the red, ripe, living rose?Ask me no song! Words lose their power
Where true enthroned Love doth sit,
And fell like dewdrops from a flower
When the wind comes and kisses it.Such music who should understand,
Though my heart sung it beat by beat?
Ah! we are travelers in a land
Where no man speaks our language, sweet.
—Alice Carey.

Polly and the Hen.

Our next neighbor, writes a correspondent, owned an amusing parrot which was always getting into mischief, but usually got out again without much trouble to herself. When she had done anything for which she knew she ought to be punished, she would hold her head to one side, and eyeing her mistress, protest in a sing-song tone: "Polly is a good girl," until she saw her mistress smile; then she would flap her wings and cry out in exultation: "Hurrah! Polly is a good girl!" She was allowed to go free, and usually took her exercise in the garden, where she promenaded back and forth on the walks, sunning herself, and warning off all intruders.

One morning, a hen strayed out of the chicken-yard, and was quietly picking up its breakfast, when Poll marched up to her, and called out "Shoo!" in her shrill voice, emphasizing the command with a smart pick of her beak on the chicken's head. The poor hen retreated to her own quarters, running as fast as she could, followed by Poll, who screamed "Shoo!" at every step.

The hen had her revenge a few days later, when Poll extended her morning walk into the chicken yard. Here, with her usual curiosity, she went peering into every corner, till she came to the old hen upon her nest. The hen made a dive for Poll's yellow head, but missed it. Poll, thinking discretion the better part of valor, turned to run, the hen, with her wings wide-spread, following close after.

As she ran, Poll screamed in her shrillest tones, "O Lord! O Lord!"

A member of the family, who had witnessed the whole performance, thought it time to interfere in Poll's behalf, as the angry hen was gaining on her. He ran out, and stooping down held out his hand. Poll lost no time in traveling up to his shoulder. Then, from her high vantage-ground, she turned her head to one side, and, looking down on her foe, screamed: "Hello there! shoo!"

The frightened hen acknowledged defeat by returning to her nest as rapidly as she had come.

The Shepherd and the Jogie.

In the old eastern legends it is related that during the reign of King Clutch, named Lahel, a Jogie lived who was a wise man and wonderfully skilled in the preparation of herbs. For years he had been occupied in searching for a peculiar kind of grass, the roots of which should be burned and a man thrown into the flames. The body so burned would become gold, and any of the members might be removed without the body sustaining any loss, as the parts so taken would always be self-restored.

It so occurred that this Jogie, while following a flock of goats, observed one among them eating of the grass he was so anxious to procure. He immediately rooted it up and desired the shepherd, who was near, to assist him in procuring firewood. When he had collected the wood and kindled a flame, into which the grass was thrown, the Jogie, wishing to render the shepherd the victim of his avarice, desired him under some pretense, to make a few circuits around the fire. The man, however, suspecting foul play, watched his opportunity, and, seizing the Jogie himself, he threw him into the fire and left him to be consumed. Next day, on returning to the spot, great was his surprise to behold the golden figure of a man lying among the embers.

He immediately chopped off one of the limbs and hid it. The next day he returned to take another, when his astonishment was yet greater to see that a fresh limb had replaced the one already taken.

In short, the shepherd soon became wealthy and revealed the secret of his riches to the king, Lahel, who by the same means accumulated so much gold that every day he was in the habit of giving one lac and twenty-five thousand rupees in alms to the poor.

God's Acre.

The old Teutonic and Saxon term, "God's Acre," as applied to the last resting place of the human body, Longfellow made the theme of one of his most touching and beautiful poems; it is an eminently suggestive term. The acre or field of God contains the seed hidden in the ground for a while, to ripen into a glorious harvest; and, just as we write the labels in the spring time for seed we put in the ground, that we may remember what beautiful flower is to spring from the little gray atom, so we put a stone at the head of the grave of our dear. The name "cemetery" also signifies merely the place where one may lie, slumbering for awhile, till the dawn shall come and the trumpet sound.

Twelve Million Machines IN USE.

THE LIGHT RUNNING

DOMESTIC Sewing Machine

Leads all others. Most Durable, Simplest, Best.

Every Agent claims the machines he sells the best, but talk is cheap. TIME is the only real test of genuine merit. During TWENTY-SIX YEARS of practical use the DOMESTIC has withstood this test. It stands to-day without a peer. Recommended by all White Goods Sewers, Dressmakers, Tailors and Manufacturers. Used by over 4,000 Families in Sacramento City. It is the only Sewing Machine with really Self-Setting Attachments. It costs you nothing to try it before you buy another. Sold on easy installments. Old machines taken in exchange.

Domestic Sewing Machine Co.
A. J. POMMER, Selling Agent,
Northwest corner Ninth and J streets, Sacramento.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured

HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

TO BE HAD ONLY AT

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihan's

418 J Street.

MAGGI'S HOT BOUILLON!

Just Out: Maroon Marmalade

Simon Sturmer, WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,
No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR and COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

Joe Poheim the TAILOR

HAS NOW A

GENUINE CLEARANCE SALE.

Suits Made to Order from $20.

Pants Made to Order from $5.

Other Garments in Proportion.

This Sale is to CONTINUE FOR SIXTY DAYS ONLY. PERFECT FIT AND BEST OF WORK-MANSHIP GUARANTEED, OR NO SALE.

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South
Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

Klune & Floberg,

WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS
Agents for Rockford Watch Co.
NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON,

The Leading Merchant Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501 -- 507 K, cor. Fifth

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING! LOW PRICES!

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.

Southern Pacific Company
PACIFIC SYSTEM.

Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at
SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.25 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3.40 A
7.05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6.45 P
7.25 P	Knights Landing	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East.	6.25 P
12-01 A	{ Central Atlantic Express } Ogden and East.	6.00 A
3-00 P	Oroville	10-30 A
3-00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10.30 A
10.40 A	Redding via Willows	4.00 P
6.15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7.25 P
6-50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8.35 P
3-05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11.40 A
4-00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10-40 P
*10.00 A	San Francisco via Steamers	6.00 A
11.25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2.25 P
6.50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11.40 P
11.25 A	San Jose	2.25 P
7-05 P	Santa Barbara	9.55 A
6.50 A	Santa Rosa	11.40 A
3-05 P	Santa Rosa	7.25 P
9-00 A	Stockton and Galt	6.45 P
7-05 P	Stockton and Galt	9.55 A
8-00 P	Truckee and Reno	6.25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno	6.00 A
12.05 P	Colfax	10.20 A
6.50 A	Vallejo	11.40 A
3-05 P	Vallejo	8.35 P
*12.15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10.25 A
*7-15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2.40 P
*5-20 P	Folsom	*6.50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning, P for afternoon.
A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities
of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED'K COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento
that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers
and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

THE EMERSON

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1890.

No. 50.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

There is good in evil. An old saying, and a true one, is that it is an ill wind that blows not good for somebody. While we always prefer the good, and none of the ills of the world, still we find that Bad is often the best doctor. We are prone to look upon the devastation made by the floods and snow within the month last past, as of a great calamity. But the philosopher can discern the good that will come of these convulsions of nature. The ways of Providence are past finding out. The Almighty works in mysteries, which poor, weak men cannot comprehend until long after the events. The lessons of the snow blockade and floods are not lost, and will result in good by prompting the interested parties to guard against them in the future. While hundreds of thousands in value of property has been destroyed, it will be the means of preserving millions in the future. The railroad companies are likely to reap an ultimate profitable result from these great disasters, in this: Congress will without doubt be softened with sympathy, and some of the threatened hardships against the railroads will be averted. Indeed, it is more and more verified as the world grows older, that there is no evil without good following close in the wake. The frosts, and snow, and floods, and drought that kills the harvests for a year, serve to preserve the crops for a generation. The frost that nips the young buds destroys the weevil that infest the trees and plants, thus saving the harvest for many years thereafter. Wars, fires and plagues serve a good purpose in the end, and result in the unification of the doctrine of the survival of the fittest. No matter how bad things may appear, there is a tendency that they will ultimately result in good—right themselves. The threatened inundation of this city will arouse our sleeping energies to protect ourselves in the future. The deplorable condition of our streets, while productive of great injury and inconvenience for the present, will bring us to realize that this state of affairs shall not exist next year. It is necessary to prod humanity with evil and suffering in order to make that humanity realize the good things of the world. The late rebellion was thought to be a dire calamity, and in one sense it was, but out of this clash of arms and fearful sacrifice comes a new nation founded on the true principles of liberty and free government. The old routine was broken up and rotten systems were relegated to oblivion. The old washerwoman's sentiment is the true one: "The more trouble the more lion; that's my principle."

An old time Methodist bishop once drew up the imaginary forces of the Lord entrenched in the churches, while the alignment of the troops of the devil was made in the following manner: The Sunday lines of travel are prostituted highways for the transportation of the devil's troops and military stores; gaming houses are his military academies; tippling houses are the devil's outposts, where he enlists his raw recruits; dancing masters and fiddlers are his fuglemen to train them in his infernal tactics; infidel papers are the devil's banners, on whose vile folds is inscribed: "I believe in all unbelief;" distributors of novels and all sorts of infidel publications are the devil's colporteurs; infidel orators, whether called lecturers or preachers, are the devil's ambassadors; race grounds are the devil's muster fields, where he reviews his troops and numbers his forces; theatres and circuses are the devil's chapels, where his worshipers shout his praise. The battle has been going on for many years, and it appears that the devil has got the best of it. People still go to theaters and circuses, still travel on Sunday, publish newspapers which do not denounce the infidel orator, and the people will attend the race-course where the devil musters his troops.

The San Francisco Post has this week devoted considerable of its space to the subject of charity in that great city. Its head-lines are rather startling to Californians, and one would almost believe that journal was printed in Iceland, or some other place where civilization is comparatively unknown. The head-lines of its most prominent article read: "Poverty." "Dire Distress in the City." "The Worst Times Ever Known Here." "Men, Women and Children Begging for Bread." "Many Families making a Desperate Struggle for Existence." The two-column article under this heading is introduced by the following very doleful picture:

Poverty and gaunt want stalks abroad in the city of San Francisco, for the first time in its history, perhaps. At least the wolf has never before gnashed his teeth at so many thresholds. Hundreds of families are destitute and subsisting absolutely upon the charities, or upon the benevolence of kind neighbors. Scores of good people with means are in the field already and ministering to the needy, yet there is not enough of them to handle the work. Men who have never before known what it is to be dependent are compelled to ask alms on the street. Women of respectability and standing are compelled to confess the lack of bread in their households, and openly apply to institutions that dole out provisions and clothing. Hosts of children, whose parents are sick at home or out of work, are sent abroad like common mendicants to beg on the streets. Nothing like it has been known here before.

There is no Californian that will swallow such a statement, and the Post must be managed by men who are entirely unacquainted with the people of the State. There is no distress in the city of San Francisco or any place on this coast that will not be relieved the moment it is known. In this matter of the Post it develops from its editorial page that it is but a shallow dodge in the direction of what nowadays newspapers are pleased to term "enterprise," for that journal gives the particular address of its office and requests the public to leave contributions there, ostensibly for the benefit of the poor, but practically to boom the journal. We have little patience with a journal that cannot survive upon its own merits, and with the people generally despise a resort to the picturing of imaginary troubles to enlist sympathy. It is very evident in this case that the San Francisco paper is endeavoring to make capital for itself at the expense of such as may be in want in the bay city, for it is hardly reasonable that any intellectual person who is disposed to be charitable will make a newspaper office the dispensary of his bounty when so many responsible charitable societies exist. Our observation has been that when a newspaper seeks to advertise itself in this indelicate way it succeeds in deservedly earning public contempt. The rule has been since the beginning of the world that the dispensation of charities shall be without display, and it has been only of late years that calamities have been seized upon for advertising purposes. It became quite fashionable for newspapers to open subscription books in their business offices, and to publish the names of any one who cared for the cheap notoriety of seeing his name in print. The people of California are abundantly able to care for their deserving poor, and it is not at all likely that time will come within the lifetime of those now living when it will be necessary for our newspapers to turn themselves into poorhouse agencies.

The unprecedented snow blockade on the overland railroad lines, has continued to occupy most of the attention of the press and the people for more than two weeks past. It has exemplified two things: The indomitable will of the railroad management in endeavors to overcome obstacles that in any other age would have been deemed insurmountable; and the petty meanness of some persons and journals, who have made the most of the situation to adversely criticize and harass the company. As human nature is constituted, it cannot be expected that all of a train-load of passengers will be contented, even under the most favorable circumstances; and no doubt when the elements interpose inconveniences, fault can be expected to be found by some of the more unreasonable. We are not surprised that some of the anti-railroad papers have tried to make capital of this misfortune, and that they forget that primarily the troubles have arisen from causes beyond the control of man. However, it will be that this matter will be judged by the people from the standpoint of exact justice.

We are not admirers of emotional religion. The revivals that have been in progress in Oakland are bordering on the absurd; and what is more serious, are a mockery of religion that is respected. On Tuesday a crank by the name of Erickson related, in the presence of a large audience, his observations "while being in the spirit" on four days last month. He witnessed, in vision, the destruction by earthquake of San Francisco and Oakland, and the action of a great tidal wave that covered those cities and destroyed the shipping. The following day the Lord revealed to him the date of the actual happening, eighty days from January 25, 1890. The next day he had, in vision, the destruction of Chicago, and other American cities, and of the various subdivisions of the earth. This visionary announced he was going back to Norway, from whence he came. It is to be hoped he will, and not return here. Perhaps in no other country than the United States will he find the press disposed to print columns of his insane vapors. When we read such rubbish, sent out in the newspapers, we feel that the American people are about becoming disposed to make a mockery of that which we should regard as most sacred. Such exhibitions, and such farces as the Salvation Army, should be suppressed.

The devotion to intellectual pursuits and to studies, even of the most severe and unrelenting character, is not incompatible with extreme longevity, terminated by a serene and unclouded sunset. Dr. Johnson composed his Dictionary in seven years; and during that time he wrote the prologue to the opening of Drury Lane Theater; the Vanity of Human Wishes; the tragedy of Irene; and the Rambler. He lived to the age of 75. Roger Bacon lived 78 years; Newton was 80 years old when he died; Le Sage reached 80; John Wesley was 88; Michael Angelo, 96; Swift, 78; Voltaire, 84; Lord Coke, 85; Bentham, 85. Gladstone is now long past the age of ordinary mortals, and yet a clear-headed, brilliant man. It thus seems that the labors of an intellectual life are not injurious to the system. All these great men remained masters of themselves and their mental powers until these ripe old ages. The short lives of our literary men is not to be attributed to the demands of mental labor, but to some other causes. Where we find our literary genius cut down in the prime of life, it is because he has not conformed to the natural laws, and has abused the body. The body must be cared for, else both body and mind will early fall before the destroyer.

SACRAMENTO'S FIRST NEWSPAPER.

A Primitive Printing Office at Sutter's Fort—Publishing a Newspaper Under Difficulties.

In the State Library is a file of the first newspaper published in Sacramento city, the initial number of which is dated April 28, 1849. Until November 17, 1849, the paper was a three column concern, of pages about the size of a school geography. It was styled Placer Times, and was "a weekly newspaper, printed and published at Sacramento city, Upper California, on Saturday of each week, by Edw. C. Kemble & Co. Terms—Subscription for one year in advance, $10," etc., "single copies, 25 cents." The salutatory was rather unique. The editor wrote:

We are at length enabled to usher into the presence of our worthy friend, the public, the first number of our little journal, and announce the event, as is customary, with salutatory flourish. Premising, nevertheless, that a week of exercise in the various departments of our profession, and of endurance of the numberless perplexities attendant upon putting to press No. 1 of the Times, has left us but slightly in the vein for a courteous presentation of our paper to its patrons.

This, the first newspaper ever published in the valley of the Sacramento, will be issued regularly each week; will be found to contain the news current, both foreign and domestic, and faithfully report the intelligence, latest and reliable, from different parts of the great Placer. Having espoused the interests of the mining community, it will ever be found ready to cherish and defend them. It will be devoted to the welfare of the people of California, and advocate with fervor every measure calculated to promote the general good. This is the spirit in which we commence the publication of a newspaper in Sacramento city. It speaks well for the enterprise of its citizens that in these auriferous and extravagant times, a paper can be maintained in their midst, or that sufficient encouragement has been offered to induce the undertaking. We have established the press here with permanent intentions, and we shall add to our paper, in size and interest, as an increased support warrants the measure.

Truly, under the once frowning, but alas! now time worn and dilapidated walls of Fort Sacramento is established the American press. Within a stone's throw of its threatening bastions, from the apertures of which once protruded the cannon's muzzle, designed to hurl death and destruction upon an advancing foe, are now distributed missiles of a vastly different nature—missiles from an engine whose might has been acknowledged by every nation under the sun; from before which hostile armies have receded, and the error and darkness of beighted regions forever chased away.

If we can succeed to the satisfaction of the mass of our readers in serving them faithfully with a weekly record of events—fairly and carefully dealing with such matters as may come within our observation, then will be the aim of our sojourn here attained, and the success of the Placer Times complete.

The first number contained no editorial other than the salutatory, and very little news. The "Latest from the States!" was received by the ocean steamer Oregon, which had arrived at San Francisco April 1st. She brought in 250 passengers, and reported an increasing crowd at Panama awaiting conveyance to California, "to which country thousands are flocking from every State in the Union, and from every port on the South American coast." It would seem that in those days the people of California needed not to make special effort to induce immigration; it came without asking. The editor remarked:

Indeed, language would fail to convey to the minds of our readers an accurate idea of the astonishing excitement created by the gold discoveries in this country, and in the attempt to transmute paper, we find the pen inadequate to the task. The newspapers are burdened with wonderful stories of the wide spreading enthusiasm, and not only has it ravaged the Union from North to South, but even Europe—old war-harassed Europe has caught the infection, and the strong arm of revolution has become seemingly paralyzed and stilled in its mighty effort to burst the chains of bondage, by the reported wealth, and "fortunes for the millions," laid open in the "afar off" territory of California.

Then followed accounts from the New York Tribune of various companies that were being organized in the States to come to California. A company was organized in Utica with a capital of $30,000, another at Albany of 100 shareholders of $300 each, and elsewhere in the State similar companies were formed. Reports were also published of expeditions from Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan and Canada. The Tribune published the names of over 5,000 persons "already en route" for California and said the total number of vessels sailing for intermediate ports, or for San Francisco direct, up to January 20, 1849, was 103. The Odd Fellows were also active. The Times said:

The Odd Fellows have also sent their delegation to the mines. The U. States Grand Lodge, at its last session in Baltimore, appointed Capt. V. Fraser, of the Revenue Service, Special Deputy Grand Sire for California, Oregon, Sandwich Islands and ports in the Pacific. Capt. F. goes out with full authority to grant dispensations for Grand, Subordinate Lodges and Encampments.

One of the prominent eastern papers recommended the establishment by Congress of martial law in California, as a preliminary government, to be maintained by an adequate force, under extraordinary pay and emoluments. In view of subsequent events it is very evident that the editor of the Courier and Enquirer knew little of the temper of the people then in California; for they had already taken steps looking to the establishment of a civil government, and the matter was accomplished within the year.

The reports from the mines were of a meager and unsatisfactory nature. The editor remarks: "That very little washing for gold is at present carried on, we are tolerably safe in asserting; and that the general suspension of labor is owing to high water, we are also correct in stating. The streams throughout the Placer are exceedingly swollen, and from every quarter are received complaints of a continual rise of water." It was very evident, therefore, that high waters were embarrassing even in that early day.

The first number of the Times carried but few advertisements. John A. Sutter offered a reward of $200 for the recovery of two saddle horses that had been stolen from the fort a few nights before. Both horses "bear the well known iron (brand) of the subscriber." John S. Fowler advertised that there would be sold at public auction, May 15th, "the three-story frame house, near the store of S. Brannan & Co., Sutter's fort, formerly the property of J. A. Sutter, Sr., and known as the flouring or grist mill." S. Brannan & Co. announced that "they have just received and have for sale a large assortment of dry goods, groceries, wines, liquors, ready made clothing, and fancy goods, which they offer for sale at reduced prices at their stores, at the embarcadero and the fort. Also, goods received on storage and commission on board of the brig Elidora, lying in front of their warehouses." Brannan & Co. were then located at the corner of Front and J, and at the fort.

Besides the advertisement of Brannan & Co., there were announcements of Hensley, Reading & Co., wholesale and retail dealers; Priest, Lee & Co., general dealers, 2d and J streets; and Murray & Lappeus, in the same line. P. Slater simply advertised: "Wholesale and retail grocery, bowling alley, etc." M. T. McClellan advertised that he had gold and silver coin to exchange for good, clean gold dust, at $15 per ounce. It would seem, however, from the appearance of the advertising columns, that Brannan & Co. about monopolized the business. The following advertisement would appear to indicate that the fool killer, so much needed in the present day, should have put in an appearance in the days of '49:

An engineer of considerable experience, wishes to make an engagement with a mining company, to superintend the working of a diving bell, or an under-water pocket machine. The advertiser having been 14 years employed by the Sub-Marine Society, Tahiti, collecting pearl oysters. The best references can be given. Address, E. Lerwheel, Middle Fork.

It would seem that the question who first discovered gold in California, was agitated in that early day. About the only piece of reprint in the Times is the following:

First Discovery of the California Gold Mines.—From an article in Harper's forthcoming "Biographical Cyclopaedia," we learn that the gold mines of California were first discovered by the Jesuits, about the middle of the last century. The Jesuits concealed their discovery from the government; and the suspicion that they had done so, perhaps, had something to do with their expulsion from Mexico. In 1769, Don José Galvez, Marquis of Sonora, undertook an expedition into California to ascertain the truth of the reports respecting the gold "in the rivers, in the soil, and in the rocks." He was accompanied by the celebrated Don Miguel José de Arenza; who, discouraged by the fruitless search of a few weeks, recommended the abandonment of the enterprise, and for contending that the Marquis was insane for proceeding, was thrown into prison, where he remained several months. Nothing at all satisfactory, however, appears to have resulted from the search of Galvez; though the Jesuits afterwards disclosed in Spain and France, that the charges of discovery and concealment made against them, were true.

Thus, we have very fully pictured the contents of the first number of the first newspaper issued in Sacramento. In the second number, dated May 5, 1849, is chronicled the report of a mass meeting and election held pursuant to public notice, at the embarcadero, April 30th. Henry A. Schoolcraft was chosen President, and James King and E. J. Brooks, Secretaries. The meeting resolved to "proceed to the election of eleven legislators, with full power to enact laws for the government of this city and district." Messrs. Bates, McClellan, Stewart, Von Pfister, and Gillespie were appointed judges of the election. A committee of five was appointed to nominate a suitable ticket; and after retiring a few minutes the following were reported: John McDougal, Peter Slater, Barton Lee, John S. Fowler, — Robb, Wm. Pettet, W. M. Carpenter, Charles C. Southard, M. M. McCarver, James King, and Samuel Brannan. During the meeting Robb declined, and Henry Cheever was nominated in his place. The eleven were then elected, and were, on motion of McDougal, immediately sworn in.

The following extracts will no doubt now be read with interest:

Navigation Extraordinary.—The bark Whilon, Gelston, master, arrived at the embarcadero of this place on Friday last, seventy-two hours from San Francisco, and 140 days from New York. The Whilon is of 241 tons burthen, and draws 9½ feet of water. * * * The Whilon appeared with her royal yards crossed, and, of her trip it may be said, all circumstances considered, it is without a precedent in our river navigation.

Sacramento City.—If ever a town in extraordinary times bade fair to speedily become an important city, we believe it to be our own. Built up amid a whirl of exciting adventure and speculation, at a period when the instability of man resolutely sets at defiance "bright improvement," we certainly can claim for this place unexampled prosperity, and safely predict its continued growth and eventual greatness. Sacramento City is no misnomer, indeed. Already the "outward tokens" are visible; the business hum and bustle of our landing and market places may, upon days of "driving trade," be favorably compared to the constant stir and activity peculiar to the business portions of our large Atlantic cities. The river's side presents a scene of admirable city life confusion. Goods for which there is no shelter strewn along the banks, others stored in tents or under old sails, for the great scarcity of building material gives rise to a variety of queer substitutes, and beneath a canvas covering trade flourishes quite as well, it is understood, as under the ordinary shelter. Quietly moored at the foot of one of our most frequented thoroughfares, appears a bark of 300 tons, and a brig of 200 is similarly secured a few hundred yards down the river. Both are to be used as wharves, and are the property of two of our principal houses. They were purchased at San Francisco, and sailed hither without difficulty. The embarcadero can boast of some twenty-five or thirty stores, and the fort and its immediate vicinity of about eight or ten, together with a hotel, printing office, bakery, blacksmith shops, tin shop, billiard room, bowling alley, etc., each indispensable in making up the vast compound of a city. Sacramento city is probably as healthy a locality as this valley affords. During what is termed the sickly season of last year, this place was sought as a refuge by those whose health had been prostrated in the mines, because medical attendance could be obtained, and the disease yielded quite as readily to proper treatment here as in our seaport towns. We have learned of late that a hospital is to be established at this point. Such an institution is certainly desirable, for we apprehend an over amount of sickness will be the result of so large an influx into the mines of unacclimated "foreigners" this season. As Sacramento city is the point on the river of disembarkation, previous to entering the Placer, the great body of emigration will flow hither, ere diffusing itself over the mining country. Another year will count wondrous changes in California, but nowhere will the change be more perceptible than here.

In the second number, Hensley, Reading & Co. announced that they "have removed their stock of goods from Sutter's fort to the embarcadero, where, at their store-house, and in connection with a large barque as a store ship, they will be prepared to serve the public."

The following new advertisement appeared in the second number:

Notice to Squatters.—All persons are hereby cautioned not to settle without my permission on any land of mine in this territory; said land is bounded as follows: Commencing on the north in latitude thirty-nine degrees, thirty-three minutes and forty-five seconds, at a point on the east bank of the Sacramento river; running thence east three leagues beyond Feather river; thence south to latitude thirty-eight degrees, forty-one minutes and 32 seconds; thence west to said Sacramento river; thence up and along the course of said Sacramento river to its intersection with Feather river; thence in a westerly direction up and along the course of said Sacramento river to the place of beginning, excepting a certain tract, included in the above, lying on the east side of said Sacramento river, bounded on the north by latitude thirty-nine degrees, one minute and forty-five seconds, and on the south by the American fork, granted by the republic of Mexico to one Elias Grimes. JOHN A. SUTTER, JR.

On June 26th, the Times said:

Sacramento city, which six months ago was not in existence, has now about one hundred houses, and is doing more business than was San Francisco eight months since. About twenty-five stores are already erected and others are going up rapidly. A large and magnificent hotel, capable of accommodating one hundred and fifty persons, is being built by S. Brannan & Co. and J. S. Fowler, and will soon be ready for the accommodation of the public. Every profession and every trade is represented. Three regular lines of stages run constantly between the city and the fort, and another line runs between the city and the mines. There are now in the city about eleven wholesale dealers, viz: Brannan & Co., Hensley, Reading & Co., Priest, Lee & Co., Whitlock & Gibson, S. Norris, Gillespie & Co., Ingersoll & Co., Robinson & Co., D. Hanna, Taber & Co. and R. Gelston & Co. These great results have been produced by no fitful fever of speculation, but by the steady progress of labor and enterprise. We predict that within a year the only rival in wealth and population that this city will have will be San Francisco.

Speaking of this first Sacramento newspaper, the New York correspondent of the Union (Jon Quil) wrote under date of August 4, 1871 (Union, August 12th):

A late number of the Union contains a suggestion from some "pioneer" that the remains of Sutter's fort be inclosed and protected as far as may be, from the ravages of time, with a view to the appropriate marking of a spot once famous throughout the North Pacific coast. Your correspondent can only express his surprise that this was not done years ago, before the venerable old fort crumbled into utter ruin. But as it may not be too late to rescue some portion of the work from the waste of the elements and revive the historic interest of the locality, he begs to second the proposition, if no one else has thought of doing so, and to offer as his contribution to the plan, a small plot of ground, about twenty-five by fifty feet, the title of which he holds direct from old Captain Sutter as a gift—it being the site of the first newspaper office in the interior of California, and the third newspaper in the order of birth in the Golden State. Here was printed in the spring of 1849 the Placer Times, on the first printing press brought to the "Northwest Coast." This press was afterwards destroyed in part by a mob in one of the mining towns of San Joaquin county. The site marked by the Placer Times office was taken possession of by the printer when Sacramento city was first laid out, and it was supposed that the high lands about the old fort would be occupied for streets and dwellings. There were then but two or three houses on the present site of your city. A frame shanty, twelve by twenty, unceiled and unshingled (the roof being covered with cotton cloth), put up by an old invalided carpenter with the printer to help him, was the first shelter for the pioneer press of the Sacramento valley—"within biscuit toss of the northeastern portion of Sutter's Fort," as the editor announced his first number.

The Union of December 25, 1858, contained a very lengthy and interesting account of early California journalism, and of the establishment of the first newspaper in Sacramento. From that account it appears that the Placer Times was a scion from the Alta California, of San Francisco; that in the winter of 1848 a large city was laid out at where Sacramento now stands, and that one of the projectors of the new city had gathered from a proprietor of the Alta that it was desirable to establish a local newspaper near to the mines. The merchants of Sacramento entered into an agreement with the proprietors of the Alia promising support to a branch paper if it should be established here, and nine town lots were to be deeded by Sutter. The document was sent to San Francisco, the Alta proprietors consulted together, and but one of them was strenuously in favor of trying the experiment. The principal objection was the scarcity of printing material in the office of the Alta, but finally the worn out stuff that laid in "pi" in the office was boxed up, the old California Ramage press was gotten out, and with a few reams of Spanish foolscap, was shipped to Sacramento on the vessel Dice me Nana (says my mamma). The vessel occupied eight days in making the trip from San Francisco to Sacramento. One of the proprietors of the Alta accompanied the material as far as the prospective town of Webster, about eight or ten miles below Sutterville, and from there, with one or two others, walked to Sutter's fort. The vessel arrived late, and the press and material were conveyed to the fort in the night. Their arrival was celebrated with oysters and champagne in one of the old rooms within the fort walls. Arrangements were at once made to establish an office for the paper. The first issue was a sheet 13x18 inches in size. The heading was carved from a piece of wood with a jack-knife, and some of the type was changed into sorts by the same instrument. The letter "O" was transformed into a "C," but the attempt to turn up the tail of the "Q" to form the capital "G" was a ridiculous failure. The difficulty, however, in the setting of the type was of little consequence. When the paper went to press the wooden platen had to be smoothed down with a jack-plane, to make it sufficiently level to give it an even impression. In July the paper was moved to Front street, and on June 16, 1851, was consolidated with the Transcript, under the title of the Times and Transcript. Afterward the consolidated paper was removed to San Francisco and absorbed by the Alta.

Delicate Art Work.

The art of microscopic painting is new to this country. Two years ago there was no demand for the work, and those who desired fine miniature portraits were obliged to order them from European artists. To-day there are half a dozen microscopic painters in the United States, and there is work enough to keep a hundred more men busy every day in the year.

This interest in the art is due to a sudden caprice of fashion. Last year the French jewelers, following the example of the Parisian dressmakers, entered eagerly into the revival of the styles that prevailed in the time of Napoleon I. Cameos, medallions, shoulder clasps, girdles and brooches were successively introduced into the fashionable world. The demand for microscopic paintings on porcelain and ivory, to be made into brooches, rings, scarf-pins and lockets, is now so great that jewelers are put to their wits' end to meet it. The imported paintings are generally of a second-rate sort, and pay a heavy duty, and the remuneration offered for superior work is so liberal that several American artists of repute have been induced to enter the field. One of the best known among them is G. de Festites, a Hungarian by birth, but an American by adoption. Some of his portraits are painted on chips of ivory, circular in shape and no larger than a half inch in diameter. Yet every trait of the countenance is perfectly reproduced from the original, and can be detected with the naked eye. The nail of the little finger would furnish him with enough space for a picture.

The process is an exceedingly interesting one. Selecting a thin wafer of ivory, an inch in diameter, he fastens it to a piece of cardboard. Then he prepares his paints, which are water colors. In decorating porcelain, mineral colors are used. His brushes are somewhat larger than a match, yet at the point they taper to the fineness of a needle. They seem to be clumsy instruments compared with the tiny surface over which they have to glide, but in a delicate hand they are capable of performing wonders. Next he selects a magnifying glass and chooses one of a power suited to the work in hand. When the sky is clouded he is compelled to use a stronger glass than upon a clear day. Holding the glass in his hand three inches from the ivory, he begins work. The light shines over his back or shoulder. As he paints the outlines of the portrait, it is almost impossible with the naked eye to distinguish any motion of the hand or brush. When he comes to the eyes the hand seems to be almost immovable even when closely observed, so small are the features of the portrait. Looked at closely, the eye seems about the size of the point of a pin. The contour of the face is outlined. No lead pencil is used to make the first drawing; a fine brush dipped in light brown paint answers the purpose better. Next the background is filled in and the colors are massed on the shadow side of the face. The fine pencil sweeps back and forth and up and down the surface of the ivory with perfect freedom. Under the glass lines of color, crossed and recrossed, are visible. Then the hair is put in and every golden brown ringlet is deftly put in its place. The locks over the forehead are painted with lightness and grace, and the wavy tresses above, with their rich lights and shadows, are faithfully rendered. Then the flesh tints of face and neck are produced harmoniously, until a life-like portrait is complete. Last of all the eyes are carefully touched up to give expression to the whole. A likeness secured, the subject is now treated broadly for effect. The hand, though at work, seems to rest without a tremor above the ivory. A few more touches on the nose and mouth and the portrait is finished.

The painting is then covered with a circular piece of glass, flat on one side and convex on the other, and is sent to the jeweler to be fitted in a ring or locket, as the case may be. Where more than one head is desired on the surface, the cost increases in a ratio proportionate to the risk, for, while a single face of the smallest size may cost $25, two faces on the same surface will cost $60 and three $90 or $100. There is a greater risk of spoiling the picture where the heads are multiplied. Some easel pieces on ivory or porcelain for mantel or table cost as high as $250.

Microscopic painting is exceedingly trying for the eyes. Some days are too dark for work, and painting by artificial light so disturbs the nerves that it is almost impossible to do good work.

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

People have almost forgotten the Colville Burlesque Company, which was such a favorite in San Francisco ten or twelve years ago; yet few companies had such a unique acceptance in this city. Roland Reed was a member of that company, and in Bluebeard and Babes in the Wood, he received more applause, and was more enjoyed, than any burlesque actor since. The company had a great many clever, and quite an unusual number of pretty girls. The men about town took a strong liking to them; not in the customary free and easy way, but with a great deal of respect. The suppers they had given to them were not matters of secrecy, but openly given, and without scandal. Pretty Kate Everleigh was one of the principal favorites, and many young men fell very much in love with her. It was a long season, and a pleasant one. It would be worth a good deal of money to have such a show again, for the burlesque of to-day is very thin and unsatisfactory.—S. F. Music and Drama.

The drop curtain at the Metropolitan is not in accord with the adornments of that splendid theater. It never was an appropriate design. There is nothing of an attractive nature about it—nothing suggestive of the histrionic art. That poor discolored and disproportioned Peri, sneaking out from some imaginary gate from an imaginary paradise, has become tiresome. We would even prefer the old fiery horses and fierce looking drivers in that portrayed Nero race, that adorned the old Metropolitan. The drop curtain that preceded "Paradise and the Peri," was an elegant design, and was the representation of a noted scene in Othello, where Othello, Brabantio, and Desdemona are upon the stage. This was not allowed to remain long, and when the house was remodeled gave place to the wearisome picture now doing duty as a drop. The handsome appointments of the theater demand a pretty and appropriate drop curtain.

Billy Hamilton is a great admirer of the drama, and nothing pleases him better than to witness the rendition of that great character "Damon," in Damon and Pythias, in the hands of an artist. He often tells of Edwin Forrest's rendition of that character. Well, it was announced that Fred Warde would essay this wonderful character; and that artist having the reputation of falling heir to the force and genius accredited to Forrest, he was anxious to see the play. "On the night of the expected entertainment, one of Billy's friends from the mountains, up on the Georgetown divide, who had not visited a theater in twenty years, happened to come to the city to see Billy. Here was an opportunity to give his mountain friend a genuine literary feast, so he invited him to come and see the great actor Fred Warde personate "Damon." So together they went. But somehow the friend, much to Billy's chagrin, betrayed no signs of emotion or interest whatever in the splendid portrayal. In the scene between "Damon" and "Lucullus," his servant, however, he began to show some indications of interest. When "Lucullus" confesses the killing of "Damon's" horse, in order that his master might be spared and "Pythias" executed in his stead, "Damon" grabs the trembling slave to "drag him to the eternal river of the damned." Those who saw Warde in this great scene know how fiercely and violently he does the dragging, can realize the emotions that are aroused. Billy's friend, growing more excited, finally nudges Billy and whispers, "I say, Billy, which of them fellows is Ward?" "Heavens," said Billy, "how I wish you were 'Lucullus' about two minutes." Such is fame. And Billy has resolved to invite no more mountaineers to visit the drama with him.

Professional Chat.

Lord Avonmore, the Chief Baron and an eminent Judge, was very absent-minded and often absorbed in reverie, quite oblivious to what was going on around him. On one occasion he and the witty Curran were invited to a dinner, and sat next to each other. As usual, the Chief Baron was quite abstracted and noticed but little that was passing. When the toast "Our Absent Friend" was proposed, Curran nudged him, saying, "My Lord, our host has just proposed your health; surely you will respond." "Thank you, Curran, really I was not aware of it," replied the Chief Baron, whereupon he arose, and to the surprise of many and the amusement of more, made an eloquent speech in reply to a toast that never was given.

A. Minor Griswold was known as the "Fat Contributor" a good many years ago, when he was not as fat as he is now. He was a friend and contemporary of Artemus Ward, and was mixed up in many a prank with him. The gray is stealing through his hair now, and his aggressive mustache is iron gray. He is stout and comfortable and looks like a prosperous merchant. His method of work is one that he has long followed. He is a great reader of exchanges, but he passes over the more important of them as a rule, and picks out little cross-road sheets that are in most cases badly printed and conducted, some of them on the plan of the Arizona Kicker. These papers are highly prized by Griswold. He makes up bundles of these, and when the work of reading copy, looking over proof, and other duties appertaining to the office are done, the "Fat Contributor" hies him away with his bundle, and at home extracts fun out of them. Here are some specimens of the work of the "Fat Contributor" recently ground out: Salt "meet"—Sea dogs on a hunt. Plain sailing—In a prairie schooner. In the race—Water to turn the wheel. Seeking blood—Invalids advised to drink it. He hoped to win her by his presents, but she said his presence wasn't desirable, so didn't send any. Don't buy land in Montana represented to have lead ore deposits until you have been carefully led o'er the land. The show elephant Emperor sold at auction for $1,700 recently; an emperor wouldn't bring that amount now in Brazil. An Ohio woman who thought she had been swindled in a set of teeth she bought of a dentist, said what she thought of him to his teeth. "Can I look in your city directory?" a man asked of the druggist. "Yes." "No, I can't, I'm blind," and he carefully felt his way out of the store, chuckling.

Counsel was defending a man indicted for arson in causing his own building to be destroyed to defraud the insurer. The alleged accomplice, a young man, had testified to the setting on fire of the building at the instigation of his employer, the defendant. The witness was corroborated by his father, who testified that when the arrest was made the defendant said to him, "We might both have got off if Schuyler (the son) had not peached and told the whole story." This, with some suspicious circumstances, was the evidence for the prosecution, in addition to the proof of over insurance. In summing up for the defense counsel got along pretty well in his attack upon the accomplice by showing his unworthy motive and action, and had a very fair justification for claiming to the jury that he was not worthy of belief; but he found it difficult to approach the subject of the testimony of the father, because there was little in the evidence upon which an attack upon his testimony could be based. Counsel struggled along with the remainder of the topics upon which he wished to speak, hesitating to approach the subject of the father's testimony, until luckily a story entered his head. He thereupon proceeded in this wise: "Gentlemen, I have now discussed this case and shown you the barrenness of the evidence upon which the learned District Attorney seeks to send this defendant to State Prison. I have omitted no topic except the alleged corroboration of the testimony of this accomplice by his father. All I have to say in regard to that is to tell you this story and let you apply the moral: A little boy was often whipped by his father for lying. He usually took it as a matter of course, but on one occasion the punishment seemed to him to excite reflection. After it was over he stood before his father in a thoughtful way, which attracted his father's attention. 'My son,' said the father, 'what are you thinking about?' 'Father,' said the son, 'when you was a little boy did you use to tell lies?' 'No, my son; when I was a little boy I did not tell lies.' 'Father,' returned the son, 'when mother was a little girl did she use to tell lies?' 'No, my son,' replied the father, 'when your mother was a little girl she did not tell lies. But why do you ask me these questions?' 'Well,' said the little fellow, drawing a long sigh, 'it is the most mysterious thing in the world to me that a father who never told lies when he was a little boy and a mother who never told lies when she was a little girl should have a boy that tells as many lies as I do.' "

The defendant was acquitted.

Book Chat.

There is no sunshine that hath not its shade,
Nor shadow that the sunshine hath not made;
There is no cherished comfort of the heart
That hath not its own tearful counterpart.
Thus, through a perfect balance constant flow,
The sharp extremes of joy and those of woe;
Our sweetest, best repose results from strife,
And death—what is it, after all, but life?

The ever recurring hostilities against the Jews, prompts us to give a little sketch of the early divisions of the Hebrew family. The earliest division of the two branches of the Israelite family, is that by the mothers Leah and Rachel; and in Babylonia we find among the Babylonian Semites the same exaltation of the female. The mother was the goddess of the house, and offenses against her were punished with the greatest severity. The woman was the one who increased the tribe, and thus we possibly see the traces of a survival of polyandry. The man by marrying entered the woman's tribe, and became a part of it—an addition to its strength. His children were members of her tribe. In this we probably find the explanation of the pursuit of Laban after Jacob. He was taking his sons away from the tribe of his wives; and Rachel, desirous to retain, as it were, the favor of the tribal god or gods, had stolen the teraphim. The naming of tribes is also remarkable. It is curiously in harmony with this custom of matriarchy. We find a large percentage of female names are those of animals: Rachel, a ewe; Leah, an antelope; Deborah, a bee, etc. This pointed to the existence of totemism among the early Hebrews, as among the early Arabs, and it throws a great light upon that remarkable blessing by Jacob of his twelve sons. Here the later writer has largely, no doubt, edited the text; but, at the same time, there remains the survival of the old tribal emblems and totems. In Babylonia, also, the same custom existed. The family seal always bore the family totem. The totem of the family was also that of the family god. With the growth of the tribe and its subdivisions, there grew up the belief in a remote ethnic ancestor. With the Semites it was Shem, the son of Noah. This name seems certainly now easy of explanation; it means "the renowned one," and is equated in the inscriptions of Babylonia with zikaru, "the hero." The epithet applied to Gidzhubar or Nimrod, the ethnic hero of Babylonia. Subdivisions in the tribe gave rise to feuds; and when the later genealogists came to reconstruct the chronicles of the nation, these feuds found vent in ethnic legends of a derogatory kind, such as those of the marriage of Ishmael and the incest of Lot's daughters.

NOTES.

Many people are unhappy because they are either half sick or dislike work, or have no control over their passions and appetites. Now, the happiest man is the one who loves labor. Such a man is useful, and is always possessed of his faculties; and with him there is no room for fear or care. When we labor it is indicative of a sound body, and a sound body begets a healthy mind. There is no happier condition than to have the full possession of our faculties and be in a state of exuberant health; and when in this condition we should really love work—work of the body and brain. The healthy man who wears coarse clothes, and wields the pick or shovels the plane, is happier than the sick possessor of millions.

"When I have a good hearty laugh," said General Hart the other day, "I feel good for a whole day." "Laugh and grow fat" is a proverb. Good humor takes melancholy by the nose and makes it grin in spite of itself. Yes, a laugh is a glorious thing, and it seems to put all in the hearing thereof in a good humor. We like a big convulsive laugh, one that shakes a fellow up and stirs all the impulses of humor. Just sit near Val. McClatchy during some funny scene at the theater and hear that great big genuine laugh from the soul, and you will find another big laugh rising in yourself in pure sympathy. There is a giggle and a crocodile grin that do not pass muster as a laugh. There is a sycophantic laugh that has murder in it. But the man who laughs for the fun that is in it is the one who enjoys it himself and communicates that emotional pleasure to others. Some anonymous writer says: Whether laughter discovers the gums of infancy or age, the grinders of folly or the pearls of beauty; whether it racks the sides or deforms the countenance of vulgarity or deep lines of the visage, or moistens the eyes of refinement—in all phases, and on all faces, contorting, relaxing, overwhelming, convulsing, throwing the human form into happy shaking and quaking of idiocy, and the human countenance into a transformation, under every circumstance and every where a laugh is glorious.

William F. Huntoon.

We regret to write these lines. William F. Huntoon is dead. We knew him in boyhood, and in young manhood. We were friends. He was a brave, chivalrous man, true to his friends. His death—and so young—in a great city is regretted. In younger life Will Huntoon, as a boy in the grammar school, won friendships that lasted through his life. Before the age of manhood came upon him he occupied a responsible position that commanded the respect of men much his senior. Few of his age accomplished what he did. His life was useful; his promise great.

Delinquent Tax List.

We have read with some interest the leading editorial in the Bee of last night, relative to the awarding by the Sheriff of the publication of the county delinquent tax roll to this journal. We appreciate very much the flattery of our contemporary of the brightness and sprightliness of THEMIS, but can hardly understand why the evening journal should become indignant. That we underbid the dailies for this work was a sufficient justification for the Sheriff to make his award, and it is just as likely that the parties interested in the publication of the list will see it as readily in THEMIS as in a daily. Our journal has been steadily increasing in circulation and we do not concede that it is not a paper of general circulation. Our contemporary seems to be of the opinion that papers of a literary character can never hope for a general circulation. The fact, however, is that advertising space in such papers is rated high—much higher, in fact, than in the dailies, and the results to advertisers are vastly more satisfactory. As a rule, the matter that is printed in papers such as THEMIS is carefully digested, and the work of men of as high order of intellect as those who write for the daily press. In this matter we have no concern with the indignations of any newspaper office but our own, and are perfectly indifferent if our contemporary had its indignation "considerably mollified by the fact that it was underbid by the Record-Union." When the real indignation of the public over the action of the Sheriff in this matter will be made manifest, if the Bee managers will kindly call our attention to it, we will be pleased to inform the public of it through the columns of a paper that is very generally read by the people who pay taxes and who are interested in matters concerning real estate. The tax payers of Sacramento county are a reading class; some of them take the Bee; others the Record-Union; most all take THEMIS. We are not disposed to criticize the bad taste of our contemporary in this little exhibition of jealousy over what, in our office, is considered quite a trifling matter.

Local Government.

We have read with something of regret the published reports of controversies between the Mayor and Street Commissioner growing out of the work on the Y street levee. The matter, as published, was extremely undignified. We are inclined to think that Major McLaughlin is disposed to bring into city matters his personality, and to forget that he is simply the agent of a people. We do not desire to do that gentleman injustice; but if, as we are informed, he declared he would have nothing to do with the work on the Y street levee because the Mayor had taken the initiative, he was wrong, and it is not at all likely the people will regard his position as creditable in an officer of responsible duties.

The charter of Sacramento was drafted right after the great flood of 1861-2, and at a time when it was necessary that the greatest care should be exercised to formulate an effective and economical plan of city government. Sacramento city at that time was in a condition of extremis. The result was the adoption of a plan of government novel, and at that time, about perfect. If the officers understand the instrument and carry it into proper effect, we would have no trouble now; but no law, however good, and no plan of government, however perfect, will carry itself into execution; that matter is dependent upon the officers elected to give it effect.

We are not disposed to captiously comment on the action of public officers, but feel compelled to say that there have been inexcusable expenditures of municipal funds. While the Trustees were justified, and deservedly receive commendation, for any work they authorized to strengthen the levee defenses of the city, there was no justification in putting a large number of men at such work without superintendence. In fact, we are not aware that such a proceeding ever before occurred in the history of our city. As we say, it was generally admitted that work should have been done on the levee; and the authorities were justified in incurring any expense necessary to protect the city. Yet, the criticism is that the work was not done to proper advantage. No private corporation or individual would put a large force of men to work on an important matter unless under appropriate supervision, that would insure the most advantageous results. We simply suggest that the Trustees forget their petty bickerings, and attend to the business of their employers.

While on this subject of the conduct of the business of the city, we call the attention of the governing board to the fact that four men are now employed to collect the revenues from the waterworks, a service that has been and can now be performed, perhaps, more satisfactorily by two. The work in that department of the city government has been simplified by the adoption of the ordinance that collections shall be made from the owners of the real estate instead of tenants; and it cannot be easily understood why so large a force is necessary to do this work, particularly when, as we are informed, the aggregate receipts are not materially increased. The collections of city subscriptions of our daily newspapers require no such force, and yet involve, perhaps, a greater amount of labor. We suggest that a little attention be given to this matter. There are other avenues of unnecessary leakages from the city treasury that should be stopped, for the people have the right to have their service performed without unnecessary expense. They are willing to pay on the same basis a business house compensates, and with more liberality, perhaps; but there is no good reason why, when money is expended, appropriate compensation should not be made.

The Leading Paper.

[From the Paso Robles Leader.]

The Sacramento Bee has come out with an entire new dress and heading. It is one of the neatest and most newsy papers that comes to our table. May it long Bee the leading paper of the Sacramento valley.

"Bright and Sprightly."

[From the Sacramento Bee.]

Sheriff McMullen yesterday awarded the publication of the delinquent tax list to THEMIS, a weekly publication of a literary character recently started in Sacramento, the other competing bidders being the Daily Record-Union and the Daily Bee. THEMIS is bright and sprightly.

[Note of apology.—We have not been in the habit of loading down our columns with republications of trumpet blasts in our own praise by our contemporaries, but as that seems to be the rule with other well regulated modern newspapers of general circulation, we presume we must observe the fashion in order to keep up with the procession.—Eds. THEMIS.]

THEMIS, Sacramento's literary weekly, is as full of good things as it can be.—Petaluma Courier.

Manager Charles P. Hall is presented with the Sacramento public, through THEMIS of that city, for not afflicting them with the benefit nuisance.—Music and Drama.

Hunt up a Sensible Farmer.

We have received a note from a young man just embarking in farming, and he wants our advice relative to several matters of farm economy. We say to our young friend: "If you want to run your ranch for profit, and seriously need advice, do not try and get it from a newspaper editor, but hunt up some level-headed farmer, talk with him, and the chances are if you give your land a reasonable chance and keep out of politics, you will be able to keep up the interest on your mortgage." This young man is evidently laboring under the impression that of late has become somewhat popular, that a newspaper editor is posted on everything, and that he can answer any question that may be put to him with the utmost readiness. If our young friend should ever meet and talk with an editor, he will find that instead of coming in contact with a walking cyclopedia, he is face to face with a fool as great as the ordinary run of mortals. The cold fact is that the average editor costs the big people much money. When he is short of copy the chances are ten to one he will shear out of an exchange some recipe for making cake and print it. Every housewife who reads the paper will try it, and surprise her husband with a cooked mixture that might, if properly moulded, make a fine ink roller in a printing office, but will pull the teeth from any man who attempts to chew it. We have said if one wants to find out about farming he had better consult a practical farmer. Figures will lie. This matter reminds us of a story we heard some years ago—and a good one—on Ed Maslin. As we all know, the genial Secretary is an enthusiast on the subject of foothill lands and their capabilities. Riding down on the train he was demonstrating how a fortune could be made by raising hogs, and directed his figures to a quiet rancher. "You see," said the enthusiastic Maslin, "you have two liters a year and nine at a litter. In a year you will have 18 young pigs, and in two years the first batch will commence to contemplate starting independent families. It will cost nothing to feed them, and it is simply a matter of figures to calculate the profit." The argument seemed irresistible, and the granger smoked in silence for awhile, but finally said: "Maslin, I don't doubt your figures, but you never raised hogs. The fact is the old sow will roll over and kill about half the pigs the first day, and when the coyotes get through with the balance they may leave you one or two."

Thomas Davies.

The Record-Union this morning published a note from J. M. Davies, Master of the State Grange, asking information of the whereabouts of Thomas Davies, whom he supposes to be his brother, and asking if he is the party of that name who worked for Wm. Curtis near this city. The Thomas Davies of this section was foreman of Mr. Curtis' ranches for over six years, and left that employment a few months ago, and we were told by Mr. Curtis recently that Davies was employed about a store in one of the lower counties. No doubt Mr. Curtis can give all needed information. Davies was one of the parties robbed at the American river bridge not long since, for which George Nelson was convicted and is now serving a term of ten years in the State Prison. In his testimony given at that trial Davies stated that he had been in California about twelve years, that he had lived principally in this county, and that he had lived in Iowa.

Mexican War Pensions.

The following is self explanatory:

NEW YORK, January 24, '90.

EDITORS THEMIS: Referring to a communication in THEMIS in the early part of this month, which has been brought to my notice, relating to the pensioning of Mr. Ruggles, permit me to contradict the assertion therein, that I had "asserted" and "maintained" that the government had treated him, or anyone else, "unjustly." I am in entire ignorance concerning the matter. If you think it worth while, please find space to publish the above, and oblige,

Very respectfully, A. PERRY.

The Weather.

The Signal Service rainfall for the past week was 1.50 inches, while for the same date last year was nothing. The total rainfall for January is 6.62 inches, and for the season 23.61 inches, as against 9.61 inches to an equal date last year. The highest and lowest temperature for the past week was 58 and 36. The mean average temperature for January was 43, while for January last year it was 45, showing the past month to have been cooler than its namesake one year ago, which was a dry month, there being .15 of an inch of rainfall measured. The average monthly temperature for January for 33 years past was 46, which is 3 degrees higher than the average temperature for the month just passed. The barometer this morning is very high, 30.30 inches, and rising.

The San Francisco Tragedy.

The dispatches from San Francisco announce that Thursday afternoon S. W. Granness was shot and killed by D. H. Arnold, an ex-Sheriff of Colusa county. So far as it can be learned it appears that the tragedy grew out of some circulars that were printed anonymously and sent by mail to people in Colusa, reflecting upon the integrity of the wife of Sheriff Arnold and other persons in that town. A copy of one of the circulars has been published, dated October 22, 1888. It is unnecessary to republish the filthy document. It is sufficient to say that if Arnold killed the man who wrote it and caused its circulation he is justified in morals, though perhaps not in law. It appears that a deliberate attempt was made to degrade people through the medium of anonymous circulars, and that Arnold employed detectives to find out who had written them. Until it shall appear that Arnold killed the wrong man, we are disposed to give him the benefit of the doubt. From what we learn of him he is a man of deliberation and not apt to make a serious mistake—one so serious as that involving the taking of human life. If mistake has been made, and the wrong man has been slain, it is a matter very much to be regretted; if, on the other hand, the author of an infamous scandal was sent to the grave, he received only a deserved punishment and Arnold should be commended. Sheriff Arnold is a man of bravery. Several years ago when he occupied the position of Sheriff his brother was Marshal of the town of Colusa. The Marshal was killed in an affray by Shephardson, and Shephardson was committed to the custody of the Sheriff, the brother of the deceased. The friends of Shephardson feared violence might be done him in the jail, owing to the peculiar relations of the Sheriff to the deceased, and when waited upon, Sheriff Arnold said: "In this as in all other matters the law must take its course. In this jail Shephardson will be treated as any other prisoner. I am but the servant of the law." Shephardson was tried and acquitted, and it is perhaps the first instance when under such circumstances of peculiar excitement a Sheriff had the custody of one who had slain his brother. As we say, knowing the life of Arnold, as we learn it to have been, and being familiar with the incentive that would justify any honorable man in resenting as he did an attack upon the integrity of his wife, we are disposed to believe Arnold was not mistaken.

FLASHES.

Money is like a woman—it talks.

The ideal husbands are the ones who never marry.

While it is winter without there is a summer in each of our banks.

Genuine happiness is cheap; it is only the counterfeit that is costly.

A woman is like a tea-kettle, she sings a while, but is easily made to boil over.

When a woman gets a bonnet that is unbecoming, all the balance of the sex are glad of it.

Success is full of promise until we get it, then it is as last year's nest from which the bird has flown.

A young girl with a new diamond ring has no use for gloves, and will scratch her nose four times as often as it is necessary.

Milliners' stores are places of great disorder—they even have bolts of ribbon. A great amount of feminine head work is done there also.

Whenever you hear a man or woman abused, you can be sure that there is some good in them. The abusing parties generally should receive the contempt.

Kissing Mother.

How many young ladies of to-day would laugh at the absurd idea, as they express it, of kissing mother; but you cannot, dear girls, imagine how it will brighten her dear face. Besides, you owe her a kiss or two. Away back, when you were a little girl, she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever-tainted breath and swollen face. You were not as attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childish sunshine and shadows she was always ready to cure by the magic of a mother's kiss the little, dirty, chubby hands whenever they were injured in those first skirmishes with the rough world. And then the midnight kisses with which she routed so many bad dreams as she leaned above your restless pillow have all been on interest these long, long years. Of course, she is not so pretty and kissable as you are, but if you had done your share of work these last ten years the contrast would not be so marked. Her face has more wrinkles than yours, and yet if you were sick that face would appear far more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over you, watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort, and every one of those wrinkles would seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear face.—Locomotive Firemen's Magazine.

La Grippe.

Ambitious and sensational journalism having dignified the present epidemic with vastly unnecessary importance, it becomes the duty of medical men everywhere to relieve the public frenzy upon the subject as early and fully as practicable. For the past few days it has prevailed to a considerable extent throughout the Pacific coast, but in so mild a form as scarcely to deserve any attention, excepting from the phenomenal rapidity with which it travels from one country to another, and from the large number of its victims. It appears quite probable that the reports which have reached us from trans-Atlantic countries have been greatly exaggerated, and that there is but little, if any, difference between the characteristics of the disease as they appeared in Russia and upon the Pacific coast, excepting in so far as the severe and changeable weather of the former country induces a greater liability to intercurrent diseases. In Sacramento the disease is usually ushered in without prodromal evidences, by a chill of more or less severity, frontal headache, vertigo, nausea, muscular pains—especially of the back and loins—and a general nervous prostration. In the severer cases the temperature rises to 103° F. within a few hours of the first evidences of the disease, and remains at that point for about six hours, when it gradually subsides, until it reaches 101–2° at the end of the first day. At the expiration of 24 hours more, it will usually be found normal, provided quinine be administered liberally. Within the next 24 hours it will not infrequently be found subnormal, to be followed quickly by a slight elevation, about the normal point, and a subsequent recession to the normal under appropriate treatment. In about 80 per cent. of the cases there has been a complete absence of catarrhal symptoms, rendering it probable that when such manifestations are present, they are due to the usual additional element producing them, such as exposure to climatic vicissitudes, sudden arrest of perspiration, etc. The nervous prostration is generally well marked, and in its duration is usually out of proportion to the severity of the attack. So far as the fatality is concerned, it may, without hesitation, be pronounced nil, for although a few deaths have been ascribed to it, yet a careful analysis would unquestionably reveal the fact that some intercurrent affection was really the cause of death. The most that can be said of it is, that it predisposes to pulmonary affections; but that in itself it could take the life of any one, is extremely improbable, unless greatly debilitated by old age or former disease. So far as the etiology of the disease is concerned, the only light that has been thrown upon the subject comes from the General Hospital at Vienna, where Drs. JOLLES and MAXIMILIAN are said to have made the accidental discovery of an unusual and hitherto unobserved bacillus in the urine of a patient, who was supposed to have been afflicted with disease of the kidneys. A similar bacillus having been found in the excretions of all others affected by this disease, the conclusion was very naturally reached that it was characteristic of the influenza, especially as like bacilli could not be found in the excretions or blood of persons free from this affection. It concerns the world but little, however, whether or not the real cause of La Grippe has been discovered, for it appears extremely improbable that so harmless a disease, and one which appears at such long intervals, would be deemed worthy of the time and expenditure necessary to apply any preventive measures by inoculation of the attenuated virus. The phenomenal rapidity with which it spread from one country and state to another, as well as its almost universal prevalence, would render all preventive measures utterly futile. From a scientific point of view alone, does interest hinge upon the discovery.—Dr. Chunn in the Occidental Medical Times.

Fighting the Snow.

Five years ago railway men in the West laughed in derision when they saw the queer looking steam apparatus that was sent out from Patterson, N. J., to tackle a Western snow-drift. The machine resembled, more than anything else, a box-car, with a nine-foot ventilating fan set in a square frame and fastened to the front end of the car. The apparatus, as then built, and is still constructed, consists of a large wheel fitted with sharp knife-blades upon its face, the whole revolving upon a shaft that extends in a line parallel with the tracks. This shaft is driven by powerful engines in the car that carries the rotary cutter. When the fan is rapidly revolved and the whole apparatus pushed against a drift the snow is sliced off by the revolving knives and thrown through a spout to the side of the track. The pilot of the plow stands upon an elevated platform where the working of the machine is in full view, and by the means of wheels and levers the engineer can control the movements of the apparatus. In addition to the rotary cutter there is an ice breaker, which chisels off the ice on the rails and at the side, and leaves the track as clean as if shovels were used.

The first trials of this new-fangled snow-plow demonstrated that the machine was a success, and now nearly every big railroad is equipped with plows of this kind, or of some one of the other similar types that have since been devised. It was not until the winter of 1887–88 that the utility of steam-plows in deep snow was fully established, but now the old-fashioned angle-plow is a thing of the past. During that winter a rotary steam-plow was used to open the line of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, where for thirty-five miles a mountain cutting was filled with snow, which fell incessantly for ten days. The steam plow ate its way through the blockade with hardly a halt, a passenger and freight train following close behind, and traffic was not delayed. In the winter of 1884–85 a similar storm closed the line for three weeks, snowing-in two passenger trains, from which the passengers were rescued by sleds sent across the country. In attempting to raise this blockade with old-fashioned plows over twenty locomotives were wrecked or seriously disabled in "bucking" the snow-drifts.

The Northern Pacific Railroad had four of the steam plows at work on its lines in the winter of 1887–88, and some of the feats they performed seemed almost beyond the belief of one who was not an eye-witness. A railroad officer who was present at the opening of the Northern Division from Jamestown to Minnewaukan, in Dakota, describes the feat in these words: "The first obstacle encountered was a cut filled with twelve feet of solid snow, packed and frozen hard for a distance of about twenty-five feet, while for 100 feet more the drift varied in depth from one to five feet. The rotary plow was pushed by two locomotives, but was stalled after penetrating about five feet into the deep cut. On backing out it was found that the face of the drift on which the rotary cutters had been working resembled polished granite in shine and consistency.

The sides of the face were then shoveled down, and the rotary plow, after repeated attacks, worked through the obstruction. As many as nine snow plows had been smashed in trying to open the same cut in the previous spring, and it did not seem unlikely that the new machine would also fail, but within three hours the cut was opened and another cut 500 feet long and varying from two to eight feet deep had also been cleared, and our abandoned and buried train had been disinterred." This work was all done while the thermometer registered 30 degrees below zero.

Performances similar to this might be told of a dozen of the Western and Northwestern and Canadian roads, where steam plows have been at work for several years. The Canadian Pacific Railroad builds its own plows on this pattern and uses them all over its vast system. Among the other big lines upon which these steam plows are in use are the Chicago and Northwestern, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, Chicago Midland, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific. During the past month the Gunnison Line and the Denver, South Park and Pacific Line, both on the Union Pacific system, have been opened four or five times with a narrow gauge steam plow. On these lines the snow ranged up to twenty feet on a level, and at some points there were snow slides from twenty to thirty feet high and packed so hard that in examining the snow to see if there were any rocks in the bank, it was found to be impossible to cut it with shovels. On Monday of last week a clear, clean track was cut through drifts and slides over twenty feet high.

In the early part of November last the Denver, Texas and Fort Worth railroad became so badly blocked that the line could not be opened by shoveling. The company had no steam plow, and was obliged to borrow one from the Colorado Midland, which was running away down into New Mexico, opening the line as it went.

A later type of steam snow plow than the rotary machine, is a centrifugal excavator, which resembles an enormous screw with sharpened edges, and mounted upon the end of a specially constructed car, equipped with the necessary engines for working the apparatus. These machines when pushed against a drift, operate much in the manner of the rotary plows, boring their way through the banks and throwing the snow far to one side through a chute. In March last, during a trial of one of these excavators on the Rome, Waterstown and Ogdensburg railroad at Oswego, N. Y., a cut 720 feet long was cleared of snow in seven minutes. The average depth of the snow was seven feet; and great chunks of ice, weighing seventy pounds each, were thrown out of the cut by the machine, while a stream of snow was sent sixty feet into the adjoining fields.

One of these centrifugal machines has been ordered by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and is to be delivered this week. The Union Pacific has one of them out in Central Kansas, and the same company is having one built for its narrow-gauge Colorado division. There are several other types of steam apparatus for handling snow, and now that the utility of such machines has been demonstrated beyond doubt, the march of improvement and the development of new ideas is very rapid. All of these new snow-handling devices are expensive as compared with old-fashioned angle plows, which cost anywhere from $50 to $500. The steam machines of any type cost about $15,000 each, or nearly twice the price of an average locomotive.—Philadelphia Record.

Talmage has interviewed Gladstone, and pictures the grand old man as a gospel man. "All men at the head of great movements are Christians." This may be a religious view of the interview, but it does not strike all men alike.

Popular Music at Popular Prices.

Popular music at 10 cents per copy; prices elsewhere range from 35 cents to 75 cents. Catalogues furnished on application. Hammer's music store, No. 820 J street. Sole agency Chickering & Son's pianos. *

From this date all music, including all copyrights, will be sold at Cooper's music store to teachers and our customers, at and under Eastern and San Francisco prices. A reduction on all books as well. All we ask for breaking the high prices is your patronage. *

E. FRANKS

ANNOUNCES HIMSELF A CANDIDATE FOR

CHIEF OF POLICE,

Subject to the decision of the DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Fine Table Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Grand Harvesting & Co. Producers of the ECLIPSE CHAMPAGNE, 530 Washington St. SAN FRANCISCO.

O. W. Nordwell

MERCHANT TAILOR AND DRAPER,

218 Bush St.,

SAN FRANCISCO.

My new invoice includes the very LATEST STYLES and inspection is invited as to quality of GOODS, the FIT, and PRICE.

Short-Hand ECLECTIC!

The system taught by all the leading Colleges on the Coast, viz: Heald's and the Pacific, of San Francisco; Woodbury's, of Los Angeles; DePue's, of Oakland; Garden City, of San Jose; Stockton College, of Stockton, and

Bainbridge College of Sacramento

Why? Because it can be learned in one-half the time required for the old moss-covered systems.

Gattmann & Wilson,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

Fancy and Staple DRY GOODS

601 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Lavenson's

THE LARGEST AND

MOST RELIABLE HOUSE IN SACRAMENTO.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN, Formerly of Agricultural Park.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice, SACRAMENTO.

H. A. PETRALLI,

DEALER IN

Stoves, Metals and Tinware

716 K STREET.

PLUMBING, GASFITTING, AND ROOFING. Jobbing a Specialty.

GARZOLI & GENIS,

FRUIT AND PRODUCE,

BUTTER, CHEESE, EGGS, ETC.

POULTRY, FISH AND OYSTERS,

CALIFORNIA MARKET,

Telephone 188.

712 K Street.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

R. DAVIS,

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

Pacific Optical Institute

D. M. BISHOPP, Proprietor,

Has REMOVED TO 806 J STREET.

D. H. QUINN HATTER,

401 J Street, corner of Fourth.

HATS MADE TO ORDER. Old Hats Renovated to Equal New.

An Inheritance He Didn't Get.

"Robert! Robert! Where are you? Here's a letter that Mr. Smith just left for you. Where are you, Robert?"

"Right here, my dear, digging post holes. Don't you want to dig a few to give you an appetite for dinner? It's the finest exercise in the world, and warranted to cure anything but a sore thumb or a boil on the back of one's neck."

"Here's a letter for you, Robert, and I see its from Jones & Brown, attorneys at law. I do hope you haven't had any fuss with that man Ballard. You know you said you'd make him pay that money before you got through with him, and I just do believe that you've had a row with him, and now the Sheriff will come along and drag you into Court. Suppose he comes and takes you off to jail. What will I do alone on the ranch with four little ones to look after, the ducks and chickens to feed, and the stock to attend to? I think it's just awful, and I—"

"What's the matter, Mrs. Bob? You are as white as a sheet. Just you run in the house like a good little woman, and I'll be there in a minute. You are—"

"Oh, Robert, won't you please let me open this letter? I know it contains bad news, and I can't rest until I learn the worst. Don't try to hide anything from me, Robert, for you know—"

"Hide anything from you? Why, my dear, I never hid anything from you in my life but a nest full of goose eggs, and those you found inside of eight hours. Won't you please—"

"Oh, Robert, do open it and know the worst. This suspense is more than I can bear. It is worse than—"

"Wait until I put in another post or two. Don't you see that big, black cloud coming over there? Its coming this way—"

"And so is the Sheriff. Look out, I'm tearing the envelope."

"Open it up if you like, but break the news gently. Just steady this post while I—"

"Well, here's what it says:

OFFICE OF JONES & BROWN,

ATTORNEYS AT LAW,

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 20, 1889.

Mr. ———, Cheyenne, Wyo.—Dear Sir: If you are the son of Samuel ———, who formerly resided in Natchez, Miss., we would be pleased to have you communicate with us at once, as we have reason to believe that you have fallen heir to a large fortune, and we wish to get reliable information concerning yourself and your title to the said claim. Please give this matter your immediate attention. Yours, very truly,

JONES & BROWN.

"Why, Robert, can this be true? Can it be possible that you have at last received good news from the property that has so long been in dispute? Can there be any mistake about—"

"The Sheriff? Didn't you say he was coming to-day? That letter is all right. The property has been in dispute for a long time, but I guess they are getting at the facts now. Won't you help me steady this post for a—"

"I can't stop now, dear, for the baby is crying, and I must run in the house and tell the little ones the good news. Come in the house, won't you, and we'll have a good, warm dinner? I'll take the letter with me for fear that you will lose it. Come right in, won't you? I've made some nice cake, and—"

"Just as soon as I put in these posts, for—"

"Come now, and we'll have our dinner, and you can write to Jones & Brown and tell them all about the matter, and I'll get Harry to saddle up 'Bronsky' and take the letter to the postoffice right away. What will the neighbors say when they hear the good news? Won't they wonder about it, though? Just look at our old house. Doesn't it look shabby? When we get the money we can tear it down and put up a nice house; one that will make the neighbors open their eyes. The roof of the barn always did leak, and now we can put up one that will be just what you always wanted, and have it large enough to accommodate all of our stock. It will be so nice to—"

"Have a new house, and fill it full of company. I suppose if we had a house with twenty rooms you'd manage to fill every one of them, and have so many visitors that I'd have to be introduced to some new member every day. That would be—"

"We could ask Aunt Susan to pay us a visit; and there's Mrs. B——, who said she could not rest until she had paid us a visit; and Mrs. ———, who said she just must see those large, rolling prairies; your friend, Mr. G——, and Mr. H——, and—"

"Hold on there, my dear, not quite so fast, if you please. At this rate you'll have the house full of company, the walls all papered, and the help engaged before the contractors get a chance to lay the foundation. There is—"

"Would you build a brick or a large frame? I think a brick house the best, for they are so warm in winter and so cool in summer. I could have one room all for my flowers; you could have one for your 'den'; the little ones could have a play room, with plenty of spare rooms for the company when they commence to arrive. You could build a chicken house; get a lot of the different breeds of fancy fowls; build a new barn for the cows and horses, and have a nice carriage to ride to town in; build a nice house near the lake for your ducks and geese; have a nice place for your pigeons, and—"

"Don't you think we could prevail upon the Union Pacific to run a side track to the ranch (I beg pardon, I mean the farm), so you could have your marketing brought to the door? When you wanted to—"

"You could have the ground near the lake all leveled off nicely and made into a splendid lawn, and then there's the garden. You could afford to hire a regular gardener, and it would be so nice to raise our own vegetables. We could try an orchard the first year and see what it would amount to, and—"

"If you please, my dear, I'd like to say a little something occasionally just to hear how my voice sounded. I'd like to—"

"Wouldn't it be so nice to have a room fixed up expressly for canaries and other birds, and let them make their nests in the little trees, and a pond filled with fish, and—"

"Come, my dear, there goes the alarm, and you said you wanted to get up at 5 o'clock so as to pick some ducks for—"

"Guess I'll answer that letter the first thing I do. What did you do with it?"

"What letter do you mean? I don't know anything about any letter."

"Why, the one about that money. You just read it to me—"

"You'd better let the ducks go, dear, and try and get a little more sleep. You've been rolling and talking for the past two hours, and—"

"Didn't you just read a letter to me that came from Jones & Brown, attorneys at—"

"Not that I am aware of. I expect you have been dreaming, for—"

"Well, that's a good one on me. Let's have breakfast, and I'll just massacre those ducks in four minutes by the watch. Too much Christmas turkey, Mrs. Bob, too much turkey."

First Little Boy—My pop's a Methodist, what's yours? Second Little Boy—Mine is a theosophist. "Theosophist? What's that?" "I don't know." "Why don't you ask your pop?" "I did, but from the way he looked, I guess he doesn't know, either."

Twelve Million Machines

IN USE.

THE LIGHT RUNNING

DOMESTIC

Sewing Machine

Leads all others. Most Durable, Simplest, Best.

Every Agent claims the machines he sells the best, but talk is cheap. TIME is the only real test of genuine merit. During TWENTY-SIX YEARS of practical use the DOMESTIC has withstood this test. It stands to-day without a peer. Recommended by all White Goods Sewers, Dressmakers, Tailors and Manufacturers. Used by over 4,000 Families in Sacramento City. It is the only Sewing Machine with really Self-Setting Attachments. It costs you nothing to try it before you buy another. Sold on easy installments. Old machines taken in exchange.

Domestic Sewing Machine Co.

A. J. POMMER, Selling Agent,

Northwest corner Ninth and J streets, Sacramento.

TUFTS' Verbine COUGH Balsam

WILL

CURE YOUR COUGH, COLD, OR INFLUENZA, sure, or money refunded.

A. C. Tufts, Druggist, 10th and J Sts.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J, SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

American Eagle Hotel

Corner Twelfth and J Streets,

SACRAMENTO.

This house has been put in first-class condition, and also newly furnished—everything being new from office to kitchen.

Board and Room, per Week, - - $5.00 to $7.00

MEALS, 25 CENTS.

Terms made with families.

GEO. W. NEWBERT, Proprietor.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

O'BRIEN'S, 607 J.

SWEEEPING REDUCTION IN LADIES' SHOES.

Best French Kid, hand turn, worth $7, reduced to $6. Ladies' French Kid Button, low heel, long vamp, worth $5, reduced to $4. Misses' and Children's Canvas Shoes reduced 25 per cent.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,

SACRAMENTO.

SUN WING & CO.

Removed from 802 J Street to

815 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

A LARGE STOCK OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS,

Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Toys, Etc.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

DR. H. H. PIERSON,

SURGICAL & AND & MECHANICAL & DENTIST

511 J Street, bet. 5th and 6th.

Gas administered for the painless extraction of teeth.

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

—Gas and Steam Fitter.—

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SOUR MASH BOURBON WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagle & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGLE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Ropes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.

Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

DELINQUENT TAX LIST

FOR 1889.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. By virtue of and in accordance with the provisions of Sections 3764, 3765, 3766 and 3767 of the Political Code of the State of California, I will sell the real estate upon which the taxes on the property hereinafter described is a lien and delinquent for State and county taxes, for the year 1889, in front of the Court-house door, at the northwest corner of 1 and Seventh streets, in the city of Sacramento, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

Tuesday, the 25th
day of Feb'y,
1890,

For gold coin of the United States, each piece or parcel so described for the amount of taxes thereto annexed, together with 5 per cent. added thereto and 50 cents on each lot, piece or tract of land separately assessed and described, and on each assessment of improvements, and on each assessment of personal property additional thereto and accruing costs.

City Roll

Against the following named persons and the following described lots, pieces and tracts of land and other property in the city of Sacramento:

20—Against Mrs. M. Alexander and north 90 feet of west half of east half of lot 1, K and L, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $17 50; costs, $2 87. Total tax and costs, $20 37.

ments. State and county tax, $8 25; costs, 91 cents; total tax and costs, $9 16.

88—Against Harriet Auker and north three-quarters of lot 4, N and O, Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $29 12; costs, $2; total tax and costs, $31 12.

91—Against James Anderson and south half of lots 7 and 8, Q and R, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 59 cents; total tax and costs, $2 46.

103—Against John Azevedo and east half of lot 3, O and P, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 81.

104—Against Kate Arenz and north fifty feet of lot 5, D and E, Sixth and Seventh streets, and north fifty feet of east quarter of lot 6, D and E, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 25; costs, $ 51; total tax and costs, $11 76.

151—Against B. F. Ball and east half of lot 4, U and V, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets. State and county tax, $1 63; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 21.

186—Against E. Bayer and south seventy feet of lot 8, P and Q, Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets, and south seventy feet of west quarter of lot 7, P and Q, Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 95 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 49.

274—Against Joseph Bartoni and north forty-two and a half feet of lot 6, Q and R, Front and Second streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $21 25; costs, $2 05; total tax and costs, $23 30.

293—Against J. W. Brand and east half of lot 2, O and P, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $10; costs, $1; total tax and costs, $11 00.

298—Against John P. Brissell and west half of lot 6, E and F, Ninth and Tenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 81.

300—Against J. J. Bronner and south quarter of lot 1, I and J, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $41 82; costs, $3 10; total tax and costs, $44 92.

316—Against Henry Fisher and mortgage interest in west half of lot 6, O and P, Thirtieth and Fourteenth streets. State and county tax, $18 75; costs, $1 44; total tax and costs, $20 19.

351—Against Mrs. J. Brier and mortgage interest in south half of north half of lot 5, E and F, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $5 43; costs, 77 cents; total tax and costs, $6 20.

432—Against William Boyne and east half of lot 2, K and L, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $107 19; costs, $6 35; total tax and costs, $113 54.

438—Against Mrs. W. B. C. Brown and west three-quarters of lot 1, H and I, Eleventh and Twelfth streets, with improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $118 75; costs, $6 94; total tax and costs, $125 71.

And north 25 feet of south half of lots 1 and 2, P and Q, Second and Third streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $11 50; costs, $1 08; total tax and costs, $12 58.

And south half of lot 5, J and K, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $12 69; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs, $13 82.

468—Against John Lockhart and mortgage interest in east half of lot 7, C and D, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $12 50; costs, $1 12; total tax and costs, $13 62.

471—Against Annie Cooper and north half of lot 1, R and S, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 94 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 49.

490—Against C. P. Corlies and east 32½ feet of south 100 feet of lot 7, F and G, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and east 30 feet of north 60 feet of lot 7, F and G, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 81.

541—Against G. B. Cosby and west half of lot 2, P and Q, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $7 81; costs, 89 cents; total tax and costs, $8 70.

568—Against J. H. Campbell and lots 5, 6 and 7, R and S, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 50; costs, $1 58; total tax and costs, $13 08.

576—Against J. J. Carroll and north half of south half of lot 5, S and T, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $5 23.

580—Against J. J. Carroll and lots 3, 4, 7 and 8, V and W, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $2 69; costs, $1 15; total tax and costs, $3 84.

581—Against Mary Allen and mortgage interests in lots 3, 4, 7 and 8, V and W, Fourth and Fifth streets. State and county tax, $13 75; costs, $1 20; total tax and costs, $14 95.

598—Against St. L. N. Billings and mortgage interest in lot 5, B and C, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs, $3 13.

608—Against L. F. Taylor and mortgage interest in lot 1, Q and R, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $6 87; costs, 85 cents; total tax and costs, $7 72.

658—Against Margaret Carr and west 30 feet of east 55 feet of north half of lot 7, M and N, Second and Third streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38.

659—Against Margaret Carroll and lots 1 and 2, V and W, Fourth and Fifth streets. State and county tax, $3 13; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs, $3 78.

664—Against Mrs. M. L. Cass and east half of lot 8, I and J, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $22 19; costs, $2 11; total tax and costs, $24 30.

779—Against Mrs. E. M. D. Jurgens and lot 2, O and P, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $47 50; costs, $2 88; total tax and costs, $50 38.

786—Against R. Levy and west half of east half of lot 3, J and K, Second and Third streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $72 50; costs, $4 12; total tax and costs, $76 62.

831—Against E. P. and W. J. Coffey and lot 1, F and G, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets. State and county tax, $5 31; costs, 76 cents; total tax and costs, $6 07.

836—Against A. B. Davis and south half of west half of lot 5, J and K, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $3 44; costs, 67 cents; total tax and costs, $4 11.

852—Against Barney Donahoe and east quarter of north half of lot 1, M and N, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $13 69; costs, $1 68; total tax and costs, $15 37.

904—Against Ida H. Doan and lot 4, T and U, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 91 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 49.

908—Against Julius Danioth and north quarter of lot 5, Q and R, Ninth and Tenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $1 44; costs, 57 cents; total tax and costs, $2 01.

961—Against Margaret Dooley and west one-half of lot 4, Q and R, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets and improvements. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 62 cents; total tax and costs, $3 12.

983—Against Phoebe E. Dole and lots 7 and 8, Q and R, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $26 12; costs, $2 30; total tax and costs, $28 42.

993—Against Robert C. Douglass and west one-half of lot 3, V and W, Thirtieth and Thirty-first streets. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 81.

And east one-half of lot 4, X and Y, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, and personal property. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs, $3 13.

998—Against Mrs. L. Jones and mortgage interest in east one-half of lot 7, O and P, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets. State and county tax, $5; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs, $5 75.

1021—Against William H. Dean and west one-half of lot 4, Q and R, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 88; costs, $1 60; total tax and costs, $13 48.

1064—Against H. C. Ewing and west half of lot 7, N and O, Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs, $2 47.

1094—Against Sims Emory and south 100 feet of west half of lot 5, O and P, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 25; costs, $1 26; total tax and costs, $6 51.

1142—Against F. Fay and north 40 feet of south 60 feet of lot 8, P and Q, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 25; costs, $1 26; total tax and costs, $6 51.

1182—Against L. W. Farrell and east half of lot 6, N and O, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $4 37; costs, $1 22; total tax and costs, $5 59.

1217½—Against Horace Stevens and mortgage interest in west half of lot 6, P and Q, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 69 cents; total tax and costs, $4 44.

1220—Against P. A. Fisher and east half of lot 7, W and X, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, and personal property. State and county tax, $2 75; costs, $1 14; total tax and costs, $3 89.

1229—Against Mrs. T. A. Fairchild and lot 4, F and G, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets. State and county tax, $1 06; costs, 70 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76.

1260—Against F. M. Shields and mortgage in erest in lot 5, K and L, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $2 81; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs, $3 46.

1271½—Against Sarah Miller and north 118 feet of east 37½ feet of lot 4, O and P, Eighth and Ninth streets and improvements. State and county tax, $11 75; costs, $1 08; total tax and costs, $12 83.

1290—Against Anthony Greene and lot 1, O and P, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 63; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs, $12 16.

1304—Against Charles V. Garrett and south half of lots 1 and 2, V and W, Ninth and Tenth streets. State and county tax, $1 37; costs, 74 cents; total tax and costs, $2 11.

1377—Against C. Otterback and mortgage interest in lot 4, K and L, Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets. State and county tax, $5; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs, $5 75.

1320—Against William Morrison and mortgage interest in west 50 feet of lot 1, G and H, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets. State and county tax, $20; costs, $1 50; total tax and costs, $21 50.

1325—Against Native Sons of the Golden West, Parlor No. 3 and mortgage interest in south half of lot 5, C and D, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $10; costs, $1; total tax and costs, $11 00.

1326—Against Edith G. Grant and west half of lot 4, U and V, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08.

1376—Against J. A. Gibson and lots 2 and 3, D and E, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $3 25; costs, 66 cents. Total tax and costs, $3 91.

1436—Against Samuel Gottlieb and south quarter of lot 5, M and N, Sixth and Seventh streets, with improvements. State and county tax, $5 19; costs, 76 cents. Total tax and costs, $5 95.

And north 70 feet of lot 4, N and O, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $14 13; costs, $1 70. Total tax and costs, $15 83.

And west 10 feet of north half of lot 7, N and O, Seventh and Eighth streets, and north half of lot 8, N and O, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $4 31; costs, 72 cents. Total tax and costs, $5 03.

1532—Against Mrs. E. Hollehan and south 22 feet of north 62 feet of lots 5 and 6, Q and R, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 60 cents. Total tax and costs, $2 47.

1535—Against Eliza A. Hoyt and lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Seventh and Eighth streets. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents. Total tax and costs, $1 68.

And lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $19; costs, $1 95. Total tax and costs, $20 95.

1536—Against Howell Clark and mortgage interest in lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Sixth and Seventh streets, and lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Seventh and Eighth streets, and lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Eighth and Ninth streets. State and county tax, $27 50; costs, $2 87; total tax and costs, $30 37.

1549—Against G. H. Hamann and lots 6, 7, 8 and 9, V and W, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 56 cents; costs, 53 cents; total tax and costs, $1 09.

1575—Against W. C. Felch and mortgage interest in east fifty feet of lot 2, J and K, Eleventh and Twelfth streets. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 69 cents; total tax and costs, $4 44.

1629—Against I. C. Howe and lot 5, N and O, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $20 68; costs, $2 03; total tax and costs, $22 71.

1693—Against P. J. Harney and west half of lot 2, P and Q, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 87 cents; total tax and costs, $8 37.

1742—Against W. J. Hook, Jr., and north sixty feet of lot 4, and north sixty feet of east half of lot 3, G and H, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $18; costs, $1 40; total tax and costs, $19 40.

1788—Against Mrs. Jane Walters and mortgage interest in east half of lot 5, N and O, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs, $7 06.

1881—Against A. A. Krull and lot 8, N and O, Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets and improvements. State and county tax, $5 63; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs, $6 38.

1882—Against Mrs. F. Oschner and mortgage interest in lot 8, N and O, Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets. State and county tax, $37 50; costs, $2 35; total tax and costs, $39 85.

1924—Against George Kromer and west half of lot 4, P and Q, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 94 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 49.

1951—Against John Kennedy and lots 1 to 8, V and W, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-ninth streets and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $16 88; costs, $1 81; total tax and costs, $18 72

1951—Against Mechanics' Building and Loan Association and mortgage interest in south half of north half of east 73 feet and north 30 feet of south half of lot 4, N and O, Third and Fourth streets. State and county tax, $12 50; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs, $13 63

1955—Against Mrs. Mary Kelly and lot 2, O and V, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $7 20; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $7 38

1959—Against Thomas P. Sweeney and mortgage interest in north 40 feet of south 110 feet in lot 5, M and N, Third and Fourth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $7 38

2024—Against Samuel Kingsbury and north quarter of lot 5 and 6, Q and R, Sixth and Eighth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $8; costs, 90 cents; total tax and costs, $8 10

2060—Against Charles E. Leonard and north half of south half of lot 4, P and Q, Eleventh and Twelfth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 81

2099—Against George Lenke and east half of lot 2, O and P, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, $1 38; total tax and costs, $8 88

2093—Against W. W. Clary and mortgage interest in south half of lot 8, P and Q, Tenth and Eleventh streets. State and county tax, $12 50; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs, $13 63

2091—Against Jacob Schmidt and mortgage interest in south half of lot 8, P and Q, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and east quarter of lot 2, L and M, Seventh and Eighth streets. State and county tax, $7 25; costs, 87 cents; total tax and costs, $7 32

2141—Against Mrs. B. Cook and mortgage interest in north half of lot 4, T and U, Second and Third streets. State and county tax, $1 88; costs, 57 cents; total tax and costs, $1 95

2145—Against Mary Larkin and south half of lots 3 and 4, R and S, Tenth and Eleventh streets. State and county tax, $2 56; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs, $3 19

And lots 7 and 8, R and S, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $8 03; costs, $1 40; total tax and costs, $9 43

2151—Against Thomas Lewis and north half of lots 5 and 6, T and U, Ninth and Tenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $4 37; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs, $5 09

2192—Against Mrs. W. H. Lawrence and south 60 feet of north 110 feet of lot 8, Q and R, Third and Fourth streets, and north 66 feet of south 110 feet of west quarter of lot 7, Q and R, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $4 44; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs, $5 16

2206—Against Lynch and Rothaug and south half of west half of lot 10, B and C, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $5 62; costs, 78 cents; total tax and costs, $6 40

2250—Against A. Mery and east half of lot 2, E and F, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs, $3 13

2254—Against B. McVay and lots 8, O and P, Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $2 31; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs, $2 93

2268—Against Catherine M. Mahoney and south half of north quarter of lot 8, M and N, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $5 94; costs, 80 cents; total tax and costs, $6 74

2238—Against Eli Mayo and east half of lot 7, L and M, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $27 50; costs, $1 88; total tax and costs, $29 33

And south 25 feet of lot 5, P and Q, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $6 87; costs, 84 cents; total tax and costs, $7 71

2296—Against E. G. Messner and west half of lot 7, M and N, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $20 18; costs, $2; total tax and costs, $22 18

2310—Against Mrs. F. M. Marshall and east half of lot 6, P and Q, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $15 63; costs, $1 78; total tax and costs, $17 41

2349—Against H. G. Melvin (guardian) and north 100 feet of east half of lot 4, N and O, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $13 75; costs, $1 91; total tax and costs, $15 66

2350—Against Mrs. H. G. Melvin and lot 5, N and O, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets. State and county tax, $20 63; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs, $22 16

2356—Against Julia Nesche and mortgage interest in west 55 feet of lot 8, J and K, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

2416—Against J. H. Mendell and west half of east half of lot 2, K and L, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $57 19; costs, $3 85; total tax and costs, $61 04

2420—Against W. C. Felch and mortgage interest in west half of east half of lot 2, L and M, Seventh and Eighth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs, $6 90

2471—Against Mrs. M. A. Mose and lots 5 and 8, E and F, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $167 50; costs, $9 37; total tax and costs, $176 87

2486—Against Mary Myers and lot 1 and west half of lot 2, V and W, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. State and county tax, $4 3; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs, $5 10

And lot 8 and west half of lot 7, V and W, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. State and county tax, $4 37; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs, $5 09

And lots 1 to 8, W and X, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and personal property. State and county tax, $25 63; costs, $1 78; total tax and costs, $27 91

2497—Against Mrs. P. Mandler and lot 7, N and O, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $12 19; costs, $1 11; total tax and costs, $13 30

2504—Against Roddy McGrath and lot 6, I and J, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $20 9; costs, $1 55; total tax and costs, $22 45

2523—Against Thomas McCants and south quarter of lot 1, and south quarter of west 10 feet of lot 2, O and P, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $1 53

2516—Against estate of William Melvin and east half of lot 7, G and H, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $19 63; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs, $21 16

And west 15 feet of lot 3, I and J, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $40; costs, $2 50; total tax and costs, $42 50

2548—Against Sacramento Bank and mortgage interest in east 48 feet of lot 3, I and J, Fourth and Fifth streets. State and county tax, $18 75; costs, $1 44; total tax and costs, $20 19

2563—Against Peter and John McGee and lot 6 and south half of lot 7, K and L, Front and Second streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $141 56; costs, $8 08; total tax and costs, $149 64

2567—Against Morgan Brothers and lot 4, D and E, Sixth and Seventh streets. State and county tax, $3 31; costs, 77 cents; total tax and costs, $3 08

2598—Against George H. Nethercot and lot 8, K and L, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $16 68; costs, $1 83; total tax and costs, $18 51

2625—Against M. E. Norton and east half of lot 2, Q and R, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $4 13; costs, 66 cents; total tax and costs, $4 79

2666—Against Wm. E. Craft and mortgage interest in east half of lot 2, Q and R, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. State and county tax, $5; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $5 73

2670—Against Jacob Olsen and north of A, lots 1 to 10, A and B, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. State and county tax, $1 5; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

2718—Against J. M. Milliken and mortgage interest in north half of lot 4, G and H, Tenth and Eleventh streets. State and county tax, $3 15; costs, 66 cents; total tax and costs, $3 84

2722—Against A. Mohus and mortgage interest in lot 6, N and O, Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, $1; total tax and costs, $7 06

2730—Against Mrs. B. Politz and lot 3, O and P, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 78; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs, $2 48

2762—Against J. A. Parker and lot 8, G and H, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $38 75; costs, 29; total tax and costs, $41 69

2783—Against Union Bank and Loan Association and mortgage interest in south half of west 50 feet of lot 8, H and I, Seventh and Eighth streets. State and county tax, $112 15; costs, $6 13; total tax and costs, $118 63

2781—Against John H. Platt and east half of lot 4, M and N, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $7 19; costs, 86 cents; total tax and costs, $8 05

2818—Against W. F. Ashby and mortgage interest in west half of lot 4, J and K, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, $88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

2908—Against Mrs. Emma C. Irvine and mortgage interest in west half of lot 7, M and N, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, $1; total tax and costs, $7 06

2978—Against Wm. Roan and lots 1 to 8, S and T, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets. State and county tax, $1 75; costs, 94 cents; total tax and costs, $2 69

2979—Against Mrs. E. G. Thomas and mortgage interest in lots 1 to 8, S and T, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets. State and county tax, $10; costs, $1; total tax and costs, $11 00

2981—Against W. W. Ryder and lots 5 and 6, T and U, Second and Third streets. State and county tax, $3 31; costs, 76 cents; total tax and costs, $3 07

3009—Against Exempt Fireman's Association and mortgage interest in lot 5, and south 5 feet of lot 6, O and P, Front and Second streets. State and county tax, $25; costs, $1 73; total tax and costs, $26 73

3019—Against F. W. Steinmeyer and mortgage interest in north 30 feet of south 60 feet of lot 4, Q and R, Third and Fourth streets. State and county tax, $25 50; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs, $26 13

3033—Against C. H. Schwelzer and west half of lot 2, I and J, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $15; costs, $1 25; total tax and costs, $16 25

3059—Against Mechanics' Building and Loan Association and mortgage interest in east half of lot 4, I and J, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $25; costs, $1 73; total tax and costs, $26 73

3085—Against Delbert and mortgage interest in quarter of lot 5, O and P, Eleventh and Twelfth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $3 13; costs, 66 cents; total tax and costs, $3 79

3071—Against Elvina Sayers and east half of lot 7, N and O, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 81

3078—Against E. D. Shirland and south half of north half of lot 1, F and G, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 69; costs, $1 58; total tax and costs, $13 27

3085—Against A. Galliotto and mortgage interest in lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Twentieth and Twenty-first streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

3103—Against Frank Swift and east half of lot 3, M and N, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 88; costs, $1 60; total tax and costs, $13 48

3106—Against G. M. Schumacher and east half of lot 2, J and K, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 81; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs, $2 33

3139—Against H. Spierling and improvements on south half of lot 8, V and W, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and personal property. State and county tax, $5 07; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs, $5 82

3141—Against Henry Starr and north quarter of lot 4, P and Q, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $32 75; costs, $2 63; total tax and costs, $35 38

3159—Against Ang. Meister and mortgage interest in west 30 feet of lot 4, F and G, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. State and county tax, $1; costs, $1 25; total tax and costs, $1 25

351—Against P. H. Stelner and west half of lot 3, U and V, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 8 cents; total tax and costs, $1 58

3260—Against Mrs. T. Shalahan and lots 5 and 6, K and S, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 94 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 49

3308—Against W. J. Smith and north quarter of lot 1, D and E, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, and west 10 feet of north quarter of lot 2, D and E, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 63 cents; costs, 53 cents; total tax and costs, $1 16

3370—Against A. Trope and north 20 feet of south 69 feet of lot 1, I and J, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $19 69; costs, $1 48; total tax and costs, $21 17

3377—Against Benjamin Turk and north half of east quarter of lot 7, L and M, Second and Third streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $2 6; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs, $3 81

3382—Against Joseph Patton and mortgage interest in lot 5, I and J, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $7 40; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

3397—Against Henry Hibbs and north 5 feet of south half of lot 5, P and Q, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 69; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs, $12 22

3423—Against L. H. T. Hunter and north half of west 10 feet of lot 1, M and N, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 43; costs, $1 57; total tax and costs, $13 00

3503—Against Louis A. Vogel and south 60 feet of lot 10, Q and R, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $8 69; costs, $1 11; total tax and costs, $10 13

3530—Against Chris. Wall and lots 3 and 4, K and L, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $36 81; costs, $2 34; total tax and costs, $39 15

3652—Against M. F. Wilson and north half of lot 5, C and D, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 63 cents; costs, 53 cents; total tax and costs, $1 16

3729—Against H. F. Dillman and mortgage interest in north half of west half of lot 3, C and D, Ninth and Tenth streets. State and county tax, $1 81; costs, 74 cents; total tax and costs, $2 55

3749—Against F. A. Ziegler and north half of west half of lot 10, B and C, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. State and county tax, $1; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 55

3753—Against W. S. Zeitlin and west half of lot 1, V and W, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets. State and county tax, $1 56; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 14

3771—Against Sacramento Baptist Union and lot 5, M and N, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $19 38; costs, $1 47; total tax and costs, $20 85

3782—Against Rosa R. Hermasilla and mortgage interest in all south of railroad of lot 3, H and I, Fifth and Sixth streets; south 34 1/2 feet of lot 4, H and I, Fifth and Sixth streets; and north quarter of lot 5, H and I, Fifth and Sixth streets. State and county tax, $62 50; costs, $4 13; total tax and costs, $66 63

Lots and Blocks, and Fractions Thereof, in the City of Sacramento, Assessed to Unknown Owners.

3815—Against unknown owners and north of A lots 1 to 8, A and B, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, $1; total tax and costs, $7 06

3818—Against unknown owners and south half of west half of east half of lot 6, L and M, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $8 14; costs, 92 cents; total tax and costs, $9 36

3846—Against unknown owners and west half of east half of lot 7, V and W, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets. State and county tax, 94 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 49

3847—Against unknown owners and east half of lot 8, V and W, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs, $2 47

3867—Against unknown owners and east half of lot 4, M and N, Ninth and Tenth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $33 75; costs, $2 19; total tax and costs, $35 94

4084—Against B. F. Bates and lots 1 to 4, block 61, Folsom, and improvements. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 69 cents; total tax and costs, $4 44

4094—Against Calvin L. Bates and northeast quarter of southeast quarter and northwest quarter of southeast quarter of section 31, township 7, range 9, 80 acres and improvements; and southeast quarter of northwest quarter and southwest quarter of northeast quarter of section 31, township 7, range 9, 80 acres, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $6 91; costs, 85 cents; total tax and costs, $7 75

4113—Against E. and J. Downing and mortgage interest in southeast quarter of section 23, township 10, range 7, 160 acres and southeast quarter of section 25, township 10, range 7, 160 acres. State and county tax, $2 60; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs, $3 73

4120—Against Fannie K. Cross and mortgage interest in east 110 acres of north half of section 1, township 8, range 6. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

4121—Against estate of S. Bergman and fraction in north half of section 3, township 2, range 2, 41 acres. State and county tax, 75 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs, $1 29

425—Against estate of F. Boggs and fraction in west half of east half of section 9, township 2, range 2, twenty six acres; State and county tax, 45 cents; costs, 82 cents; total tax and costs, $5 97

445—Against Chris. O'Regan and mortgage interest in lot 8, Thivoli Gardens. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $5 23

4201—Against Sarah T. Moore and mortgage interest in lot 2, block 78, Fulton. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

4208—Against George W. Baker and mortgage interest in fractional northeast quarter bounded east by S. Quail, in section 17, township 8, range 6. State and county tax, $30; costs, $2; total tax and costs, $32 00

4214—Against Mrs. N. A. Barnes and lots 11 and 12, block M, Highland Park. State and county tax, $2 25; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs, $2 86

4224—Against Mary E. Butterworth and tract of land on Tschell Island, bounded east by T. H. Williams, west by E. G. Miner, in township 3, range 3, 500 acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

4260—Against W. H. Barkhurst and lot 1 in Anderson Tract, 15 1/2 acres, and personal property. State and county tax, $56 18; costs, $3 80; total tax and costs, $59 98

4271—Against W. T. Bottemore and tract of land bounded east by Central Pacific Railroad, south and west by quarter section line, being a fraction of southwest quarter of northeast quarter of section 27, township 5, range 6, 3 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $5 23

4298—Against Stephen Dwyer and mortgage interest in tract of land bounded north and east by Goslin, south by A. Terrio, west by James McNasser, in section 3, township 7, range 4. State and county tax, $15; costs, $1 25; total tax and costs, $16 25

4312—Against George W. Chapman and lot 15, Louisiana tract, five acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $5 62; costs, 93 cents; total tax and costs, $5 95

4442—Against Oliver Carter and possession interest and claim in and to south half of northwest quarter of section 29, township 6, range 8, eighty acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $12 45; costs, $6 2; total tax and costs, $14 07

4468—Against T. W. Cox and northeast quarter of southwest quarter of section 27, township 7, range 5, forty acres. State and county tax, $19 80; costs, $1 49; total tax and costs, $21 29

And fraction of northwest quarter of southwest quarter of section 27, township 7, range 5, 16 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $28 50; costs, $2 42; total tax and costs, $30 92

4531—Against Fannie K. Cross and mortgage interest in tract of land bounded north by Spelker, east and south by Chris. west by Lower Stockton road, in northeast quarter of section 30, township 8, range 9, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

4557—Against John G. Davis and lot in northwest corner of northeast quarter of northeast quarter of section 12, township 7, range 8, five acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 32; costs, $1 26; total tax and costs, $6 58

4567—Against John Douahne and lots 9 and 10, block 49, Folsom. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 69 cents; total tax and costs, $2 47

4575—Against L. A. Darr and fraction in southeast quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8, three acres. State and county tax, 99 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 54

4632—Against A. Eberhardt and lot 14 block 1, Highland Park, and improvements. State and county tax, $1 95; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs, $2 70

4640—Against C. Erickson and fraction of sub-marked Burseman on the office map of the Rancho Rio de los Americanos in township 9, range 6, thirty and one-half acres, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 45

4758—Against Patrick Fitzpatrick and fraction in southwest quarter of section 6, township 9, range 8, thirty-five acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $12 65; costs, $1 63; total tax and costs, $14 81

4761—Against Mrs. Rosa A. Folger and lot 57, Monte Vista tract, one and ninety-six one hundredths acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

4784—Against G. H. and W. S. Fisher and fraction of west half of section 26, township 5, range 7, 170 acres. State and county tax, $36 75; costs, $3; total tax and costs, $39 40

4799—Against Charles Gibson and northeast quarter of southeast quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8, 40 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 93; costs, $1 30; total tax and costs, $7 23

4843—Against Mrs. J. G. Goodwin and tract of land bounded north by Mrs. Rink and C. Boothroyd, east and south by N. Clark, west by Thirtieth street, two acres and improvements and personal property.

PROPERTY IN SACRAMENTO
COUNTY

ASSESSED TO

Unknown Owners.

6701—Against unknown owners and tract No. 17, Anderson tract ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6702—Against unknown owners and tract No. 18, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6703—Against unknown owners and tract No. 19, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6704—Against unknown owners and tract No. 20, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6709—Against unknown owners and lot 33, Louisiana Tract, two and three-tenths acres. State and county tax, $2 10; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs, $2 70

6716—Against unknown owners and south half of southwest quarter of northwest quarter of section 6, township 7, range 6, twenty acres. State and county tax, $10 50; costs, $1 03; total tax and costs, $11 53

6717—Against unknown owners and east half of lot 11, G. H. Kerr's Tract, Elk Grove. State and county tax, $1 54; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

6718—Against unknown owners and lots 9 to 16, block 13, Folsom. State and county tax, 22 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs, $0 73

6719—Against unknown owners and lots 1 to 8, block 12, Folsom. State and county tax, 23 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs, $0 75

6720—Against unknown owners and lots 1 to 8, block 14, Folsom. State and county tax, 15 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs, $0 66

6721—Against unknown owners and lots 13 to 16, block 14, Folsom. State and county tax, 15 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs, $0 66

6722—Against unknown owners and lots 9 to 16, block 15, Folsom. State and county tax, 22 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs, $0 74

6725—Against unknown owners and lots 15 and 16, block 14, Folsom. State and county tax, 37 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs, $0 89

6729—Against unknown owners and lot 14, block B, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6738—Against unknown owners and lot 7, block G, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 69

6739—Against unknown owners and lot 12, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

6740—Against unknown owners and lot 9, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6741—Against unknown owners and lot 12, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 75

6742—Against unknown owners and lot 13, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6746—Against unknown owners and lot 8, Kathleen Tract. State and county tax, $0 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $0 76

6747—Against unknown owners and lot 7, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6748—Against unknown owners and lot 8, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6749—Against unknown owners and lot 18, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6750—Against unknown owners and lot 19, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6751—Against unknown owners and lot 20, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6756—Against unknown owners and south 50 acres of northeast quarter of section 20, township 8, range 7, 50 acres. State and county tax, $22 50; costs, $1 63; total tax and costs, $24 13

6757—Against unknown owners and east quarter of section 19, township 8, range 7, 160 acres. State and county tax, $12; costs, $2 60; total tax and costs, $14 60

6758—Against unknown owners and lot 3, block 5, Isleton. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 45

6761—Against unknown owners and lot 19, block 5, Isleton. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 45

6770—Against unknown owners and lot 4, block 45, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

6771—Against unknown owners and tract of land bounded north by Appel, south by Goldberg, west by Upper Stockton road, 2 acres. State and county tax, $3; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs, $3 65

6772—Against unknown owners and tract of land bounded north by Lansing, east by Saunders, south by Goldberg, west by Appel, 5 acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6773—Against unknown owners and tract of land bounded north and west by Sacramento river and Upham, east by Upham, south by Weitman, being fraction of sections 23, 24 and 25, in township 3, range 2, 191 acres. State and county tax, $1 28; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs, $2 00

6776—Against unknown owners and west half of northeast quarter of southwest quarter of section 35, township 8, range 5, 20 acres. State and county tax, $10 50; costs, $1 02; total tax and costs, $11 52

6778—Against unknown owners and lot 3, block 10, Capital Homestead Association. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 45

GEORGE C. McMULLEN,
Tax Collector.

State and county tax, $16 13; costs, $1 81; total tax and costs, $17 94

4861—Against M. C. Goddard and east half of west half of southeast quarter of section 3 township 7, range 5, 40 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $33 39; costs, $2 67; total tax and costs, $35 97

4866—Against Noah B. Gill and north half of southwest quarter of section 18, township 7, range 9, 80 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $24; costs, $2 20; total tax and costs, $26 20

4927—Against Christiana Hobeich and lots 26 and 28, New Ramona Colony, ten acres. State and county tax, $10 27; costs, $1; total tax and costs, $11 27

4928—Against C. Holland and all west of county road of east half of northwest quarter, section 17, township 8, range 6, 70 acres; and west 97 acres of east 157 acres of north half of section 17, township 8, range 6, 97 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $12 70; costs, $7 63; total tax and costs, $13 13

4951—Against Mrs. E. J. Hill and fraction of southeast quarter of section of Placer county line of section 16, township 10, range 7, 30 acres. State and county tax, $9; costs, 95 cents; total tax and costs, $9 95

4971—Against G. E. Hook and lot 31, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

5029—Against J. R. Hodson and all south of Jackson Road of east half of northwest quarter, section 19, township 8, range 6, 52 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $15 38; costs, $1 27; total tax and costs, $16 65

5048—Against Russell Howell and lot 13, Florin, 3 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $9 23; costs, $1 46; total tax and costs, $10 69

5062—Against Neil's Hansoo and all east of railroad of southeast quarter, section 16, township 10, range 6, 24 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $7 05; costs, $1 35; total tax and costs, $8 40

5069—Against E. E. Hewitt and tract of land on Sherman Island, bounded north by Sacramento river, east by J. Larsen and E. I. Upham, south and west by S. C. Hastings, in section 27, township 3, range 2, 251 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $6 75; costs, $1 81; total tax and costs, $7 59

5173—Against Mrs. S. A. Jones and east half of lot 5 of J. H. Kerr tract, Elk Grove, and improvements. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $2 23

5221—Against George H. Kimball and Swamp Land Survey No. 562, known as Hammond Island, township 2, range 1, 72 acres. State and county tax, $6 43; costs, 83 cents; total tax and costs, $7 28

5250—Against M. Cronan and mortgage interest in tract of land bounded north by Jackson road, east by road, south by Silverline, west by Marshall, in section 15, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $9 75; costs, 99 cents; total tax and costs, $10 75

5303—Against E. Grosser and mortgage interest in lots 1 and 2, and west half of northeast quarter of section 26, township 10, range 7. State and county tax, $7 19; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

5417—Against D. W. McVillie and east half of northwest quarter of section 18, township 5, range 8, 80 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $13 50; costs, $1 67; total tax and costs, $15 17

5425—Against estate of Ellen McCarthy and west half of southeast quarter and northeast quarter of southeast quarter, and southeast quarter of northeast quarter, section 26, township 7, range 8, 160 acres. State and county tax, $12; costs, $1 10; total tax and costs, $13 10

5456—Against H. A. Mayhew and lots 7 to 12, block 2, Oak Park. State and county tax, $9 75; costs, 19 cents; total tax and costs, $10 74

And lots 12 to 16, block 3, Oak Park. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

And lots 11 to 14, block 4, Oak Park. State and county tax, $6 35; costs, 82 cents; total tax and costs, $7 20

And lot 6, block 5, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

And lots 9 to 16, block 23, Oak Park. State and county tax, $12; costs, $1 10; total tax and costs, $13 10

And lots 10 to 16, block 25, Oak Park. State and county tax, $11 82; costs, $1 06; total tax and costs, $12 38

And lots 6 to 9, block 26, Oak Park. State and county tax, $6; costs, 80 cents; total tax and costs, $6 80

And lots 15 and 16, block 45, Oak Park. State and county tax, $4 10; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $5 23

5488—Against James McCall and lot 8, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

5545—Against Katie Matthews and lot 2, block 25, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 65; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 23

5642—Against Nettie Manning and northeast quarter of section 3, township 9, range 6, 165 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $39 32; costs, $3 96; total tax and costs, $43 28

5658—Against G. H. Iler and mortgage interest in lots 7 and 8, block 7, Galt. State and county tax, $9; costs, 95 cents; total tax and costs, $9 95

5665—Against Susan McCarthy and southwest quarter of section 26, township 7, range 8, forty acres. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs, $3 65

579—Against Thomas E. Morgan and south 10 acres of Swamp Land Survey, No. 351, Brannan Island in township 4, range 3, 100 acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $64 50; costs, $3 73; total tax and costs, $68 23

602—Against W. P. Moyer and lot 11, Louisiana Tract, 5 acres, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $2 33; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs, $2 94

608—Against L. E. and S. E. Martin and fraction of north half of southwest quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8, 15 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $3 30; costs, 67 cents; total tax and costs, $3 97

609—Against Henry Schlittler and mortgage interest in fraction of north half of southwest quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8. State and county tax, $1 63; costs, 59 cents; total tax and costs, $2 21

619—Against Catherine Nelson and Swamp Land Survey, No. 1071, known as Decker Island, in township 3, range 2, 78 acres. State and county tax, $4 65; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $5 38

614—Against F. Nunes and lot in Painter-ville in section 5, township 5, range 4, one acre, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 62; costs, $1 28; total tax and costs, $6 90

5674—Against L. E. Taylor and mortgage interest in east quarter of southwest quarter of southeast quarter, section 23, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs, $5 22

5700—Against Annie Parker and lot 5, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 13; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 69

5701—Against A. J. Palmer and northeast quarter of southeast quarter, section 18, township 8, range 5, forty acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $96 52; costs, $5 8; total tax and costs, $102 35

5709—Against A. J. Pommer and lot 22, Ingham tract. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

5719—Against C. E. Pinkman and tract bounded north by McLaughlin, south and west by Saunders, east by railroad, in section 35, township 8, range 5, twenty acres. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs, $3 65

5753—Against J. A. Parker and east half of northeast quarter of section 26 township 10, range 7, 80 acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $30 15; costs, $2; total tax and costs, $32 15

And upper 400 acres of lot 1, Sheldon estate, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $81; costs, $5 05; total tax and costs, $86 05

5761—Against John P. Peterson and lots 11 and 12, block "Q," Highland Park. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs, $3 65

5780—Against Mary E. Pratt and northeast quarter of section 4, township 7, range 8, 160 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $22 20; costs, $1 61; total tax and costs, $23 81

And lots 4 and 5 in northwest quarter of section 3, township 7, range 8, 77 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $12 22; costs, $1 12; total tax and costs, $13 34

And personal property. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs, $5 22

5781—Against Mrs. M. Pugh and east half of northeast quarter of section 6, township 7, range 6, 79 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $4 63; costs, $1 23; total tax and costs, $5 86

5783—Against C. L. Pugh and mortgage interest in lot in Brighton north of railroad, being a fraction in northwest corner of southeast quarter of section 14, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $2 23

5809—Against W. J. Parker and northeast quarter, section 33, township 8, range 5, 158 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $35 92; costs, $2 30; total tax and costs, $38 22

And northwest quarter of section 31, township 8, range 6, 157 acres. State and county tax, $20 55; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs, $22 08

And personal property. State and county tax, $22 35; costs, $1 62; total tax and costs, $23 97

5819—Against M. S. Pike and W. S. Kexdall and tract of land bounded north by American river, east by Briggs and Nuttall, south by M. Pike & Cox, west by Cox, section 13-24, township 9, range 6, 179½ acres; and tract of land bounded north by Pike and I. Nuttall, east by I. Nuttall, south by Coloma road, west by Cox, section 13-24, township 9, ranges 6 and 7, 120 acres and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $28 80; costs, $1 94; total tax and costs, $30 74

5833—Against E. W. Redding and lot 1, block 2, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

5860—Against E. A. Rowley and possession interest and claim of, in and to southwest quarter of section 29, township 6, range 8, 160 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $25 20; costs, $2 26; total tax and costs, $27 46

5862—Against S. C. Rich and lot 5, Kathleen Tract, and personal property. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, $1 19; total tax and costs, $4 94

5883—Against John Keam and lots 11 and 12, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $2 70; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs, $3 34

And lots 9 and 10, block J, Highland Park. State and county tax, $2 51; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs, $3 18

And lot 5, block J, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

5945—Against Samuel Rogers and lot 3, Anderson tract, in section 29 township 8, range 6, fourteen acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 20; costs, $1 51; total tax and costs, $11 71

5956—Against W. D. H. Ross and lot 12, Louisiana tract, five acres and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $2 03; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs, $2 63

5987—Against Charles Saul and fractional southeast quarter of section 35, township 9, range 8, 100 acres. State and county tax, $15; costs, $1 25; total tax and costs, $16 25

And northeast quarter of section 2, township 8, range 8, 160 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $25 50; costs, $1 92; total tax and costs, $27 42

6021—Against Fred Schwears and Swamp Land Survey No. 344, Tyler Island, in section 20, township 4, range 4, 155 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $49 50; costs, $2 98; total tax and costs, $52 48

6051—Against Homer Smith and north fifty feet of lot 1, Goddard's addition to Florin and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $2 25; costs, $1 67; total tax and costs, $3 37

6058—Against Ida D. Spillman and lot 10, block N, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

6102—Against Julius Sloat and lot 10, block M, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6134—Against Mary E. Smith and lot 13, Monte Vista tract, one acre. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 68 cents; total tax and costs, $4 43

6138—Against Joseph Gray and mortgage interest in northeast eighty-four acres of subdivision marked G. M. G. Titus on the official map of the rancho de Los Americanos, in section 27, township 9, range 6. State and county tax, $82 50; costs, $1 63; total tax and costs, $84 13

6147—Against Mary L. Stubble and lot 21, Monte Vista Tract, 2.55 acres. State and county tax, $10 50; costs, $1 03; total tax and costs, $11 53

6158—Against A. G. McManus Jr. and Sr. and mortgage interest in tract near McCracken bridge, in section 2, township 7, range 7. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $2 23

6194—Against Estate of T. K. Stewart and Swamp Land Surveys No. 600 and No. 952, bounded east by Thirty-first street extended, south by A street extended, west by Twenty-ninth street extended, less 10 acres sold to A. Meyers, in section 36, township 9, range 4, 40 acres. State and county tax, $22 50; costs, $1 63; total tax and costs, $24 13

624—Against William A. Scott and all north-west of Hicksville road of lower half of lot 12, Hartnell Grant, township 7, range 7, 470 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $53 25; costs, $3 66; total tax and costs, $56 91

623—Against Katie Freund and mortgage interest in lot 1, Goddard's Addition to Florin, less north 50 feet assessed to Homer Smith. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6284—Against J. Treth and lot 9, block 5, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

6332—Against Philip A. Ritt and mortgage interest in south 7 acres of west 35 acres of northwest quarter of section 29, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $5 25; costs, 76 cents; total tax and costs, $6 01

6391—Against Sarah A. Uren and mortgage interest in lot 2, Florin. State and county tax, $3; costs, 95 cents; total tax and costs, $3 95

6408—Against John F. Wearn and lot 1, block 25, Oak Park. State and county tax, $2 40; costs, 62 cents; total tax and costs, $3 02

6403—Against J. M. Watts and lots 14, 15 and 16, Florin 7½ acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 63; costs, $1 28; total tax and costs, $6 91

6409—Against Sarah E. Bader and mortgage interest in west half of southeast quarter and east half of southwest quarter, section 29, township 8, range 6. State and county tax, $27; costs, $1 85; total tax and costs, $28 85

6421—Against J. M. Jackson and mortgage interest in northeast quarter and north half of southeast quarter, section 31, township 8, range 6. State and county tax, $2; costs, $1 85; total tax and costs, $2 85

6466—Against estate of N. Williams and Swamp Land Survey No. 43, in sections 14 and 15, township 6, range 4, 177 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $151 20; costs, $8 56; total tax and costs, $159 76

6471—Against P. Waggoner and south half of northeast quarter of section 32, township 8, range 8, eighty acres. State and county tax, $3 37; costs, 67 cents; total tax and costs, $4 04

And south quarter of section 28, township 8, range 8, 160 acres. State and county tax, $5 92; costs, 79 cents; total tax and costs, $6 71

And fractional east half of section 5, township 7, range 8, fifty-four acres. State and county tax, $11 32; costs, $1 06; total tax and costs, $12 38

And improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $1 55; costs, $1 58; total tax and costs, $3 13

6514—Against Methodist Church and lot 5, block 51, Folsom, and east half of lot 6, block 51, Folsom, one acre, and improvements. State and county tax, $17 25; costs, $1 36; total tax and costs, $18 61

6575—Against Martin J. Coyne and lot 2, block J, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6592—Against John Farren and lot 2, block "Q," Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 13; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 69

6594—Against Alice Goodwin and lots 3 and 4, block 5, Oak Park. State and county tax, $2 40; costs, 62 cents; total tax and costs, $3 02

6595—Against C. F. Garduer and lots 9, 10, 11 and 12, block 45, Oak Park. State and county tax, $6; costs, 80 cents; total tax and costs, $6 80

6597—Against Mrs. E. Green and lot 3, block B, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 13; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 69

6600—Against Mary Valgaul and lot 7, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $0 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $0 88

6609—Against Mrs. M. A. Hartley and lot 13, block N, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 35; costs, 57 cents; total tax and costs, $1 92

6610—Against Sarah M. Howard and lot 1, block P, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 05; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 60

6611—Against W. D. Hass and lot 4, section 7, township 7, range 7, 19 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $14 63; costs, $1 73; total tax and costs, $16 36

6615—Against Robert Keele and fraction in section 6, township 9, range 8, five acres and improvements. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs, $3 65

6617—Against Mrs. L. E. Little and lot 12, block H, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

6627—Against F. M. Miller and lot 2, block J, Highland Park, and improvements. State and county tax, $3 98; costs, 71 cents; total tax and costs, $4 68

6635—Against F. M. Oddom and east 2½ feet and west 25 feet of lot 8, and west 18 feet of lot 7, block 34, Folsom, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $2 70; costs, 64 cents; total tax and costs, $3 34

6636—Against Mrs. W. L. Klump and mortgage interest in east 25 feet of west 25 feet of lot 8 and west 18 feet of lot 7, block 34, Folsom. State and county tax, $9 38; costs, 97 cents; total tax and costs, $10 35

6644—Against Emma Rider and lot 11, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

6647½—Against Mrs. A. M. Reid and fraction in northwest quarter of section 11, township 7, range 5, twenty acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $10 50; costs, $1 03; total tax and costs, $11 53

6648—Against John Steele and all south of county line of south half of west half of section 16, township 10, range 7, thirty-nine acres. State and county tax, $1 05; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 60

6688—Against Trustees Swamp Land District, No. 50, and fraction of northwest quarter of northwest quarter of section 12, township 2, range 1, twenty-nine acres. State and county tax, 45 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs, $0 97

6690—Against Cosmunes Land and Water Company and five miles of ditch in course of construction and personal property. State and county tax, $11 25; costs, $1 56; total tax and costs, $12 81

6694—Against San Yuen & Co. and east half of lot 14, block O, Folsom, and improvements. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 68 cents; total tax and costs, $4 43

6696—Against Tong Eik and north 132 feet of lots 1 and 2, block 19, Folsom and improvements. State and county tax, $6; costs, 80 cents; total tax and costs, $6 80

A Magic Square that Will Answer Your Questions.

Below is given a full description of the amusing magic square, called "Egyptian Zairgeth:"

D	W	W	A	W	O	H	A	B	H
I	O	I	S	O	T	D	T	T	W
W	O	A	A	A	I	E	N	I	I
T	S	D	N	T	H	I	A	A	E
O	T	T	N	T	U	W	T	D	H
T	I	A	E	S	F	L	I	N	U
E	L	N	J	C	A	D	T	O	C
R	O	H	V	E	O	W	Y	P	E
F	R	W	E	D	I	O	I	A	E
L	N		C	T	L	G	H	E	H

Divide a square of pasteboard into 100 smaller squares, lettering them as above. (It will save you trouble to cut the above diagram and paste it to a card.) Then ask some person to express secretly in writing a wish, to be answered by the Zairgeth. Let him select any letter on the Zairgeth. This you write down, and proceeding horizontally from left to right, as in reading, write down every fifth letter from that chosen, taking each line consecutively until the letter first selected is reached, which is not again to be used. Put a little mark over the first letter you use from the top line. When all the letters have been written, begin to form the sentence from the jumble of letters by starting with the letter that has the mark above it; write the sentence and pass it to the wisher, who must at the same time pass you the paper containing his wish. For example, suppose the wish expressed to be, "I would like to travel in foreign countries," and the letter selected from the Zairgeth is "A" (third letter from the left on the sixth line). You write down that letter and every fifth letter from it, with this result:

AINTHYWISHWAITANDATT

As the letter "W" is the first one taken from the top line, commence the sentence with it and it reads thus:

"WAIT AND ATTAIN THY WISH."

"Come over to our church and hear me preach this morning," said the pastor; "if you don't like the sermon you will the music; we are going to have some of the loveliest chants you ever listened to." "No, thanks," replied the citizen; "I took some in the grab-bag, the fish-pond, the ring cake, and the prize doll at your fair last week, and I haven't a cent left for the contribution basket. Guess I'll stay out till my luck changes."

STATE OF CALIFORNIA—COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman, doing business under the firm name of Wm. M. Lyon & Co., insolvent debtors.

Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman having filed in this Court their petition, schedule and inventory in insolvency, from which it appears that they are insolvent debtors, the said Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman are hereby declared to be insolvent. The Sheriff of the county of Sacramento is hereby directed to take possession of all the estate, real and personal, of the said insolvent debtors, except such as may be by law exempt from execution, and of all their deeds, vouchers, books of account, and papers, and to keep the same safely until the appointment of an assignee of their estate. All persons are forbidden to pay any debts to the said insolvents or to deliver any property, belonging to such insolvents, to them or to any person, firm, corporation or association, for their use, and the said debtors are hereby forbidden to transfer or deliver any property, until the further order of this Court, except as herein ordered.

It is further ordered, that all the creditors of said debtors be and appear before the Hon. John W. Armstrong, Judge of the Superior Court of the county of Sacramento, in open Court, at the Court room of said Court, in the city and County of Sacramento, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock P. M., of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estate of said debtors.

It is further ordered, that in the meantime all proceedings against the said insolvents be stayed.

JOHN W. ARMSTRONG,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Insolvents.
Dated, January 10, 1890. j11-w5

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said County.

In the matter of A. M. Auburtus, an insolvent debtor.

A. M. Auburtus, an insolvent debtor, having applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, it is hereby ordered that the Clerk of this Court give notice to all creditors who have proved their debts, to appear before this Court, at the Court-room thereof, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at the hour of 1:30 o'clock P. M., and show cause, if any they have, why the said A. M. Auburtus should not be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

It is further ordered, that notice of said application be given to the creditors by mail, and by publication once a week for four weeks, in the THEMIS, a newspaper published in said county.

Dated, January 24, 1890.
W. C. VAN FLEET, Judge.
C. W. BAKER, Attorney for Petitioner. j25w4

824 J ST. Fine Candies

Family Orders for Ice Cream a Specialty.

THE ONLY MAKER OF COLT'S FOOT ROCK COUGH CANDY.

FRUIT AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AND PLANTS.

1,000,000

Trees and Nursery Stock for sale at LOW PRICES, of Best Varieties Deciduous Trees.

Also, ORANGE, LEMON, OLIVE, FIG, AND NUT-BEARING TREES, of most approved varieties.

Nurseries: Near Acampo Station, San Joaquin. Principal Depot: No. 813 Second Street, near Passenger Depot, Sacramento.

Send for Catalogue. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Address: REED & VAN GELDER, Nurserymen, Sacramento, Cal.

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.

General Printers,

410 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Simon Sturmer,

FOR SALE.

B L O C K

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1013 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,
No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

STABLE TO LET.

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

B. Ruhl Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and
Blank Book Manufacturer.
Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city.
Main office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,
609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,
Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Excesses, etc.,
Positively Cured or no Pay.
No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated.
Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.
BOHEMIA PILSENER,
BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop

ANHEUSER & BUSCH BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

Patronize Home Industry!

CITY BREWERY

FRANK RUHSTALLER, Proprietor.

GENUINE

Pilsener Felsen Beer.

Corner Twelfth and H Streets,

Telephone 201.

SACRAMENTO.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSNER, BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

824 J ST. Fine Candies

Family Orders for Ice Cream a Specialty.

THE ONLY MAKER OF COLT'S FOOT ROCK COUGH CANDY.

FRUIT AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AND PLANTS.

1,000,000

Trees and Nursery Stock for sale at LOW PRICES, of Best Varieties Deciduous Trees.

Also, ORANGE, LEMON, OLIVE, FIG, AND NUT-BEARING TREES, of most approved varieties.

Nurseries: Near Acampo Station, San Joaquin. Principal Depot: No. 813 Second Street, near Passenger Depot, Sacramento.

Send for Catalogue. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Address: REED & VAN GELDER, Nurserymen, Sacramento, Cal.

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.

General Printers,

410 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Simon Sturmer,

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,
No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

STABLE TO LET.

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

B. Ruhl Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and
Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city. Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,
609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night. EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exerescences, etc., Positively Cured or No Pay. No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated.
Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.
DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Open Valve A, pull off the Hose, and water follows immediately.

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

A Magic Square that Will Answer Your Questions.

Below is given a full description of the amusing magic square, called "Egyptian Zairgeth."

D	W	W	A	W	O	H	A	B	H
I	O	I	S	O	T	D	T	T	W
W	O	A	A	A	I	E	N	I	I
T	S	D	N	T	H	I	A	A	E
O	T	T	N	T	U	W	T	D	H
T	I	A	E	S	F	L	I	N	U
E	L	N	J	C	A	D	T	O	C
R	O	H	Y	E	O	W	Y	P	E
F	R	W	E	D	I	O	I	A	E
L	N	S	C	T	L	G	H	E	H

Divide a square of pasteboard into 100 smaller squares, lettering them as above. (It will save you trouble to cut the above diagram and paste it to a card.) Then ask some person to express secretly in writing a wish, to be answered by the Zairgeth. Let him select any letter on the Zairgeth. This you write down, and proceeding horizontally from left to right, as in reading, write down every fifth letter from that chosen, taking each line consecutively until the letter first selected is reached, which is not again to be used. Put a little mark over the first letter you use from the top line. When all the letters have been written, begin to form the sentence from the jumble of letters by starting with the letter that has the mark above it; write the sentence and pass it to the wisher, who must at the same time pass you the paper containing his wish. For example, suppose the wish expressed to be, "I would like to travel in foreign countries," and the letter selected from the Zairgeth is "A" (third letter from the left on the sixth line). You write down that letter and every fifth letter from it, with this result:

AINTHYWISHWAITANDATT

As the letter "W" is the first one taken from the top line, commence the sentence with it and it reads thus:

"WAIT AND ATTAIN THY WISH."

"Come over to our church and hear me preach this morning," said the pastor; "if you don't like the sermon you will the music; we are going to have some of the loveliest chants you ever listened to." "No, thanks," replied the citizen; "I took some in the grab-bag, the fish-pond, the ring cake, and the prize doll at your fair last week, and I haven't a cent left for the contribution basket. Guess I'll stay out till my luck changes."

STATE OF CALIFORNIA—COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman, doing business under the firm name of Wm. M. Lyon & Co., insolvent debtors.

Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman having filed in this Court their petition, schedule and inventory in insolvency, from which it appears that they are insolvent debtors, the said Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman are hereby declared to be insolvent. The Sheriff of the county of Sacramento is hereby directed to take possession of all the estate, real and personal, of the said insolvent debtors, except such as may be by law exempt from execution, and of all their deeds, vouchers, books of account, and papers, and to keep the same safely until the appointment of an assignee of their estate. All persons are forbidden to pay any debts to the said insolvents or to deliver any property, belonging to such insolvents, to them or to any person, firm, corporation or association, for their use; and the said debtors are hereby forbidden to transfer or deliver any property, until the further order of this Court, except as herein ordered.

It is further ordered, that all the creditors of said debtors be and appear before the Hon. John W. Armstrong, Judge of the Superior Court of the county of Sacramento, in open Court, at the Court room of said Court, in the city and County of Sacramento, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock P. M., of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estate of said debtors.

It is further ordered, that the order be published in the THEMIS, a newspaper of general circulation, published in the city and county of Sacramento, as often as the said paper is published, before the day set for the meeting of creditors.

And it is further ordered, that in the meantime all proceedings against the said insolvents be stayed.

JOHN W. ARMSTRONG,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Insolvents.
Dated, January 10, 1890. j11-w5

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said County.

In the matter of A. M. Auburtus, an insolvent debtor.

A. M. Auburtus, an insolvent debtor, having applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, it is hereby ordered that the Clerk of this Court give notice to all creditors who have proved their debts, to appear before this Court, at the Court-room thereof, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at the hour of 1:30 o'clock P. M., and show cause, if any they have, why the said A. M. Auburtus should not be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

It is further ordered, that notice of said application be given to the creditors by mail, and by publication once a week for four weeks, in the THEMIS, a newspaper published in said county.

Dated, January 24, 1890.
W. C. VAN FLEET, Judge.
C. W. BAKER, Attorney for Petitioner. j25w4

The Early Robin.

Through the chill of an early April rain
I hear the note of a sweet refrain—
Has the robin come so soon?
Heavy and dull are the skies without,
And my heart is filled with a dreary doubt,
But the song is a song of June.

O, Robin, Robin, you shame my faith,
Your cheery song to my spirit saith:
"Believe, and away with fear;
I am not afraid though the cold winds blow,
I am come at the call of God, and know
That spring is surely here.

"So I seek my mate and I build my nest,
And I sing my song with a keener zest,
For the joy is yet to be;
Already the fullness of joy I share,
When my nest shall swing in the summer air
On the bough of the maple tree."

Sing on, brave Robin, your song shall be
An inspiration of faith to me,
I, too, will begin to sing.
Though my heart is chilled and my pulse is low,
And my hopes lie buried under the snow,
I am sure of a coming Spring.
—Maria Upham Drake.

All for a Little Mouse.

A story is related of a lady of this place who attended church one chilly Sunday morning recently, wearing a wrap which had not been used for some time. As the good dominie reached his "forty-thirdly, my dear brethren," she put her hand in her pocket for a handkerchief with which to hide a yawn. To her horror, she felt something move as if alive. She grasped the pocket and availed herself of the first opportunity to leave the church. She maintained a death grip on the pocket until she reached home and removed the cloak, when out dropped a tiny mouse which she had crushed to death.
She screamed, jumped upon a chair, and then toppled over in a dead faint.—Dixon Tribune.

A Strike in the Church Mine.

The owners of the Church mine at El Dorado have developed a bonanza in the 500-foot level during the past week, which will lend much encouragement to mining interests in that section. About two years ago the mine was purchased by ex-Governor Perkins, Jacob Neff of Placer county, W. H.
Brown of Shiagle Springs, and some other parties. Since that time we understand that General Brown has sold his interest in the mine. After prospecting the mine to some extent, the owners decided to provide a complete outfit of hoisting machinery with which to sink a shaft to a depth sufficient to insure thorough development. A contract was made with the Placerville foundry for this machinery, and since its erection the shaft has been sunk vertically east of the ledge and has now reached the depth of 530 feet.
At the 500-foot level the ledge was tapped and found to be at least twelve feet wide, although not yet fully cut across. The rock is very rich, and as soon as arrangements can be made for a proper dumping ground, some of it will be taken out and the mill will be set to work.—El Dorado Republican.

C. H. Stephenson,

DENTIST,

CORNER SEVENTH AND J STREETS, OVER LYON'S DRY GOODS STORE.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured

HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

TO BE HAD ONLY AT

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihan's

418 J Street.

MAGGI'S HOT BOUILLON!

Just Out: Maroon Marmalade

Willis & Ray APOTHECARIES
212 J ST. and 901 K ST.
Two Stores, Sacramento, Cal.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR ^d/_a COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

Joe Poheim the TAILOR

HAS NOW A

GENUINE CLEARANCE SALE.

Suits Made to Order from $20.

Pants Made to Order from $5.

Other Garments in Proportion.

This Sale is to CONTINUE FOR SIXTY DAYS ONLY. ⁴⁰/₁₀₀ PERFECT FIT AND BEST OF WORK-MANSHIP GUARANTEED, OR NO SALE.

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South
Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street,
San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

Klune & Floberg, WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS
Agents for Rockford Watch Co.
NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON,

The ⁺/₊ Leading ⁺/₊ Merchant ⁺/₊ Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501 -- 507 K, cor. Fifth

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.

Southern Pacific Company
PACIFIC SYSTEM.
Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at
SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.25 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico.	3.40 A
7.05 P	Denning, El Paso and East.	6.45 P
7.25 P	Knights Landing.	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave.	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East.	6.25 P
12-01 A	Central Atlantic Express.	6.00 A
	Ogden and East.
3-00 P	Oroville	10-30 A
3-00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville.	10-30 A
10-40 A	Redding via Willows.	4-00 P
6-15 A	San Francisco via Benicia.	7-25 P
6-50 A	San Francisco via Benicia.	8-35 P
3-05 P	San Francisco via Benicia.	11-40 A
4-00 A	San Francisco via Benicia.	10-40 P
*10-00 A	San Francisco via Steamer.	$6.00 A
11-25 A	San Francisco via Livermore.	2-25 P
6-50 P	San Francisco via Benicia.	11-40 P
11-25 A	San Jose.	2-25 P
7-05 P	Santa Barbara.	9-55 A
6-50 A	Santa Rosa.	11-40 A
3-05 P	Santa Rosa.	7-25 P
9-00 A	Stockton and Galt.	6-45 P
7-05 P	Stockton and Galt.	9-55 A
8-00 P	Truckee and Reno.	6-25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno.	6-00 A
12-05 P	Colfax.	10-20 A
6-50 A	Vallejo.	11-40 A
3-05 P	Vallejo.	$8.35 P
*12-15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed).	*10-25 A
*7-15 A	Folsom and Placerville.	*2-40 P
*5-20 P	Folsom.	*6-50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning. P for afternoon.
A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities
of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED'K COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout.
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox.
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento
that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers
and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

THEMIS

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1890.

No. 51.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

There was a debate in the House of Representatives a few days ago upon the bill making an appropriation for the erection of prisons for the confining of Federal convicts, which should receive special attention from the press. In the shape in which it was reported to the House, the bill would have proved a fair sort of measure, about on a level with current prison legislation. But as soon as discussion of its provisions began, amendments were offered and tacked on, until, as it was finally sent to the Senate, it is one of the most barbarous pieces of machinery that one would wish to look at. The first amendment that was offered, provides that no convict shall be worked outside the prison walls. No one seemed to comprehend that the labor of the prisoners might be utilized to greater profit, or that their health might be improved, by employing them in factories or shops outside the prison, and so the amendment was adopted. But this was only the beginning. The next amendment provides, that the prisoners shall not be employed in any vocation whose output may come into competition with so-called free labor. That is to say, the convicts shall not be permitted to follow any calling that is followed by free laborers outside the prisons. They are to be employed in the production of articles that no one else produces. Of course, the proposition involves an economic absurdity, an impossibility, in fact; but there was not a man on the floor of the House to raise an objection to it, and so it was adopted without dissent. To say that persons who are undergoing servitude as a punishment for crime, shall not produce such articles as are produced by other people, as shoes or hats, for instance, is to assume that a penitentiary offers superior opportunities for the exercise of the inventive faculty, and that the prisoners, or those having the control of them, would find it an easy matter to discover a new article of utility, or at least a new way by which labor might be employed. Either a new manufacture, which would supply a general demand, or a new way of applying labor must be discovered, or the prisoners will remain idle a good part of the time. And, seeing that nearly all inventions whereby a new application of energy is obtained, belong to the skilled trades, the outlook for Federal prisoners is gloomy in the extreme. But, as if to shut the prisoners out from learning a calling by which they might earn a living after their release, another amendment was adopted, which provides that they shall not be employed in any work except such as calls for the use of the hands. That is, all machines and labor saving appliances are to be excluded from the prisons. And thus amended, the bill was sent to the Senate for its concurrence. And this is the work of a Congress that claims to represent the most enlightened people in the world! And, what is still more surprising, there has been no general outcry against the scheme. In fact, the press has not given the subject any attention at all. One ought to be allowed to speak the truth on such a question as this. The plan proposed by the House is simply barbarous—savage. Under such a system reformation would be impossible. The prisoners would come out in worse plight than when they went in. The whole scheme seems to be based on the idea that, if a person once commits a crime, he is thenceforth an irreclaimable felon. It will have to be admitted that, after a certain stage in crime has been reached, this is true. But it is not true universally. The civilized view of punishment is that it is a means of reformation; but the House bill shuts off all hope in this direction. It is no great improvement on the system in vogue in some of the Southern States, where prisoners are hired out under contract to work mines, or quarries, or phosphate beds. If the Senate should pass this bill in its present form, the President would be justified in vetoing it, on the distinct ground that it is un-Christian and inhuman.

The terrible calamity at Washington on Monday morning, growing out of the destruction by fire of the residence of the Secretary of the Navy, the consequent death of his wife and daughter, and the serious injury to Mr. Tracy, has thrown a gloom over the nation; and with the deaths that have occurred in the family of Secretary Blaine, will mark the administration of President Harrison as one of unusual misfortune to the heads of the national government. Until the administration of President Tyler, no deaths had occurred among the executive or departmental heads, or members of their families, except from natural causes. The first tragic event of this character happened on the afternoon of February 28, 1844, from the explosion of the great gun "Peacemaker," on board the United States war steamship Princeton, on the Potomac river, about fifteen miles below Washington. This war steamer was commanded by the late Commodore R. F. Stockton, and had been constructed under his supervision. The Commodore afterward figured prominently in the conquest of California, and from him the city of Stockton, in San Joaquin county, took its name. The vessel was equipped with guns of prodigious size and power, and to exhibit their superiority the Commodore issued invitations to the President and cabinet officers, distinguished members of the legislative department, and foreign ministers, to witness their testing. Among the guests were a number of ladies. In all, some four hundred were taken by steamer down the river to where the Princeton was anchored. Bands of music played national airs, and complimentary salutes were fired. The great gun "Peacemaker" was fired twice without mishap, but on the third firing a murderous blast followed, and when the smoke cleared away it was found the gun had burst at a point three or four feet from the breech, and scattered death and destruction all around. Abel P. Upshur, the Secretary of State, was almost instantly killed, and Thomas W. Gilmer, the Secretary of the Navy, under whose direction the power of the great gun was tested, was so badly injured that he died before medical aid could be procured. Four others were also killed, and many badly hurt. The life of President Tyler was saved by the merest accident, as he had been called from the place of danger but a moment before. The Secretary of War an instant before the fatal discharge, jokingly remarked to Mr. Gilmer: "Though I am Secretary of War, I will confess I am a coward; I will stand back." He moved his position just in time to save his life. The scene was truly heartrending. Senator Thomas H. Benton was prostrated by the shock, and lay for a time as if dead. In his subsequent account of the calamity he wrote:

Lieutenant Hunt caused the gun to be worked, to show the ease and precision with which her direction could be changed, and then pointed down the river to make the fire, himself and the gunners standing near the breech on the right. I opened my mouth wide to receive the concussion on the inside as well as on the outside of the head and ears, so as to lessen the force of the external shock. I saw the hammer pulled back—heard a tap—saw a flash—felt a blast in the face, and knew that my hat was gone; and that was the last that I knew of the world or of myself, for a time, of which I can give any account. The first that I knew of myself, or of anything afterwards, was rising up at the breech of the gun seeing the gun itself split open, and two seamen, the blood oozing from their ears and nostrils, rising and reeling near me; Commodore Stockton, hat gone and face blackened, standing bolt upright, and staring fixedly upon the shattered gun. I had heard no noise—no more than the dead. I only knew that the gun had burst from seeing its fragments. I had gone through the experience of a sudden death, as if from lightning, which extinguishes knowledge and sensation and takes one out of the world without thought or feeling. I think I know what it is to die without knowing it, and that such a death is nothing to him that revives. The rapid and lucid workings of the mind to the instant of extinction, is the marvel that still astonishes me. I heard the tap—saw the flash—felt the blast, and knew nothing of the explosion. I was cut off in that inappreciable point of time which intervened between the flash and the fire—between the burning of the powder in the touch-hole and the burning of it in the barrel of the gun. No mind can seize that point of time; no thought can measure it; yet to me it was distinctly marked, dividing life from death—the life that sees, and feels and knows, from death (for such it was for the time) which annihilates self and the world.

The bodies of the dead were, at the President's particular desire, deposited in the East room of the executive mansion, from whence the funerals took place. On the occasion of the inspection of this gun, Colonel James C. Zabriskie, who in early days practiced law in Sacramento, officiated as master of ceremonies. The bodies of the victims of the calamity at Washington on last Monday were removed to the executive mansion by request of President Harrison, and Secretary Tracy has also been taken there. It is a matter of coincidence that the disaster on the Princeton occurred during the term for which the first President Harrison was elected. Judge Upshur was a lawyer of distinguished ability. He was appointed Secretary of the Navy by President Tyler September 13, 1841, and on July 24, 1843, was transferred under the same administration to the office of Secretary of State. Gilmer was appointed Secretary of the Navy February 15, 1844.

The next tragedy affecting the heads of the American nation occurred on the night of April 14, 1865, when President Lincoln was assassinated at Ford's Theater in Washington by John Wilkes Booth, and an attempt made to kill Secretary Seward. Later on President Garfield was shot by Charles J. Guiteau, July 2, 1881, and he died September 19th following. These later events form so prominent a portion of the world's history and occurred so recently that the details are familiar to all.

Again, within the past few days, have we been admonished of woman's power for evil in this world. In great calamities, from the rupture of nations and the storms of war, to the fireside gathering, do we find the cause of most evils to rest on woman, either directly or remote. From the genesis of man as laid down in accredited Divine law, we find the first woman the author of all human woes. It seems that with all the good with which woman is endowed, there is still a devil lurking in her composition—that it is preordained that some great curse is unconsciously within her, whereby unfortunate man is ultimately made a victim of that unseen and uncontrollable power. The history of the world is made up of woman's power for bad, from the home circle to the places of State, from the cloister to the hearth, from the hut to the palaces of Kings, in every possible phase of life, high or low. The great strife between the Grecian and Trojan of heroes was brought about by the perfidy and beauty a woman, coupled with the jealousies of the goddesses themselves. At the nuptials of Peleus and Thetis, all the gods were invited with the exception of Eris—Discord. Enraged at her slight she threw a golden apple among the guests, inscribed, "For the most beautiful." Juno, Venus and Minerva claimed the apple. Jupiter would not decide the question of the award, but sent them to Paris, a shepherd, to decide. The goddesses appeared before Paris. Juno promised him power and riches, Minerva glory and renown in war, and Venus, knowing man's weakness, tempted him with the offer of the fairest woman for his wife. This won and he gave the apple to Venus. Helen, the wife of Menelaus, was the woman she had in mind, and she intrigued until Paris captured the lovely Helen, and then followed the great Trojan war, which grew out of this abduction of Helen. All the Grecian chieftains took up the cause of Menelaus. Even during this war about Helen the Grecian warriors, Atrides and Achilles, came to an open rupture on account of the appropriation of Briseis, a slave, by Atrides, which belonged by right to Achilles, and Achilles came near bringing disaster on the Grecian arms by sulking in his tent on account of Atrides' unjust act. This is Achilles' speech:

Sieze ou Briseis whom the Grecians doom'd
My prize of war, yet tamely see resumed;
And sieze secure; no more Achilles draws
His conquering sword in any woman's cause.
The gods command me to forgive the past,
But let the first invasion be the last;
For know, thy blood, when next thou darest invade,
Shall stream in vengeance on thy reeking blade.

It was only when the Grecian forces were in the direst despair, that Atrides agreed to make amends and give up the fair slave Briseis to Achilles, that he could be induced to lend his great power in saving the honor of his nation. The purple lock on the head of King Nisus was his charm, and the power of his arms rested here. A woman, his own daughter, Scylla, cut this off and gave it to his enemies, thus placing her own father at the mercy of Minos and his armies. Eriphile was bribed by Polynices with the gift of a necklace to allow Thebes to be captured. Mark Antony cowardly abandoned his army to follow Egypt's ravishing beauty, Cleopatra. The black spot of Elizabeth was the execution of Mary, Queen of Scots. The Holy Book has its chapters of woman's powers for evil and good. Delilah, Hagar, Judith, are characters to be remembered. It is but the world's history repeating itself when we hear or read of another calamity where there is a woman as the cause. In all our classical mythology we find the Furies are females. Perhaps there is something in this idea of the ancients that the Fates and Erinnyes and Nemesis were placed on earth and in the heavens to raise the devil with mankind. Among the stories of the gods and heroes, we find Baldur the Good, made impervious to injury from fire, water, iron, steel, stones, trees, beasts, birds, poisons and all metals. Frigga, the wife of Odin, had exacted an oath from all these things not to injure Baldur. He could be cut at with swords and battle-axes and all manner of things without injury. The evil being, Loki, was vexed at this, and wished to devise some means of killing Baldur. Of course, true to the nature of woman, Frigga was approached through disguise, and from her unguarded tongue it was learned that the mistletoe was the only thing that had not been bound by an oath not to injure Baldur. This was enough for the evil Loki, who at once caused a mistletoe sprig to be thrown at Baldur, which caused his death at once. Odin's wife was at last the cause.

It seems that the new lighting company has effected the purchase from the old corporation of its electric lighting plant, poles, lines and lamps, or at least, a large portion of them. Our contemporary, the Bee, views this transaction with alarm. It is, however, very evident to any one who has at all considered the matter, that the fright of the evening journal is all imaginary, for the granting of permission for the new company to transact business here will be of immense benefit to the public. It will be recollected that THEMIS was the only paper that advocated the granting of a franchise to the new concern, and the letting to it of the contract for public lighting at the rates it proposed, which were very largely below what have heretofore been paid. In that matter alone the city will save a considerable amount of money, and when we consider our rate of taxation we cannot understand why any one not interested in the old corporation should become alarmed. It will be recollected that we have always announced our disposition to lend what influence we possess to the bringing into this city of capital and modern improvements, and we feel some little pride that to our efforts in a measure street cars are passing along J street and to the extreme suburbs of the city, and that in a very short time our citizens will have the benefit of the latest systems of public and private lighting at a reasonable cost. The public are not insensible of the obstacles that were thrown in the way of this new company. Both of the dailies kept it under constant fire, and when at last permission was granted for it to do business here, the President of the old company commenced an injunction suit, which would naturally result in preventing it from commencing operations until decision came. In the mean time the old company announced in an advertisement that it would in a few weeks be prepared to furnish lights of any description of the best quality and at low prices. This, of course, was naturally taken by the people as an admission that lights of good quality had not been furnished and that prices had not been as low as they should have been. As we have been informed and understand, the Capital Gas Company, although the owner of two electric light franchises, has concluded to withdraw from that line of business and confine itself to the manufacture and sale of gas. If our understanding of the matter be correct it will result in a very lively competition, for the new company will, as a matter of business, naturally try to supplant gas by electricity, while the Gas Company will improve their article and moderate their prices. We had presumed from the resoluteness with which the old company conducted the fight that it would not, at this early day, make so prominent a display of white plumage, but we presume its directory very fully appreciate that the contest has not yet really begun. Our contemporaries have, throughout this matter, laid considerable stress on what they are pleased to characterize as the granting away of valuable franchises. It will occur to any reasonable mind on a moment's reflection that a franchise is only valuable so long as it can be availed of for the profitable conduct of business, and in that event the public is of course benefitted. The Trustees can grant as many of these privileges, and doubtless will, as the needs of the people demand. In a very few years electric lights and motors will take the place of gas and steam, and new companies will ask to be permitted to do business here. We will favor their incoming; the more the merrier. In matters of this kind no community is ever injured in pursuing a liberal policy, and we are not aware that in any other city, with perhaps the exception of some in China, such a spirit of opposition is manifested as in Sacramento. Section 19 of Article XI of the Constitution amply protects the city. It provides generally that a municipality may grant the privilege of supplying water or artificial light where there are no public works for that purpose; that the necessary uses shall be granted; and that the work shall be done under the direction of the Street Superintendent "upon the condition that the municipal government shall regulate the charges thereof," meaning the charges to be made for the water or lights. Now that the legal embarrassments have been removed, the new company will doubtless prepare for business without delay. If it furnishes satisfactory service it will be well patronized; if not, it will find it has embarked in a losing enterprise, and that its franchise will be worse than valueless. At any event, it will be compelled to make the best showing possible, for it will be constantly spurred by determined business opposition.

The Americans are not so busy with their own affairs as not to wish to know how our European neighbors are getting along, and who are the rulers in the respective monarchies. Omitting some of the small German states, we find the oldest among the reigning princes is Leo XII, who is 79 years old, and has reigned nearly 12 years. Next comes William III., King of the Netherlands, 72¾ years old, having reigned 40 years; next Christian IX., King of Denmark, 71½ years old, with 26 years of reign; then Queen Victoria, 70½ years old, with 52 years of reign; Karl I., of Wurtemberg, 66¾ years old, with 25 years of reign; Frederick, Grand Duke of Baden, 63 years old, with 38 years of reign; Albert, King of Saxony, 61½ years old, with 16 years of reign; Oscar II., King of Sweden, 60¾ years of age, with 17 years of reign; Francis Joseph of Austria, 59 years old, having reigned 41 years; Leopold II., King of the Belgians, 54½ years old, having reigned 24 years; Louis, Grand Duke of Hesse, 52 years old, with 12 years of reign; Charles, King of Roumania, 50½ years old, with a reign of 23¾ years, since the beginning of his government; Nicholas, Prince of Montenegro, 48 years old, with a reign of 29 years; Abdul Hamid, the Sultan, 47 years old, with 13 years of reign; Humbert I., King of Italy, 45½ years old, with a reign of nearly 12 years; Alexander III., Russia, 44½ years old, with a reign of 8¾ years; George, King of Greece, 44 years old, with a reign of 26½ years; Otho, King of Bavaria, 41½ years old; William II., German Emperor, nearly 31 years old, with 1½ years of reign; Carlos I., of Portugal, 26 years old, 2 months of reign; Alexander I., of Servia, 13½ years old, 9 months of reign; Alfonso XIII., of Spain, 3½ years old, with 3½ years of reign.

Well-Formed Children.

The Boston Herald says: The common school teacher finds perfectly healthy children are a rarity. Seldom will ten per cent of her class of fifty be found free from any physical defect whatever, and with true development for their age. Of these, it must be regretfully admitted, that the smallest number are Americans. The best formed school children, and the healthiest, are the Germans and Bohemians, the next of Irish parentage. Nowhere, as in the south and west of Ireland, where children run free of care the year round, hatless, shoeless, living on the coarsest, plainest food, and yet with some measure of school restrictions, can such specimens of perfect physical beauty in form and face be found. Glance over any school-room, with its many upturned faces inquisitively questioning the thought of the observer, and but few really fine featured children are to be found after the age of ten is passed.

When a handsome face, answering all the laws that govern beauty, is discovered, it is invariably synonymous with good health in its possessor, and all too often of foreign parentage or birth. For these two defects, the want of good health and good looks, and the added one of grace, in the majority of public school children, one is naturally led to think of a cause, but instead of one there are many. The primary one may be found in the following remark by Frances Willard: "Women's everlasting befrilled, bedizened and bedraggled style of dress is to-day doing more harm to children unborn, born, and dying, than all other causes that compel public attention."

Class recitations where pupils stand are now, in most schools, done away with; and this is fortunate, since pupils were sometimes kept an unconsciously long time on the floor, resulting in evils one dreads to think of, and unfortunate in that the children have all the session long no change of position. But the teacher who insists on having her troublesome, uneasy little fellow stand for a half hour has much to answer for, as well as one who argues strongly on the abolition of the recess. One cannot but be sympathetic with the teacher. If she does not keep her pupils like so many trained dummies, she is a poor disciplinarian, and subject to dismissal. If her class does not know every date from Adam to Harrison, and the location of all cross-road towns from Siberia to Patagonia, she is not keeping up in the modern bugbear, the "course of study."

Dr. Anderson gives a list of the most common physical defects found in pupils in the public schools. They are summarized as:

Head—Droops forward; carried a little to one side; chin raised too high.

Shoulders—Round, sloping, stooping, and uneven; one lower than the other.

Thorax—One side better developed than the other; the diameter at the base too short.

Upper back—Right shoulder blade too prominent in right-handed people.

Spine—Bends too far forward from between the shoulders.

Waist—Too narrow; abdominal muscles weak.

Hips—Thrown too far forward.

Arms—Forearm better developed than the upper arm.

Leg—Better developed than thigh.

Thigh—Inside and back poorly developed.

Any person entering the examining room of a gymnasium for boys would be astonished at the large numbers that have one or more of these defects, and with girls this is found almost universal. While with boys indulging in frequent play there will be found good muscular development of the lower limbs, the trunk, that part holding the vital organs, will but occasionally be found perfect upon examination. As every one knows, poor circulation is a common fault, and can be remedied by exercise properly taken. Girls in our public schools seldom have a brilliant color, and increase in pallor as they grow older. Regulated exercises could not fail to alter this.

The Plants Caught The Dog.

Leroy Dunstan, the well known naturalist of this city, who has recently returned from Central America, where he had spent nearly two years in the study of the flora and fauna of the country, relates the finding of a singular growth in one of the swamps which surround the great Lake of Nicaragua. He was engaged in hunting for botanical and entomological specimens in this swamp, which is known as San Sebastian's, when he heard his dog cry out, as if in agony, from a distance. Running to the spot from which the animal's cries came, Mr. Dunstan found him enveloped in a perfect network of what seemed to be a fine, rope-like tissue of roots or fibres, the nature of which was unknown to him. The plant or vine seemed composed entirely of bare interlacing stems, resembling more than anything else the branches of the weeping willow, denuded of all foliage, but of a dark, nearly black hue, and covered with a thick, viscid gum that exuded from the pores. Drawing his knife Mr. Dunstan endeavored to cut the animal free, but it was only with the greatest difficulty that he succeeded in severing the fleshy, muscular fiber. To his horror and amazement the naturalist then saw that the dog's body was covered with blood, while his hairless skin appeared to have been actually sucked or puckered in spots, and the animal staggered as if from weakness and exhaustion. In cutting the vine the twigs curled like living, sinuous fingers about Mr. Dunstan's hand, and it required no slight force to free the member from its clinging clasp, which left the flesh red and blistered. The gum exuding from the vine was of a grayish dark tinge, remarkably adhesive and of a disagreeable animal odor, very powerful and nauseating to inhale. The native servants who accompanied Mr. Dunstan manifested the greatest horror of the vine, which they call la sagonas de diable, the devil's seine or snare, and were full of stories as to its death dealing powers.

One of these stories was of an Englishman residing in Managua, who while hunting in the swamp a few years ago, lay down beneath a tree where a large and powerful specimen of this singular plant was growing, and inadvertently falling asleep awoke to find himself enveloped in its web, and in spite of every effort made to extricate him, perished in its deathly embrace.

Another was of an escaped convict who had hidden in the swamp and whose bones had been found in the folds of the sangenas only a short time before Mr. Dunstan's visit. These stories, remarkable as they seem, are firmly believed in by the people, but the only three specimens which Mr. Dunstan was able to find were all small ones, though the meshes of the largest would probably, if extended in a straight line, measure nearly, if not quite, one hundred feet. He was able to discover very little about the nature of the plant, owing to the difficulty of handling it, for its grasp can only be torn away with loss of skin and even of flesh, but, so near as Mr. Dunstan could ascertain, its power of suction is contained in a number of infinitesimal mouths or little suckers, which, ordinarily closed, open for the reception of food.

The gum exuded seems to serve the twofold purpose of increasing its tenacity and of overcoming a victim by its sickening odor. The plant is found only in low, wet places, and usually beneath a large tree, and while dormant seems only a network of dry, dead vines, covering the black earth for several feet, but coming into contact with anything will instantly begin to twist and twine upward in a horrible, life-like manner, breaking out with the gumlike substance spoken of before and enwrap the object with a celerity that is almost incredible. If the substance is animal the blood is drawn off and the carcass or refuse then dropped. A lump of raw meat being thrown in, in the short time of five minutes the blood will be thoroughly drunk off and the mass thrown aside. Its voracity is almost beyond belief, it devouring at one time over ten pounds of meat, though it may be deprived of all food for weeks without any apparent loss of vitality. Mr. Dunstan attempted to bring away a root of the sangenas, but it died during his return voyage, growing so foul with a strong odor of real animal corruption that he was obliged to get rid of it.—Atlanta Constitution.

Material for a Novel.

During the late civil war Mrs. Wheeler, the Eugene healer, served as a nurse in the Union service, says the Eugene (Or.) Journal. She had many thrilling experiences, and among them we have heard of the following: She was present at the battle of Spotsylvania. At the commencement of the battle a Union officer rode up to her and handed her a package of papers, with the request that she should keep them safe until the battle was over, and then, if he (the officer) should not live to call for them, to deliver the package at headquarters.

In the course of the fight a flank was turned, and Mrs. Wheeler and the rest of the hospital nurses captured by the rebels. Upon searching her person, of course, the papers were found, and proved to be the work of a Union spy who had been inside of the rebel lines. She was at once arraigned before a court martial composed of rebel officers; and notwithstanding her statement of how she came by the papers, and repeated protestations of innocence, she was formally convicted of being a spy, and sentenced to be hanged at sunrise the next morning. She was then taken by a guard of three soldiers and confined in a small guard-house, which had but one small aperture admitting light and air, and through that aperture she saw the erection of the gallows on which she was to perish. What a grim perspective!

Inside the guard house there was nothing but the bare floor of earth, and two dry goods boxes standing against a wall; no chair, no bed.

That night one of the guards entered the guard-house with a piece of corn bread and a tin cup of water for her supper.

Mrs. Wheeler spoke.

The guard stopped.

He then retired and locked the door upon her again. Later on in the night she heard a voice at the aperture say: "Move the little box!" She moved the box and discovered an aperture, which proved to be a tunnel. Through this tunnel she worked her way on her hands and knees for about one-fourth of a mile, when she emerged at its mouth, and found a man and two saddle horses standing there.

Mrs. Wheeler mounted one horse, and the man, who was disguised, the other. For six miles they rode on in the darkness without speaking, but at the end of that time the man spoke and said: "You are now safe in the Union lines; ride right on," and the man disappeared in the darkness like a shadow.

Mrs. Wheeler rode on until she came across a picket, who took her to Gen. Heintzelman's headquarters.

Last September, while taking a little outing at Anderson's, on the McKenzie river, Mrs. Wheeler and her preserver met and recognized each other, after a lapse of twenty-six years. Her preserver is the well known Dr. B. F. Russell, now postmaster at Thurston. He was one of the three guards. He was the disguised horseman.

Book Chat.

Mary Kyle Dallas is a woman who has written 3,000 short stories. Her hair is white and curls in rings about her forehead, but her face is fresh and youthful, and her figure, in its black silk frock, trim.

Robert Christy, of Washington, an able lawyer, formerly of Ohio, has published a book entitled "Proverbs and Phrases of All Ages." The work is the outcome of twenty years of effort and study on the part of Mr. Christy.

Mr. Rider Haggard has abandoned the idea of going to Persia to obtain the local color necessary for his projected romance of "Queen Esther," and will go to Athens instead. He is not afraid of critics, but he has a wholesome dread of cholera.

Gustave Flaubert ranked as the leader of the modern French school, of which Bourget, Maupassant, Daudet and Zola are the most notable representatives. Of his three greatest works, "Madame Bovary," "L'Education Sentimentale" and "Salambo," only the last has been translated into English. The present story, certainly one of his best and extremely characteristic, is comparatively unknown even among his most ardent admirers.

It is a question whether there are a hundred persons to-day who know that the author of "The Sweet By-and-By" is living in an obscure Illinois town, and not amid the greatest luxury either. Tens of thousands, perhaps millions of people know the hymn; how many ever think of Dr. S. Filmore Bennett, its aged author? The hymn has brought him almost no revenue, and even less fame. Mrs. Annie Sherwood Hawks is another instance, living in a small interior New York town, compelled to resort to her pen for a living; yet who has not sung her world famous hymn, "I Need Thee Every Hour?" Prof. Gilmore, of the University of Rochester, rarely receives credit as the author of his well-known lines, "He Leadeth Me." Fannie Crosby, she of hundreds of hymns that are sung every Sunday by thousands of lips, lives in a side street in New York City, almost forgotten. Although blind and helpless, she is happy in the religion which fills her mind and soul.

Bob Burdette is a little man, physically, with small eyes under overhanging eyebrows. He talks in a short, sharp, quick, curt way, and when he feels in the mood is as humorous in his speech as in his writing. He has come to regard funny writing as a grind and wants to get out of it. He is devoted to the memory of his wife, who died several years ago. He is very religiously inclined and frequently occupies the pulpit, but to his credit it can be said he has not tried to make a religious clown of himself. He is called "Deacon" Burdette at home, but it is pretty hard for the general public to think of him as "Deacon." They prefer to look upon him as "Bob." He writes a great deal of serious editorial writing for which he never gets any credit. He is not a dude, but he does wax his mustache. He prefers the quiet of the country to the noise of the city. He hates lecturing worse than teeth-pulling, but the public is bound to hear him, and he goes on the platform to satisfy the popular clamor and to get $100 a night.

A late author, G. G. A. Murray, has out-Haggarded Haggard in the wierd and improbable style, in his recent publication called Gobi or Shamo. We have here the discovery of a colony of Hellenes, who captured by a barbaric race about three and a half centuries B. C., left a record of their existence in a manuscript, written by one of their number, at a later date, which manuscript coming to light in a library in modern Greece, led to an expedition in search of this mysterious colony, supposing that it was still in existence, and the finding of the same, after innumerable difficulties, and after a long journey through China and Thibet, in the great desert of Gobi or Shamo. The descendants of these old Hellenes were the masters of the tribe which had conquered them 2,000 years before, the Sanni, and over these Sanni they had placed a king, an Oxford scholar, who, deciphering the manuscript to which we have referred, had preceded our adventurers, and held the insurgent race in stern subjection to their masters. We have in this scanty outline of a story the elements of a romance as imaginative as any in the Arabian Nights, or in any episode of the Odyssey. The king of these Sanni had instructed these latter Greeks in modern literature, of which they, of course, knew nothing, and in the elements of modern civilization, but he found, on the whole, that he had quite as much to receive as to give, particularly in the matter of morals, in which they were his superiors. "Though the Greeks and the Sanni were without some of the resources of our civilization, it was not that they were ignorant of the sciences of which we are so proud. Railways, for instance, they had not, it having been decided that it was bad to be surrounded by many mechanical contrivances, which made life more complicated, and hid the working of the gods. One force, however, they availed themselves of for use in extremities. This was called 'Dynamitis,' and by its aid they were enabled to so make a line of force round the whole country that any person touching the rocks was struck dead. In investigating these and many curious details, the friends pass some time; but a rebellion breaking out, they are glad to escape, and, after undergoing many privations, they arrive safely in Upper India and find friends unexpectedly awaiting them there."

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

Henrik Ibsen is said to be very much disappointed because his works have not made a hit in this country.

Marie Wainwright has purchased a new romantic drama, written by an American author, and has arranged to produce it.

Miss Nita Shakespeare, daughter of Mayor Shakespeare, of New Orleans, will be Queen of the Carnival this year. Thus does a well known name again add to its laurels.

Denman Thompson has two oxen which draw a load of hay in the first act of The Old Homestead, and are so well trained that at a rehearsal the other day, it is claimed, they were so perfect in their business that they drew the load up the hill into the barn without guide or driver.

Mme. Sara Bernhardt is a firm believer in the supernatural. She has related that when at New York, on her first American tour, she woke up one night after a terrible dream, in which she had seen her son Maurice bitten by two mad dogs. The vision made such an impression on her mind that early next morning she telegraphed to Maurice, and received the reply that he had been bitten by two dogs, but that the wounds in his arm were not serious. Moreover, the dogs were not rabid, but had been immediately killed. Mme. Bernhardt could, she affirms, mention numerous other circumstances in her life which it would be impossible to put down to mere chance or coincidence.

On Monday and Tuesday evening, February 10th and 11th, at the Metropolitan, we will have a dramatic and literary treat in the production of A Possible Case. It will be presented by the famous Union Square Company, of New York, under the management of that able and distinguished manager, J. M. Hill. The comedy was written by Sydney Rosenfeld, and is bright, sparkling, and clear, dealing with the divorce laws, in which many amusing situations are worked into the play. We saw the performance at the Bush Street theater a short time ago, and pronounce the company and the play excellent. Our old friend, M. A. Kennedy, needs no recommendation to a Sacramento public. Belle Archer is of the company, and is a favorite here. The company is a strong one, and includes Charles Dickson, Howel Hansel, N. C. Forrester, Herbert Archer, Ed. Belknap, Helen Russell, Henrietta Lauder, and a splendid stock company.

W. H. Crane has made a success of The Senator. There is no doubt of the thorough-going Americanism of the play, for it is founded upon an American theme, written by two American dramatists, and acted by a company of American comedians. Much is already known concerning the theme of The Senator, the main story of which is concerned with the passage through the Senate of a long delayed claim against the government for the value of a ship destroyed by the British in the war of 1812. The brisk, good natured westerner, Senator Hannibal Rivers, portrayed by Mr. Crane, espouses the cause of the aged claimant; not so much because of the intrinsic merit of the claim, but because the claimant has a pretty daughter, with whom the Senator falls in love. Washington official society affords the material for an interesting intrigue, which forms the secondary interest of the piece; and here, again, the requisite and looked for conventionality satisfies the audience in the end.

Professional Chat.

A Cazenovia correspondent writes: "Years ago, one bleak, cold winter day, a poor, lone, desolate little boy stood shivering and sobbing by the side of the new-made grave of his mother in Evergreen cemetery, in this village. That desolate little boy's mind has developed into a masterful comprehension, and to-day Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll is recognized as one of the most talented men that America has produced. Many old Cazenovians remember his early days of poverty and adversity spent in the southern portion of this town."

One of the greatest instances of devotion outside of that of a dog for its master, is that shown by "Early's Nigger Joe." Joe is an old negro about seventy years of age, who was born a slave in General Jubal Early's family, brought up with "Jube," became his body servant, served all through the war with him, as washful of his master as a mother of her babe. After the war, Joe was informed that he was free. "Ise free?" said Joe, with a look of contempt; "Ise not free, I belongs to Mas' Jube till I dies." Early is very fond of his servant, and has told every shopkeeper in Lynchburg to let Joe have anything he wants, and send the bill to him. Joe follows his master around on certain occasions like a dog. When Early lets the mountain dew of Old Virginny get the better of him, Joe will say: "Mas' Jube, you must come home." "Why, you — nigger, who are you talking to? Who's boss, anyway?" "Well, Mas' Jube, when you's sober you's boss, but when you's drunk I's boss." "Well, Joe, you are right; when I'm drunk you're boss." And Early will resign himself to the faithful old darkey's care.

Journalistic Indefiniteness.

There is more intellectual wabbling and want of definiteness current now than there has been at any time in fifty years. This is especially true in the matter of news dispatches. Thus we have a double-headed piece of news all the way from the Atlantic seaboard, to the effect that Mrs. James, the wife of the Methodist minister who figured in the Long Branch scandal last summer, has secured a divorce; and further, that a certain young married woman of the name of Willett, shot her husband twice, from the effects of which mistreatment he died in two hours and forty-two minutes. What does the public care for the particulars as to the exact length of time it required for Mr. Willett to give up the ghost, after his wife had perforated him with two leaden missiles? If it had taken him three days or three weeks in which to die, it would have been all the same to the world, and yet all the precision of the dispatch is wasted on the matter of a minute. The points upon which enlightenment would prove beneficial are left in obscurity. Thus it would be a matter of national importance if the public could know whether young Mrs. Willett had been aggrieved to such an extent as would justify her in shooting her husband twice. This point is of far higher moment than the precise length of time that it took for Willett to die. If we should tolerate the practice of allowing young married women to shoot their husbands twice, when one shot would be sufficient to satisfy all provocations, there would be no telling what the country might come to. Again, if we should assume that Mrs. Willett had ample warrant for putting two bullets into her husband, then the important question would arise as to the description of the weapon with which she effected his death. If it was of light caliber it might throw a good deal of light on the necessity for a second shot. On the other hand, if it was one of the ivory handled beauties, which have lately come into use, there would be room for suspicion that Mrs. Willett fired the second shot to test her skill as a marksman. If the pistol was one of the old-fashioned walnut-handled concerns, that a person has to cock with his thumb, it would be conclusive evidence that Mrs. Willett occupies a low æsthetic position. The report of the manner in which Mrs. Willett disposed of her husband is wanting in precision, and is unworthy of a true artist in sensational journalism.

So far as Mrs. James' divorce is concerned, the information is wholly wanting in definiteness. There is a meagreness of detail on vital points which repels the reader. Thus it is said that Mrs. James' husband is a minister, that he got mixed up in a scandal at Long Branch, and that she got a divorce. Now, here is what purports to be a statement of a series of important events in which all intelligibility is wanting. The only effort at perspicuity that appears in the whole story is that the scandal into which the Rev. Mr. James suffered himself to be drawn, was of the Long Branch type. And this very fact should have put the newsgatherers on their guard as to details. Seeing that the enticements that Long Branch holds out for a person to fall from grace are the most irresistible of any that may be found this side of Paris, there should have been a patient search for extenuating circumstances. Of course, the wife of a minister should be allowed a divorce when her grounds of complaint warrant such a step. But extra caution should be exercised where the husband has been run against Long Branch. Mrs. James must be presumed to have been well informed as to the perils, moral and otherwise, of the famous seaside resort, and if she exposed her husband to the great tide of sin that prevails there, there is serious doubt as to whether she was entitled to the divorce that has been granted her. Then there is a provoking looseness of statement as to the particular scandal in which the Rev. James got himself mixed up. There are grades in scandals as in everything else—some are worse than others—and a nice discrimination should be exercised whenever they are referred to. For all that appears to the contrary, Mrs. James might have taken matters into her own hands, as Mrs. Willett did. But, however the case may be, it is plain to be seen that the faculty which enables one to express one's self with definiteness is undergoing a process of degeneration.

NOTES.

You cannot evolve knowledge from ignorance any more than you can obtain light from darkness. Knowledge is perfected by more knowledge. Education is not always knowledge—experience is. The foolish idea that error or ignorance can by any process of development become truth or knowledge, is as absurd as the idea of the creation of the universe in one day, by a word, out of nothing.

While we are animal in our natures, we also embody the other three kingdoms of nature—mineral, fluid, gas. We have the unconscious organs and activities of the plant, the senses and conscious powers of the animal. Humorously, in most men the "gas" predominates. The mineral properties can be ascribed to our greed for gold and other precious metals. The fluid propensities are usually devolved from the "cup that cheers," and frequently "floors" us. We are evolved from animal to vegetable life when developed into a "plant."

When we give away our material substance we diminish our resources. But when we give an opinion, or our love, our thoughts, we do not deplete our store, and still retain these spiritual possessions. Indeed, as philosophers, we increase those by giving. We multiply our joys and thoughts by sharing them with others. As philosophers of the worldly order, however, while we are liberal with our love and opinions, we should have an eye to business, and only bestow these possessions where they may bring us a little of the natural profit of the world—metal—gold, or something we can make change with.

It is announced that there is another addition to the house of Johnson, and in prospect another member of the law firm of Johnson, Johnson & Johnson. Hiram W. has added a son to his family. We do not know how Grove will arrange the firm name after awhile when the younger ones get their sheepskins. Possibly he will adopt the expedient of turning the office sign over and continuing the names on the reverse side. Yet it would save time to express the firm name somewhat after the principle of algebra. The official reporter calculates that in the course of a year he makes several per diems from the time consumed in the pronouncing of the firm name in legal proceedings, and the advantage also comes from the fact that a sign "3 J" is used in shorthand to represent the firm title.

For the last week and a half we have realized something of the mode of life of the great philosopher, Epicurus. It was a forced realization, however, under the physician's orders. We sometimes think—when we are ill—that it is a scheme of Nature to give the doctors a chance to get even on us. Well, our epicurean repasts have consisted of toast-water, and the d— worst tasting medicine ever invented. When we complained of the diet, we had a little more toast-water, with a relay of some bitter decoction. When Epicurus wanted a feast, in addition to his cold water and barley bread, he would say: "Send me some Cythnian cheese, so that, should I choose, I may fare sumptuously." We at times felt like ordering a French dinner, with full courses, and some prime old Burgundy. But we didn't either order or get it.

The latest associations are called Societies of Disappointed Lovers. What sympathy can exist between these discousolate creatures, is past understanding. A disappointed lover usually excites ridicule rather than sympathy. There is something excessively funny in the misfortunes of a lover—we mean a jilted lover. It is said that the objects of these societies is mutual consolation, and binding oaths to shun the perfidious female form. The only penalty for a violation of their obligation is expulsion. It occurs to us, that after the disappointed lovers console one another a little while, that about the only duties the societies will have to perform will be in expelling backsliders. Every young fellow who has been jilted by a woman has a desire to get even, and will not long remain in the dumps. In fact, woman's wiles will soon lure him from these "biding" obligations.

Just the Man.

Our old time friend, William H. Dixon, commonly known as "Billy," is being urged to accept the Republican nomination for Supervisor of the Fifth District. His friends, and everybody who knows him is his friend, have picked upon him to attend to the public affairs in the county legislation, and no better or more honest man could be selected. By hard industry with hammer at his forge, he has raised himself to wealth and affluence. With such men as "Billy" Dixon in the Board of Supervisors, there need be no fear of any raids on the public treasury. If honest old man Ross has to yield to a Republican, Dixon is the man.

An Important Question.

It very often happens that juries disagree and sometimes on questions that it would seem twelve minds could come to a conclusion on. The letter which is embodied in this article was received by the Chief Editor of THEMIS from the editor of a country contemporary. While ordinarily the Chief Editor of this paper feels amply able to answer all questions that may be addressed him, whether touching subjects of mythology or farming or anything else, he felt that a query of this importance should be submitted to the various departmental heads of the paper. We found there was a disagreement. The letter and question is as follows:

"I desire to address to you a question and obtain from you a reply concerning a matter which is of particular interest to more than one newspaper in this State, and which is of sufficient importance to command at least the passing attention of journals generally.

The question: Suppose a Superior Judge of your county, while holding his high office, should actively engage himself as a political chief and party manager, and get down to the uncertain and unseemly level of a tricky professional politician; suppose further, that you, as a self-respecting journalist, should have the temerity to disapprove of the political methods and tactics of this Superior Judge, and suppose that as a consequence you became involved in a political and personal row with him; suppose still further, that the said Superior Judge should thereupon adopt the retaliatory and revengeful course toward your paper of refusing to sign all orders for the publication of legal advertisements in its columns, in haughty and arrogant disregard of the rights and wishes of litigants and their counsel. What would be your opinion of such a Superior Judge, or what apology would you offer for his conduct?"

The document was first presented to our literary and metaphysical editor, the solemn man who wears spectacles. He read it with great care and wrote: "My opinion is that American politics is debased. As I read the history of early ages I find there were then no political managers. When I hear of the influence of such men as Buckley in primary governmental affairs, I feel there should be a return of the good old days. It is true that Cæsar fell a victim to the vicious political influences of his time, but look at the result! While Cæsar died at a comparatively early age, his name still lives and the men who at that time were running the politics of Rome are unknown. The editor who writes this letter is another martyr, and though he may lose in this generation, his star will shine a thousand years from now when that Superior Judge that is oppressing him will have sunk into eternal shade. My view is to encourage this young man. I will consult the cyclopedia for similar cases of oppression."

The paper was next submitted to our political editor. He scanned it with interest and wrote with animation: "If we had such a Superior Judge he would be a jewel. Consider the deplorable condition of this community. We have a municipal election next month and through the modesty of our people we cannot find a man in Sacramento who will act as political manager. It would not surprise me from this modesty that is manifested that we will not find men enough to fill the places on our tickets. In the fall we will have our county and State conventions and if we do not get a political head the old officers may be compelled to hold over and neglect their private business if no one runs against them. My suggestion is that we import that Superior Judge to Sacramento. He will make more money here than his salary now amounts to. Who is he?"

The Business Manager, who is a very useful adjunct to every well regulated newspaper office, had very decided ideas on the subject. He said: "In the first place, I rather think I would stand in with that man and secure all the legal advertising of the county, but as this young man asks for advice I am generous enough to say that he had better lay low and saw wood until the clouds roll by, unless he is running his newspaper for his health."

Respecting our subordinates as we do and finding they are disposed to disagree, the chief editor of this paper feels that he cannot advise a course that should be pursued in such an extreme case. We have no opinion of such a hypothetical Superior Judge, and as he might move into this county we care not to suggest any apology for his conduct.

Top Notch Tonic.

Is especially prepared to overcome the distressing effect of malaria, and the consequent accompanying disorders of the liver and kidneys. A few doses in aggravated cases will produce a marked benefit, and the continued use will result in permanent cure. The occasional use of Top Notch Tonic will positively prevent malaria. One dollar per bottle, at drug stores.

WILLIAM F. HUNTOON.

Resolutions of Respect Adopted by the Directors of the People's Savings Bank.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Board of Directors of the People's Savings Bank held last Tuesday evening, at their office, the following preamble and resolutions offered by Director E. J. Croly were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the All Ruling Power to allow our Cashier and Secretary to be removed from our midst; and

WHEREAS, We deem it our expedient, though melancholy, duty to give an expression of the feelings of deep sorrow produced in our hearts by this sad and afflictive dispensation; Therefore, be it

Resolved, That by the untimely death of William F. Huntoon this corporation has lost a faithful, honest and upright Secretary and an honorable friend, the parents of deceased a dutiful son, and Sacramento a good citizen—one whose manly qualities and generous disposition won the love, respect and regard of all.

Resolved, That we tender to the relatives of deceased our deep and heartfelt sympathy in their dark hour of affliction.

Resolved, That this preamble and resolutions be placed upon our records, and a copy of same be handed to his afflicted parents.

The following motion offered by Director Croly was also unanimously adopted:

That all correspondence, business applications, etc. not absolutely necessary to be acted upon at this meeting, be withheld until our next meeting, and that we do now adjourn out of respect to the memory of our late Cashier.

School Arbor Day.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Hoitt has issued a circular, which is certainly deserving of attention, urging that in each county one day be set apart, to be known as Arbor Day, and on that day the teachers and friends take the children from the school-rooms and teach them how to plant trees, vines and shrubs, and how to care for them when planted. The idea is to teach the children to become familiar with trees, and to regard their value, as well as to beautify the school-grounds. The suggestion is certainly one of value, when results are considered. It will result not only in practical education of the children, but in relieving the country school-yards of their nakedness. We have little doubt that from the results that have followed the denudation of the forests of this State, time will soon come when Arbor Day will be legally appointed and generally observed. The Superintendent suggests the preparation of programmes of suitable exercises, to be varied to suit circumstances. The matter can be brought about at a nominal expense, and we suggest that it receive the immediate attention of the school officers.

Political.

As the time approaches for the holding of the Republican Municipal Convention, interest is being centered on its action, for it is a foregone conclusion that the ticket nominated by that body will be elected by a very pronounced majority. The differences that have heretofore existed in the party, and which were brought about by contentions among a very few men to secure control of the party machinery, have died out. As we have heretofore intimated, these petty chieftains have of late engaged in a ridiculous battle of windmills; though, perhaps, it will not be until after the convention has made its selections, that they will realize that the body of the party has throughout viewed their efforts with amusing indifference. The people, in view of the manifest needs of the city, are disposed to take the selection of their officers into their own hands, and the result will be the choosing of men who will not feel they are under obligation to any political wire worker. It has been the rule that candidates have felt forced to in advance pledge themselves for or against propositions of public concern, and to appoint to positions politicians who performed little or no service for the salaries they received. We apprehend the result of this election, and those which will follow, will be somewhat disastrous to those who seek positions of profit without compensating service.

So far as the field now stands it would appear that the gentlemen who will be considered by the Republican Convention for the nomination for Mayor will be, Mayor Eugene J. Gregory, John Weil, W. F. Knox, and B. U. Steinman; for Chief of Police, Capt. E. M. Stevens and Edward Short; for City Attorney, Judges Charles N. Post and George G. Davis. For Fire Commissioner several names have been suggested, but with some indefiniteness. From appearances, Gregory, Stevens, and Post will find places on the ticket.

The Democratic ticket will, in all probability, be composed of W. D. Comstock for Mayor, Timothy Lee for Chief of Police, and W. S. Church for City Attorney. Officer B. Franks, however, has announced himself as a candidate for nomination for Chief.

SUPPLEMENT.

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1890.

No. 51.

DELINQUENT TAX LIST

FOR 1889.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. By virtue of and in accordance with the provisions of Sections 3764, 3765, 3766 and 3767 of the Political Code of the State of California, I will sell the real estate upon which the taxes on the property hereinafter described is a lien and delinquent for State and county taxes, for the year 1889, in front of the Court-house door, at the northwest corner of I and Seventh streets, in the city of Sacramento, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

Tuesday, the 25th
day of Feb'y,
1890,

For gold coin of the United States, each piece or parcel so described for the amount of taxes thereto annexed, together with 5 per cent. added thereto and 50 cents on each lot, piece or tract of land separately assessed and described, and on each assessment of improvements, and on each assessment of personal property additional thereto and accruing costs.

City Roll

Against the following named persons and the following described lots, pieces and tracts of land and other property in the city of Sacramento:

20—Against Mrs. M. Alexander and north 90 feet of west half of east half of lot 1, K and L, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $47 50; costs, $2 87; total tax and costs.....$50 37

88—Against Harriet Auker and north three-quarters of lot 4, N and O, Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $20 12; costs, $2; total tax and cost.....$22 12

91—Against James Anderson and south half of lots 7 and 8, Q and R, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 59 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 46

103—Against John Azevedo and east half of lot 3, O and P, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 81

105—Against Kate Arenz and north fifty feet of lot 5, D and E, Sixth and Seventh streets, and north fifty feet of east quarter of lot 6, D and E, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 25; costs, $1 51; total tax and costs.....$11 76

151—Against B. F. Ball and east half of lot 4, U and V, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets. State and county tax, $1 63; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 21

274—Against Joseph Bartoni and north forty-two and a half feet of lot 6, Q and R, Front and Second streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $21 25; costs, $2 05; total tax and costs.....$23 30

293—Against J. W. Brand and east half of lot 2, O and P, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $10; costs, $1; total tax and costs.....$11 00

316—Against Henry Fisher and mortgage interest in west half of lot 6, O and P, Thirtieth and Fourteenth streets. State and county tax, $18 75; costs, $1 44; total tax and costs.....$20 19

432—Against William Boyne and east half of lot 2, K and L, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $107 19; costs, $6 35; total tax and costs.....$113 54

468—Against John Lockhart and mortgage interest in east half of lot 7, C and D, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $12 50; costs, $1 12; total tax and costs.....$13 62

471—Against Annie Cooper and north half of lot 1, R and S, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property; for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 94; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 49

490—Against C. P. Corliss and east 32½ feet of south 100 feet of lot 7, F and G, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and east 30 feet of north 60 feet of lot 7, F and G, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and improvements and personal property; for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 81

568—Against J. H. Campbell and lots 5, 6 and 7, R and S, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 50; costs, $1 58; total tax and costs.....$13 08

576—Against J. J. Carroll and north half of south half of lot 3, S and T, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 23

580—Against J. J. Carroll and lots 3, 4, 7 and 8, V and W, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $2 69; costs, $1 15; total tax and costs.....$3 84

581—Against Mary Allen and mortgage interest in lots 3, 4, 7 and 8, V and W, Fourth and Fifth streets. State and county tax, $13 75; costs, $1 20; total tax and costs.....$14 95

598—Against L. N. Billings and mortgage interest in lot 5, B and C, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 13

608—Against L. F. Taylor and mortgage interest in lot 1, Q and R, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $6 87; costs, 85 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 72

658—Against Margaret Carr and west 30 feet of east 55 feet of north half of lot 7, M and N, Second and Third streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

659—Against Margaret Carroll and lots 1 and 2, V and W, Fourth and Fifth streets. State and county tax, $3 13; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 78

664—Against Mrs. M. L. Cass and east half of lot 8, I and J, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $22 19; costs, $2 11; total tax and costs.....$24 30

836—Against A. B. Davis and south half of west half of lot 5, J and K, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $3 44; costs, 67 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 11

852—Against Barney Donahoe and east quarter of north half of lot 1, M and N, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $13 69; costs, $1 68; total tax and costs.....$15 37

904—Against Ida H. Doan and lot 4, T and U, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and personal property; for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 91; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 49

961—Against Margaret Dooley and west one-half of lot 4, Q and R, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets and improvements. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 62 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 12

998—Against Mrs. L. Jones and mortgage interest in east one-half of lot 7, O and P, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets. State and county tax, $5; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 75

1021—Against William H. Dean and west one-half of lot 4, Q and R, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 88; costs, $1 60; total tax and costs.....$13 48

1064—Against H. C. Ewing and west half of lot 7, N and O, Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 47

1094—Against Sims Emory and south 100 feet of west half of lot 5, O and P, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 25; costs, $1 26; total tax and costs.....$6 51

1142—Against F. Fay and north 40 feet of south 60 feet of lot 8, P and Q, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 25; costs, $1 26; total tax and costs.....$6 51

1182—Against L. W. Farrell and east half of lot 6, N and O, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $4 37; costs, $1 22; total tax and costs.....$5 59

1217½—Against Horace Stevens and mortgage interest in west half of lot 6, P and Q, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 69 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 44

1220—Against F. A. Fisher and east half of lot 7, W and X, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets and personal property; State and county tax, $2 75; costs, $1 14; total tax and costs.....$3 89

1229—Against Mrs. T. A. Fairchild and lot 4, F and G, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets. State and county tax, $4 06; costs, 70 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 76

1260—Against F. M. Shields and mortgage interest in lot 5, K and L, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $2 81; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 46

1271½—Against Sarah Miller and north 118 feet of east 37½ feet of lot 4, O and P, Eighth and Ninth streets and improvements. State and county tax, $11 75; costs, $1 08; total tax and costs.....$12 83

1304—Against Charles V. Garrett and south half of lots 1 and 2, V and W, Ninth and Tenth streets. State and county tax, $1 37; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 09

1367—Against C. Otterbeck and mortgage interest in lot 4, K and L, Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets. State and county tax, $5; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 75

1320—Against William Morrison and mortgage interest in west 50 feet of lot 1, G and H, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets. State and county tax, $20; costs, $1 50; total tax and costs.....$21 50

1325—Against Native Sons of the Golden West, Parlor No. 3 and mortgage interest in south half of lot 5, C and D, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $10; costs, $1; total tax and costs.....$11 00

1326—Against Edith G. Grant and west half of lot 4, U and V, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 08

1376—Against J. A. Gibson and lots 2 and 3, D and E, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $3 25; costs, 66 cents. Total tax and costs.....$3 91

1436—Against Samuel Gottlieb and south quarter of lot 5, M and N, Sixth and Seventh streets, with improvements. State and county tax, $5 19; costs, 76 cents. Total tax and costs.....$5 95

And north 70 feet of lot 4, N and O, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $14 13; costs, $1 70. Total tax and costs.....$15 83

And west 10 feet of north half of lot 7, N and O, Seventh and Eighth streets, and north half of lot 8, N and O, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $4 31; costs, 72 cents. Total tax and costs.....$5 03

1532—Against Mrs. E. Hollehan and south 22 feet of north 62 feet of lots 5 and 6, Q and R, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 60 cents. Total tax and costs.....$2 47

1535—Against Eliza A. Hoyt and lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Seventh and Eighth streets. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents. Total tax and costs.....$1 68

And lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $19; costs, $1 95. Total tax and costs.....$20 95

1536—Against Howell Clark and mortgage interest in lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Sixth and Seventh streets, and lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Seventh and Eighth streets, and lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Eighth and Ninth streets. State and county tax, $27 50; costs, $2 87; total tax and costs.....$30 37

1575—Against W. C. Felch and mortgage interest in east fifty feet of lot 2, J and K, Eleventh and Twelfth streets. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 69 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 44

1629—Against Ireland Howe and lot 5, N and O, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax $20 68; costs, $2 03; total tax and costs.....$22 71

1693—Against P. J. Harney and west half of lot 2, P and Q, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 87 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 37

1742—Against W. J. Hook, Jr., and north sixty feet of lot 4, and north sixty feet of east half of lot 3, G and H, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $18; costs, $1 40; total tax and costs.....$19 40

1788—Against Mrs. Jane Walters and mortgage interest in east half of lot 5, N and O, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 06

1881—Against A. A. Krull and lot 8, N and O, Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets and improvements. State and county tax, $5 63; costs, 78 cents; total tax and costs.....$6 41

1882—Against Mrs. F. Oschner and mortgage interest in lot 8, N and O, Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets. State and county tax, $37 50; costs, $2 38; total tax and costs.....$39 88

1924—Against George Kromer and west half of lot 4, P and Q, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets and improvements and personal property for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $4 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 49

1951—Against John Kennedy and lots 1 to 8, V and W, Twenty-ninth and Twentieth streets and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $16 88; costs, $1 81; total tax and costs.....$18 72

1961—Against Mechanics' Building and Loan Association and mortgage interest in south half of north half of east 75 feet and north 30 feet of south half of lot 4, N and O, Third and Fourth streets. State and county tax, $12 50; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs.....$13 63

1985—Against Mrs. Mary Kelly and lot 2, O and 7, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $7 40; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 28

1989—Against Thomas P. Sweeney and mortgage interest in north 40 feet of south 110 feet in lot 5, M and N, Third and Fourth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

2021—Against Samuel Kingsbury and north quarter of lot 5 and 6, Q and R, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $8; costs, 90 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 90

2060—Against Charles E. Leonard and north half of south half of lot 4, P and Q, Eleventh and Twelfth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 81

20 9—Against George Lemke and east half of lot 2, O and P, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, $1 38; total tax and costs.....$8 88

2098—Against W. W. Clary and mortgage interest in south half of lot 8, P and Q, Tenth and Eleventh streets. State and county tax, $12 50; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs.....$13 63

2141—Against Mrs. D. Cook and mortgage interest in north half of lot 4, T and U, Second and Third streets. State and county tax, $1 88; costs, 57 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 95

And lots 7 and 8, R and S, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $8 03; costs, $1 40; total tax and costs.....$9 43

2181—Against Thomas Lewis and north half of lots 5 and 6, S and T, Ninth and Tenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 37; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 59

2192—Against Mrs. W. H. Lawrence and south 60 feet of north 110 feet of lot 8, Q and R, Third and Fourth streets, and north 66 feet of south 110 feet of west quarter of lot 7, Q and R, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $4 44; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 16

2206—Against Lynch and Rothaug and south half of west half of lot 10, B and C, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $3 62; costs, 78 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 40

2250—Against A. Merry and east half of lot 2, E and F, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 13

2254—Against B. McVay and lot 8, O and P, Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $2 81; costs, 62 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 93

2265—Against Catherine M. McHoney and south half of north quarter of lot 8, M and N, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $5 94; costs, 80 cents; total tax and costs.....$6 74

2288—Against Eli Mayo and east half of lot 7, L and M, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $27 50; costs, $1 88; total tax and costs.....$29 38

And south 25 feet of lot 5, P and Q, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $9 87; costs, 84 cents; total tax and costs.....$10 71

2296—Against E. G. Messner and west half of lot 7, M and N, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $20 18; costs, $2; total tax and costs.....$22 18

2310—Against Mrs. F. M. Marshall and east half of lot 6, P and Q, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $15 63; costs, $1 78; total tax and costs.....$17 41

2350—Against Mrs. H. G. Melvin and lot 5, N and O, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets. State and county tax, $20 63; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs.....$22 16

2386—Against Julia Nesche and mortgage interest in west 55 feet of lot 8, J and K, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

2420—Against W. C. Felch and mortgage interest in west half of east half of lot 2, L and M, Seventh and Eighth streets. State and county tax, $6 20; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs.....$6 99

2471—Against Mrs. M. A. Mesick and lots 5 and 8, E and F, Eighth and Ninth streets and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $167 40; costs, $9 37; total tax and costs.....$176 77

2486—Against Mary Myers and lot 1 and west half of lot 2, V and W, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. State and county tax, $4 34; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 10

And lot 8 and west half of lot 7, V and W, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. State and county tax, $4 37; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 09

And lots 1 to 8, W and X, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and personal property. State and county tax, $25 63; costs, $2 28; total tax and costs.....$27 91

2497—Against Mrs. P. Mender and lot 7, N and O, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $12 19; costs, $1 11; total tax and costs.....$13 30

2 23—Against Thomas McCants and south quarter of lot 1, and south quarter of west 10 feet of lot 2, O and P, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 55

2446—Against estate of William Melvin and east half of lot 7, G and H, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 63; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs.....$12 16

And west forty-eight feet of lot 3, I and J, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $40; costs, $2 50; total tax and costs.....$42 50

2548—Against Sacramento Bank and mortgage interest in west 48 feet of lot 3, I and J, Fourth and Fifth streets. State and county tax, $18 75; costs, $1 44; total tax and costs.....$20 19

2567—Against Morgan Brothers and lot 4, D and E Sixth and Seventh streets. State and county tax, $3 31; costs, 77 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 58

2598—Against George H. Nethercot and lot 8, K and L, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $16 68; costs, $1 83; total tax and costs.....$18 51

2670—Against Jacob Olsen and north of A, lots 1 to 10, A and B, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 58

2718—Against J. M. Milliken and mortgage interest in north half of lot 4, G and H, Tenth and Eleventh streets. State and county tax, $3 15; costs, 66 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 81

2722—Against A. Mohus and mortgage interest in lot 6, N and O, Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 06

2762—Against J. A. Parker and lot 8, G and H, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $38 75; costs, 2 94; total tax and costs.....$41 69

2763—Against Union Bank and Loan Association and mortgage interest in south half of west 50 feet of lot 8, H and I, seventh and Eighth streets. State and county tax, $112 15; costs, $6 13; total tax and costs.....$118 63

2818—Against W. F. Ashby and mortgage interest in west half of lot 4, J and K, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

2908—Against Mrs. Emma C. Irvine and mortgage interest in west half of lot 7, M and N, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 06

2978—Against Wm. Roan and lots 1 to 8, S and T, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 94 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 69

2979—Against Mrs. E. G. Thomas and mortgage interest in lots 1 to 8, S and T, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets. State and county tax, $10; costs, $1; total tax and costs.....$11 00

2981—Against W. W. Ryder and lots 5 and 6, T and U, Second and Third streets. State and county tax, $3 31; costs, 76 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 07

3009—Against Exempt Fireman's Association and mortgage interest in lot 5, and south 5 feet of lot 6, O and P, Front and Second streets. State and county tax, $25; costs, $1 75; total tax and costs.....$26 75

3019—Against F. W. Steinhilber and mortgage interest in north 80 feet of south 60 feet of lot 4, Q and R, Third and Fourth streets. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 13

3033—Against C. H. Schweitzer and west half of lot 2, I and J, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $15; costs, $1 25; total tax and costs.....$16 25

3068—Against DeWitt C. Smith and north quarter of lot 5, O and P, Eleventh and Twelfth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $3 13; costs, 66 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 79

3071—Against Elvina Sayers and east half of lot 7, N and O, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 81

3078—Against E. D. Shirland and south half of north half of lot 1, F and G, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 69; costs, $1 58; total tax and costs.....$13 27

3085—Against A. Gallitto and mortgage interest in lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Twentieth and Twenty-first streets. State and county tax, $7 40; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

3103—Against Frank Swift and east half of lot 3, M and N, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 88; costs, $1 69; total tax and costs.....$13 48

3106—Against G. M. Schumacher and east half of lot 2, J and K, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 31; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 83

3139—Against H. Splerling and improvements on south half of lot 8, V and W, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and personal property. State and county tax, $5 17; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 92

3141—Against Henry Starr and north quarter of lot 4, P and Q, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $32 75; costs, $2 63; total tax and costs.....$35 38

3150—Against Aug. Meister and mortgage interest in west 30 feet of lot 4, F and G, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. State and county tax, $15; costs, $1 25; total tax and costs.....$16 25

3151—Against P. H. Stelner and west half of lot 3, U and V, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 08

3280—Against Mrs. T. Shanahan and lots 5 and 6, K and S, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 94 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 49

3308—Against W. J. Smith and north quarter of lot 1, D and E, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, and west 10 feet of north quarter of lot 2, D and E, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 63 cents; costs, 53 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 16

3370—Against A. Trope and north 20 feet of south 69 feet of lot 1, I and J, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $19 69; costs, $1 48; total tax and costs.....$21 17

3382—Against Joseph Patton and mortgage interest in lot 5, I and J, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

3397—Against Henry Tibbs and north 55 feet of south half of lot 5, P and Q, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 69; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs.....$12 22

4423—Against L. H. Todhunter and north half of west 80 feet of lot 1, M and N, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 43; costs, $1 57; total tax and costs.....$13 00

3503—Against Louis A. Vogel and south 60 feet of lot 10, Q and R, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $8 69; costs, $1 44; total tax and costs.....$10 13

3530—Against Chris. Wall and lots 3 and 4, K and L, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $36 81; costs, $2 34; total tax and costs.....$39 15

3652—Against M. F. Wilson and north half of lot 5, C and D, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 63 cents; costs, 53 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 16

3749—Against F. A. Ziegler and north half of west half of lot 10, B and C, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. State and county tax, $1; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 55

3753—Against W. S. Zeitin and west half of lot 1, V and W, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets. State and county tax, $1 56; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 14

4120—Against Fannie K. Cross and mortgage interest in east 140 acres of north half of section 1, township 9, range 6. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

4127—Against estate of F. Bergman and fraction in north half of section 3, township 2, range 2, 41 acres. State and county tax, 75 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 29

4128—Against estate of F. Beggs and fraction in west half of east half of section 9, township 2, range 2, 20 1/2 acres. State and county tax, 45 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 07

4155—Against Chris. O'Regan and mortgage interest in lot 8, Tivoli Gardens. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 78 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 23

4201—Against Sarah T. Moore and mortgage interest in lots 1 and 2, block 78, Polson. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 68

4208—Against George W. Baker and mortgage interest in fractional northeast quarter bounded east by S. Quall, in section 17, township 8, range 6. State and county tax, $30; costs, $2; total tax and costs.....$32 00

4214—Against Mrs. N. A. Barnes and lots 11 and 12, block M, Highland Park. State and county tax, $2 25; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 86

4224—Against Mary E. Butterworth and tract of land on Twitchell Island, bounded east by T. H. Williams, west by E. G. Miner, in township 3, range 3, 500 acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

4260—Against W. H. Parkhurst and lot 1 in Anderson Tract, 15 1/2 acres, and personal property. State and county tax, $56 18; costs, $3 80; total tax and costs.....$60 98

4271—Against W. T. Bottemore and tract of land bounded east by Central Pacific Railroad, south and west by quarter section line, being a fraction of southwest quarter of northeast quarter of section 27, township 5, range 6, 3 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 23

4298—Against Stephen Dwyer and mortgage interest in tract of land bounded north and east by Goslin, south by A. Terrio, west by James McNasser, in section 3, township 7, range 4. State and county tax, $15; costs, $1 25; total tax and costs.....$16 25

4312—Against George W. Chapman and lot 15, Louisiana tract, five acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $8 62; costs, 93 cents; total tax and costs.....$9 55

4412—Against Oliver Carter and possession interest and claim in and to south half of northwest quarter of section 29, township 6, range 8, eighty acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $12 45; costs, $1 62; total tax and costs.....$14 07

4468—Against T. W. Cox and northeast quarter of southwest quarter of section 27, township 7, range 5, forty acres. State and county tax, $19 80; costs, $1 49; total tax and costs.....$21 29

And fraction of northeast quarter of southwest quarter of section 27, township 7, range 5, 16 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $28 50; costs, $2 42; total tax and costs.....$30 92

4531—Against Fannie K. Cross and mortgage interest in tract of land bounded north by Spelker, east and south by Curis, west by Lower Stockton road, in northeast quarter of section 30, township 8, range 5, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

4557—Against John G. Davis and lot in northwest corner of northeast quarter of northeast quarter of section 12, township 7, range 5, five acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 32; costs, $1 26; total tax and costs.....$6 58

4567—Against John Donahue and lots 9 and 10, block 49, Polson. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 47

4575—Against Levi Darrington and fraction in southeast quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8, three acres. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 45

4632—Against A. Eberhardt and lot 11, block 1, Highland Park, and improvements. State and county tax, $4 93; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 70

4640—Against C. Erickson and fraction of sub-marked Barnehaner on the office map of the Rancho Rio de los Americanos in township 9, range 6, thirty and one-half acres, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 45

4758—Against Patrick Fitzpatrick and fraction in southwest quarter of section 6, township 9, range 8, thirty-five acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $12 65; costs, $1 63; total tax and costs.....$14 31

4761—Against Mrs. Rosa A. Folger and lot 57, Monte Vista tract, one and ninety-six one hundredths acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

4784 1/2—Against G. H. and W. S. Fisher and fraction of west half of section 26 township 5, range 7, 170 acres. State and county tax, $56 10; costs, $3 30; total tax and costs.....$59 40

4799—Against Charles Gibson and northeast quarter of southeast quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8, 40 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 93; costs, $1 30; total tax and costs.....$7 23

4861—Against M. C. Goddard and east half of west half of southeast quarter of section 3, township 7, range 5, 40 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $33 30; costs, $2 67; total tax and costs.....$35 97

4866—Against Noah B. Gill and north half of southwest quarter of section 18, township 7, range 9, 80 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $24; costs, $2 20; total tax and costs.....$26 20

4927—Against Christian Hobbell and lots 26 and 28, New Ramona Colony, ten acres. State and county tax, $10 27; costs, $1; total tax and costs.....$11 27

Lots and Blocks, and Fractions Thereof, in the City of Sacramento, Assessed to Unknown Owners.

4815—Against unknown owners and north of A lots 1 to 8, A and B, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 06

3818—Against unknown owners and south half of west half of east half of lot 6, L and M, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $8 44; costs, 92 cents; total tax and costs.....$9 36

3846—Against unknown owners and west half of east half of lot 7, V and W, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. State and county tax, 94 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 49

3847—Against unknown owners and east half of lot 8, V and W, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. State and county tax, $1 57; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 17

3867—Against unknown owners and east half of lot 4, M and N, Ninth and Tenth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $33 75; costs, $2 19; total tax and costs.....$35 94

Country Roll.

All Property in Sacramento County Described by Township and Range is North and East of Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, respectively.

4036—Against John Amar and north half of east thirty acres of southwest quarter section 34, township 8, range 5 east, and personal property and improvements. State and county tax, $25 50; costs, $2 28; total tax and costs.....$27 78

4084—Against B. F. Bates and lots 1 to 4, block 61, Polson, and improvements. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 69 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 44

4094—Against Calvin L. Bates and northeast quarter of southeast quarter and northwest quarter of southeast quarter of section 31, township 7, range 9, 160 acres, and improvements; and southeast quarter of northwest quarter and southwest quarter of northeast quarter of section 31, township 7, range 9, 80 acres, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $6 90; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 45

4113—Against E. and J. Downing and mortgage interest in southeast quarter of section 23, township 10, range 7, 160 acres, and southeast quarter of section 23, township 10, range 7, 160 acres. State and county tax, $12 60; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs.....$13 73

4923—Against C. Holland and all west of county road of east half of northwest quarter, section 17, township 8, range 6, 70 acres; and west 97 acres of east 157 acres of north half of section 17, township 8, range 6, 97 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $122 70; costs, $7 63; total tax and costs, $130 13

4931—Against Mrs. F. J. Hill and fraction of southeast quarter, south of Placer county line, of section 16, township 10, range 7, 30 acres. State and county tax, $9; costs, 95 cents; total tax and costs, $9 95

4971—Against G. E. Hook and lot 31, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68; and lot 21, Kathleen Tract. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

5029—Against J. R. Hodson and all south of Jackson Road of east half of northwest quarter section 19, township 8, range 6, 52 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $15 38; costs, $1 27; total tax and costs, $16 65

5048—Against Russell Howell and lot 13, Florin, 3 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $9 23; costs, $1 46; total tax and costs, $10 69

5062—Against Neil's Hanson and all east of railroad of southeast quarter, section 16, township 10, range 6, 24 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $7 05; costs, $1 35; total tax and costs, $8 40

5069—Against P. R. Hewlitz and tract of land on Sherman Island, bounded north by Sacramento river, east by J. Larsen and E. I. Upham, south and west by S. C. Hastings, in section 27, township 3, range 2, 251 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $6 75; costs, $1 81; total tax and costs, $8 56

5173—Against Mrs. S. A. Jones and east half of lot 5 of J. H. Kerr tract, Elk Grove, and improvements. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $2 23

5221—Against George H. Kimball and Swamp Land Survey No. 562, known as Hammond Island township 2, range 1, 72 acres. State and county tax, $6 45; costs, 83 cents; total tax and costs, $7 28

5250—Against M. Cronan and mortgage interest in tract of land bounded north by Jackson road, east by road, south by Silverline, west by Marshall, in section 15, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $9 75; costs, 99 cents; total tax and costs, $10 75

5417—Against D. W. Melville and east half of northwest quarter of section 18, township 5, range 8, 80 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $13 50; costs, $1 67; total tax and costs, $15 17

5425—Against estate of Ellen McCarthy and west half of southeast quarter and northeast quarter of southeast quarter, section 26, township 7, range 8, 160 acres. State and county tax, $12; costs, $1 10; total tax and costs, $13 10

5456—Against H. A. Mayhew and lots 7 to 12, block 2, Oak Park. State and county tax, $9 75; costs, 19 cents; total tax and costs, $10 74

And lots 12 to 16, block 3, Oak Park. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

And lots 11 to 14, block 4, Oak Park. State and county tax, $6 35; costs, 82 cents; total tax and costs, $7 20

And lot 6, block 5, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

And lots 9 to 16, block 23, Oak Park. State and county tax, $12; costs, $1 10; total tax and costs, $13 10

And lots 10 to 16, block 25, Oak Park. State and county tax, $11 32; costs, $1 06; total tax and costs, $12 38

And lots 6 to 9, block 26, Oak Park. State and county tax, $6; costs, 80 cents; total tax and costs, $6 80

And lots 1 and 15 and 16 block 45, Oak Park. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $5 23

5488—Against James McCall and lot 8, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

5526—Against Katie Matthews and lot 2, block 25, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 65; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 23

5542—Against Nettie Manning and northeast quarter of section 3, township 9, range 6, 153 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $59 32; costs, $3 96; total tax and costs, $63 28

5558—Against G. H. Iler and mortgage interest in lots 7 and 8 block 7, Galt. State and county tax, $9; costs, 95 cents; total tax and costs, $9 95

5565—Against Susan McCarthy and southwest quarter of section 26, township 7, range 8, forty acres. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs, $3 65

5579—Against Thomas E. Morgan and south 10 acres of Swamp Land Survey, No. 351, Brannan island in township 4, range 3, 100 acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $64 50; costs, $3 73; total tax and costs, $68 23

5602—Against W. P. Moyer and lot 11, Louisiana Tract, 5 acres, and improvements and personal property; for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $2 33; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs, $2 94

5608—Against L. E. and S. E. Martin and fraction of north half of southwest quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8, 15 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $3 30; costs, 67 cents; total tax and costs, $3 97

5609—Against Henry Schlitler and mortgage interest in fraction of north half of southwest quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8. State and county tax, $1 65; costs, 59 cents; total tax and costs, $2 24

5609—Against Catherine Nelson and Swamp Land Survey, No. 1, 071, known as Decker Island, in township 3, range 2, 78 acres. State and county tax, $4 65; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $5 38

5631—Against F. Nunes and lot in Painter-ville in section 5, township 5, range 4, one acre, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 62; costs, $1 28; total tax and costs, $6 90

5671—Against L. E. Taylor and mortgage interest in east quarter of southwest quarter of southeast quarter, section 23, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs, $5 22

5700—Against Annie Parker and lot 5, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 13; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 69

5701—Against A. J. Palmer and northeast quarter of southeast quarter, section 18, township 8, range 5, forty acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $96 52; costs, $5 8; total tax and costs, $102 35

5709—Against A. J. Pommer and lot 22, Ingham tract. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

5719—Against C. E. Pinkham and tract bounded north by McLaughlin, south and west by Saunders, east by railroad, in section 35, township 8, range 5, twenty acres. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs, $3 65

5753—Against J. A. Parker and east half of northeast quarter of section 26, township 10, range 7, 80 acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $30 15; costs, $2; total tax and costs, $32 15

And upper 400 acres of lot 14, Sheldon estate, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $81; costs, $5 05; total tax and costs, $86 05

5761—Against John P. Peterson and lots 11 and 12, block "Q," Highland Park. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs, $3 65

5780—Against Mary E. Pratt and northeast quarter of section 4, township 7, range 8, 160 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $22 20; costs, $1 61; total tax and costs, $23 81

And lots 4 and 5 in northwest quarter of section 3, township 7, range 8, 77 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $12 22; costs, $1 12; total tax and costs, $13 34

And personal property. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs, $5 22

5781—Against Mrs. M. Pugh and east half of northeast quarter of section 6, township 7, range 6, 79 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $14 63; costs, $1 23; total tax and costs, $15 86

5783—Against C. Toomey and mortgage interest in lot in Brighton north of railroad, being a fraction in northwest corner of northeast quarter of section 14, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $5 23

5809—Against W. J. Parker and northeast quarter, section 36, township 8, range 5, 158 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $35 92; costs, $3 30; total tax and costs, $39 22

And northwest quarter of section 31, township 8, range 6, 137 acres. State and county tax, $20 55; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs, $22 08

And personal property. State and county tax, $22 35; costs, $1 62; total tax and costs, $23 97

5819—Against M. S. Pike and W. S. Keddall and tract of land bounded north by American river, east by Briggs and Nuttall, south by M. Pike & Cox, west by Cox, section 13-24, township 9, range 6, 179 acres; and tract of land bounded north by Pike and I. Nuttall, east by I. Nuttall, south by Coloma road, west by Cox, section 13-24, township —, ranges 6 and 7, 120 acres and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $28 80; costs, $1 94; total tax and costs, $30 74

5833—Against E. W. Redding and lot 1, block 2, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

5860—Against E. A. Rowley and possession interest and claim of, in and to southwest quarter of section 29, township 6, range 8, 160 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $25 20; costs, $2 26; total tax and costs, $27 46

5862—Against S. C. Rich and lot 5, Kathleen Tract, and personal property. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, $1 19; total tax and costs, $4 94

5883—Against John Ream and lots 11 and 12, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $2 70; costs, 64 cents; total tax and costs, $3 34

And lots 9 and 10, block I, Highland Park. State and county tax, $2 55; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs, $3 18

And lot 5, block J, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

5945—Against Samuel Rogers and lot 3, Anderson tract, in section 29 township 8, range 6, fourteen acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 20; costs, $1 51; total tax and costs, $11 71

5956—Against W. D. H. Ross and lot 12, Louisiana tract, five acres and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $2 03; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs, $2 63

5987—Against Charles Saul and fractional southeast quarter of section 35, township 9, range 8, 100 acres. State and county tax, $15; costs, $1 25; total tax and costs, $16 25

And northeast quarter of section 2, township 8, range 8, 160 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $23 50; costs, $1 92; total tax and costs, $25 42

6021—Against Fred Schwears and Swamp Land Survey No. 344, Tyler Island, in section 20, township 4, range 4, 155 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $19 50; costs, $2 98; total tax and costs, $22 48

6051—Against Homer Smith and north fifty feet of lot 1, Goddard's addition to Florin and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $2 25; costs, $1 67; total tax and costs, $3 92

6058—Against Ida D. Spillman and lot 10, block N, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

6134—Against Mary E. Smith and lot 13, Monte Vista tract, one acre. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 68 cents; total tax and costs, $4 43

6138—Against Joseph Gray and mortgage interest in northeast eighty-four acres of subdivision marked G. M. G. Titus on the official map of the rancho de Los Americanos, in section 27, township 9, range 6. State and county tax, $82 50; costs, $1 63; total tax and costs, $84 13

6158—Against A. G. McManus Jr. and Sr. and mortgage interest in tract near McCracken bridge, in section 2, township 7, range 7. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs, $5 23

6204—Against William A. Scott and all north-west of Hicksville road, of lower half of lot 12, Hartnell Grant, township 7, range 7, 470 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $53 25; costs, $3 66; total tax and costs, $56 91

6235—Against Kittie Frenud and mortgage interest in lot 1, Goddard's Addition to Florin, less north 50 feet assessed to Homer Smith. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6284—Against J. Trebb and lot 9, block 5, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

6332—Against Philip A. Ritt and mortgage interest in south 17 acres of west 35 acres of northwest quarter of section 29, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $5 25; costs, 76 cents; total tax and costs, $6 01

6394—Against Sarah A. Uren and mortgage interest in lot 2, Florin. State and county tax, $3; costs, 95 cents; total tax and costs, $3 95

6409—Against Johanna T. Wearne and lots 3 and 4, block 28, Oak Park. State and county tax, $2 40; costs, 62 cents; total tax and costs, $3 02

6403—Against J. M. Watts and lots 14, 15 and 16, Florin (7½ acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 63; costs, $1 28; total tax and costs, $6 91

6409—Against Sarah E. Bader and mortgage interest in west half of southeast quarter and east half of southwest quarter, section 29, township 8, range 6. State and county tax, $27; costs, $1 85; total tax and costs, $28 85

6421—Against J. M. Jackson and mortgage interest in northeast quarter and north half of southeast quarter, section 31, township 8, range 6. State and county tax, $2; costs, $1 85; total tax and costs, $2 85

6466—Against estate of N. Williams and Swamp Land Survey No. 4, 9, in sections 14 and 15, township 6, range 4, 147 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $151 20; costs, $8 56; total tax and costs, $159 76

6471—Against P. Waggoner and south half of northeast quarter of section 32, township 8, range 8, eighty acres. State and county tax, $5 37; costs, 67 cents; total tax and costs, $6 04

And south quarter of section 28, township 8, range 8 160 acres. State and county tax, $5 92; costs, 79 cents; total tax and costs, $6 71

And fractional east half of section 5, township 7, range 8, fifty-four acres. State and county tax, $11 32; costs, $1 06; total tax and costs, $12 38

And improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 55; costs, $1 58; total tax and costs, $13 13

6544—Against Methodist Church and lot 5, block 51, Folsom, and east half of lot 6, block 51, Folsom, one acre, and improvements. State and county tax, $17 25; costs, $1 36; total tax and costs, $18 61

6575—Against Martin J. Coyne and lot 2, block J, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6592—Against John Farren and lot 2, block "Q," Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 13; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 69

6594—Against Alice Goodwin and lots 3 and 4, block 5, Oak Park. State and county tax, $2 40; costs, 62 cents; total tax and costs, $3 02

6600—Against Mary Galgani and lot 7, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

6609—Against Mrs. M. A. Hartley and lot 13, block N, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 35; costs, 57 cents; total tax and costs, $1 92

6610—Against Sarah M. Howard and lot 1, block P, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 05; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 60

6611—Against W. D. Hass and lot 4, section 7, township 7, range 7 19 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $14 63; costs, $1 73; total tax and costs, $16 36

6615—Against Robert Keefe and fraction in section 6, township 9, range 8, five acres and improvements. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs, $3 65

6617—Against Mrs. L. E. Little and lot 12, block H, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

6627—Against F. M. Miller and lot 2, block T, Highland Park, and improvements. State and county tax, $3 98; costs, 70 cents; total tax and costs, $4 68

6635—Against F. M. Odom and east 25 feet and west 25 feet of lot 8, and west 18 feet of lot 7, block 34, Folsom, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $2 70; costs, 64 cents; total tax and costs, $3 34

6636—Against Mrs. W. L. Klump and mortgage interest in east 25 feet of west 25 feet of lot 8 and west 18 feet of lot 7, block 34, Folsom. State and county tax, $9 38; costs, 97 cents; total tax and costs, $10 35

6644—Against Emma Rider and lot 11, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

6647½—Against Mrs. A. M. Reid and fraction in northwest quarter of section 11, township 7, range 5, twenty acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $10 50; costs, $1 03; total tax and costs, $11 53

6648—Against John Seccle and all south of county line of south half of west half of section 16, township 10, range 7, thirty-nine acres. State and county tax, $1 05; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 60

6688—Against Trustees Swamp Land District, No. 50, and fraction of northwest quarter of northwest quarter of section 12, township 2, range 1, twenty-nine acres. State and county tax, 45 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs, $0 97

6690—Against Cosumnes Land and Water Company and five miles of ditch in course of construction and personal property. State and county tax, $11 25; costs, $1 56; total tax and costs, $12 81

6691—Against San Yuen & Co. and east half of lot 14, block O, Folsom, and improvements. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 68 cents; total tax and costs, $4 43

6695—Against Tong Eig and north 102 feet of lots 1 and 2, block 19, Folsom and improvements. State and county tax, $6; costs, 80 cents; total tax and costs, $6 80

PROPERTY IN SACRAMENTO COUNTY ASSESSED TO Unknown Owners.

6701—Against unknown owners and tract No 17, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6702—Against unknown owners and tract No. 18, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6703—Against unknown owners and tract No 19, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6704—Against unknown owners and tract No. 20, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; cost, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6709—Against unknown owners and lot 33, Louisiana Tract, two and three-tenths acres. State and county tax, $2 10; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs, $2 70

6716—Against unknown owners and south half of southwest quarter of northwest quarter of section 6, township 7, range 6, twenty acres. State and county tax, $10 50; costs, $1 03; total tax and costs, $11 53

6717—Against unknown owners and east half of lot 11, G. H. Kerr's Tract, Elk Grove. State and county tax, $1 51; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

6718—Against unknown owners and lots 9 to 16, block 13, Folsom. State and county tax, 22 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs, $0 73

6719—Against unknown owners and lots 1 to 8, block 12, Folsom. State and county tax, 23 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs, $0 75

6720—Against unknown owners and lots 1 to 8, block 14, Folsom. State and county tax, 15 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs, $0 66

6721—Against unknown owners and lots 13 to 16, block 14, Folsom. State and county tax, 15 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs, $0 66

6722—Against unknown owners and lots 9 to 16, block 15, Folsom. State and county tax, 22 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs, $0 74

6725—Against unknown owners and lots 15 and 16, block 44, Folsom. State and county tax, 37 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs, $0 89

6729—Against unknown owners and lot 14, block B, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6738—Against unknown owners and lot 7, block G, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 69

6739—Against unknown owners and lot 12, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 51; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs, $2 08

6740—Against unknown owners and lot 9, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6741—Against unknown owners and lot 12, Block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6742—Against unknown owners and lot 13, Block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6746—Against unknown owners and lot 18, Kathleen Tract. State and county tax, $2; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $2 56

6747—Against unknown owners and lot 7, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6748—Against unknown owners and lot 8, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6749—Against unknown owners and lot 18, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6750—Against unknown owners and lot 19, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6751—Against unknown owners and lot 20, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 76

6756—Against unknown owners and south 50 acres of northeast quarter of section 20, township 8, range 7, 50 acres. State and county tax, $22 50; costs, $1 63; total tax and costs, $24 13

6757—Against unknown owners and east quarter of section 19, township 8, range 7, 160 acres. State and county tax, $42; costs, $2 60; total tax and costs, $44 60

And west half of section 20, township 8, range 7, 320 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $91 50; costs, $5 08; total tax and costs, $96 58

6758—Against unknown owners and lot 3, block 5, Isleton. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 45

6760—Against unknown owners and lot 10, block 5, Isleton. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 45

6770—Against unknown owners and lot 4, block 15, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68

6771—Against unknown owners and tract of land bounded north by Lausung, east by Saunders, south by Goldberg, west by Appel, 5 acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs, $8 38

6773—Against unknown owners and tract of land bounded north and west by Sacramento river and Upham, east by Upham, south by Weiman, being fraction of sections 23, 24 and 25, in township 3, range 2, 191 acres. State and county tax, $4 28; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs, $5 00

6776—Against unknown owners and west half of northeast quarter of southeast quarter of section 35, township 8, range 5, 20 acres. State and county tax, $10 50; costs, $1 02; total tax and costs, $11 52

6778—Against unknown owners and lot 3, block 10, Capital Homestead Association. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs, $1 45

GEORGE C. McMULLEN,
Tax Collector.

Massage Treatment.

Massage is called currying in St. Louis society, and a blonde belle who is afraid of getting too fat tells a Republic reporter: "I am curried twice a week by a professional and every night by my maid. Did I take to it kindly at first? Well, I can't say that I did; but my first massager was a woman—and besides, I wear a suit of flannel, simple gymnasium drawers and blouse, and even the stockings, when I go into her hands. When I take a treatment for the beautifying of my skin, I have my maid give the rubbing just after my bath, which I take when I rise, at 9 o'clock. Do I think that many St. Louis ladies take massage treatment for the preservation of beauty? I know that many do; but none of them would like the fact made public. Do you think a woman who has superfluous hair on her face and arms, and removes it by some depilatory treatment would like the fact known? Then why should the woman who keeps to her youthful outlines and drives away wrinkles by the massage process be willing to let the world know it? I assure you even the most charitable women are not so charitable as that. Why, I know and you know and everybody knows by sight a very handsome and intellectual woman of society, who has her face manipulated by a massage doctor every day to keep away the crow's feet and those long lines that curve from the nose around her mouth to her chin. They yawned like a chasm three years ago, but to-day you cannot find a trace of them. Then I know another society leader whose pendulous cheeks hung over her bonnet strings awhile ago. They have been restored to bounds, and nobody knows how, though all note the improvement. But I watched them grow refined by degrees and beautifully less from the day I first saw by chance the massage man going up her front steps." "Then there are men who give massage treatment to ladies?" asked the anxious seeker after beauty-preserving information. "Why not men for massage as well as men surgeons, men physicians? Now, I feel perfectly safe in talking to you about this matter of massage. I don't mind telling you that from overmuch dancing in French slippers I have developed a good sized bunion on each of my feet, which distended my shoes in a very ugly fashion, to say nothing of their aching proclivities. Did I go to the corn doctors? No; I sent for my massage man, and in two weeks every sign of those ugly red swellings had disappeared." There are a number of women who go from house to house and give massage treatment to ladies, one of these manipulators being not only widely known, but exceedingly successful. She formerly was a prominent attendant in one of the most fashionable Turkish bath houses in the city, where she laid the foundation of her now extensive practice (?) by the good "treatment" she administered to the ladies she bathed. She has now her regular list of patrons, to whom she goes on set days at certain hours. Most of her patrons are elderly ladies and invalids, with a good sprinkling of wealthy society women.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA—COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman, doing business under the firm name of Wm. M. Lyon & Co., insolvent debtors.

Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman having filed in this Court their petition, schedule and inventory in insolvency, from which it appears that they are insolvent debtors, the said Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman are hereby declared to be insolvent. The Sheriff of the county of Sacramento is hereby directed to take possession of all the estate, real and personal, of the said insolvent debtors, except such as may be by law exempt from execution, and of all their deeds, vouchers, books of account, and papers, and to keep the same safely until the appointment of an assignee of their estate. All persons are forbidden to pay any debts to the said insolvents or to deliver any property, belonging to such insolvents, to them or to any person, firm, corporation or association, for their use; and the said debtors are hereby forbidden to transfer or deliver any property, until the further order of this Court, except as herein ordered.

It is further ordered, that all the creditors of said debtors be and appear before the Hon. John W. Armstrong, Judge of the Superior Court of the county of Sacramento, in open Court, at the Court-room of said Court, in the city and County of Sacramento, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estate of said debtors.

It is further ordered, that the order be published in the THEMIS, a newspaper of general circulation, published in the city and county of Sacramento, as often as the said paper is published, before the day set for the meeting of creditors.

And it is further ordered, that in the meantime all proceedings against the said insolvents be stayed.

JOHN W. ARMSTRONG,
Judge of the Superior Court.

ED. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Insolvents.
Dated, January 10, 1890. j11-w5

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of A. M. Auburtus, an insolvent debtor.

A. M. Auburtus, an insolvent debtor, having applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, it is hereby ordered that the Clerk of this Court give notice to all creditors who have proved their debts, to appear before this Court, at the Court-room thereof, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at the hour of 1:30 o'clock p. m., and show cause, if any they have, why the said A. M. Auburtus should not be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

It is further ordered, that notice of said application be given to the creditors by mail, and by publication once a week for four weeks, in the THEMIS, a newspaper published in said county.

Dated, January 24, 1890.
W. C. VAN FLEET, Judge.
C. W. BAKER, Attorney for Petitioner. j25w4

Oscar F. Flinch 824 J ST.
Fine Candies
Family Orders for Ice Cream a Specialty.

THE ONLY MAKER OF COLT'S FOOT ROCK COUGH CANDY.

FRUIT AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AND PLANTS.
1,000,000

Trees and Nursery Stock for sale at LOW PRICES, of Best Varieties Deciduous Trees.

Also, ORANGE, LEMON, OLIVE, FIG, AND NUT-BEARING TREES, of most approved varieties.

Nurseries: Near Acampo Station, San Joaquin. Principal Depot: No. 813
Second Street, near Passenger Depot, Sacramento.

Send for Catalogue. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Address: REED & VAN GELDER, Nurserymen, Sacramento, Cal.

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.

General Printers,

410 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Simon Sturmer,

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,
No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

FOR SALE.

STABLE TO LET.

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

B L O C K

B. Ruhl Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and Blank Book Manufacturer.

BETWEEN

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

No. 409 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

YOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K.

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors
and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN,
Formerly of Agricultural Park.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice,

SACRAMENTO.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH

BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER,

1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS
LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER,
BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

CANCERS,
Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exerescences, etc.,
Positively Cured or no Pay.
No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names
of a few of the many cured. By addressing them
they will give any information required—and it pays
to investigate before being treated.

Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

FLASHES.

Most all the classical music is finer than it sounds.

An angry red headed woman, with a poker, is a safe person to avoid.

Lawyers and doctors should be very fond of cats and tigers; they are of the feline.

Why is it that so many of our young ladies affect a swagger in their walk? It certainly does not add grace to the carriage.

When some men are buried in thought, or any other way, it is cruel to resurrect them—cruel to the rest of mankind.

Those who desire beauty—even with these gains, should remember Jove gives beauty—at the expense of brains.

"Here, my good woman, get this prescription made up at the druggist's and give the mixture to your husband. If it helps him let me know, as I suffer from the same complaint."

McNeill Club.

Early in March the McNeill Club will present Fatinilza, at the Metropolitan. The following is the cast:

Lydia	-----	Mrs. Dr. E. A. Brune
Vladimir	-----	Miss Mae Kewan
Nursidah	-----	Miss Gertie Carley
Besika	-----	of Mrs. Geo. Hansbrow
Diona	-----	Miss H. Wheat
Zulieka	-----	Miss A. Kaibel
Captain Vasil	-----	Miss Lizzie Lynn
Lieutenant Ossip	-----	Miss Nettie Young
Dimitri	-----	Miss Mabel Casady
Marshalla	-----	Miss M. A. Pullman
General Kantchukoff	-----	E. B. Carroll
Julian Hardy	-----	H. R. Blair
Izzet Pasha	-----	R. T. Cohn
Hassan Bey	-----	G. R. Hansbrow
Steipau	-----	H. W. Carroll
Mustapha	-----	C. T. Milliken
Vuika	-----	W. E. Lovdal

From these names it is certain that the opera will be well presented. The last operatic effort was a splendid success, which augurs well for the present undertaking.

Sons of Veterans' Camp Fire.

Gov. Leland Stanford Camp Sons of Veterans will have a Camp Fire, at Grangers' Hall, on Tuesday evening, Feb. 11th. There will be a literary and musical programme, followed by a banquet. The occasion is the 81st birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln. A number of Grand Army veterans will participate.

Sisters' Fair.

The Sisters' Fair, at Turner Hall, will conclude to-night. There should be a large attendance and liberal patronage, because of the worthiness of the object. A few dollars or a few dimes contributed by the masses would aggregate a large sum for this great charity. There will be a noon lunch served at the Hall to-day, when all who desire a home-cooked feast can be satisfied to their heart's content, only 25 cents being charged for each. Give the Sisters' Fair a benefit to-day and to-night.

Popular Music at Popular Prices.

Popular music at 10 cents per copy; prices elsewhere range from 35 cents to 75 cents. Catalogues furnished on application. Hammer's music store, No. 820 J street. Sole agency Chickering & Son's pianos.

The Weather.

The weather for the past week has been of the regular California sort; the sun shining beautifully through the thin veil of clouds that occasionally covered the sky. A northerly wind has generally prevailed, and did more in a few days to solve the street question (which has been so monotonously discussed in our daily journals for the past week and more) than has been done by the Improvement Association in their wet, windy, and long-drawn out arguments, that have become tetotally tiresome.

Pearl of Pekin.

Last night The Pearl of Pekin was given to an overflowing house. It is certainly a pleasing little comic opera, and has in the cast some clever artists. Louis Harrison as the "Ty Foo" carries the burden of the mirth provoking comedy, and acquits himself with credit. "Sing High," by John C. Leach, is an ideal Chinaman. Miss Ada Jenoure made a modest and pleasing "Pearl." Gilbert Clayton as "Sosoriki" was a good foil for Harrison. The music was lively and catchy. As a light comic opera, The Pearl of Pekin is a success. The scenery was new and attractive. The costumes rich. There are many sharp and witty things in the dialogue, and Harrison never loses an opportunity to take advantage of situations and passing events. The troubles of travel were made the subject of a number of clever bon mots. To-night The Pearl of Pekin again.

MT. SHASTA.

Giant sentinel! that, oblivious of time, Doth unceasing vigil keep, Where sky and tree tops meet—What memories are thine! Memories of when the world was new, Of startling animate creations, Of curious geological formations, Of continents that rose and sank from view.

Of human progress since it first began To cope with earth, and air, and sea—Until the mystic powers that once held sway, Now harrowed like trained brutes, by man, Are made his lightest behest to obey. And these are but a tithe—grim sentry of the upper land. —W. G. S.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

Judge Armstrong is holding court at Marysville to-day.

Joseph Craig, Prison Director, was a visitor at the capital, yesterday.

Mrs. General Cosby is visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. E. Hall, at San Francisco.

Lee Chamberlain, an attorney from Auburn, has been in the city a few days on legal business.

Ed. D. Taylor and Miss Laura Russell were united in marriage on Wednesday. The young couple will make Sacramento their home.

Mr. J. K. Anderson, President of the Mt. Shasta Mineral Spring Company, is in the city, having recently arrived from the East by the way of the Southern route.

Judge A. J. Buckles, Superior Judge of Solano county, has been holding court for Judge Van Fleet this week. Judge Buckles when he first came to this State located at Sacramento, but after a short stay moved to Solano county, where he has since resided. He is an old soldier, and member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Densou & Oatman, attorneys for the McClatchy Bros., filed a very long answer to the complaint of the California State Bank, in the case against the McClatchys.

The Executive Committee of the Sacramento City and County Improvement Association will meet on Monday evening at 8 o'clock, to discuss local matters and improvements.

There is an unusually large calendar in Judge Armstrong's department for the February term, including some important litigation. The calendar will run down to April 15th, there being forty-six cases to dispose of.

Mrs. Florence Williams will deliver the fourth lecture of her course for the benefit of the Froebel Kindergarten Society, on Monday evening, February 10th, at Castle Hall. The subject is "The French Revolution." The lectures of this lady are of a superior order, instructive and entertaining.

The Supreme Court has just decided a case wherein the validity of the Supreme Court Commission was involved, sustaining the commission. Some months ago a similar question arose in Indiana, where the Court Commission was declared, by the Supreme Court of the State, unconstitutional.

Judge Armstrong, yesterday, in the case of Miller vs. Mayo, held that a street assessment under the Vrooman Act was valid. One of the points made against the assessment was that there had never been any official grade of the street established. The Court held that there was sufficient showing to legalize the assessment.

From this date all music, including all copyrights, will be sold at Cooper's music store to teachers and our customers, at and under Eastern and San Francisco prices. A reduction on all books as well. All we ask for breaking the high prices is your patronage.

WM. H. BRADLEY,
(Successor to Barber & Wise.)

Dealer in Hay, Grain & Mill Feed

N. E. COR. ELEVENTH AND J STS.,

Telephone 266. SACRAMENTO.

KILGORE & CO.

—DEALERS IN—

Oliver Plows and Extras, Studebaker Wagons and Buggies, Hardware, Etc.

Successors to Graugers' C. B. Association.

S. E. Corner Tenth and K Streets,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

NOTICE.

HAVING PURCHASED FROM MESSRS. KILGORE & CO., their interests in the grocery business, and reopened their old stand at the north-west corner of Tenth and K with a full stock of choice groceries, we respectfully request their old patrons to call and get prices before buying elsewhere. Respectfully.

T. H. COOK & CO.

FOR THE COUGHS AND COLDS NOW PREVAILING USE

Hammer's Glycerole of Tar
A Speedy and Effective Cure.

Fourth and K, and all Sacramento Druggists

Fine Table
Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Producers of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

E. FRANKS

ANNOUNCES HIMSELF A CANDIDATE FOR

CHIEF OF POLICE,

Subject to the decision of the DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'S

Sutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

Gattmann & Wilson,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

Fancy and Staple
DRY GOODS

601 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Pacific Optical Institute

D. M. BISHOPP, Proprietor,

Has REMOVED TO 806 J STREET.

D. H. QUINN
HATTER,

401 J Street, corner of Fourth.

HATS MADE TO ORDER. Old Hats Renovated to Equal New.

GARZOLI & GENIS,

FRUIT AND PRODUCE,
BUTTER, CHEESE, EGGS, ETC.

POULTRY, FISH AND OYSTERS,

CALIFORNIA MARKET,

Telephone 183.

712 K Street.

O. W. Nordwell

MERCHANT TAILOR AND DRAPER,

218 Bush St.,

SAN FRANCISCO.

My new invoice includes the very LATEST STYLES and inspection is invited as to quality of GOODS, the FIT, and PRICE.

Short-Hand
ECLECTIC!

The system taught by all the leading Colleges on the Coast, viz: Heald's and the Pacific, of San Francisco; Woodbury's, of Los Angeles; DePue's, of Oakland; Garden City, of San Jose; Stockton College, of Stockton, and

Bainbridge College of Sacramento

Why? Because it can be learned in one-half the time required for the old moss-covered systems.

C. H. Stephenson,

DENTIST,

CORNER SEVENTH AND J STREETS, OVER
LYON'S DRY GOODS STORE.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California, to John A. Steen, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 3d day of December, 1889, in which action Anna M. Steen is plaintiff, and you are defendant.

That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between you and plaintiff, upon the alleged ground of habitual intemperance, and for the care, custody and control of the minor child, Gertrude D. Steen, and for general relief and for costs of suit; all of which more fully appears in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made.

And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said county of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere; and you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 4th day of December, A. D. 1889.

W. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.
By L. P. Scott, Deputy Clerk.
MATT. F. JOHNSON, Attorney for Plaintiff.
Feb 8-89.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of A. M. Auburtus, an insolvent debtor.

A. M. Auburtus, an insolvent debtor, having applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, it is hereby ordered that the Clerk of this Court give notice to all creditors who have proved their debts, to appear before this Court, at the Court-room thereof, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at the hour of 1:30 o'clock p. m., and show cause, if any they have, why the said A. M. Auburtus should not be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

It is further ordered, that notice of said application be given to the creditors by mail, and by publication once a week for four weeks, in the THEMIS, a newspaper published in said county.

Dated, January 21, 1890.
W. C. VAN FLEET, Judge.
C. W. BAKER, Attorney for Petitioner.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA—COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman, doing business under the firm name of Wm. M. Lyon & Co., insolvent debtors.

Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman having filed in this Court their petition, schedule and inventory in insolvency, from which it appears that they are insolvent debtors, the said Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman are hereby declared to be insolvent. The Sheriff of the county of Sacramento is hereby directed to take possession of all the estate, real and personal, of the said insolvent debtors, except such as may be by law exempt from execution, and of all their deeds, vouchers, books of account, and papers, and to keep the same safely until the appointment of an assignee of their estate. All persons are forbidden to pay any debts to the said insolvents or to deliver any property, belonging to such insolvents, to them or to any person, firm, corporation or association, for their use; and the said debtors are hereby forbidden to transfer or deliver any property, until the further order of this Court, except as herein ordered.

It is further ordered, that all the creditors of said debtors be and appear before the Hon. John W. Armstrong, Judge of the Superior Court of the county of Sacramento, in open Court, at the Court-room of said Court, in the city and County of Sacramento, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estate of said debtors.

It is further ordered, that the order be published in the THEMIS, a newspaper of general circulation, published in the city and county of Sacramento, as often as the said paper is published, before the day set for the meeting of creditors.

And it is further ordered, that in the meantime all proceedings against the said insolvents be stayed.

JOHN W. ARMSTRONG,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Insolvents.
Dated, January 10, 1890.

j11-w5

General and Personal.

New York World: A close observer of public men calls Senator Ingalls the Tank Drama of Statesman.

New York World: Senator Hawley practices on the violin every day. Yale should give him the degree of fiddle D. D.

Texas Siftings: Jones (to Smith, whose head is tied up)—"Have you got toboggan any yet?" Smith—"Yes, indeed. I tried to carry a pot plant down into the cellar last Sunday."

Texas Siftings: Editor's Friend—"I see you have a new reporter. Has he had experience?" Editor—"He must have had a great deal. He insisted on getting his week's salary in advance."

Baltimore American: One of the most popular poets earned less than $400 last year, and yet he keeps on writing, while a good baseball player commands $4,000.

A St. Louis woman says whenever she sees a particularly gallant act or finds a man giving up his seat in a car to a female she knows that man is either a Southerner, an actor, an artist or a newspaper man.

Secretary Rusk turns his back upon all the fashionable dissipation of the Capital. He persistently refuses to touch cards, dice or wine.

St. Paul's Eye: Young Bride (pouting)—"Here we have only been married two days, Clarence, and you're scolding me already." Husband—"I know, my dear; but just think how long I've been waiting for the chance!"

England is said to draw $30,000,000 into the treasury from probate and succession laws. These laws exempt estates of less than $500 value.

Springfield Republican: Chicago people ought not to complain of aspersions on their artistic sense when the Inter Ocean heads an account of "The Angelus" with "Hear Dem Bells."

New York Tribune: Appropriately enough, Senator Coffin has introduced a bill in the Massachusetts Legislature requiring cities and towns to furnish public hearses and caskets at reduced rates.

It is proposed to increase the salary of the Governor of Massachusetts from $5,000 to $10,000.

How to Save Doctors' Bills.

Never go to bed with cold or damp feet.

Never lean with the back upon anything that is cold.

Never begin a journey until the breakfast has been eaten.

Never take warm drinks and then immediately go out in the cold.

After exercise of any kind never ride in an open carriage or near the window of a car for a moment; it is dangerous to health or even life.

Never omit regular bathing, for unless the skin is in regular condition, the cold will close the pores and favor congestion or other diseases.

When hoarse, speak as little as possible until the hoarseness is recovered from, else the voice may be permanently lost, or difficulties of the throat be produced.

Merely warm the back by the fire, and never continue keeping the back exposed to the heat after it has become comfortably warm. To do otherwise is debilitating.

Never stand still in cold weather, especially after having taken a slight degree of exercise, and always avoid standing on ice or snow, where the person is exposed to the cold wind.

When going from a warm atmosphere into a cooler one keep the mouth almost closed, so that the air may be warmed by its passage through the nose ere it reaches the lungs.

Keep the back, especially between the shoulder blades, well covered; also the chest well protected. In sleeping in a cold room establish the habit of breathing through the nose, and never with the mouth open.

The Editor's Poem.

A well known editor, who never talks shop unless he has something worth telling, recently told a story at his expense to a party of friends, which was overheard by a reporter.

"Not long ago," he said, "I received a poem from an unknown contributor, who lived in a little western town. The letter accompanying the manuscript was written in that confidential strain which always proves the writer to be an untrained contributor to the press. After praising my paper, and informing me that he had been a reader of it for more years than it had been in existence, he had taken the liberty of sending me a little poem for publication. The honor of appearing in print was all the remuneration he desired; indeed, he was frank enough to state that he did not consider the verses inclosed had any market value. When I examined the poem I found it was one I had written myself many years before, and for which I had received a handsome sum."—New York Sun.

An Indignant Parrot.

A few days ago a lady passenger arriving at this depot asked the porter on the train for her parrot, which he had taken to care for during the trip. She paid him for his trouble, and also for feeding it during the journey. After receiving the bird she asked the porter if he had fed it sufficiently on the road, and he answered yes. The bird had listened patiently up to this, and then made himself heard by saying: "You lie, you—black—; you did not feed me once." The startled and indignant porter then said that the bird was mistaken, and that he had fed it well. The lady then departed with the parrot, looking as though she believed the bird rather than the porter.—El Paso Herald.

A Dress Made of Rattlesnakes.

We promised a description of the "rattlesnake dress" in yesterday's paper for to-day. Mrs. Donaldson, who is making the dress, is really an artist in her line of business, such as you seldom find in a place of this size. The dress is Eiffel shade, a rich shade of brown, fine and beautiful in texture. It is a tailor-made gown, strictly on the severe English style; a perfectly plain skirt, with a panel about seven inches wide of the tanned skin of the rattlesnake. The skin is a beautiful specimen of its kind. A polonaise, also severely plain, closed at the side with straps of the snakeskin and buckles. A vest, V-shape, of the skin, and collars and cuffs of the same. With it will be worn a helmet-shaped hat, trimmed with material to match the dress, but the visor will be covered with snakeskin. The shoes, the uppers made of material the same as the dress and tipped with snakeskin, complete this unique costume. It will be wonderfully pretty and effective and an object of envy to some of our fair dames who delight in original and charming costumes. The lady for whom the costume is made is from Ocala, and came to Tampa especially to secure Mrs. Donaldson's work for her dressmaking.—Tampa News.

Moral Education.

Moral education should certainly commence with the first dawn of reason, and ought to commence with the very first existence of the child. It is painful to see the destinies of an immortal soul committed to a young girl but a few months a wife, after a thoughtless marriage, the result of a thoughtless education, says the Sacred Heart Review. You can train a child's moral faculties almost from its cradle. Gentle deeds will teach it gentleness. Gentle ways will teach it courtesy. Gentle looks will calm its little storms of anger, and when it passes to the keener perception the duty of the mother is supreme. Let her not dare to delegate it to another. Let her act as if she were a responsible being to whom the charge of responsible beings has been given. If this mother's moral character has not been well cultivated, let her begin to cultivate it now. It is her most sacred duty, it is her most solemn obligation. She cannot act as preceptor to this immortal being unless she has learned to know and to value her own immortality, unless she is fully aware of her responsibility.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J, SACRAMENTO,

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

TUFTS'

Yerbine COUGH Balsam

WILL

CURE YOUR COUGH, COLD, OR INFLUENZA, sure, or money refunded.

A. C. Tufts, Druggist, 10th and J Sts.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

San Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street,

Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

Gas and Steam Fitter.

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET,

Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SOOR MASH BOURBON WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagele & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGELE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth
Repairing Neatly Done.
Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,

SACRAMENTO.

Twelve Million Machines

IN USE.

THE LIGHT RUNNING

DOMESTIC

Sewing Machine

Leads all others. Most Durable, Simplest, Best.

Every Agent claims the machines he sells the best, but talk is cheap. TIME is the only real test of genuine merit. During TWENTY-SIX YEARS of practical use the DOMESTIC has withstood this test. It stands to-day without a peer. Recommended by all White Goods Sewers, Dressmakers, Tailors and Manufacturers. Used by over 4,000 Families in Sacramento City. It is the only Sewing Machine with really Self-Setting Attachments. It costs you nothing to try it before you buy another. Sold on easy installments. Old machines taken in exchange.

Domestic Sewing Machine Co.

A. J. POMMER, Selling Agent,

Northwest corner Ninth and J streets, Sacramento.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured

HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE,

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN, Formerly of Agricultural Park.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice,

SACRAMENTO.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH

BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank.

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSENER, BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

824 J ST.

Fine Candies

Family Orders for Ice Cream a Specialty.

THE ONLY MAKER OF COLT'S FOOT ROCK COUGH CANDY.

FRUIT AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AND PLANTS.

1,000,000

Trees and Nursery Stock for sale at LOW PRICES, of Best Varieties Deciduous Trees.

Also, ORANGE, LEMON, OLIVE, FIG, AND NUT-BEARING TREES, of most approved varieties.

Nurseries: Near Acampo Station, San Joaquin. Principal Depot: No. 813 Second Street, near Passenger Depot, Sacramento.

Send for Catalogue. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Address: REED & VAN GELDER, Nurserymen, Sacramento, Cal.

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.

General Printers,

410 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Simon Sturmer,

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,
No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

STABLE TO LET

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and Blank Book Manufacturer.Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

SECOND HAND

"REMINGTON" TYPE WRITERS

FOR RENT AND FOR SALE.

Type Writers' Supplies of All Kinds.

AT THE

VOST AGENCY, 1007 FOURTH STREET.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR
only. Linen polished in the neatest manner.
We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing
called for and delivered to any part of the city.
Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J
street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE
Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also,
Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night.
EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Excesses, etc.,
Positively Cured or no Pay.
No Knife Used.As to the success of my treatment, I give the names
of a few of the many cured. By addressing them
they will give any information required—and it pays
to investigate before being treated.

Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.

John Service, Auburn, lupus.

Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.

Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.

N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.

J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.

John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.

Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.

Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.

I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.

Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

Why Many a Girl Stays Single.

The reason, then, why many a girl does not marry is because she is seldom conscious of meeting her equal, and if she ever does meet him, he rarely, if ever, gives her the opportunity of knowing him well, because she considers it necessary to conceal as much as possible any common sense she may happen to have, and consequently he says she is frivolous. In the present state of society I cannot see any remedy for the sad condition of the young men and women who cannot find their affinities unless everything were turned upside down and we all started anew, allowing women more freedom, and not being so ready to accuse them of being "forward or unwomanly."—Helen Lee, in New York Press.

Bargains in London.

All the large shops in London are selling off, and we have already secured the most delicious "bargains." To do this, one must be early in the field, and must know exactly what one wants. These are two necessary conditions. If you want to dress on half your allowance for the rest of the year, come up town for the cheap sales; but come soon, for the best things will have been "snapped up." You don't believe in bargains, I know. Neither did I till of late years, when, with Lilla as my guide and teacher, I learned how to discriminate between the true and false cheap sales. Think of the joy of obtaining for five guineas a dress worth ten; a coat at £7 that has been marked down from £18, and a tea-gown for three guineas that was originally six, but is reduced to "make a clearance." I have experienced those three pleasures this week, and hope to accomplish some more in the same line during the next few days. Mabel came up to town on purpose to go to Redfern's sale. She has been saving up to buy a gown, coat and hat, and is now happy in the possession of all three at an extremely trifling outlay.—Madge, in London Truth.

Massage Treatment.

Massage is called currying in St. Louis society, and a blonde belle who is afraid of getting too fat tells a Republic reporter: "I am curried twice a week by a professional and every night by my maid. Did I take to it kindly at first? Well, I can't say that I did; but my first massager was a woman—and besides, I wear a suit of flannel, simple gymnasium drawers and blouse, and even the stockings, when I go into her hands. When I take a treatment for the beautifying of my skin, I have my maid give the rubbing just after my bath, which I take when I rise, at 9 o'clock. Do I think that many St. Louis ladies take massage treatment for the preservation of beauty? I know that many do; but none of them would like the fact made public. Do you think a woman who has superfluous hair on her face and arms, and removes it by some depilatory treatment would like the fact known? Then why should the woman who keeps to her youthful outlines and drives away wrinkles by the massage process be willing to let the world know it? I assure you even the most charitable women are not so charitable as that. Why, I know and you know and everybody knows by sight a very handsome and intellectual woman of society, who has her face manipulated by a massage doctor every day to keep away the crow's feet and those long lines that curve from the nose around her mouth to her chin. They yawned like a chasm three years ago, but to-day you cannot find a trace of them. Then I know another society leader whose pendulous cheeks hung over her bonnet strings awhile ago. They have been restored to bounds, and nobody knows how, though all note the improvement. But I watched them grow refined by degrees and beautifully less from the day I first saw by chance the massage man going up her front steps." "Then there are men who give massage treatment to ladies?" asked the anxious seeker after beauty-preserving information. "Why not men for massage as well as men surgeons, men physicians? Now, I feel perfectly safe in talking to you about this matter of massage. I don't mind telling you that from overmuch dancing in French slippers I have developed a good sized bunion on each of my feet, which distended my shoes in a very ugly fashion, to say nothing of their aching proclivities. Did I go to the corn doctors? No; I sent for my massage man, and in two weeks every sign of those ugly red swellings had disappeared." There are a number of women who go from house to house and give massage treatment to ladies, one of these manipulators being not only widely known, but exceedingly successful. She formerly was a prominent attendant in one of the most fashionable Turkish bath houses in the city, where she laid the foundation of her now extensive practice (?) by the good "treatment" she administered to the ladies she bathed. She has now her regular list of patrons, to whom she goes on set days at certain hours. Most of her patrons are elderly ladies and invalids, with a good sprinkling of wealthy society women.

FOR SALE.

BLOCK

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

Hindoo Magicians.

The last issue of the Journal of the Anthropological Society, of Bombay, contains a curious paper by Mr. Rehatsek, on twenty of the branches of eastern magic, all of which are in vogue at the present time. The first of these is the "Arcana of letters and of names," by which letters and figures are combined into magic squares, incantations, etc. These derive their power from the "arbitrary use of them made by the spirits governing the natural world, in such a way that the ninety-nine beautiful names of God, and other divine words, formed of letters containing the Arcana, which pass into material substances, intercede." The magician, of course, is the sole interpreter of the uses and significances of the combinations. Alchemy comes next, and is followed by astrology, the most popular of all the Eastern occult sciences. It is practiced on all occasions, to discover thefts, to foretell the result of a journey, the future of an infant, etc. Another popular practice is soothsaying from the sacred books, by opening one at random and placing the finger on a line. This is almost the only one of the sciences which costs nothing, and which every one can practice.

The selection of days is a subordinate branch of astrology, and is employed to ascertain what days are lucky or unlucky for the commencement of certain enterprises, the wearing of new clothes, and the like. Divination and the interpretation of dreams are common everywhere. Summoning and subjugating demons is the most fearful of the magical sciences. There are two kinds—one dangerous, and embracing unlawful magic, the other religious, and consisting mainly in confining demons in flame, so that they are compelled to obey the commands of the magician. Geomancy is practiced by means of dots made with a pencil, and arranged in complicated combinations so that they answer questions.

The art of invisibility appears to be only known by name to Mr. Rehatsek, for he does not describe it. Jeft is a science which is known only to one family. It is defined as "the general science concerning the tables of the eternal decree and of predestination," and enables adepts to know all that has happened, is happening, or will happen in the most remote future. Palmistry, phylacteries, physiognomies, and prayers explain themselves. Phantasms is the name given to the art of producing images in the air by incantations, aided usually by drugs and fumigations; while predicting from the past is exercised by studying the occult analogies between the past and future. Sorcery is the term applied to all the phenomena produced by magicians, and popularly attributed to supernatural powers. It is divided into lawful or divine, and satanic or black magic, the latter owing its power to evil spirits. The last of the magical sciences is soothsaying from trembling, by which the future is known from the involuntary movements of the body, a particular star controlling each particular part of the human frame.

Lavenson's

THE LARGEST AND MOST RELIABLE HOUSE IN SACRAMENTO.

R. DAVIS,
NOTARY PUBLIC,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh,
Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

H. A. PETRALI,
DEALER IN
Stoves, Metals and Tinware
716 K STREET.
PLUMBING, GASFITTING, AND ROOFING.
Jobbing a Specialty.

H. WACHHORST Leading Jeweler of Sacramento
SIGN OF THE TOWN CLOCK,
No. 315 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

TO BE HAD ONLY AT

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihan's

418 J Street.

MAGGI'S HOT BOUILLON!

Just Out: Maroon Marmalade

Willis & Ray APOTHECARIES
212 J ST. and 901 K ST.
Two Stores, Sacramento, Cal.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR ⁿ COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

Joe Poheim the TAILOR

HAS NOW A

GENUINE CLEARANCE SALE.

Suits Made to Order from $20.

Pants Made to Order from $5.

Other Garments in Proportion.

This Sale is to CONTINUE FOR SIXTY DAYS ONLY. ~~NO~~ PERFECT FIT AND BEST OF WORKMANSHIP GUARANTEED, OR NO SALE.

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

Klune & Floberg, WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS
Agents for Rockford Watch Co.
NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON,

The \ddagger Leading \ddagger Merchant \ddagger Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, : : : Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501--507 K, cor. Fifth
FURNITURE and BEDDING.

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.
Southern Pacific Company
PACIFIC SYSTEM.
Nov. 17, 1889.

Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at
SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.25 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3.40 A
7.05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6.45 P
7.25 P	Knights Landing	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6.25 P
12-01 A	{ Central Atlantic Express } Ogden and East	6.00 A
3-00 P	Oroville	10-30 A
3-00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10-30 A
10.40 A	Redding via Willows	4.00 P
6.15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7.25 P
6-50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8.35 P
3-05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11.40 A
4-00 A	San Francisco via Steamer	10-40 P
*10.00 A	San Francisco via Livermore	26.00 A
6.50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	2.25 P
11.25 A	San Jose	11.40 P
7.05 P	Santa Barbara	9.55 A
6.50 A	Santa Rosa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Santa Rosa	7.25 P
9.00 A	Stockton and Galt	6.45 P
7.05 P	Stockton and Galt	9.55 A
8.00 P	Truckee and Reno	6.25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno	6.00 A
12.05 P	Colfax	10.20 A
6.50 A	Vallejo	11.40 A
3.05 P	Vallejo	18.35 P
*12.15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10.25 A
*7.15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2.40 P
*5.20 P	Folsom	*6.50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning, P for afternoon.
A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities
of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED'K COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento
that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers

and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY.

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

THEMIS

Vol. I.

SACRAMENTO: SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1890.

No. 52.

THEMIS: published weekly, by A. J. Johnston & Co. Publication Office, 410 J Street. Subscription—One year, by mail, $3 00; six months, by mail, $1 50, in advance; per month, by carrier, 25 cents. (Entered at the Post Office at Sacramento as second-class matter.)

WINFIELD J. DAVIS AND W. A. ANDERSON, Editors.
A. J. JOHNSTON, Managing Editor.

A writer in the North American Review for February, discusses the question of suicide, with a view of disclosing that it is in no wise a sin or transgression of any divine law. The Mosaic records and New Testament disclose only eight instances of suicide. The historian, Strabo, tells us that in a certain island called Ioulis, persons sixty years old were permitted to end their own existence, because at that age they were unfit for public service. An Athenian was deemed culpable if he committed self destruction, because he owed a duty to the public. As a punishment for such an act, his hand was buried separately from his body. Socrates always maintained that it was not lawful for any one to deprive himself of life, because we are placed here as soldiers at our posts. Yet, history records that Socrates drank the hemlock from his own hands. The Greeks were not given to self destruction, because it was an evidence of moral cowardice. We find Roman annals bloody with self slaughter. Plutarch praised Demosthenes for hiding poison, whereby he could free himself from the cruelty of Antipater. Suicide became fashionable among Roman women. Cicero and Brutus condemned suicide. While Brutus censured Cato for falling upon his own sword, afterward did the same thing himself. In ancient France, the Senate kept poison for those who wished to kill themselves. In India the widows burn themselves on the funeral pile. Among the Chinese suicide is common; and has the example from an emperor, who stabbed himself after ascending the funeral pile. The hari-kari of Japan has, under modern influences, fallen into disuse. There is not, from Genesis to Revelations, a single commandment against self destruction. The first official proclamation against suicide was issued by the Council of Braga, in the year 563. It was the custom to bury the suicide at a road crossing, with a stake driven through the body. The writer finally concludes: "Finally, suicide, though not a sin, is a weakness and a folly. It is more manly to endure the burdens and responsibilities of life than to desert our station in panic fright at, perhaps, the very crisis of victory. A man may be vexed with cares, fretted by adversities, and despondent in grief. But who is free from such trials? He must bravely sustain them, and he will find his strength confirmed by the discipline. Have faith in a God, loving, omnipotent, and wise. 'Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed.'"

Eugene J. Gregory has occupied the position of Mayor of this city during the most critical times. His financial and executive abilities have been put to the severest tests, and we are in a position, from our knowledge of municipal affairs, to say that he has proved himself equal to emergencies, even though at times badly handicapped by theorists and impractical advisers. To his judicious management of that incubus—the city debt—the city has been absolved from hundreds of thousands of dollars liabilities. He has, with the weak machinery at his command under the old charter, carried on the government of the municipality in the most economical manner, and his whole object and aim has been for the benefit of our people. The only obstacles that have been thrown in the way have been against his advice and earnest opposition, he being a minority in the local legislature. Every move and step taken by Eugene J. Gregory in our local self-government has been in the interest of the public; nothing of a selfish nature has ever actuated him in the affairs of the city. The experience and knowledge of municipal matters acquired within his term of office has better fitted him for another term. It is very difficult to acquire a full knowledge of our wants and necessities in one term, but Mayor Gregory has accomplished very much during his administration, and is now in a position to render lasting service to the people in carrying out the line of action laid out. Feeling and knowing that Mayor Gregory has the interests of the city at heart, and that he is honest and capable, we strongly urge upon the citizens to see to it that he is retained as the chief executive of our city another term, and until he consummates the splendid work he has thus far so successfully carried on. We hear some petty grievances urged by disappointed persons against Mayor Gregory, but such opposition is harmless and beneath the high-minded and enterprising citizen. It is not a personal matter, but one that affects the whole body politic. The best interests of the public will be served in the retention of Eugene J. Gregory as Mayor. It would be a just tribute to a faithful and able public servant.

The frequency of cases of homicide in this State, and particularly in San Francisco, has again aroused a considerable degree of public indignation. The Chief of Police of San Francisco has called for more severe legislation against the carrying of concealed weapons, and the Governor has announced that he will recommend in his message to the Legislature that a law be passed making the carrying of concealed weapons a felony. The fact is, we have about sufficient penal laws and ordinances now upon the subject; the trouble is they are not enforced. It does no good to enact rigorous laws on any subject; their very severity defeats their enforcement—at least that proposition is borne out by the history of the past. At one time in the history of this State the attention of the Legislature was summarily called to the question of legislation upon this subject. One of the members when going to his rooms from the Capitol, at a late hour in the night, was stopped and robbed at the point of a pistol. The next day the gentleman introduced a bill to repeal the act prohibiting the carrying of such concealed death-dealing instruments. The repealing bill was rushed through, and on February 14, 1870, was approved by the Governor. Ordinance No. 84 of this city makes it unlawful for any person, not being a public officer or traveler or having a permit from the Police Commissioners, to wear or carry concealed any pistol, dirk or other dangerous or deadly weapon, and a violation of the ordinance is punishable by a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment not exceeding ten days, or both. Then it is provided that the Police Commissioners may grant written permission to any peaceable person whose profession or occupation may require him to be out at late hours of the night to carry concealed deadly weapons for his protection. This ordinance, however, and the laws on the subject are not pretended to be enforced. The argument is made, and with considerable force, that stringent laws against the carrying of concealed weapons will be observed by the better element and disregarded by the criminal class.

While, as we have intimated, it will be useless to pass a law such as is suggested by the Governor, yet there is no question that much good would result and many lives saved were salutary safeguards thrown about the ownership and sale of pistols and knives; particularly should such regulations exist in municipalities. It should be that no person should be permitted to purchase a pistol except by express permission of the police authorities. As it is now any man, woman or child, who feels so disposed, can purchase a deadly weapon, and the recklessness with which these sales have been made and the tragic results which have followed would seem to admonish the authorities to adopt some measures of restraint. In this city alone it has been the direct cause of filling perhaps a dozen graves a year, and sending an equal number of persons to the penitentiary. Writing from the standpoint of an officer of the Courts of the county, we say that of the cases of homicide and murderous assaults that have been tried or examined in our Courts in the last decade in not one in ten was the defendant justified in the commission of the act.

We had an example of that within the past few days. A shallow-pated waiter fell in love with a young lady. From the evidence adduced it is quite clear she at first treated his attentions as a jest. He became more persistent, and the matter became one of annoyance to her. She arranged to have him chastised by a young gentleman friend. An appointment was made to meet at the Plaza after nightfall. The lover fearing trouble, borrowed a pistol on the way up, and when attacked by the woman's friend shot him through the head. The case was well characterized as "unfortunate;" it truly was to all parties concerned, though all were to blame. It is of course evident that if Chalman had not secured the loan of a pistol the affair would have resulted in a case of battery; his hands would not have been stained with blood, and the community would not have lost a promising member. It is unnecessary to deal with the question whether the defendant in that case was justified for his act at the Plaza under the circumstances immediately surrounding. While we are not disposed to relieve him from responsibility in meeting an engagement in which he so seriously apprehended trouble that he felt constrained to doubly arm himself, yet we must say the affair is an unenviable commentary upon the enforcement of laws and ordinances in Sacramento city. In almost all cases of homicide it develops that the death-dealing instrument was procured immediately before the killing and in anticipation of the trouble.

The Trustees of the city have the constitutional right to make and enforce such local, police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws, and we doubt not their power to further regulate the sale and carrying of concealed weapons. Such an ordinance would meet with public approval and its effect for good cannot be questioned. So loosely is the sale of pistols conducted that but a few years ago a girl bought one on credit, and a few hours afterward used it with deadly effect on a young man in the Plaza. No reasoning citizen will contend that in such a case she should have been permitted to possess the weapon, for it could have been safely inferred harm would follow. We regulate the sale of poisons, and in a measure the dispensation of intoxicants, and it would seem that some further legal restraint should be placed over the weapons that add so materially in populating the cemeteries.

Of all the cities of this good land of ours, it is quite doubtful if another of the same population as this, our capital, can be found that is so devoid of animation and ambition among its young people. In most of towns of a few hundred inhabitants, there can be found lyceums, debating clubs, literary societies, reading associations, and other confraternities for the improvement of the members and the cultivation of their mental faculties, thereby fitting them for intelligent association. And such societies are capable of great and lasting good. It is through their medium that a taste for reading is engendered—reading standard authors and not the trash of the present day; a love of art and a desire for closer association with the learned of all ages is begotten; the power of proper and intelligent conversation, that greatest and most important and attractive of all private attainments, is educated and fostered. And what a lamentable lack of that accomplishment is noticeable among our young ladies and gentlemen of the present generation. Yea, among the older ones as well. How few of either sex can sit in a mixed company and entertain or instruct by their conversational powers. It is a gift that is a species of eloquence adorning the possessor, while charming and instructing the listener. Nor can it be truthfully asserted that, like poets, the successful conversationalist is born and not educated to it. It is not so. Your genuine good talker attains his accomplishment by diligence; by reading standard authors; by an interchange of opinions with others; by a proper and guarded discussion with educated people of just such subjects—matters as present themselves for criticism in the local lyceum or literary club rooms. It is a rare treat to sit in the company of ladies and gentlemen who can raise above the level of the chit-chat of the hour on prize fights, baseball, the new figure in the dance, a novel plan for a fashionable hat, or Mrs. Grundy's most recent conquest, or the back door gossip of one's neighbor, and take a flight of fancy to the more instructive realms of sensible talk. In consequence the social fabric suffers. The young grow up in that condition of illiteracy, and the children of coming ages must follow the example set. Our youth should apply themselves more closely to proper study and an advancement of their intellect. A great aid to this would be found in literary societies.

The city has on its hands, not a white elephant, but a genuine bog-hole at Seventh and K streets, and it is as hard to get rid of as would be such an unwieldy beast as an elephant. Indeed, we could devise a way of annihilating the thick-skinned beast, trunk and all, by ordering out a pack of artillery. But this abomination of a hole could not be extinguished even by the fire department. What is to be done with it? With its customary enterprise, will Sacramento remain inert till the summer solstice will have glazed the surface of the standing pool with a dazzling emerald recreation, around whose rims will nightly assemble the batrachian family to lull to slumber by their soft, sweet chantings the occupants of the two neighboring hotels, and from whose depths will float in the circumambient air the delicious ozone of Araby the blest? Or will our city dads at once beseech Tom Clunie and Joe McKenna to get the Secretary of the Interior to put into circulation some of the appropriation already made, and have the Federal lot officially filled and graded and thus obliterate the eye-sore, and render the spot at least passable? It is not at all essential to wait till another spool of red tape be unrolled to have the filling done, although that, of course, will be required before the building is begun. But let our authorities see that the incipient plague-spot is immediately abated. Supposing that at their meeting next Monday the Trustees pass a resolution urgently requesting the California delegation to take steps to have the lot filled by order of the Interior Department; but then perhaps some one of the members unprepared to act will ask for a continuance, as is usually the method when any important measure comes before the Board. And thus Sacramento suffers.

A Memory of the Past.

The names of great men live after them. Any one who mounts the staircase of a certain Dearborn street office building may see near the foot of the stairs a rusty little tin sign tacked to the wall, says the Chicago Herald. This little sign measures about 12x3 inches, and all it bears is "M. W. Fuller" in letters which were once gilt, but which are now nearly effaced by time. Near the top of the stairs is its duplicate, and on the door of a lawyer's office near the end of an upper hall appears the same name. It is the name of the man who is now the Chief Justice of the United States. His office used to be in this building, and no one has ever disturbed his signs. The sign of an ordinary man who moved or absconded or died would have been quickly effaced, but the Chief Justice's old neighbors are evidently proud of his name, and will allow it to stand until time wipes it out.

One Woman's Way.

"It's no use; I've worn all the cast-off clothes I'm going to."

There was no sign of irritation or ill nature in the girl's bright face as she made this assertion. She sat in the center of a heap of discarded finery. There were frayed and spotted velvet skirts, satin and silk waists, strained out and threadbare in almost every seam, flounced and bedraggled gros grain and nuns' veilings, crumpled ribbons and torn laces.

"What do you propose to wear?"

Florence Annable's only companion on this occasion was her married sister, Mrs. Paul Grenman, in whose pretty ears sparkled valuable solitaires, and whose fingers were crowded with costly jewels. Mrs. Grenman's tone was cold, and the smile on her faultless lips was almost a sneer.

"I don't mean anything unkind, Julia," Miss Annable replied, "but the truth is, I am not comfortable in second-hand clothing."

"Blanche would be edified at your remarks, Florence," said Mrs. Grenman. "It was no easy task to get these things together," she added with increased hauteur. "You know very well that my maid expects every garment I discard, and so does Blanche's."

Notwithstanding her protest, the young lady had selected the least injured of the velvet skirts, and had begun to rip off the braid. But she threw down her scissors now and stepped out of the debris.

"That settles it, Julia," she said, with shining eyes, but with no other indication of excitement; "I will sort those 'rags, jags, and velvet gowns,' into bundles, and you and Blanche need not disappoint your maids."

"What stupidity, Florence!" Mrs. Grenman hastened to say. "You know that we want you to have our things. You have made lovely costumes many times out of poorer material than is there."

The lady's tone was a little more conciliatory. She evidently had some reason for not wishing her sister to carry out her threat.

"These things are much more suitable for your maid than for your sister, Julia," Miss Annable replied, as she set about her task.

"Perhaps you think that your sister should keep you supplied with new clothes," said Mrs. Grenman.

"No, I do not; but I will tell you what I do think," Miss Annable responded, with heightened color, but in cool, firm tones. "I think that you and Blanche ought to be willing that I should earn my wardrobe."

"Earn it?" said Mrs. Grenman, disdainfully. "What new and abominable crochet have you got into your head now? Something to disgrace us all, I suppose."

"If you and Blanche would pay me in hard cash, as you would be compelled to pay a professional, for playing a piano at your luncheon parties and your kettle-drums, your receptions, and your informal evening gatherings, I could buy my own clothes, and be much better satisfied."

Mrs. Grenman's astonishment and indignation were overwhelming.

"Who ever thought that one of our family could be so coarse and mercenary? Pay one's own sister for playing a few sonatas and quadrilles once in a while! Why don't you ask us to pay you for condescending to attend our kettle-drums and recitations? Indeed, Florence, if I must say it, I think you have been generously compensated for everything you have ever done for either of us," and Mrs. Grenman waved a jeweled hand towards the bundles in the center of the room.

"Julia, I will find out what a professional pianist will charge for playing the piano the same number of hours that I do," Miss Annable began again calmly; "then, not being a professional, I will play for you and Blanche for just half that amount."

Mrs. Grenman rose, picked off a few bits of the thread from her handsome silk dress—she had been darning a tiny bit of lace—and proceeded to array herself for the street.

The room in which this conversation took place was the fourth story back of a so-called fashionable boarding house, and this was Florence Annable's home. Her father and mother were both dead, the former having survived the wreck of a large fortune but a few weeks. When the estate was settled, it was found that there would be enough money to provide Florence, the only unmarried daughter, with the necessities of life. In other words, it would pay her board. So, for two years or more, she had been dependent upon her wealthy sisters for her wardrobe. It was a disagreeable position for a sensitive and high-minded girl, and it had come at last to be unendurable.

"Florence."

Mrs. Grenman was ready to go.

"Well," said her companion.

"I shall repeat this conversation to Paul. I tell you that you may be prepared to meet the consequences."

"I am prepared for anything but 'rags and jags,'" Julia," her sister replied; "and I beg you to believe that I should not have remade your cast-off garments so long if it had not been for keeping the peace. Let me tell you what else I am willing to do. You say that some of the costumes I have made from the dresses you have finished wearing have been very pretty and stylish. I will hold myself ready to make over the best of them for you to wear again, and I will do it in my best manner."

"And be paid for it?"

"Certainly; like any other dressmaker."

"If you were not a perfect simpleton you would marry Luke Harkness," Mrs. Grenman burst out anew. "Then you would have an establishment equal to your sisters', and there wouldn't be such a horrible inequality in your station as now."

"I marry Luke Harkness?" said Miss Annable, with the first touch of haughtiness she had shown. "A man old enough to be my grandfather, as deaf as a post, and as bald as an ancient American eagle. I would go out as a cook or housemaid first. Yes, Julia, if the choice were given to me of marrying that man or digging my own grave, with the understanding that I was to jump into it when it was completed, I would choose the latter alternative with gratitude."

"And you wish me to understand that you will not play for one of my parties again unless you are paid for it?"

Mrs. Grenman's hand was on the knob of the door as she asked this question.

"I wish you to understand that I do not regard your old velvet and silk gowns as a fair equivalent for my services as chief musician," said Miss Annable; "and, also, that I not only believe with the Bible, that 'the laborer is worthy of his hire,' but that labor is eminently respectable."

The parting guest's twist of the door knob was nothing less than vicious. Florence, who knew her sister perfectly, understood that the breach between them now would be hard to bridge. Work was a degradation in the opinion of her only near relatives. But it was not so for her. There were two ways in which she knew she could earn a generous support. One was by her musical talent, and the other by her taste and ability in designing costumes.

"It is wicked to keep you at the piano, Miss Annable, when we all know you are so fond of dancing, but no one plays as you do," her friends were constantly saying.

Now, why, she asked herself, with this available talent in her possession, should she not earn some money, and in a business-like and "open and above board" manner, as men earned it? Miss Annable was unable to see why she should be idle and wear her sister's cast-off clothes any more than the man who had a room across the corridor should be idle and wear his rich brother's 'rags and jags.' This question of the utilization of talent had been logically met and settled a good while before, but the hindrances in the way of putting her theories into practice had been hard to overcome. Her sisters had aimed high, and brought down their game. It was no more than fair that she should do the same, her relatives had frequently told her, instead of occupying the fourth story back in a crowded boarding house, and making them a world of trouble in explaining and excusing her anomalous position. Their frequent assertions that sister Florence was peculiar, and could not be induced to make a home with either of her relatives, were in the main true. Miss Annable could have made herself useful in either of these establishments, but her liberty was far too precious to jeopardize by any such arrangement. Here in the sky parlor, certain hours of each day were her own, her very own.

A few hours later Miss Annable was driving in the park with some friends. She passed both of her sisters, and their recognition, though calculated to deceive her companions, was well understood by her. Julia had communicated with Blanche and they had both shown their displeasure in as marked a manner as les convenances would permit. This recalcitrant member of their aristocratic family was to be brought to terms. Florence Annable smiled as she thought of it.

Clark Durivage rode along by the side of the landau and chatted with the young ladies. For the first time since Florence had decided not to wear any more "cast offs," her courage failed her. She felt it to be humiliating truth that she cared more for this man's good opinion than for anything else in the world; to think that she was quite independent of remark of criticism from any other quarter, but not from him, filled her with confusion and alarm. Mr. Durivage had been the only man she had met in society who had talked to her as if she was possessed of an equal intelligence.

Miss Annable canvassed the subject very thoroughly in these few minutes. Her scorn of her own weakness, as shown by the presence of this man, acted like a spur to her conscience.

"The die is cast," she told herself, as Mr. Durivage bade her good evening. "I will not wear jags, so must play jigs."

The young lady did not estimate her musical talent at its true value. It was almost a case of genius. She could play the works of the most favored composers, and with a power and expression which delighted the most critical. And so it came to pass that Miss Florence Annable was engaged at regular professional prices to play for a party at the house of the wealthy and distinguished Mrs. Van Cortlandt. Her sisters were both present, but neither of them came near her during the evening, and, in this way, the world found out there had been a quarrel.

"Good evening, Miss Florence."

"Good evening, Mr. Durivage."

"It is rather singular there is no one here to play but you," the gentleman remarked. "I have been waiting a half hour to invite you to dance."

"It is not in the least singular, Mr. Durivage," said the musician, smiling heroically, "for I am regularly employed to play for Mrs. Van Cortlandt's guests this evening."

The plunge was made, the worst was over, and Florence felt she could look herself squarely in the face when the evening was over.

"And you—you have struck out in this way for yourself?"

There was a strange quality in the gentleman's voice that his companion did not understand.

"Struck out?" Miss Annable laughingly answered.

"That is a good phrase. It requires muscle, I assure you."

"But your sisters, Miss Florence?"

"They are here. You must have seen them. The next piece is a quadrille, Mr. Durivage. Please listen to it critically. It is my own composition."

The music was a success. The applause and excitement which followed its conclusion amounted to an ovation. Mr. Durivage drew near the piano and read the title.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said in loud, clear tones, "the name of the original quadrille which has so delighted us is 'Rags and Jags and Velvet Gowns.'"

There came a time when Florence Annable could tell her friend, Mr. Durivage, the whole story, and the following is the substance of his reply: "I determined," he said, "to woo and win you, that night at Mrs. Van Cortlandt's. I had cared for you from the first day of our acquaintance, but how could I help fearing you might be like your sisters—ultra-fashionable, purse-proud, regardful only of appearance?"

"What kind of helpmeets would your sisters make if misfortune should overtake their husbands? And then, Florence, I have always maintained that it was just as reprehensible for a woman to be idle and dependent as for a man. As my wife, there will be no need for you to continue your career, but your talent must never be neglected, and for two reasons—first, because it will be our greatest source of enjoyment; and next, because every woman should always hold in her hands the means of support."

The Stage.

[Under this caption will appear a fair and impartial criticism of the drama, actors, music, and all noteworthy matters pertaining to the stage.]

Mr. Frederick Warde intends to form a company for the production of Shakespeare's historical play of Henry VIII. Mrs. D. P. Bowers will play "Queen Katharine."

One night last week, says the Chicago Herald, while E. H. Sothern was hopping about the stage in the second act of Lord Chumley, singing out: "Where's my other slipper?" he accidentally kicked off the one slipper he had on. He tried hard to find it at the time but failed. A thorough search of the stage after the act was finished, proved likewise in vain. The following afternoon the comedian's mail included a small parcel, which, upon being opened, was found to contain the missing slipper. Upon the inside of its sole was fastened a piece of paper, and on it was written, in a delicate feminine hand, the words: "Here's your slipper." There was no hint or suggestion as to where it came from, or how the unknown person sending it had obtained it.

Mlle Rhea's romantic and historical drama, Josephine, the Empress of the French, will shortly be seen in San Francisco; and prominent in the efficient cast is pretty Ida Van Sielen, who has made a decided hit in the role of "Pauline Bonaparte." The young Californienne's performance has received the most unqualified praise from the eastern critics, and her dresses are fully up to the standard of magnificent costuming which Mlle Rhea herself has established. The great actress, whose impersonation of "Josephine" is regarded as an artistic creation, has, in Miss Van Sielen, an excellent associate as "Pauline." A Californian, who witnessed Miss Van Sielen's performance at Richmond, Virginia, writes that he was speechless with astonishment at the remarkable advancement which the clever little actress has made, and that next to Rhea, she is the chief attraction in the company, her beauty and talent having established her as a great favorite. Mlle Rhea and her new play will be seen in San Francisco during next May.—S. F. Music and Drama.

A severe but well-merited rebuke was administered not long ago, says the New York Evening Sun's Woman-About-Town, to a society girl, by a young man who has the courage of a very creditable conviction upon a certain common lack of the nicest courtesy among young women who are really very well bred, and who would not offend for the world if they stopped to think. He told the story himself, as follows: "During one of my busiest weeks, I invited a young woman to go with me to the theater on a certain first night. When the evening came, I reached her home shortly before eight o'clock. I waited in the reception for some time, then the mamma appeared. We chatted for a quarter of an hour longer; still, no signs of the young woman. I looked at my watch; it was just time for the curtain to rise at the theater. I particularly wanted to see the opening of the play. Then I rose and took one of my checks from my pocket. 'Madame,' I said to the mother, 'here is the check for Miss D.'s chair, and the carriage is at the door. Will you be kind enough to ask her to come when it suits her best. For myself, I want to see the opening of the play,' and I walked out." "And what did the young woman do?" asked three breathless listeners, all at once. "She came in the course of half an hour. She had good sense enough to take the rebuke in the right way. She knew she deserved it." "Oh, but I would never have forgiven you!" sighed the chorus.

Max Maretzek, in one of his recent "Sharps and Flats," contributed to the American Musician, has this good one on Brignoli. The company were in Havana, and at a critical juncture in the manager's affairs, Brig. took it into his head that it would be the swell thing to fall sick. The Marquis de Aguas Caeras, President of the Ayuntamiento, sent a doctor to visit the distinguished tenor, and to report the result of his investigations. Unable to discover any alarming symptoms, except an insatiable appetite for macaroni and a sentimental longing for a dolce far niente, the gentlemanly young doctor ordered Brignoli to take a substantial dinner, and in the evening a drive to the opera, and to sing his part in the usual manner; and predicted to him a full restoration of health by following the advice. The silver-voiced tenor shared the doctor's opinion as to the prescription of a good dinner, but demurred from the order of singing in the evening. The Judge, upon hearing the doctor's report, sent a gentle warning to Brignoli, who, however, answered that the doctor who had visited him seemed, like Crispino, to be more a cobbler than a doctor, and did not understand his illness; whereupon the magistrate dispatched another doctor from the military hospital, with two attendants. After having felt Brignoli's pulse, looked into his throat, and examined his eyes, the new doctor solemnly declared, with a shake of his head, "really, some precursory symptoms of yellow fever;" but added, that by applying 200 leeches immediately on the shoulders of the patient the great evil might be averted. "Mama mia!" screamed Brignoli, with his clear, beautiful tenor voice, reaching with ease on that occasion the high B, "200 leeches! You are a fool, but not a doctor! I am perfectly well." "No," replied the doctor; "you are sick, and cannot sing to-night," giving at the same time instructions to his attendants for the operation. "Clear out!" vociferated Brignoli; "I will show you whether and how I can sing this evening." And he did sing better than ever.

Book Chat.

Mme. Modjeska has written some reminiscences of her early experience on the dramatic stage, which will be published in the February number of the Arena.

Clerk of Bookstore to Proprietor—"What's the price of this book?" Proprietor—"That Bible? Forty cents." Clerk—"It is not a Bible; it is an infidel work." Proprietor—"Oh, I see. Four dollars."

Wendell Phillips, the Agitator, is the title of a forthcoming work by Carlos Martyu, in which the author will undertake to give the famous anti-slavery orator the place in history to which his eminent abilities and his remarkable career entitle him.

Jules Verne has no record of struggle in his early history. Unlike most authors, his work was appreciated and paid for at the first, and his popularity was equally rapid. Although now an old man, he is still writing two books a year, as he has done for the last thirty-seven; but owing to an accident which befell him four years ago, he can no longer travel and get his own local color. His nephew, paying him a friendly visit, drew a revolver and discharged it at him twice—he had suddenly gone mad. One of the bullets lodged in the old author's leg and the wound has never healed. However, he has the faculty of absorbing the very essence of books of travel, until his whole mind is so steeped and colored that he could not be more familiar with the customs, scenery, and lay of a country if he had lived in it for years. His new book, "The Journey Backward," is a series of adventures over a route he has never seen—the north of America, Alaska, and Behring Straits. His last book, "Topsy-Turvy" ("Sans Dessus Dessous"), was the story of some Americans who tried to shift the axis of the earth for commercial purposes. Verne has a tremendous admiration for Americans and is fond of putting them in his books. He wanted to come over here and lecture, but was persuaded that the enterprise would not be a success, owing to his ignorance of the language. His home is in Amiens, whose quiet, old-world atmosphere he prefers to gay Paris. He has a beautiful house with a study at the top, where he writes in the morning. When he has finished his daily task he goes down to breakfast, then to the club, and after dinner he and his wife visit the theater. Methodical habits and good health have enabled him to write seventy-four romances, and he hopes to write as many more, although it will be some time before he makes another trip about the world. In appearance M. Verne is not unlike Victor Hugo.—Current Literature.

Professional Chat.

At the recent dinner of the New York Congregational Club Hamilton W. Mabie of the Christian Union, gave a reminiscence of travel with a moral to it. "When I was in a magnificent cathedral at Antwerp last summer," he said, "I remarked what a pity it was so dirty. 'I wish,' said my friend 'that our churches in America were dirtier. That dirt is from the feet of the poor and the working people.' My friend was right. We need dirtier churches, more shabby churches, made so by the masses attending.

Congressman Crain of Texas, was in the House restaurant, says the Washington Post, when a friend suggested that the Democrats had suffered from a pretty hard deal. "No," replied Crain, "you mistake the situation. It wasn't the deal that beat us. It was the shuffle."

Rev. Phillips Brooks, D. D., the famous and gigantesque rector of Trinity Church, Boston, says the Pioneer Press, was in St. Paul recently, and was much amused at an occurrence in one of the city Protestant Episcopal churches. Dr. Brooks came rather late, and was ushered into a seat occupied by a courteous gentleman who insisted upon finding all the places in the prayer book for the distinguished divine, and in exercising a general supervision over his risings up and sittings down. Dr. Brooks submitted meekly to the tutelage, though he afterwards confessed to a powerful inclination to laugh right out in meetin'.

The New York Tribune tells this story about General Sherman: He was in a North Carolina town just after the close of the war, and attended church one Sunday with Andrew Johnson, who was then Vice-President, and one or two other prominent men. The minister was a young Irishman, and like Peter Cartwright he seized the good opportunity to "roast the great ones of this earth over the coals." His opening prayer was short, fervid and left not a shadow of a chance for Andrew Johnson to enjoy an agreeable hereafter unless he repented. The minister hurled broadsides at General Sherman as well, and when he had finished the bluff o'd General turned to his companions and whispered in a voice all could hear: "By ———, that was a ——— good prayer."

A generation since, the Rev. Dr. C——, was pastor of the largest Congregational church in the city of New York. Intellectually he was a very strong man, and especially strong, even to bitterness, in his opposition to slavery and to intemperance. One winter, when preaching a course of evening sermons on temperance, he was invited out to supper to meet a few friends. Just as the company was beginning to arrive, the lady of the house turned to her husband and exclaimed, "Oh, John, Dr. C—— is coming, and our principal dish is brandy peaches!" The husband appreciated the unfortunate aspect of affairs, but declared it was now too late to alter their arrangements. Supper was soon ready, and the lady's heart sank within her when the peaches were served. Dr. C—— took a peach, and swallowed a mouthful, washing it down with a teaspoonful of the brandy. Great was the relief of the lady that no remark followed. Finally the peach was eaten. "Dr. C——," said the lady, "will you take another peach?" "Well, I think not," said the doctor; "but," he added reflectively, "I'll take another saucerful of the juice, if you please."

Judge D——, of the Circuit Court of the United States for the ——— Circuit, gives the following incident of his experience with a "moonshiner." "I was en route to C——, at which place a term of the court commenced next day. At each station, as the train neared C——, the coaches began to fill with a motley crew of deputy-marshals, prisoners, witnesses, and litigants. And finally a butternut jeans specimen dropped into my seat with, 'I s'pose thar's room fur both orn us, stranger?' I found him communicative, and a few general observations set his tongue agoing. 'Yas, I'm gwine down to C—— to 'tend co't, which the grand jurer hev indicted me for 'stillin'. Well, I've been thar befo', but they hain't never got me yit. The fax is, ole Jedge F——, which are the deestrect jedge, they call him, he kinder seems to know our folks, and sorter undertan's this here internal revenue business, an' how them marshals works it fur fees. But they tells me he's took sick, an' have writ fur an old Jedge name' D——, from away out'ards somewhar, to set fur him, which, they sez, he's long ards the wust of the lot. That he held a co't up at R—— wunst, an' carried on ridiculous; that he was co't, jurer, an' lawyer, an' mout as well er been witness. Bob P—— he was a-tellin' of it to a crowd at Payne's old grocery. Old Lawyer M——, he went down thar to plead for Bob for retailin', which he was a good jedge of law, allus so considered, and er regular old coon dorg befo' the County Co't, and sorter run things thar to suit hisself. You could er hearn him open on a still day clear out to Drunkard's Spring, and that's a good haft a mile from the co'thouse. But Bob said he didn't stan' no mo' showin' befo' old Jedge D—— than a bobtail bull in fly time. He sorter jawed back at the Jedge fur awhile, an' talked vigorous 'bout the Declaration of Inderpendence, an' the bill of rights, an' the Constertution, an' thier reserlutions of '98-9. But it didn't make no mo' impression on thet durn, 'significant old Jedge than pourin' water on er duck's back. He just sot right daown on Lawyer M——, he did, an' rared hisself back in his chair, an' said he weren't a-presidin' at no flag raisin', 'Fo'th of July doin's, nor nothin' of the sort. An' he allowed that Lawyer M—— didn't know no law, and didn't have no everdence. An' he jest took his pen, he did, an' he writ out a verdick, and tole the jurer to assign it; and the fast thing Bob knowed he war in jail. He said it war the quickest thing that he ever seen in his life. Whew! they say he's a plum sight, an' powerful fond er whiskey too, an' I don't understan' why he should be so rautankerous over them as makes it. If half they say 'bout his drotted meanness is so, I shouldn't wonder if he didn't git the whole kit an' bilin' orn us this load. The fax is, I'm a-gittin' tired of the business, anyhow; it's too dad-fetched unsartin; an' arter feein' the officers, hirein' lawyers, treatin' witnesses, and payin' travelin' expenses a'tendin' of co't, thar ain't no big chance of profit in it, no way. Which I tole the ole woman. I sez, if I can mandage to git clear this go-round, I'm a-gwine to close out and quit the business. Stranger, whar are you gwine?' I replied that I, too, was on my way to C—— to attend court; and he continued, 'You don't know old D——, I suppose?' 'Yes, I've seen him.' 'Wal, stranger, if you kin bring any influence to b'ar orn him, an' kin git me outen this here scrape, I'll fee you hand-some.' After learning his name, I told him to be in the courtroom next day promptly at ten o'clock. As I took my seat on the bench, the first object that caught my eye was my fellow traveler, leaning over the back railing of the bar. The recognition was mutual. His lower jaw relaxed and dropped until it seemed to hang loose on its hinges, and there was a mingled expression of astonishment and horror on his countenance. 'Clerk,' said I, 'is there a case of the United States versus ——— for illicit distilling on the docket?' 'Yes, your Honor,' said the clerk. 'Dismiss it,' said I. It was some little time before he seemed to take in the situation. When he did, he cast a timid, sheepish glance at me, and disappeared in the crowd. I think he kept his word, and went out of the business; at least I never heard of his name on the docket again.'—Harper's Magazine.

Those House Rules.

There is a strong probability that by the time this issue of THEMIS leaves the press, the proposed code of new rules will have been adopted by the House of Representatives, and that body will have become in a fit temper for the transaction of the public business. There is no doubt that at least one of the new rules will effect a complete reversal of parliamentary precedents since the institution of Congress, and for this very reason the subject is one of unusual weight. Under republican systems innovations are effected by a gradual process, and when a serious change comes abruptly, the multitude are startled. Under all circumstances precedents exert a powerful influence, and the best minds find it difficult to contend against authoritative examples. The public are disposed to accept an old precedent in preference to a new reason. Hence it is that, thus far, the Democrats, and especially the Mugwumps, have presented the side of the House minority to the common mind in a more persuasive and plausible form than the Republicans have presented the majority side of the case.

The Republican press, on this coast at least, has failed to present the ground reasons for the equity of the rule which permits the Speaker to go outside of the roll-call to determine the presence of a quorum. To assert that such a rule is merely a means of securing government by the majority, would be an inconclusive argument, which might be effectually neutralized by the counter assertion that such a policy would leave the minority without any voice in the conduct of the business of the House. Neither of these propositions is true, without limitation. But they look reasonable to the untrained mind, and hence there is a great confusion of opinion as to the results that might follow the adoption of the new rules.

The greatest difficulty that the framers of the Federal Constitution encountered was as to how they might perfect a system in which the majority might have full control while the minority would, at the same time, be completely protected in all their rights. But the protection which it was intended should be thrown around the minority never contemplated such a state of affairs as that the smaller number of members of the House of Representatives might stop the whole legislative machinery of the government; but this is the position which is contended for by Carlisle and Randall in their address to the country. Moreover, the minorities which were under contemplation by the framers of the Constitution, while they were formulating safeguards for their protection, were popular rather than parliamentary minorities. It is conceded that the arbitrary suppression of a parliamentary minority would be just as wrongful as the arbitrary suppression of a popular minority. But as THEMIS understands the proposition, the protection with which the minority in the House should be surrounded, in the contemplation of the framers of the Constitution, amounts to this: After the will of the people shall have been expressed at the polls, the protection which shall be accorded to the minority on the floor of the House is the right of a full and free debate, the right to offer proper amendments and the right to vote. We use general terms, but the critical reader will understand our meaning. In substance, the privileges above enumerated embrace all the rights that are enjoyed by any citizen in his political capacity. The citizen may discuss party politics and party candidates to his heart's content. He may argue with his neighbor, and endeavor to persuade him over to his own view of affairs. If the party platforms or the party candidates do not suit him, he may organize a bolt, promulgate a new set of principles and set up a new candidate. Or, he may embody his political principles in his own person and become a candidate on his own account. He may go to the polls and vote as he pleases. But suppose his policy and his candidate get defeated. How does he employ himself afterwards? Does he set up a mutiny and attempt to persuade the public that he has been deprived of his rights by a tyrannical majority? He does nothing of the sort. If he is a sensible person, he recognizes the fact that he has enjoyed the right of free debate; the right to persuade people to come over to his views; he has offered such amendments as he thought proper; he voted and got defeated. Like a sensible and law-abiding person, he goes right on performing his duties as a citizen, in the expectation that he may meet with better luck at the next election.

His conscience tells him that he has had a fair show, and his manliness teaches him good manners and respect for the rights of others.

Now, how many more rights has a Democratic Congressman at Washington than has the citizen we have been describing? Since when has the reason of men led them to the conclusion that a citizen on the floor of Congress possesses more rights than a citizen at the ballot box? The House of Representatives is the forum in which all the citizens speak by representation. The citizen himself stands upon the floor of the House and speaks through the mouth of another. Is not this true? Cut away this principle, and what would become of our notions of government by the people? How is it, then, that a minority of the citizens of the country, speaking through their Representatives, assert the right to bind the majority hand and foot, when they would be utterly impotent to accomplish any such purpose at the ballot box.

The foregoing interrogatory embraces the whole principle involved in the rule which permits the Speaker to declare a quorum of the House present, although the roll-call might show a contrary result, the fact being that a majority of all the members are actually on the floor of the House, and might respond to the roll-call if they felt so disposed.

The situation in the House, as to facts, is this: The Constitution provides that a majority of all the members of the House shall be necessary for the transaction of business. There is a vacancy on account of the death of Judge Kelley, so that the actual number of members is 329. Since the unseating of Jackson, of West Virginia, the number of Democratic members has been reduced to 158. It follows that the Republicans have 171 members. It therefore requires 165 members actually present on the floor of the House to constitute a quorum. But it would be practically impossible to keep that number of Republicans on the floor for any length of time. Such a thing would be physically impossible, if the committee work of the House is to be attended to with any sort of efficiency, seeing that the Republicans have only six members more than are necessary to constitute a quorum.

Take the following actual occurrence as illustrating the position contended for by the Democrats: When the Smith-Jackson election case was called in the House there were 163 Republicans and 152 Democrats, or 315 members actually on the floor. Smith, a Republican, was contesting Jackson's seat, and a resolution favoring his claim had been reported by the Elections' Committee. There was a minority report in favor of Jackson, the Democratic sitting member. Well, when the case was called, the Democrats moved that the minority report be adopted, and on this motion called for the ayes and noes. But a roll-call disclosed the fact that there were only 163 members present, whereas there were 315 actually on the floor of the House. The Democrats refused to vote, and then raised the question that there was not a quorum present. Now, theoretically, and for all practical purposes, and theory is an actuality, each member of the House represents an equal number of all the citizens of the country, and yet the contention of the Democrats is that a minority of citizens as represented by 152 Congressmen can nullify the will of a majority of citizens as represented by 163 Congressmen.

The new code of rules protects the minority in the right of free debate, in the right to offer amendments and in the right to vote, and if, thus equipped, they cannot effect their object, they must do as the citizen does—wait for next term and hope for better luck.

You don't need a cannon to kill a sparrow, or a pile driver to drive a tack.

Trials of Republican Governments.

The affairs of the young Duke of Orleans, son of the Count of Paris, and a member of a family that had been exiled from France, furnishes an interesting theme for consideration; though the circumstances immediately surrounding it seem hardly of particular consequence. This youth belongs to a family of former French royalty—the house of Orleans—members of which had occupied the throne. The last, Louis Philippe, abdicated February 24, 1848, in favor of his grandson; the Count de Paris; but the Chamber of Deputies refused to acknowledge the Count as king. Louis fled to the coast of Normandy with his queen, and after a few days' concealment found opportunity to escape to England, under the name of Mr. Smith. He died in that country August 26, 1850. Since 1870, France has been a republic; and it would seem that after near twenty years of popular rule, no serious apprehension would be created by the circumstance of a hair-brained youngster attempting to enlist in the army as a private soldier. Conditions, however, are different in France than with us. Its rule was monarchical till 1792, when an attempt bordering on republicanism was made, but it soon drifted into imperialism. In 1848, on the abdication of Louis Philippe, a republican government was again established. It lasted but four years. With us, the form of government has existed beyond a century, and our people of to-day know nothing of rigid governmental rule. In France, doubtless, men still live who are not reconciled to the more liberal form of government. With a population of thirty-eight millions, France maintains a regular army of over half a million; while the United States, with a population of fifty millions plus, has a standing army of less than thirty thousand. When we take into consideration the history of the Orleans princes, and of their schemes, and the fact that the French soldiery are easily led astray, we can understand why the French government so promptly took action with regard to a circumstance that in this country would be about unnoticed. Twenty years is a very brief period in the life of a nation, particularly one like France, that can trace its rulers back to the eighth century; and in viewing a circumstance of this character, it would be unfair to compare it with conditions that now exist in the United States. Our country was never ruled by a king or emperor, except as colonies of England, France, and Spain. The country was settled by people who had left the old continent to be relieved of the governmental and religious restraints that there prevailed; and it could reasonably be expected that, as soon as the country became sufficiently populated, a system of popular government would be adopted. We had no families of royalty here, and no one to claim the governing power by reason of heredity.

The causes that brought about the American Revolution, when dispassionately reviewed, would hardly justify the course that was pursued; yet, it would be unpatriotic for the American of to-day to question the conduct of the American of 1776, and while it is accorded to the revolutionists, that they erected a republic which will ever endure as the foremost nation in the world, and one after which other countries have and will pattern, in the light of history it cannot be said that our forefathers, to any particular degree, realized the result that would follow their work. With all, we did not escape attempted revolutions. The close of the Revolutionary War left the country impoverished. Taxes were high, money scarce; production and industry had been paralyzed. In portions of New England a spirit of discontent was engendered. It was first manifested by a body of men entering the capitol of New Hampshire, and making prisoners of the members of the Legislature. In 1786, the opposition to governmental restraint became very general in Massachusetts, and the courts and Legislature were compelled to bow to the popular will. The State was reduced to anarchy. Concerning the situation, President Washington wrote with profound indignation and alarm: "For God sake tell me what is the cause of all these commotions? Do they proceed from licentiousness, British influences disseminated by the Tories, or real grievances which admit of redress? If the latter, why was redress delayed until the public mind had become so much agitated? If the former, why are not the powers of government tried at once? It is as well to be without, as not to exercise them. Commotions of this sort, like snowballs, gather strength as they roll, if there is no opposition in the way to divide and crumble them." This revolution was headed by Daniel Shays, who had been an officer during the revolution. In January, 1787, at the head of about two thousand men, he attempted to capture the arsenal at Springfield, but was repulsed by the militia. The next day the insurgents were dispersed by a large force, commanded by General Benjamin Lincoln. A large number were taken prisoners, and fourteen sentenced to death, but were afterward pardoned. Shays died September 29, 1825. In 1794, there occurred in Pennsylvania what is known as the "whisky insurrection," growing out of a law of Congress laying excise duties upon spirits distilled in the United States. In Western Pennsylvania, the grain crops were over-abundant, the marketing difficult, and large quantities of whisky was made. The people claimed that as they depended largely upon this production, a special tax upon it was unjust. The revenue officers who attempted to collect the tax, were tarred and feathered, and their property burned. President Washington issued several proclamations, which had no effect to quell the disturbances, and finally called out the militia. He started to take command of the troops in person, and did inspect them before they started for the scene of the trouble. General Henry Lee was placed in command, and the insurrection was suppressed without bloodshed.

The boldest attempt, however, against the supremacy of the United States government was headed by Aaron Burr, who had been Vice-President during Jefferson's first term. After his duel with Alexander Hamilton and the expiration of his Vice-Presidential term, he visited the West, the domain that had been acquired under the Louisiana purchase. His design is uncertain; but it would seem it contemplated the detaching of the western territory and erecting an independent government, with himself at the head. On November 27, 1806, President Jefferson issued a proclamation against him; and he was arrested and tried for treason, but acquitted. He died in 1836.

The rebellion in Rhode Island in 1842, under Thomas W. Dorr, and the anti-rent disturbances in New York State in 1844, were so local in their nature as not to require the particular attention of the Federal government. Later on, came the great Rebellion, from the effects of which the country has but recently recovered. Disastrous as it was to both North and South, it forever established the integrity of the United States government, and the subsequent centuries will not be marked with the revolts against its authority that characterized the first one hundred years of its existence. France has hardly yet passed the period of probation as a republic; and while, as we have said, the expulsion of the young Duke of Orleans may appear to us trifling, it is doubtless of serious importance when viewed from a French stand point.

FLASHES.

An injury is sooner pardoned than an insult.

A dog can bark at the moon, but it still keeps on shining.

The number of the alleged silver-tongued orators are increasing.

According to fashionable ethics, nothing is wrong or sinful until found out.

When you see a man shy it is no sign he is a horse—he is more likely to be an ass.

It is easy for a rich man to keep his word. Millionaires can afford to be mean, and people call it prudence.

President Carnot of France has determined not to enforce the sentence of two years' imprisonment against the young Duke of Orleans. Presumptively it is a case of carnot.

The Angler's Prize.

It was by a mountain stream,
In a cool, sequestered glen,
Where the beauty of the scene
Defied all efforts of brush or pen.
The tree tops cleft by sunlight,
The waters, as they sped away,
Were a poem no poet can indite,
A picture no painter can portray.

On a lichen-covered bank there sat
A girlish figure clad in gray,
With a tourist cap in place of hat,
And an alpenstock that near by lay.
She wore some braids of auburn hair,
And russet shoes with corduroy;
And withal she had an air
Well calculated to decoy.

I stood upon the brink and fished,
And cast with dexter throw the fly,
And notwithstanding trout I wished,
I watched that maiden's eye.
My outfit—no better could be bought,
Split bamboo rod, and multiplying reel,
And silken line, and hooks—no finer wrought,
While none could surer fill a creel.

In waning day we started back,
I, and the witching dame in gray;
I, with a brimming creel to pack,
She, with her winning way.
So lucky was our recreation,
So manimoth was one speckled glory.
We received that evening an ovation,
And each one told a fishing story.

The story that was best was not related,
About the biggest catch of all the year;
Of how a maiden clad in gray, unaided,
Caught the prize catch, and used no fishing gear.
She did not know the angler's plan,
She could not cast a fly—
The fish she landed was the man,
She caught him with her eye.

—John Audley.

Sacramento, Feb. 15, 1890.

DELINQUENT TAX LIST

FOR 1889.

Tuesday, the 25th
day of Feb'y,
1890,

For gold coin of the United States, each piece or parcel so described for the amount of taxes thereto annexed, together with 5 per cent. added thereto and 50 cents on each lot, piece or tract of land separately assessed and described, and on each assessment of improvements, and on each assessment of personal property additional thereto and accruing costs.

City Roll

Against the following named persons and the following described lots, pieces and tracts of land and other property in the city of Sacramento:

20—Against Mrs. M. Alexander and north 90 feet of west half of east half of lot 1, K and L, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $47 50; costs, $2 87; total tax and costs.....$50 37

88—Against Harriet Auker and north three-quarters of lot 4, N and O, Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $20 12; costs, $2; total tax and costs.....$22 12

91—Against James Anderson and south half of lots 7 and 8, Q and R, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 59 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 46

103—Against John Azevedo and east half of lot 3, O and P, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 81

105—Against Kate Arenz and north fifty feet of lot 5, D and E, Sixth and Seventh streets, and north fifty feet of east quarter of lot 6, D and E, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 25; costs, $1 51; total tax and costs.....$11 76

151—Against B. F. Ball and east half of lot 4, U and V, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets. State and county tax, $1 63; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 21

274—Against Joseph Bartoni and north forty-two and a half feet of lot 6, Q and R, Front and Second streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $21 25; costs, $2 05; total tax and costs.....$23 30

293—Against J. W. Brand and east half of lot 2, O and P, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $10; costs, $1; total tax and costs.....$11 00

316—Against Henry Fisher and mortgage interest in west half of lot 6, O and P, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. State and county tax, $18 75; costs, $1 44; total tax and costs.....$20 19

432—Against William Boyne and east half of lot 2, K and L, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $107 19; costs, $6 35; total tax and costs.....$113 54

468—Against John Lockhart and mortgage interest in east half of lot 7, C and D, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $12 50; costs, $1 12; total tax and costs.....$13 62

471—Against Annie Cooper and north half of lot 1, R and S, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property; for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 94 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 49

568—Against J. H. Campbell and lots 5, 6 and 7, R and S, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 50; cost, $1 58; total tax and costs.....$13 08

576—Against J. J. Carroll and north half of south half of lot 5, S and T, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 23

580—Against J. J. Carroll and lots 3, 4, 7 and 8, V and W, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $2 69; costs, $1 15; total tax and costs.....$3 84

581—Against Mary Allen and mortgage interest in lots 3, 4, 7 and 8, V and W, Fourth and Fifth streets. State and county tax, $13 75; costs, $1 20; total tax and costs.....$14 95

598—Against L. N. Billings and mortgage interest in lot 5, B and C, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 13

608—Against L. F. Taylor and mortgage interest in lot 1, Q and R, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $6 87; costs, 85 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 72

658—Against Margaret Carr and west 30 feet of east 55 feet of north half of lot 7, M and N, Second and Third streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

659—Against Margaret Carroll and lots 1 and 2, V and W, Fourth and Fifth streets. State and county tax, $3 13; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 78

836—Against A. B. Davis and south half of west half of lot 5, J and K, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $3 44; costs, 67 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 11

852—Against Barney Donahoe and east quarter of north half of lot 1, M and N, Third and Fourth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $13 69; costs, $1 68; total tax and costs.....$15 37

904—Against Ida H. Doan and lot 4, T and U, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and personal property; for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 94 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 49

961—Against Margaret Dooley and west one-half of lot 4, Q and R, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets and improvements. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 62 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 12

998—Against Mrs. L. Jones and mortgage interest in east one-half of lot 7, O and P, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets. State and county tax, $5; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 75

1021—Against William H. Dean and west one-half of lot 4, Q and R, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 88; costs, $1 60; total tax and costs.....$13 48

1064—Against H. C. Ewing and west half of lot 7, N and O, Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 47

1094—Against Sims Emory and south 100 feet of west half of lot 5, O and P, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 25; costs, $1 26; total tax and costs.....$6 51

1142—Against F. Fay and north 40 feet of south 60 feet of lot 8, P and Q, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 25; costs, $1 26; total tax and costs.....$6 51

1217½—Against Horace Stevens and mortgage interest in west half of lot 6, P and Q, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 69 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 44

1220—Against R. A. Fisher and east half of lot 7, W and X, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets and personal property; State and county tax, $2 75; costs, $1 14; total tax and costs.....$3 89

1229—Against Mrs. T. A. Fairchild and lot 4, F and G, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets. State and county tax, $4 06; costs, 70 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 76

1260—Against F. M. Shields and mortgage interest in lot 5, K and L, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $2 81; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 46

1271½—Against Sarah Miller and north 118 feet of east 37½ feet of lot 4, O and P, Eighth and Ninth streets and improvements. State and county tax, $11 75; costs, $1 08; total tax and costs.....$12 83

1307—Against C. Otterback and mortgage interest in lot 4, K and L, Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets. State and county tax, $5; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 75

1320—Against William Morrison and mortgage interest in west 50 feet of lot 1, G and H, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets. State and county tax, $20; costs, $1 50; total tax and costs.....$21 50

1326—Against Edith G. Grant and west half of lot 4, U and V, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 08

1376—Against J. A. Gibson and lots 2 and 3, D and E, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $3 25; costs, 66 cents. Total tax and costs.....$3 91

1532—Against Mrs. E. Hollehan and south 22 feet of north 62 feet of lots 5 and 6, Q and R, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 60 cents. Total tax and costs.....$2 47

1535—Against Eliza A. Hoyt and lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Seventh and Eighth streets. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents. Total tax and costs.....$1 68

And lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $19; costs, $1 95. Total tax and costs.....$20 95

1536—Against Howell Clark and mortgage interest in lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Sixth and Seventh streets, and lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Seventh and Eighth streets, and lots 1 to 8, X and Y, Eighth and Ninth streets. State and county tax, $27 50; costs, $2 87; total tax and costs.....$30 37

1575—Against W. C. Felch and mortgage interest in east fifty feet of lot 2, J and K, Eleventh and Twelfth streets. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 69 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 44

1693—Against P. J. Harney and west half of lot 2, P and Q, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 87 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 37

1742—Against W. J. Hook, Jr., and north sixty feet of lot 4, and north sixty feet of east half of lot 3, G and H, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $18; costs, $1 40; total tax and costs.....$19 40

1881—Against A. A. Krull and lot 8, N and O, Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets and improvements. State and county tax, $5 63; costs, 78 cents; total tax and costs.....$6 41

1882—Against Mrs. F. Oschner and mortgage interest in lot 8, N and O, Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets. State and county tax, $37 50; costs, $2 38; total tax and costs.....$39 88

1951—Against John Kennedy and lots 1 to 8, V and W, Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $16 88; costs, $1 84; total tax and costs.....$18 72

1961—Against Mechanics' Building and Loan Association and mortgage interest in south half of north half of east 75 feet and north 30 feet of south half of lot 4, N and O, Third and Fourth streets. State and county tax, $12 50; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs.....$13 63

1985—Against Mrs. Mary Kelly and lot 2, O and P, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

1989—Against Thomas P. Sweeney and mortgage interest in north 40 feet of south 110 feet in lot 5, M and N, Third and Fourth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

2021—Against Samuel Kingsbury and north quarter of lot 5 and 6, Q and R, Seventh and Eighth streets, and improvements and personal property; for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $8; costs, 90 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 90

2039—Against George Lemke and east half of lot 2, O and P, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, $1 38; total tax and costs.....$8 88

2093—Against W. W. Clary and mortgage interest in south half of lot 8, P and Q, Tenth and Eleventh streets. State and county tax, $12 50; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs.....$13 63

2144—Against Mrs. D. Cook and mortgage interest in north half of lot 4, T and U, Second and Third streets. State and county tax, $1 88; costs, 57 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 45

2206—Against Lynch and Rothang and south half of west half of lot 10, B and C, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets and improvements. State and county tax, $5 62; costs, 78 cents; total tax and costs.....$6 40

2250—Against A. Merry and east half of lot 2, E and F, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 13

2968—Against Catherine Mehaney and south half of north quarter of lot 8, M and N, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $5 94; costs, 80 cents; total tax and costs.....$6 74

2288—Against Eli Mayo and east half of lot 7, L and M, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $2 50; costs, $1 88; total tax and costs.....$29 34

And south 25 feet of lot 5, P and Q, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $8 87; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 71

2296—Against E. G. Messner and west half of lot 7, M and N, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $20 18; costs, $2; total tax and costs.....$22 18

2310—Against Mrs. F. M. Marshall and east half of lot 6, P and Q, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $15 63; costs, $1 78; total tax and costs.....$17 41

2350—Against Mrs. H. G. Melvin and lot 5, N and O, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets. State and county tax, $20 63; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs.....$22 16

2386—Against Julia Nesche and mortgage interest in west 55 feet of lot 8, J and K, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 88

2420—Against W. C. Felch and mortgage interest in west half of east half of lot 2, L and M, Seventh and Eighth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 09

2474—Against Mrs. M. A. Mesick and lots 5 and 8, E and F, Eighth and Ninth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $167 50; costs, $9 37; total tax and costs.....$176 87

2486—Against Mary Myers and lot 1 and west half of lot 2, V and W, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. State and county tax, $4 38; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 10

And lot 8 and west half of lot 7, V and W, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. State and county tax, $4 37; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 09

And lots 1 to 8, W and X, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and personal property. State and county tax, $25 63; costs, $2 28; total tax and costs.....$27 91

2523—Against Thomas McCants and south quarter of lot 1, and south quarter of west 10 feet of lot 2, O and P, Tenth and Eleventh streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 23

And west forty-eight feet of lot 3, I and J, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $40; costs, $2 50; total tax and costs.....$42 50

2548—Against Sacramento Bank and mortgage interest in west 48 feet of lot 3, I and J, Fourth and Fifth streets. State and county tax, $18 75; costs, $1 44; total tax and costs.....$20 19

2567—Against Morgan Brothers and lot 4, D and E, Sixth and Seventh streets. State and county tax, $5 31; costs, 77 cents; total tax and costs.....$6 08

2595—Against George H. Nethercot and lot 8, K and L, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $16 68; costs, $1 83; total tax and costs.....$18 51

2670—Against Jacob Olsen and north of A, lots 1 to 10, A and B, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 08

2722—Against A. Mohns and mortgage interest in lot 6, N and O, Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 06

2762—Against J. A. Parker and lot 8, G and H, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $38 75; costs, 2 94; total tax and costs.....$41 69

2763—Against Union Bank and Loan Association and mortgage interest in south half of west 50 feet of lot 8, H and I, Seventh and Eighth streets. State and county tax, $112 15; costs, $6 13; total tax and costs.....$118 63

2818—Against W. F. Ashby and mortgage interest in west half of lot 4, J and K, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, $38 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

2908—Against Mrs. Emma C. Irvine and mortgage interest in west half of lot 7, M and N, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 06

2978—Against Wm. Roan and lots 1 to 8, S and T, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets. State and county tax, $5 75; costs, 94 cents; total tax and costs.....$9 69

2979—Against Mrs. E. G. Thomas and mortgage interest in lots 1 to 8, S and T, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets. State and county tax, $10; costs, $1; total tax and costs.....$11 00

2981—Against W. W. Ryder and lots 5 and 6, T and U, Second and Third streets. State and county tax, $5 31; costs, 76 cents; total tax and costs.....$6 07

3009—Against Exempt Fireman's Association and mortgage interest in lot 5, and south 5 feet of lot 6, O and P, Front and Second streets. State and county tax, $25; costs, $1 75; total tax and costs.....$26 75

3068—Against DeWitt C. Smith and north quarter of lot 5, O and P, Eleventh and Twelfth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $3 13; costs, 66 cents; total tax and costs.....$3 79

3071—Against Elvina Sayers and east half of lot 7, N and O, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $1 25; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 81

3078—Against E. D. Shirland and south half of north half of lot 1, F and G, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 69; costs, $1 58; total tax and costs.....$13 27

3103—Against Frank Swift and east half of lot 3, M and N, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 88; costs, $1 60; total tax and costs.....$13 48

3106—Against G. M. Schumacher and east half of lot 2, J and K, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 31 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs.....$9 83

3141—Against Henry Starr and north quarter of lot 4, P and Q, Sixth and Seventh streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $32 75; costs, $2 63; total tax and costs.....$35 38

3154—Against P. H. Steiner and west half of lot 3, U and V, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 08

3308—Against W. J. Smith and north quarter of lot 1, D and E, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets; and west 10 feet of north quarter of lot 2, D and E, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 63 cents; costs, 53 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 16

3382—Against Joseph Patton and mortgage interest in lot 5, H and I, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

3397—Against Henry Tibbs and north 55 feet of south half of lot 5, P and Q, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 69; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs.....$12 22

3423—Against L. H. Todhunter and north half of west 30 feet of lot 1, M and N, Fifth and Sixth streets, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 43; costs, $1 57; total tax and costs.....$13 00

3662—Against M. F. Wilson and north half of lot 5, C and D, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 63 cents; costs, 53 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 16

3749—Against F. A. Zeigler and north half of west half of lot 10, B and C, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. State and county tax, $1; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 55

Lots and Blocks, and Fractions Thereof, in the City of Sacramento, Assessed to Unknown Owners.

2815—Against unknown owners and north of A lots 1 to 8, A and B, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. State and county tax, $6 25; costs, 81 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 06

3818—Against unknown owners and south half of west half of east half of lot 6, L and M, Fourth and Fifth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $8 14; costs, 92 cents; total tax and costs.....$9 36

3846—Against unknown owners and west half of east half of lot 7, V and W, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets. State and county tax, 94 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 49

3847—Against unknown owners and east half of lot 3, V and W, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets. State and county tax, $1 87; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 47

3867—Against unknown owners and east half of lot 4, M and N, Ninth and Tenth streets, and improvements. State and county tax, $33 75; costs, $2 19; total tax and costs.....$35 94

Country Roll.

All Property in Sacramento County

Described by Township and Range is North and East of Mount Diablo

Base and Meridian, respectively.

4036—Against John Amar and north half of east thirty acres of southwest quarter section 36, township 8, range 5 east, and personal property and improvements. State and county tax, $25 50; costs, $2 28; total tax and costs.....$27 78

4084—Against B. F. Bates and lots 1 to 4, block 64, Folsom, and improvements. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 69 cents; total tax and costs.....$4 41

4094—Against Calvin L. Bates and northeast quarter of southeast quarter and northwest quarter of southeast quarter of section 31, township 7, range 9, 80 acres and improvements; and southeast quarter of northwest quarter and southwest quarter of northeast quarter of section 31, township 7, range 9, 80 acres, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $6 90; costs, 85 cents; total tax and costs.....$ 7 75

4113—Against E. and J. Downing and mortgage interest in southeast quarter of section 23, township 10, range 7, 160 acres and southeast quarter of section 23, township 10, range 7, 160 acres. State and county tax, $12 60; costs, $1 13; total tax and costs.....$13 73

4122—Against estate of S. Bergman and fraction in north half of section 3, township 2, range 2, 41 acres. State and county tax, 75 cents; costs, 54 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 29

4125—Against estate of F. Boggs and fraction in west half of east half of section 9, township 2, range 2, twenty six acres; State and county tax, 45 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs.....$0 97

4155—Against Chris. O'Regan and mortgage interest in lot 8, Tirol Gardens. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 23

4208—Against George W. Baker and mortgage interest in fractional northeast quarter bounded east by S. Quail, in section 17, township 8, range 6. State and county tax, $30; costs, $2; total tax and costs.....$32 00

4214—Against Mrs. N. A. Barnes and lots 11 and 12, block M, Highland Park. State and county tax, $2 25; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs.....$2 86

4224—Against Mary E. Butterworth and tract of land on Twichell Island, bounded east by T. H. Williams, west by E. G. Miner, in township 3, range 3, 500 acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs.....$8 38

4260—Against W. H. Barkhurst and lot 1 in Anderson tract, 15 31 acres, and personal property. State and county tax, $56 18; costs, $3 80; total tax and costs.....$59 98

4298—Against Stephen Dwyer and mortgage interest in tract of land bounded north and east by Goslin, south by A. Terrio, west by James McNasser, in section 3, township 7, range 4. State and county tax, $15; costs, $1 25; total tax and costs.....$16 25

4312—Against George W. Chapman and lot 15, Louisiana tract, five acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $8 62; costs, 93 cents; total tax and costs.....$9 55

4412—Against Oliver Carter and possession interest and claim in and to south half of northwest quarter of section 29, township 6, range 8, eighty acre, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $12 45; costs, $ 62; total tax and costs.....$14 07

4468—Against T. W. Cox and northeast quarter of southwest quarter of section 27, township 7, range 5, forty acres. State and county tax, $19 80; costs, $1 49; total tax and costs.....$21 29

And fraction of northwest quarter of southwest quarter of section 27, township 7, range 5, 16 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $28 50; costs, $2 42; total tax and costs.....$30 92

4632—Against A. Eberhardt and lot 14, block 1, Highland Park, and improvements. State and county tax, $4 95; costs, 75 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 70

4640—Against C. Erickson and fraction of sub-marked Burschnauer on the office map of the Rancho Rio de los Americanos in township 9, range 6, thirty and one-half acres, and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs.....$1 45

4758—Against Patrick Fitzpatrick and fraction in southwest quarter of section 6, township 9, range 8, thirty-five acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $12 68; costs, $1 63; total tax and costs.....$14 31

4784½—Against G. H. and W. S. Fisher and fraction of west half of section 26, township 5, range 7, 170 acres. State and county tax, $36 10; costs, $3 30; total tax and costs.....$39 40

4799—Against Charles Gibson and northeast quarter of southeast quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8, 40 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 93; costs, $1 30; total tax and costs.....$7 23

4861—Against M. C. Goddard and east half of west half of southeast quarter of section 3, township 7, range 5, 40 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $33 39; costs, $2 67; total tax and costs.....$36 06

4866—Against Noah B. Gill and north half of southwest quarter of section 18, township 7, range 9, 80 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $24; costs, $2 20; total tax and costs.....$26 20

4927—Against Christian Hobelich and lots 26 and 28, New Ramona Colony, ten acres. State and county tax, $10 27; costs, $1; total tax and costs.....$11 27

4928—Against C. Holland and all west of county road of east half of northwest quarter, section 17, township 8, range 6, 70 acres; and west 97 acres of east 157 acres of north half of section 17, township 8, range 6, 97 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $122 70; costs, $7 63; total tax and costs.....$130 13

4954—Against Mrs. F. J. Hill and fraction of southeast quarter, south of Placer county line, of section 16, township 10, range 7, 30 acres. State and county tax, $9; costs, 95 cents; total tax and costs.....$9 95

4974—Against G. E. Hook and lot 31, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs, $1 68; and lot 21, Kathleen tract. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents. Total tax and costs.....$1 68

5029—Against J. R. Hodson and all south of Jackson Road of east half of northwest quarter, section 19, township 5, range 6, 52 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $15 38; costs, $1 27; total tax and costs.....$16 65

5069—Against P. B. Hewlitz and tract of land on Sherman Island, bounded north by Sacramento river, east by J. Larsen and E. 1. Upham, south and west by S. C. Hastings, in section 27, township 3, range 2, 251 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $6 75; costs, 84 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 59

5173—Against Mrs. S. A. Jones and east half of lot 5 of J. H. Kerr tract, Elk Grove, and improvements. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs.....$5 23

5221—Against George H. Kimball and Swamp Land Survey No. 562, known as Hammond Island, township 2, range 1, 72 acres. State and county tax, $6 45; costs, 83 cents; total tax and costs.....$7 28

5250—Against M. Cronan and mortgage interest in tract of land bounded north by Jackson road, east by road, south by Silvers line, west by Marshall, in section 15, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $9 75; costs, 99 cents; total tax and costs.....$10 75

5417—Against D. W. Melville and east half of northwest quarter of section 18, township 5, range 8, 80 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $13 50; costs, $1 67; total tax and costs...$15 17

5425—Against estate of Ellen McCarthy and west half of southeast quarter and northeast quarter of southeast quarter, and southeast quarter of northeast quarter, section 26, township 7, range 8, 160 acres. State and county tax, $12; costs, $1 10; total tax and costs...$13 10

5456—Against H. A. Mayhew and lots 7 to 12, block 2, Oak Park. State and county tax, $9 75; costs, $9 cents; total tax and costs...$10 74

And lots 12 to 16, block 3, Oak Park. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs...$8 38

And lots 11 to 14, block 4, Oak Park. State and county tax, $6 35; costs, 82 cents; total tax and costs...$7 20

And lot 6, block 5, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs...$2 08

And lots 9 to 16, block 23, Oak Park. State and county tax, $12; costs, $1 10; total tax and costs...$13 10

And lots 10 to 16, block 25, Oak Park. State and county tax, $11 32; costs, $1 06; total tax and costs...$12 38

And lots 6 to 9, block 26, Oak Park. State and county tax, $6; costs, 80 cents; total tax and costs...$6 80

And lots 1 15 and 16 block 45, Oak Park. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs...$5 23

5526—Against Katie Matthews and lot 2, block 25, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 65; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs...$2 23

5542—Against Nettie Manning and northeast quarter of section 3, township 9, range 6, 158 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $59 32; costs, $3 96; total tax and costs...$63 28

5558—Against G. H. Iler and mortgage interest in lots 7 and 8, block 7, Galt. State and county tax, $9; costs, 95 cents; total tax and costs...$9 95

5565—Against Susau McCarthy and southwest quarter of section 26, township 7, range 8, forty acres. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs...$3 65

5579—Against Thomas E. Morgan and south 101 acres of Swamp Land Survey, No. 351, Brannan island in township 4, range 3, 100 acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $64 50; costs, $3 73; total tax and costs...$68 23

5602—Against W. P. Moyer and lot 11, Louisiana Tract, 5 acres, and improvements and personal property; for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $2 33; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs...$2 94

5608—Against L. E. and S. E. Martin and fraction of north half of southwest quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8, 15 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $3 30; costs, 67 cents; total tax and costs...$3 97

5609—Against Henry Schlittler and mortgage interest in fraction of north half of southwest quarter of section 20, township 10, range 8. State and county tax, $1 65; costs, 59 cents; total tax and costs...$2 24

5619—Against Catherine Nelson and Swamp Land Survey, No. 1,071, known as Decker Island, in township 3, range 2, 78 acres. State and county tax, $4 65; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs...$5 38

5634—Against F. Nunes and lot in Painter-ville in section 5, township 5, range 4, one acre, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 62; costs, $1 28; total tax and costs...$6 90

5674—Against L. E. Taylor and mortgage interest in east quarter of southwest quarter of southeast quarter, section 23, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs...$5 22

5700—Against Annie Parker and lot 5, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 13; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 69

5701—Against A. J. Palmer and northeast quarter of southeast quarter, section 18, township 8, range 5, forty acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $96 52; costs, $5 87; total tax and costs...$102 35

5709—Against A. J. Pommer and lot 22, Ingham tract. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs...$2 08

5754—Against J. A. Parker and east half of northeast quarter of section 26, township 10, range 7, 80 acres, and improvements. State and county tax, $30 15; costs, $2; total tax and costs...$32 15

And upper 400 acres of lot 14, Sheldon estate, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $31; costs, $5 05; total tax and costs...$36 05

5761—Against John P. Peterson and lots 11 and 12, block "Q," Highland Park. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs...$3 65

5780—Against Mary E. Pratt and northeast quarter of section 4, township 7, range 8, 160 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $22 20; costs, $1 61; total tax and costs...$23 81

And lots 4 and 5 in northwest quarter of section 3, township 7, range 8, 77 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $12 22; costs, $1 12; total tax and costs...$13 34

And personal property. State and county tax $4 50; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs...$5 22

5781—Against Mrs. M. Pugh and east half of northeast quarter of section 6, township 7, range 6, 79 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $14 63; costs, $1 23; total tax and costs...$15 86

5783—Against C. Toomey and mortgage interest in lot in Brighton north of railroad, being a fraction in northwest corner of southeast quarter of section 14, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $4 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs...$5 23

5809—Against W. J. Parker and northeast quarter, section 36, township 8, range 5, 158 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $35 92; costs, $2 30; total tax and costs...$38 22

And northwest quarter of section 31, township 8, range 6, 157 acres. State and county tax, $40 55; costs, $1 53; total tax and costs...$42 08

And personal property. State and county tax, $22 35; costs, $1 62; total tax and costs...$23 97

5819—Against M. S. Pike and W. S. Kendall and tract of land bounded north by American river, east by Briggs and Nuttall, south by M. Pike & Cox, west by Cox, section 13-24, township 9, range 6, 179½ acres; and tract of land bounded north by Pike and I. Nuttall, east by I. Nuttall, south by Coloma road, west by Cox, section 13-24, township —, ranges 6 and 7, 120 acres and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $28 80; costs, $1 94; total tax and costs...$30 74

5858—Against E. W. Redding and lot 1, block 2, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

5860—Against E. A. Rowley and possession interest and claim of, in and to southwest quarter of section 29, township 6, range 8, 160 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $25 20; costs, $2 26; total tax and costs...$27 46

5883—Against John Ream and lots 11 and 12, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $2 70; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs...$3 31

And lots 9 and 10, block I, Highland Park. State and county tax, $2 55; costs, 63 cents; total tax and costs...$3 18

And lot 5, block J, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 68

5945—Against Samuel Rogers and lot 3, Anderson tract, in section 29, township 8, range 6, fourteen acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $10 20; costs, $1 51; total tax and costs...$11 71

5956—Against W. D. H. Ross and lot 12, Louisiana tract, five acres and improvements and personal property, for tax on personal property. State and county tax, $2 03; costs, 60 cents; total tax and costs...$2 63

5987—Against Charles Saul and fractional southeast quarter of section 33, township 9, range 8, 100 acres. State and county tax, $15; costs, $1 25; total tax and costs...$16 25

And northeast quarter of section 2, township 8, range 8, 160 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $28 50; costs, $1 92; total tax and costs...$30 42

6021—Against Fred Schwears and Swamp Land Survey No. 314, Tyler Island, in section 20, township 4, range 4, 155 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $49 50; costs, $2 98; total tax and costs...$52 48

6058—Against Ida D. Spillman and lot 10, block N, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs...$2 08

6134—Against Mary E. Smith and lot 13, Monte Vista tract, one acre. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 68 cents; total tax and costs...$4 43

6138—Against Joseph Gray and mortgage interest in northeast eighty-four acres of subdivision marked G. M. G. Titus on the official map of the rancho de Los Americanos, in section 27, township 9, range 6. State and county tax, $32 50; costs, $4 63; total tax and costs...$37 1

6158—Against A. G. McManus Jr. and Sr. and mortgage interest in tract near McCracken bridge, in section 2, township 7, range 7. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 73 cents; total tax and costs...$2 23

6214—Against William A. Scott and all northwest of Hicksville road of lower half of lot 12, Hartoell Grant, township 7, range 7, 470 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $53 25; costs, $3 66; total tax and costs...$56 91

6284—Against J. Treth and lot 9, block 5, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs...$2 08

6332—Against Philip A. Ritt and mortgage interest in south 17 acres of west 35 acres of northwest quarter of section 29, township 8, range 5. State and county tax, $5 25; costs, 76 cents; total tax and costs... 6 01

6394—Against Sarah A. Uren and mortgage interest in lot 2, Florin. State and county tax, $3; costs, 95 cents; total tax and costs...$3 95

6400—Against Johanna T. Wearne and lots 3 and 4, block 28, Oak Park. State and county tax, $2 40; costs, 62 cents; total tax and costs...$3 02

6403—Against I. M. Watts and lots 14, 15 and 16, Florin (7½ acres), and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $5 63; costs, $1 28; total tax and costs... 6 91

6409—Against Sarah E. Bader and mortgage interest in west half of southeast quarter and east half of southwest quarter, section 29, township 8, range 6. State and county tax, $27; costs, $1 85; total tax and costs...$28 85

6421—Against J. M. Jackson and mortgage interest in northeast quarter and north half of southeast quarter, section 31, township 8, range 6. State and county tax, $27; costs, $1 85; total tax and costs...$28 85

6466—Against estate of N. Williams and Swamp Land Survey No. 429, in sections 14 and 15, township 8, range 4, 147 acres and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $151 20; costs, $8 56; total tax and costs...$159 76

6471—Against P. Waggoner and south half of northeast quarter of section 32, township 8, range 8, eighty acres. State and county tax, $3 37; costs, 67 cents; total tax and costs...$4 04

And south quarter of section 28, township 8, range 8, 160 acres. State and county tax, $5 92; costs, 79 cents; total tax and costs...$6 71

And fractional east half of section 5, township 7, range 8, fifty-four acres. State and county tax, $11 32; costs, $1 06; total tax and costs...$12 38

And improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $11 55; costs, $1 58; total tax and costs...$13 13

6544—Against Methodist Church and lot 5, block 51, Folsom, and east half of lot 6, block 51, Folsom, one acre, and improvements. State and county tax, $17 25; costs, $1 36; total tax and costs...$18 61

6575—Against Martin J. Coyne and lot 2, block J, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6592—Against John Farren and lot 2, block "Q," Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 13; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 69

6594—Against Alice Goodwin and lots 3 and 4, block 5, Oak Park. State and county tax, $2 40; costs, 62 cents; total tax and costs...$3 02

6670—Against Mary Galgani and lot 7, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs...$2 08

6609—Against Mrs. M. A. Hartley and lot 13, block N, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 35; costs, 57 cents; total tax and costs...$1 92

6611—Against W. D. Hass and lot 4, section 7, township 7, range 7, 19 acres, and improvements and personal property. State and county tax, $14 63; costs, $1 73; total tax and costs...$16 36

6617—Against Mrs. L. E. Little and lot 12, block H, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 68

6627—Against F. M. Miller and lot 2, block T, Highland Park, and improvements. State and county tax, $3 98; costs, 70 cents; total tax and costs...$4 68

6688—Against Trustees Swamp Land District, No. 50, and fraction of northwest quarter of northwest quarter of section 12, township 2, range 1, twenty-nine acres. State and county tax, 45 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs...$0 97

6690—Against Cosumnes Land and Water Company and five miles of ditch in course of construction and personal property. State and county tax, $11 25; costs, $1 56; total tax and costs...$12 81

6691—Against San Yuen & Co. and east half of lot 14, block O, Folsom, and improvements. State and county tax, $3 75; costs, 68 cents; total tax and costs...$4 43

6695—Against Tong Elg and north 102 feet of lots 1 and 2, block 19, Folsom and improvements. State and county tax, $6; costs, 80 cents; total tax and costs...$6 80

PROPERTY IN SACRAMENTO

COUNTY

ASSESSED TO

Unknown Owners.

6701—Against unknown owners and tract No. 17, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs...$8 38

6702—Against unknown owners and tract No. 18, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs...$8 38

6703—Against unknown owners and tract No. 19, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs...$8 38

6704—Against unknown owners and tract No. 20, Anderson tract, ten acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs...$8 38

6709—Against unknown owners and lot 33, Louisiana Tract, two and three-tenths acres. State and county tax, $2 10; costs, 61 cents; total tax and costs...$2 70

6716—Against unknown owners and south half of southwest quarter of northwest quarter of section 6, township 7, range 6, twenty acres. State and county tax, $10 50; costs, $1 03; total tax and costs...$11 53

6717—Against unknown owners and east half of lot 11 G. H. Kerr's Tract, Elk Grove. State and county tax, $1 51; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs...$2 08

6718—Against unknown owners and lots 9 to 16, block 13, Folsom. State and county tax, 22 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs...$ 73

6719—Against unknown owners and lots 1 to 8, block 12, Folsom. State and county tax, 23 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs...$ 75

6720—Against unknown owners and lots 1 to 8, block 14, Folsom. State and county tax, 15 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs...$0 66

6721—Against unknown owners and lots 13 to 16, block 14, Folsom. State and county tax, 15 cents; costs, 51 cents; total tax and costs...$0 66

6722—Against unknown owners and lots 9 to 16, block 15, Folsom. State and county tax, 22 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs...$0 74

6725—Against unknown owners and lots 15 and 16, block 44, Folsom. State and county tax, 37 cents; costs, 52 cents; total tax and costs...$0 89

6729—Against unknown owners and lot 14, block B, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6730—Against unknown owners and lot 7, block C, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 69

6739—Against unknown owners and lot 12, block K, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 50; costs, 58 cents; total tax and costs...$2 08

6740—Against unknown owners and lot 9, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6741—Against unknown owners and lot 12, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6742—Against unknown owners and lot 13, block O, Highland Park. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6746—Against unknown owners and lot 8, Kathleen Tract. State and county tax, $ 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6747—Against unknown owners and lot 7, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6748—Against unknown owners and lot 8, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6749—Against unknown owners and lot 18, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6750—Against unknown owners and lot 19, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6751—Against unknown owners and lot 20, Ingham Tract. State and county tax, $1 20; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 76

6756—Against unknown owners and south 50 acres of northeast quarter of section 20, township 8, range 7, 50 acres. State and county tax, $22 50; costs, $1 63; total tax and costs...$24 13

6757—Against unknown owners and east quarter of section 19, township 8, range 7, 160 acres. State and county tax, $12; costs, $2 60; total tax and costs...$14 60

And west half of section 20, township 8, range 7, 320 acres and improvements. State and county tax, $91 50; costs, $5 03; total tax and costs...$96 53

6758—Against unknown owners and lot 3, block 5, Isleton. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs...$1 45

6760—Against unknown owners and lot 14, block 5, Isleton. State and county tax, 90 cents; costs, 55 cents; total tax and costs...$1 45

6770—Against unknown owners and lot 4, block 15, Oak Park. State and county tax, $1 12; costs, 56 cents; total tax and costs...$1 68

6771—Against unknown owners and tract of land bounded north by Appel, south by Goldberg, west by Upper Stockton road, 2 acres. State and county tax, $3; costs, 65 cents; total tax and costs...$3 65

6772—Against unknown owners and tract of land bounded north by Lausling, east by Saunders, south by Goldberg, west by Appel, 5 acres. State and county tax, $7 50; costs, 88 cents; total tax and costs...$8 38

6773—Against unknown owners and tract of land bounded north and west by Sacramento river and Upham, east by Upham, south by Weiman, being fraction of sections 23, 24 and 25, in township 3, range 2, 191 acres. State and county tax, $1 28; costs, 72 cents; total tax and costs...$2 00

6776—Against unknown owners and west half of northeast quarter of southwest quarter of section 33, township 8, range 5, 20 acres. State and county tax, $10 50; costs, $1 02; total tax and costs...$11 52

GEORGE C. McMULLEN,
Tax Collector.

Frederick the Great.

King Frederick the Great, who was born January 24, 1712, had a stormy time of it in his youth, as all readers of history may remember. His father was a stern man, who placed military drill and knowledge above everything else, and when the young man manifested a liking for literature and music the old monarch's rage was excessive. His conduct toward his son became so harsh that the queen arranged for the boy's secret flight to England. Two lieutenants were to accompany him. The king discovered the plan just after the party had left the palace and sent soldiers after them. Young Frederick and one of his companions were captured, but the other escaped owing to the fleetness of his horse. The prisoners were brought back to Potsdam, handcuffed like common criminals, and thrown into separate dungeons. A sister of Frederick, who ventured to remonstrate, was thrown from a window. The king resolved that his son should be executed. "He will always be a disobedient subject," he argued, "and I have three other boys who are more than his equals." The young man's life was saved through the intercession of Charles VI., emperor of Austria, but the lieutenant who had been captured was executed before the window of the room in which the prince was confined. Finding that he could not send his son to the gallows, the brutal old king had him sent to the fortress at Austria, where he was to be imprisoned for life. He was treated with extreme rigor, being allowed to see no one, and having no books or writing materials with which to while away the tedium of his confinement. After the lapse of a year, his father relented sufficiently to allow the young man to return to Berlin. He gradually grew to think better of him, but he could never forgive his disinclination for the science of war, or his love of music and literature.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California, to John A. Steen, greeting:

You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 31 day of December, 1889, in which action Anna M. Steen is plaintiff, and you are defendant.

That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between you and plaintiff, upon the alleged ground of habitual intemperance, and for the care, custody and control of the minor child, Gertrude D. Steen, and for general relief and for costs of suit; all of which more fully appears in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made.

And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said county of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere; and you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 4th day of December, A. D. 1889.

W. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.
By L. P. SCOTT, Deputy Clerk.
MATT. F. JOHNSON, Attorney for Plaintiff.
feb 8—w9.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of A. M. Anburtns, an insolvent debtor.

A. M. Anburtns, an insolvent debtor, having applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, it is hereby ordered that the Clerk of this Court give notice to all creditors who have proved their debts, to appear before this Court, at the Courtroom thereof, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at the hour of 1:30 o'clock P. M., and show cause, if any they have, why the said A. M. Anburtns should not be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

It is further ordered, that notice of said application be given to the creditors by mail, and by publication once a week for four weeks, in the THEMIS, a newspaper published in said county.

Dated, January 24, 1890.
W. C. VAN FLEET, Judge.
C. W. BAKER, Attorney for Petitioner. j25w4

STATE OF CALIFORNIA—COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

In the matter of Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman, doing business under the firm name of Wm. M. Lyon & Co., insolvent debtors.

Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman having filed in this Court their petition, schedule and inventory in insolvency, from which appears that they are insolvent debtors, the said Wm. M. Lyon and W. B. Sherman are hereby declared to be insolvent. The Sheriff of the county of Sacramento is hereby directed to take possession of all the estate, real and personal, of the said insolvent debtors, except such as may be by law exempt from execution, and of all their deeds, vouchers, books of account, and papers, and to keep the same safely until the appointment of an assignee of their estate. All persons are forbidden to pay any debts to the said insolvents or to deliver any property, belonging to such insolvents, to them or to any person, firm, corporation or association, for their use; and the said debtors are hereby forbidden to transfer or deliver any property, until the further order of this Court, except as herein ordered.

It is further ordered, that all the creditors of said debtors be and appear before the Hon. John W. Armstrong, Judge of the Superior Court of the county of Sacramento, in open Court, at the Courtroom of said Court, in the city and County of Sacramento, on the 21st day of February, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock P. M., of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estate of said debtors.

It is further ordered, that the order be published in the THEMIS, a newspaper of general circulation, published in the city and county of Sacramento, as often as the said paper is published, before the day set for the meeting of creditors.

And it is further ordered, that in the meantime all proceedings against the said insolvents be stayed.

JOHN W. ARMSTRONG,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Ed. M. MARTIN, Attorney for Insolvents.
Dated, January 10, 1890. j11-w5

George F. Flinch

824 J ST.

Fine Candies

Family Orders for Ice Cream a Specialty.

THE ONLY MAKER OF COLT'S FOOT ROCK COUGH CANDY.

FRUIT AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AND PLANTS.

1,000,000.

Trees and Nursery Stock for sale at LOW PRICES, of Best Varieties Deciduous Trees.

Also, ORANGE, LEMON, OLIVE, FIG, AND NUT-BEARING TREES, of most approved varieties.

Nurseries: Near Acampo Station, San Joaquin. Principal Depot: No. 813 Second Street, near Passenger Depot, Sacramento.

Send for Catalogue. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Address: REED & VAN GELDER, Nurserymen, Sacramento, Cal.

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.

General Printers,

410 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Simon Sturmer,

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,

No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIR-
ING of all kinds done, and work warranted.

STABLE TO LET

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET.

B. Ruhl

Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and Blank Book Manufacturer.Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

H. A. PETRALLI,

DEALER IN

Stoves, Metals and Tinware

716 K STREET.

PLUMBING, GASFITTING, AND ROOFING.
Jobbing a Specialty.

American Steam Laundry

NINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR
only. Linen polished in the neatest manner.
We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing
called for and delivered to any part of the city.
Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J
street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.

REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE
Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also,
Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night.
EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.

CANCERS,

Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exerescences, etc.,
Positively Cured or no Pay.
No Knife Used.As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them
they will give any information required—and it pays
to investigate before being treated.
Mrs. O. C. Nielsen, Grass Valley, cancer.
John Service, Auburn, lupus.
Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.
Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.
N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.
J. L. Woods, Washington, Yolo county, cancer.
John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.
Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.
Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.
I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

FOR SALE.

B L O C K

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMAN

FIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K.

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors
and Cigars. ROBERT ALLEN,
Formerly of Agricultural Park.

DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice,

SACRAMENTO.

ANHEUSER & BUSCH

BEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEER

CAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS
LAGER BEER

WISSEMANN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMANN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSNER,
BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

NOTES.

It is proposed in Wyoming to tax all men over the age of thirty years who are not married. This should cause a prompt immigration of unmarried females from the East, or an emigration of bachelors from Wyoming.

The New York World credits Senator Evans with the following pun: "If running from the eyes and nose is an indication of the grippe, then the Democratic members of the House must have been suffering from a severe attack. They have been running from the eyes and noses for a week." Coming from so dignified and sedate a character, it is good.

Adelina Patti admits that she is now forty-seven years of age. Certainly this is not old, and she has many years yet before she can be called old. Her voice is deeper, purer now than at any time of her life, and with ordinary care will remain the richest voice in the world for many years to come. It is silly to call Madame Patti ancient. Indeed, she is at the zenith of glory and power.

Gunpowder makes an awful fuss,
And greater still does dynamite,
But for kicking up a genuine muss,
And getting a fellow in a plight,
Neither explosive does compare
With (so difficult you know to tell How in the world it happened there)
The powder on your coat lapel.

Brother Ira G. Hoitt, he of the State School, is already trying to lift himself again into the office of the State Superintendent. He has taken himself by the boot-straps and is lustily tugging away by distributing circulars about the State showing "what a good boy am I." Now, if brother H. is such a famous and successful boss pedagogue as he represents himself in this dodger manner, he should have been State Superintendent at an earlier age. But brother do not tug too hard; the State Convention is far away, boot-leather is treacherous and in the strain you cannot tell what might happen. Angels are scarce.

The Streets of Sacramento, to the North Wind said,
"It strikes us you're putting on too much of an air."

The North Wind, always bound to be ahead,
Said—"Dry up, and mind your own affair."

The Streets, quite ruffled at receiving such reply, Exclaimed—"You're a blower! We'll make you bust."

To which the Wind returned, while passing by,
"Your name is mud! I'll quickly make you dust."

It is an inspiring sight to see some of our fashionable ladies, the leaders of our haut ton, with toothpicks in their mouths as they emerge from the hotel dining rooms or restaurants, gouging away after some vagrant particle of steak or roast that has found lodgment in the cavity of a molar or incisor. The habit is the sequence of excellent breeding and early training. There is an independence of spirit about it that tends to show an indifference to public opinion that in its horrid ignorance might otherwise be induced to think it the fit thing for a society favorite to bide her time till she could reach the privacy of her room and resort to a tooth-brush. But if modern society says a lady of fashion may pick her teeth in public, who dare say nay?

A look at Val. McClatchy's twins would convince one that they are the very embodiment of fun and mischief. Devilment is sticking out all over the little youngsters—mischief dances in their eyes. They are robust and seem to be of one accord in matters pertaining to babyhood. For some months the babies have slept in a bed by themselves. At times they would become unruly and transgress the laws of the house of the McClatchys. For these transgressions Val. concluded to adopt the remedy of a little switching as a reminder to the little ones that such conduct must cease, or punishment would certainly follow. After a few applications of this rule, Val. having secured a better switch for each of the law-breakers, there was a cessation of the prohibited acts for several weeks. One morning before Val. had arisen from his bed he was aroused by the appearance of the two little fellows in his bed room, each armed with a switch, and they marched up presenting the switches, at the same time disclosing the fact that they had violated the laws of the household and expected punishment. So serious, as well as comical, was the appearance of the self-accused little culprits, that it was difficult to keep a straight face. After an apparent great display of concern at the disobedience, it is needless to say that no other punishment was inflicted upon the youngsters. They departed with their switches, which they replaced for any future emergency.

Send Envoys to Washington.

The Executive Committee of the Improvement Association, at a meeting held last Saturday evening, discussed the propriety of sending a delegation from the Association to Washington, to aid in the legislation it is proposed to ask of Congress in behalf of California, to the end that her lands may hereafter be secured against inundations. It is, as usual, a case where the intellectually great think alike. From the incipency of this movement, and, indeed, long before, it has been an abiding idea with us that the only proper, sensible and promising way in which to accomplish any good and insure relief to California from the treachery and uncertainty of her winter floods, is to petition Congress for the necessary appropriation wherewith to employ the proper remedies and defray the unavoidable expense. But such prayer to the national legislature is useless and of no avail without active and persistent work to aid that prayer. Therefore it is essential that the urgency of the movement be ably advocated before those from whom help is requested—the law-making branch of the government. Hence the great need of sending a delegation to Washington to represent the cause. No measure of national consequence ever engaged the attention of Congress in the absence of duly accredited delegates to present its merits and plead its justness. And it is not difficult to discern the necessities for the presence there of such representatives to espouse such causes. Congress has myriads of matters to attract and engage its time; each State has its special favors that ask the favor and care of its representatives in both houses, and hence the necessity of a powerful and influential presentation of a cause to win it friends. To do so, it becomes necessary for friends to be ever present, active and diligent in its interest.

Now, then, what is the duty of our people in the premises? Vigilance, activity and untiring devotion to the cause by all classes. We have at length arrived at that period of our existence when we are beginning to think some definite action should be taken; a movement that should have been inaugurated thirty years ago, and whose fruit we should be now enjoying in peace, plenty and prosperity. But this winter's disasters have aroused a spirit of activity that at present, at least, promises good results, provided the enthusiasm begotten of fear is not allowed to slumber and finally die altogether. But this time Sacramento has not depended alone on her own resources, but has wisely invited other river bordering counties to join in common accord in the effort to do some good work; hence it is hoped that there will be a realization of the ancient aphorism that "there is wisdom in a multitude of council."

Now, if these gentlemen determine to send envoys to the Federal capital to advocate their claims for relief, and if they do not do so they may as well at once adjourn without a day, let them act wisely and sincerely in the selection of the men they would have to act in the important position of delegates who are to be clothed with such extraordinary duties. Let them in choosing the names, act as if the matter was of a private nature and as if they were retaining a corps of attorneys to represent them in the advocacy of vital questions in a court of equity, in which questions were fraught with the destiny of the life and property of the litigant. It will not do to be satisfied with the fact that this or that man has property involved; that he is rich, or has a "pull" either in politics or business, and may wield great influence at home among back-room politicians, or that he can be of service to himself or friends in selling lots or booming his home interests if sent to Washington. That is the class of men who should be shunned and ignored in the selection; such men would be a dire curse to the enterprise. It is essential in the make up of the personnel of the representatives to know if they are honest and capable; if they are honored at home and will be respected at the seat of their duties; if they possess those qualifications that will enable them to command respect and that intelligence that will fit them to properly present and advocate their cause before the law makers of the land. Above all, they must be men who have no personal axe to sharpen; no private matters to subvert to the neglect of the business delegated to them. They must be gentlemen respected and highly regarded in their own community for the probity and integrity of their private lives and business qualifications. None other need expect to receive recognition at Washington, or accomplish good by their trip there. But there are scores of just such men as we desire residing in the counties that are interested in this movement and whose presence at the nation's capital would be an honor to us, and whose exertions there in the good work would eventuate in lasting advantage to the great Sacramento valley. Of course it will not for a moment be thought of to confine the choice to this county. There are Colusa, Yuba, Sutter, Yolo and other counties along the rivers that are interested, to say nothing about San Francisco, whose bay is so influenced by the torrents that pour into it from the rivers. The supervisors of those counties realizing the vastness of its importance, will not hesitate to enlist themselves in the cause and appropriate the funds found to be necessary to defray the expenses of a delegate chosen from their counties.

Let the Association designate the number of delegates that should go, but let no man allow his selection who is not ready and willing to give up and devote his undivided time and attention to the matter in hand, even though it should take him till the adjournment of Congress in the coming summer. Once at Washington, let a headquarters be established and work begun immediately. Enlist every one of our Congressmen, senators and representatives, in the work, as if it were the special and only object of their recent election by the people. It will require no effort to teach California's delegation in both houses that, for the time, all other questions should pale into obscurity, and give place to the one sole matter of paramount moment to this State—the salvation of her rivers for navigable purposes and the protection of the lands bordering their banks. It will be with other Congressmen that the trouble will be experienced. California is a far-away, unknown land to most of them, and they have little interest in her affairs.

A good, hard-working, patriotic committee sent from here to ask national aid, and the means of carrying it out, at the hands of Congress, can accomplish vast results. But on the contrary, an irresponsible, ignorant crowd, selected simply because of their influence with the appointing power, will not only fail to do anything of benefit, but will do such harm that years of labor can never obliterate it.

In the counties we have named in this article are many good and worthy citizens, who would fully answer in all respects the requirements so essential in such a cause. Indeed, they might be named, but as it would be unnecessarily invidious, we prefer leaving the matter to the Association, believing and hoping that they are so imbued with the duties and obligations of their positions, that in their choice they will be found equal to the occasion, and enable the people to applaud this, their most important work.

Chief of Police.

E. Franks is the first to announce himself as a candidate for Chief of Police, and will seek the Democratic nomination for that position. Officer Franks has been on the force for several years, has a good record, and a large following. He announces he is in the fight to win, and if he should secure the nomination will make an active and determined fight. Against his career as a man and an officer no word of adverse criticism can be justly uttered; his honesty is unimpeachable; his fidelity praiseworthy.

Supervisor of Census.

Maj. W. A. Anderson, an editor of THEMIS, has been appointed by President Harrison Supervisor of the Second District of this State, to have charge of the census enumeration. Mr. Anderson has not yet received his instructions from Washington, and until then cannot make assignments for the work he is to superintend. There will be no doubt that the work of this district will be conscientiously performed. We regard this appointment as a handsome recognition of THEMIS.

Masked Domino Party.

A Masked Domino party will be given by Equity Lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, at Turner Hall, on Wednesday evening, February 19th. The party will be a success. The tickets admitting gentleman and lady are placed at 50 cents, and each extra lady 25 cents.

An Arabian Night.

One or two clumsy actors or actresses in a company will mar the good effect of true artists. In Daly's pleasing little comedy, An Arabian Night, we had in the main a very clever piece of art work. Without mentioning names, however, there was some clumsy work by those who should have been artists. The combination is called Augustine Daly's road company. In the main it is a clever combination, without the elements of greatness. The comedy is indeed mirth provoking, and the situations, despite the marring element, kept the audience in a good humor throughout. The comedy for tonight, A Night Off, is superior to the one presented last night, and will afford the company greater scope for artistic skill.

Popular Music at Popular Prices.

Popular music at 10 cents per copy; prices elsewhere range from 35 cents to 75 cents. Catalogues furnished on application. Hammer's music store, No. 820 J street. Sole agency Chickering & Son's pianos.

Miss Florence Williams will continue her course of interesting lectures at Castle Hall on Monday evening. Subject, "Victor Hugo."

Notice of Sale.

PURSUANT TO A RESOLUTION OF THE BOARD of Supervisors, the following property will be offered for sale at public auction in front of the Court-house door, Seventh and I streets, at 12 M.

Tuesday, March 4, 1890.

One Boiler, Smoke-stack, Pipes, Flues, Faneets, Fire-brick, Fire-box, Feed Pump, and all Tools, Tongs, and everything belonging to said boiler that is now located at the County Jail yard.

Also, two Horses used for the chain-gang, and one Spring Wagon.

Also, lot of Luggage held for poll tax. The above articles to be sold for cash, and to the highest bidder.

Attest: W. B. HAMILTON, Clerk.

Trees! Trees!

J. T. BOGUE

OF MARYSVILLE,

Has the Finest stock of

FRUIT TREES

Ever brought to Sacramento.

Nursery: Second Street, near Depot.

First Nursery from I street, adjoining Reed & Co.'s.

These Trees are perfectly free from scale, and true to label. Call and examine.

J. R. NICKERSON, Agent.

WITH RADAM'S

MICROBE KILLER

In the house you will have no use for any other remedy.

It will come off Victorious Every Time
If used according to directions. Persist in its use and you will be all right.

L. L. GODDARD & CO., Agents.
703 J Street, Sacramento.

W. L. HELKE,

(Successor to J. C. Sepulveda.)

DRUGGIST and CHEMIST

N. E. cor. Second and K Sts., Sacramento.

Prescriptions a Specialty. A full line of Standard Preparations.

Fine Table Wines

From our Celebrated Orleans Vineyard.

Amel Hambrath & Co.
Producers of the
ECLIPSE
CHAMPAGNE,
530 Washington St.
SAN FRANCISCO.

GARZOLI & GENIS,

FRUIT AND PRODUCE,

BUTTER, CHEESE, EGGS, Etc.

POULTRY, FISH AND OYSTERS,

CALIFORNIA MARKET,

Telephone 188.

712 K Street.

NOTICE.

HAVING PURCHASED FROM MESSRS. KILGORE & CO., their interests in the grocery business, and reopened their old stand at the north-west corner of Tenth and K with a full stock of choice groceries, we respectfully request their old patrons to call and get prices before buying elsewhere. Respectfully.

T. H. COOK & CO.

FOR THE COUGHS AND COLDS NOW PREVAILING USE

Hammer's Glycerole of Tar

A Speedy and Effectual Cure.

Fourth and K, and all Sacramento Druggists

TUFTS'

Yerbine COUGH Balsam

WILL

CURE YOUR COUGH, COLD, OR INFLUENZA sure, or money refunded.

A. C. Tufts, Druggist, 10th and J Sts.

BOWSER AND SERVANT GIRLS.

At the supper table the other evening, when Mr. Bowser complained of the biscuit and tea, and called attention to the general look of dilapidation which the table presented, I felt called upon to reply:

"Well, as you know, I have been feeling very miserable for three or four days and this house-girl seems to be the poorest one I ever had. She has no order or system, no taste or skill, and I won't keep her a minute after I can get around."

"If this is her style, I'll go out and discharge her."

"Wait. If she was to go now you'd have to cook your own meals."

"That wouldn't hurt me any. I'll go out and ask her what she means by such conduct, anyhow."

"But I wish you wouldn't. She may flare up and leave us in the lurch."

"Let her flare! When the time comes that we can't boss our own house we'll leave it."

"Mr. Bowser, please let the girl alone for me to deal with," I entreated.

"I'll just speak a few words to her, you know," he replied, and as I went into the sitting room he went into the kitchen.

In about two minutes I heard a crash of crockery and the bang of a door, followed by the sounds of the girls feet on the back stairs, and five minutes later she came down with her bundle and skipped out without a word to me. Mr. Bowser came in soon after that, coat off, sleeves rolled up, and a roller towel tied around him, and he explained:

"I simply asked her if she thought this house was a sawmill, and she called me a mastodon and flew for her bundle. Is she a fair specimen of the help you have had to deal with?"

"Yes."

"Well, you and all other housekeepers have my deepest sympathy. I used to think it was your fault that so many girls came and went, but I want to apologize and take it all back."

"But what shall we do?"

"Do? Why, I'll run the kitchen until after breakfast and then get a girl."

After he had been at work for a few minutes I crawled out to see how things were going. He was washing dishes. He had the teapot, milk pitcher, butter dish, napkin rings, two pie tins and the crockery all heaped together in the dish pan, and while he was washing them with the dish towel, he was wiping them on one of the baby's old skirts taken from the hamper in the stairway. There were two streaks of dishwater clear down to his heels, and a dozen new grease spots had appeared on the floor and table, but he insisted that I go right back and leave him alone, and I had no instructions to give. He had everything done up in half an hour, and when he came in to sit down he said:

"Everything out there is as slick as a pin, and breakfast is all planned for. That girl would have been sloshing around until 10 o'clock before she had the dishes done. I'd like to be in your place about a month. I'd make some of them wonder why they were ever born!"

"But every house has just such trouble."

"Then you women ought to league together to protect yourselves."

"What are you going to have for breakfast?"

"Never you mind, Mrs. Bowser! If I don't get you the best breakfast you have seen in a year, I'll give up that I don't know nothing about a house."

About midnight I heard him muttering in his sleep: "Take two eggs—saleratus—five minutes—greased rag—one tablespoonful to each person."

It usually takes me all of twenty minutes to get Mr. Bowser out of bed in the morning, and the task is never accomplished without resort to fiction as to the lateness of the hour. On this particular morning he slipped out before I was awake, and he had been working in the kitchen a full hour before I got down. No man can be made to believe that there is a right and a wrong way to sheets or tablecloths. Mr. Bowser had set the table just as any other man would. The cloth was wrong side to, the teaspoons in the celery dish, the sugar bowl running over, and the meat platters and bread plates had changed duties. Some of his slices of bread were two inches thick, and some almost as thin as paper, and two of them bore indisputable proofs that he had cut his finger while cutting his bread.

He requested me to sit down while he brought in the meal. He had his cut finger in a rag, black on his nose, flour in his ears, and his face had that color peculiar to red paint. He also went lame in his left foot, caused as I afterwards ascertained, by the rolling pin falling on his foot. When he had everything on the table he looked around him with a self satisfied air, and proceeded to do the honors. Poor Mr. Bowser! He had put the steak into a spider without butter or grease, and it was as black as coal and rather more tasteless. When he poured the coffee the grounds insisted on filling half the cup, and the eggs he had fried in some rancid lard the girl had set away could not be approached nearer than two feet. He had attempted to bake some potatoes, but they were hardly warmed through. In his goodness of heart he had toasted me a piece of bread, and when it fell into the ashes he had wiped off as much foreign substance as he could with the brush broom used about the stove. I tried hard to keep my face straight, but my feelings finally got away with me, and Mr. Bowser looked up with an injured air and said:

"You never cooked a better meal in all your life—you nor any of your relations for a thousand years back!"

Just then I saw that he had used a pie tin for a butter dish, and I had to laugh again.

"Look here Mrs. Bowser!" he shouted, as he bobbed up and almost overturned the table, "this thing has gone too far—too far! I see now where the real trouble lies. I see now why no girl will stay with you."

"But this last one was willing to stay!"

"Yes, and what did you do? Degraded her in her own estimation until self respect obliged her to quit."

"You went out and blew her up."

"I did! I went out and blew! And who asked me to do it?"

"No one."

"That settles it, Mrs. Bowser—settles it right here and now. It's the last meat I'll ever cook for you, and we've had our last girl! I see why they can't stay. I see what's the matter with you and the other women who employ help, and I won't be a party to it."

"I asked you to let the girl alone."

"You did! Never! You begged of me to go out and throw her over the alley fence, and her bundle after her, and what must that poor girl's feelings be at this moment! I now go. I may return or I may not. If not, you have the consolation of knowing what drove me from my own domicile."

But he returned. All husbands return. They begin to feel ashamed of themselves before they are clear of the gate, and the next hour is spent in fishing for an excuse to return a quarter of an hour earlier than usual. A girl happened along just after he left and I hired her, and he hasn't even referred to the subject since.

Short-Hand ECLECTIC!

The system taught by all the leading Colleges on the Coast, viz: Heald's and the Pacific, of San Francisco; Woodbury's, of Los Angeles; DePue's, of Oakland; Garden City, of San Jose; Stockton College, of Stockton, and

Bainbridge College of Sacramento

Why? Because it can be learned in one-half the time required for the old moss-covered systems.

E. FRANKS

ANNOUNCES HIMSELF A CANDIDATE FOR

CHIEF OF POLICE,

Subject to the decision of the DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Pacific Optical Institute

D. M. BISHOPP, Proprietor,

Has REMOVED TO 806 J STREET.

Gattmann & Wilson,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

Fancy and Staple DRY GOODS

601 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

Gregory Bros. Co

Established 1852.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Packers and Shippers of California Fruit and Produce,

126 and 128 J STREET,

San Francisco Office, 313 Davis St. SACRAMENTO.

BAKER & HAMILTON,

Sau Francisco and Sacramento,

Importers and Jobbers of

Hardware, Iron, Steel, Coal, Powder,

MACHINERY

And Agricultural Implements.

Send for Catalogue.

A. L. HART,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

Sutter Building, cor. 5th and J.

W. A. ANDERSON,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 209 J Street, Sacramento.

W. A. GETT, JR.,

Attorney at Law,

Southwest Corner of Seventh and J Streets, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

F. F. TEBBETS, DENTIST.

No. 914 SIXTH STREET,

Bet. I and J, west side, opp. Congregational Church.

A. J. MUIR,

PLUMBER,

Gas and Steam Fitter.

Being a practical plumber, I can guarantee all work.

810 K STREET, Telephone 226.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

NEW ARRIVAL.

JUST ARRIVED, VIA CAPE HORN, DIRECT from a famous Kentucky distillery, a large invoice of fine old copper distilled

SOUR MASH BOURBON WHISKY.

To be had only at the CAPITAL ALE VAULTS, Third and J streets. Nagele & Svensson, sole agents. Finest Lunch in the city, from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., at the ALE VAULTS, NAGELE & SVENSSON, Proprietors. Postoffice Box 173. Telephone 38.

D. McDOUGALL,

Merchant Tailor,

617 K STREET,

Next to Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.

PAUL GRAF,

Manufacturer of and dealer in Saddles, Harness, Robes, Collars, Whips, Spurs, Brushes, Currycombs, etc.

1130 J Street, near Twelfth

Repairing Neatly Done.

Harness Made to Order.

Restaurant de France,

FAURE & BECKER, PROPRIETORS.

(Successors to L. Payen.)

No. 427 K Street, Near Metropolitan Theater.

Family Entrance on Fifth Street.

Catering to Families, Banquets and Wedding Parties a specialty. Telephone 228.

Joseph Hahn & Co.,

PHARMACISTS,

S. W. cor. Fifth and J Streets, Sacramento.

CHOICE PERFUMERIES, Etc.

Prescriptions carefully compounded, at all hours.

OSBORN & FOLGER

DEALERS IN

ICE and COAL, HAY and GRAIN.

New 10-ton Fairbanks' Hay Scales.

N. E. cor. Fifth and I Streets.

Wood Yard, 806 I Street.

Waterhouse & Lester

DEALERS IN

IRON, STEEL, CUMBERLAND COAL,

Wagon Lumber and Carriage Hardware,

SACRAMENTO.

Twelve Million Machines

IN USE.

THE LIGHT RUNNING

DOMESTIC

Sewing Machine

Leads all others. Most Durable, Simplest, Best.

Every Agent claims the machines he sells the best, but talk is cheap. TIME is the only real test of genuine merit. During TWENTY-SIX YEARS of practical use the DOMESTIC has withstood this test. It stands to-day without a peer. Recommended by all White Goods Sewers, Dressmakers, Tailors and Manufacturers. Used by over 4,000 Families in Sacramento City. It is the only Sewing Machine with really Self-Setting Attachments. It costs you nothing to try it before you buy another. Sold on easy installments. Old machines taken in exchange.

Domestic Sewing Machine Co.

A. J. POMMER, Selling Agent,

Northwest corner Ninth and J streets, Sacramento.

HOME PRODUCTION.

—WE OFFER NOW OUR—

Newly Sugar-cured

HAMS, BACON

—AND—

SHOULDERS

—AS—

Superior to Any Other in the Market

—OUR LARD—

Is pure and fresh, and

—OUR SAUSAGES—

Cannot be excelled. All Hog Products are from grain-fed hogs only.

MOHR & YOERK.

CURTIS BROS. & CO.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in and Shippers of all kinds of

Fruits, Vegetables

And GENERAL PRODUCE.

Careful attention paid to the selection and packing of Choice Fruits and Vegetables for distant markets. Goods delivered in city free.

308 and 310 K Street, - - Sacramento, Cal.

RHOADS & TOWNSEND HOUSE

On European Plan.

Cor. Second and J Streets, Sacramento.

ARTHUR MILLER, PROPRIETOR.

CHANGED HANDS.

SACRAMENTO EXCHANGE

(Formerly Wm. Gamble's.)

1012 SEVENTH STREET.

Fine Wines. All the celebrated brands of Liquors and Cigars.
ROBERT ALLEN,
Formerly of Agricultural Park.DAVE'S.

1022 FOURTH STREET,

Next door to Postoffice,

SACRAMENTO.

KAISER BREWERYBEER

Can be found on draught only at

John Gruhler's Saloon

No. 522 J STREET.

The finest and best Wines, Liquors and Cigars constantly on hand.

CELEBRATED

WEINER LAGER BEERCAPITAL BREWERY

LOUIS NICOLAUS,

Corner Twelfth and I Streets

SACRAMENTO.

Headquarters for the Bartlett Springs Water on Draught.

THE OFFICE,

1008 Fourth Street, Next to Cal. State Bank

H. D. GAMBLE, Proprietor.

Telephone 199. Office Hours from A. M. to P. M.

CALL AT 1118 J STREET,

—AT—

Fred Futterer's Saloon

And Get a Glass of Cool Beer.

The best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on hand.

POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.FRED FUTTERER, 1118 J Street.

Agent for the Celebrated W. J. LEMP'S ST. LOUIS LAGER BEER

WISSEMAN'S SALOON,

Klebetz & Green's Old Stand,

1020 Fourth St., bet. J and K, Sacramento.

GEO. WISSEMAN, PROPRIETOR.

Families and Saloons supplied by bottle or keg.

BOHEMIA PILSNER, BAVARIA HERSBRUCKER.

Butchers' Home,

1020 J Street,

Between 10th and 11th, : Sacramento, Cal.

Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also,

BOCA BEER ON DRAUGHT.

JACOB GRUHLER, Prop'r.

824 J ST. Fine Candies

Family Orders for Ice Cream a Specialty.

THE ONLY MAKER OF COLT'S FOOT ROCK COUGH CANDY.

FRUIT AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AND PLANTS.1,000,000

Trees and Nursery Stock for sale at LOW PRICES, of Best Varieties Deciduous Trees.

Also, ORANGE, LEMON, OLIVE, FIG, AND NUT-BEARING TREES, of most approved varieties.

Nurseries: Near Acampo Station, San Joaquin. Principal Depot: No. 813 Second Street, near Passenger Depot, Sacramento.

Send for Catalogue. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Address: REED & VAN GELDER, Nurserymen, Sacramento, Cal.

WM. J. HASSETT.

A. J. JOHNSTON.

A. J. JOHNSTON & CO.General Printers,

410 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Simon Sturmer,

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER,

No. 504 K Street, Pacific Hotel Building.
HOLIDAY GOODS in endless variety. REPAIRING of all kinds done, and work warranted.STABLE TO LET

INQUIRE AT

No. 1713 G STREET

B. Ruhl Bookbinder, Paper Ruler and Blank Book Manufacturer.

Periodicals, Magazines, Music, and all kinds of Binding neatly done at the lowest prices.

No. 409 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

H. A. PETRALLI,

DEALER IN

Stoves, Metals and Tinware

716 K STREET.

PLUMBING, GASFITTING, AND ROOFING.
Jobbing a Specialty.American Steam LaundryNINETEENTH AND I STS.—WHITE LABOR only. Linen polished in the neatest manner. We guarantee satisfaction. All ordinary mending, sewing on buttons, etc., free of charge. Washing called for and delivered to any part of the city.
Main Office at Sawtelle's Book Store, 708 and 710 J street. Branch offices at all the Hotels.REEVES & LONG, UNDERTAKERS,

609 J Street, bet. Sixth and Seventh.

WE KEEP ON HAND A COMPLETE Stock of Coffins and Caskets; also, Shrouds of every description. Orders from city or country receive prompt attention, day or night.
EMBALMING done in the best manner; and at reasonable rates.CANCERS,Ulcers, Wens, Lumps, Exerescences, etc., Positively Cured or No Pay.
No Knife Used.

As to the success of my treatment, I give the names of a few of the many cured. By addressing them they will give any information required—and it pays to investigate before being treated.

Mrs. O. C. Neilsen, Grass Valley, cancer.

John Service, Auburn, lupus.

Patrick Lynch, Sacramento, cancer.

Mrs. Juo. Shaw, Grass Val., birthmark removed.

N. S. Peck, S. P. R. R. Sacramento, cancer.

J. L. Woods, Washington. Yolo county, cancer.

John W. Douglas, Rocklin, cancer.

Miss Mamie Lynch, Yolo, tumor removed.

Chas. McLaughlin, Sacramento, cancer.

I might give many more. Those afflicted are invited to call and investigate for themselves. Consultation at office free. Send for circular.
Office, 426 K Street, Sacramento.

DR. J. H. SHIRLEY.

FOR SALE.Half Block

BETWEEN

Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, V and W Streets

On line of Central Street Railway.

Apply to

FRANK HICKMAN,

1014 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

PARAGON HOSE REEL

Open Valve A, pull off the hose, and water follows immediately.

Patented Dec. 10, 1889.

FOR SALE BY

A. J. MUIR and CROUCH & LYMANFIFTH AVENUE SALOON,

1015 Fifth Street, between J and K,

E. DIETERLE, Proprietor.

Philadelphia Lager Beer on draught, five cents a glass. Also, fine Wines, Liquors, Cigars, etc.

THE FINEST IN THE LAND.

Washington Society.

The deadly punch-bowl is doing its regular work this season. The insidious Mexican punch, made of pulque and other strange ingredients, numbered many victims at the Mexican Legation ball last week. One young man, who early showed that pulque punch and champagne make a bad mixture, was tumbled into a carriage and driven home by a considerate friend. Two women became so jovial that other women fled from them and the scenes of their antics. One of them patted a cabinet officer on the head, pulled another statesman's beard, boxed a rival's ears, and tipped a woman out of her chair in the ballroom! The other imbibor took a sentimental turn and made conspicuous love to a young man half her age.—N. Y. World.

Too Much Forgetting.

Senator Colquitt of Georgia delights in telling a story of his efforts at missionary work among the Afro-Americans in the vicinity of his home, says a Washington letter to the New York Tribune. He selected as a specimen test "Uncle Gabe," a former slave, who had learned to read in a very crude way, and to whom he offered $5 if he would read the Bible through to the end. Gabe accepted the offer and took away with him a brand-new Bible and began his wrestle with the Scriptures. Two weeks later Gabe returned, Bible in hand.

"Well, Gabe, how did you like the book?" Gabe hesitated to reply and was pressed further.

"Well, Marse Colquitt, I tells you how it is. I don't like the book nohow."

"Explain yourself; I don't catch your meaning," said the Senator. "What part of the Bible did you read, Gabe?"

"I reads, sah, until I gits to whar Abraham fergits Isaac, and Isaac fergits Jacob, and Jacob he fergits Joseph, and den I reads no moah. There is too much fergitting, sah, to suit me."

Take a Ride on the Riverside Road

AND BE SURE AND STOP AT

BILLY GROENVELD'SSutterville House

And get a glass of COOL BEER. Or if you want a bottle of CHAMPAGNE Billy has it on hand, or anything else you may wish for in his line.

Always a FINE LUNCH on the Counter.

M. T. GROENVELD, Proprietor.

C. H. Stephenson,DENTIST,

CORNER SEVENTH AND J STREETS, OVER LYON'S DRY GOODS STORE.

D. H. QUINN HATTER,

401 J Street, corner of Fourth.

HATS MADE TO ORDER. Old Hats Renovated to Equal New.

F. KUEHNE & CO.,

NO. 906 NINTH STREET,

Between I and J, SACRAMENTO.

Carpenters and Contractors

Store and office work a specialty.

ICE BOXES for Breweries and Saloons always on hand and made to order.

Jobbing and Repairing promptly attended to.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO—ss. In the Superior Court in and for said county.

The People of the State of California, to John A. Steen, greeting:
You are hereby notified that an action was commenced in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, State aforesaid, by filing a complaint in the Clerk's office of said Court, on the 3d day of December, 1889, in which action Anna M. Steen is plaintiff, and you are defendant.

That the general nature of the action, as appears from said complaint, is as follows: To obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between you and plaintiff, upon the alleged ground of habitual intemperance, and for the care, custody and control of the minor child, Gertrude D. Steen, and for general relief and for costs of suit; all of which more fully appears in the complaint on file herein, reference to which is hereby made.

And you are hereby directed to appear and answer said complaint within ten days from the service of this writ, exclusive of the day of service, if served on you in said county of Sacramento; and within thirty days, exclusive of the day of service, if served elsewhere; and you are further notified that unless you so appear and answer within the time above specified, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

In testimony whereof, I, Wm. B. Hamilton, Clerk of the Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, this 4th day of December, A. D. 1889.

[SEAL]

W. B. HAMILTON, Clerk,
By L. P. SCOTT, Deputy Clerk.
MATT. F. JOHNSON, Attorney for Plaintiff.
Feb 8—w9.

The Model Wife.

A model wife is a woman in whom the heart of her husband doth safely trust.

She is the woman who looks after his household, and makes her hospitality a delight to him, and not a burden.

Who has learned that a soft answer turneth away wrath.

Who keeps her sweetest smiles and most loving words for her husband.

Who is his confident in sorrow or in joy, and who does not feel the necessity of explaining her private affairs to the neighborhood.

Who respects the rights of husband and children, and in return has due regard paid her.

Who knows that the strongest argument is her womanliness, and cultivates it.

Who is sympathetic in joy or in grief, and who finds work for her hands to do.

Who makes friends and keeps them.

Who is not made bitter by trouble, but who strengthens and sweetens under it.

Who tries to conceal the faults of her husband rather than blazon them forth to an uninterested public.

The woman whose life book has love written on every page.

Who makes a home for a man—a home in a house and in a heart. A home that he is sure of, a home that is full of love, presided over by one whose price is above rubies.

She is the model wife.—Ladies' Journal.

O. W. Nordwell

MERCHANT TAILOR AND DRAPER,

218 Bush St.,

SAN FRANCISCO.

My new invoice includes the very LATEST STYLES and inspection is invited as to quality of GOODS, the FIT, and PRICE.

Lavenson's

THE LARGEST AND

MOST RELIABLE HOUSE IN SACRAMENTO.

R. DAVIS,
NOTARY PUBLIC,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Representing the following companies:

Manchester of England; Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland; London and Lancaster, England.

1002 J Street, Sacramento.

WM. H. BRADLEY,
(Successor to Barber & Wise.)

Dealer in Hay, Grain & Mill Feed

N. E. COR. ELEVENTH AND J STS.,

Telephone 266. SACRAMENTO.

KILGORE & CO.

—DEALERS IN—

Oliver Plows and Extras, Studebaker Wagons and Buggies, Hardware, Etc.

Successors to Grangers' C. B. Association.

S. E. Corner Tenth and K Streets,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.

H. WACHHORST Leading Jeweler of Sacramento
SIGN OF THE TOWN CLOCK,
No. 315 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

J. A. MOYNIHAN.

TO BE HAD ONLY AT

G. E. MOYNIHAN.

Moynihan's

418 J Street.

MAGGI'S HOT BOUILLON!

Just Out: Maroon Marmalade

Willis & Ray APOTHECARIES
212 J ST. and 901 K ST.
Two Stores, Sacramento, Cal.

L. L. LEWIS & CO.

502 and 504 J STREET,

SACRAMENTO.

We keep the Largest Stock of

PARLOR & COOK STOVES

Ranging in Price from $5.00 to $25.00.

WE ALSO KEEP A LARGE STOCK OF

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Our 100-page Illustrated Catalogue is now ready.

L. L. LEWIS & CO., 502 and 504 J St.

Joe Poheim the TAILOR

HAS NOW A

GENUINE CLEARANCE SALE.

Suits Made to Order from $20.

Pants Made to Order from $5.

Other Garments in Proportion.

This Sale is to CONTINUE FOR SIXTY DAYS ONLY. PERFECT FIT AND BEST OF WORKMANSHIP GUARANTEED, OR NO SALE.

NO. 600 J STREET, Corner of Sixth, SACRAMENTO.

BRANCH STORES: 203 Montgomery Street, 724 and 1110-12 Market Street, San Francisco; 49 and 51 South Spring Street, Los Angeles; 1021 and 1023 Fourth Street, San Diego; 105, 107 and 109 Santa Clara Street, San Jose; 73 Morrison Street, Portland, Oregon.

Klune & Floberg, WATCHMAKERS and JEWELERS
Agents for Rockford Watch Co.
NO. 428 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

A. G. JOHNSON.

CLAUS ANDERSON.

ANDERSON & JOHNSON,

The Leading Merchant Tailors,

SUITS MADE TO ORDER AT REASONABLE RATES.

No. 1014 Seventh Street, Sacramento.

W. D. Comstock, 501-507 K, cor. Fifth
FURNITURE and BEDDING.

On Exhibition, THE LARGEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCK.

FAIR DEALING!

LOW PRICES!

RAILROAD TIME TABLE.
Southern Pacific Company
PACIFIC SYSTEM.
Nov. 17, 1889.
Trains LEAVE and are due to ARRIVE at
SACRAMENTO.

Lv.	Trains Run Daily.	Arr.
6.50 A	Calistoga and Napa	11.40 A
3.05 P	Calistoga and Napa	7.25 P
11.00 P	Ashland and Portland via Chico	3.40 A
7.05 P	Deming, El Paso and East	6.00 P
7.25 P	Knight's Landing	7.40 A
9.00 A	Los Angeles and Mojave	9.55 A
8.00 P	Second Class, Ogden and East	6.25 P
12-01 A	Central Atlantic Express	6.00 A
3-00 P	Ogden and East	10-30 A
3-00 P	Groville	10.30 A
3-00 P	Red Bluff via Marysville	10.30 A
10.40 A	Redding via Willows	4.00 P
6.15 A	San Francisco via Benicia	7.25 P
6-50 A	San Francisco via Benicia	8.35 P
3-05 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11.40 A
4-00 A	San Francisco via Benicia	10-40 P
*10.00 A	San Francisco via Steamer	26.00 A
11.25 A	San Francisco via Livermore	2.25 P
6-50 P	San Francisco via Benicia	11.40 P
11.25 A	San Jose	2.25 P
7-05 P	Santa Barbara	9.55 A
6-50 A	Santa Rosa	11.40 A
3-05 P	Santa Rosa	7.25 P
9-00 A	Stockton and Galt	6.45 P
7-05 P	Stockton and Galt	9.55 A
8-00 P	Truckee and Reno	6.25 P
12-01 A	Truckee and Reno	6.00 A
12.05 P	Colfax	10.20 A
6-50 A	Vallejo	11.40 A
3-05 P	Vallejo	11.40 A
*12.15 P	Folsom and Placerville (Mixed)	*10.25 A
*7-15 A	Folsom and Placerville	*2.40 P
*5.20 P	Folsom	*6.50 A

*Sunday excepted. †Sunday only. ‡Monday excepted. A for morning, P for afternoon.
A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

California State Bank

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Draws Exchange on all the Principal Cities of the World.

OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT.....N. D. RIDEOUT
VICE-PRESIDENT.....FRED'K COX
CASHIER.....A. ABBOTT
ASSISTANT CASHIER.....W. E. GERBER

DIRECTORS:

C. W. Clarke, Jos. Steffens, N. D. Rideout,
Geo. C. Perkins, J. R. Watson, Frederick Cox,
W. E. Gerber.

GO TO

Nolan & Son's

FOR

FINE SHOES,

BRANCH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

603 J Street, Sacramento.

The Only Retail House in Sacramento that manufactures their own goods.

Try Our Famous $3 Shoes.

W. R. STRONG & CO.

Founded 1852.

Fruit Packers

and Shippers.

PROPRIETORS OF

CAPITAL NURSERIES,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Edwin K. Alsip & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1860.

REAL ESTATE

AND INSURANCE AGENTS.

FARMING LANDS A SPECIALTY

Catalogues issued monthly.

No. 1015 Fourth Street, Sacramento.

